"A system of classification for political science collections by William Anderson and Sophia Hall Glidden, published by the University of Minnesota press in 1928, is the basis of this classification system. It is expanded, has some new classes, and one transposed class letter. Libraries with special collections in this field, while they may not be able to use the notation adopted, will find the subject relationships helpful, as well as the combined index and subject heading list." Booklist

Booklist 38:238 Mr 1 '42

"The only serious criticism which can be made of the scheme as a whole is that the classes do not always follow the obvious logical sequence or the order on genetic relationship; for example, Labor precedes Economics, Planning and Zoning are sandwiched in between Administrative Law and Personnel Administration. The subordinate divisions throughout the classification are apparently limited to topics covered by the book collections of the libraries examined, without perhaps a sufficient attempt to round out the classification, say, by providing for topics which are as yet treated only in periodical literature. There is no doubt, however, that the classification is practical and will amply cover the books and pamphlets which make up today's public administration libraries." D. J. Haykin

+ — Library J 67:842 O 1 '42 1300w

GLOCAR, EMILIAN. Man from the Balkans; tr. by Fern Long. 189p $1.75 Dorrance

42-9305

"A short novel based on the story of the life of a man, born in the Balkans (country not specified), who came to America and found it good. The author, Moravian by birth and Serbian by education, writes in Czech and Yugoslavic, and has received recognition in Europe." Christian Century

Christian Century 59:665 My 20 '42 50w

Reviewed by M. E. Grow
Churchman 156:18 Jl 1 '42 180w

GLOVER, TERROT REAVELEY. Challenge of the Greek, and other essays. 242p $2.75 Macmillan [12s 6d Cambridge]

913.38 Civilization, Greek 42-20099

"Glover's essays—except for the first, which was a radio talk, and the second, which was a presidential address to a professional association of classical scholars—are by-products of a lifetime of serious and fruitful study of the classics. He tells about the Greek farmer, about the Athenian food problem, about Greek forestry and forest products and the various kinds of wood used for various purposes, about fairy tales and athletics and ice water and what the Greeks thought about Homer, and a hundred other things, many of them trivial and amusing but all adding up to a wonderfully vivid picture of a people to whom, though they lived so long ago, we are intellectually very closely akin." Christian Century

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Ann Am Acad 224:233 N '42 270w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 59:1005 Ag 19 '42 230w

Christian Science Monitor p13 O 24 '42 650w

"The author is very much alive to the present, as well as incredibly learned in the classics, and makes the life of the Greek as vital and as modern as our own. It is rather startling to read Plato's warning against soil erosion in his dialogue, 'Critias', a few pages after a reproduction of a Canadian sign warning against forest fires." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 156:17 S 1 '42 210w

Reviewed by E. P. Richardson
Commonweal 36:476 S 4 '42 390w

Reviewed by John Knox
J Religion 23:74 Ja '43 50w

Reviewed by Gilbert Murray
Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 22 '42 600w

"Mr. Glover wears his learning lightly, but he deftly introduces much interesting and relevant knowledge and shows a remarkable gift for getting to the heart of a problem. He is a true humanist, who believes that the classics should be studied because they enrich life." C. M. Bowra

+ New Statesman & Nation 24:13 Jl 4 '42 410w

"This is a delightful book in which classical scholarship becomes, so to speak, a springboard for urbane philosophical reflection of perennial pertinence, and a collection of impersonal essays takes on something of the nature of a subsurface autobiography."

+ N Y Times p2 Ag 30 '42 600w

Reviewed by John Mavrogordato
Spec 169:132 Ag 7 '42 380w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p334 Jl 4 '42 1250w

GLOVER, TERROT REAVELEY. The disciple. 62p $1 Macmillan [2s 6d Cambridge]

248 Christian life [A42-3608]

"Merely to write of these meditations that a dozen words are picked from the New Testament and a few pages given to explaining each of them might suggest that Dr. Glover's way is that of the concordance or commentary. Nothing could be farther from his method. The learner, the slave, the soldier, the ambassador, the free man, 'kings and priests,' are framed in the period of the early Church; but not only does each word receive new connotations under the author's reverent analysis; every one of the persons for whom they stand is projected, often by little more than implication, into the tests and struggles of the Christian life to-day." Times [London] Lit Sup

"This little book . . . contains many delightful passages, but some bitter disappointments, too. Dr. Glover's philosophy of religion seems fundamentally sound." E. H. Peters

+ — Cath World 156:120 O '42 800w

"This small volume [is] rich in the distilled wisdom of a lifetime of biblical scholarship and religious thinking."

+ Christian Century 59:187 F 11 '42 80w

"A fine example of devotional writing which is also scholarly—and therefore most truly devotional." John Knox

+ J Religion 22:333 Jl '42 40w

Spec 168:90 Ja 23 '42 260w

"It is not easy to convey the atmosphere of the book. Of its relevance there can be no doubt. It will hearten readers of the New Testament to whom the conflicts of the early Church seem sadly remote, Christians in the grip of Giant Despair, and preachers whose message has lost its freshness and vitality—for them there are the makings of a sermon on every page."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p593 N 29 '41 430w

GLOYN, CYRIL KENNARD. Church in the social order; a study of Anglican social theory from Coleridge to Maurice. 201p $1.50 Pacific univ, Forest Grove, Ore.

261.7 Church and state in Great Britain 42-13592

"Study of Anglican social theory from Coleridge to Maurice. The author, who is professor of philosophy and religion at Pacific University, devotes his discussion chiefly to Coleridge, the Tractarians, Thomas Arnold and Frederick D. Maurice. While this survey deals with social thought and attitudes of a century ago, it is relevant to some of the church's perennial and still unsolved problems." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

Christian Century 59:732 Je 3 '42 70w

"An interesting and useful little book." Alburey Castell

+ J Philos 39:500 Ag 27 '42 240w

"The scholarship of the book is trustworthy and reasonably thorough. The author's comments on his findings are nearly always convincing and are always interesting." C. R. Sanders

+ J Religion 22:451 O '42 210w

GODDEN, RUMER (MRS LAURENCE FOSTER). Breakfast with the Nikolides. 292p $2.50 Little

(W) 42-2419

That morning that twelve-year old Emily and her sister Binnie went to the Nikolides for breakfast, marked the turning point in Emily's life, the passing from childhood to maturity. Not because of the breakfast, but because during her absence, Emily's mother, suspicious of rabies, had the little dog, Don, killed by the vet. What led up to that act of treachery, and what followed it, are told in this novel by the author of Black Narcissus. The scene of the story is India, the time 1940.

"All these lives, Indian and white, child and adult, and the backgrounds of the homes in which they are lived, are evoked with great skill and a mastery of dramatic tension and emotional clarity. The book, once started, affects the reader like the eye of the Ancient Mariner: 'He cannot choose but hear,' and ignores all interruptions until the tale is told." Elizabeth Drew

+ Atlantic Ap '42 100w

Booklist 38:209 F 15 '42

"There is a magnetism of beauty in Rumer Godden's work that cannot fail to hold a reader responsive to writing that goes beyond the factual. The act and the spoken word are important to her, but only as outer manifestations of mental and spiritual fermentations that lie hidden. It is in her delicate searching of these things, of the soils that nurture the blossoms that she excels. 'Breakfast With the Nikolides' adds another high mark of distinction to the fine record of this extremely talented writer." Rose Feld

+ Books p2 F 8 '42 700w

Reviewed by Wilfrid Gibson

Manchester Guardian p3 F 13 '42 110w

"This exotic novel, morbid and poetic, concerns a group of people in Bengal and the death of a dog—nothing more than that, but it probes certain raw nerve ends and psychological abscesses with such weird finesse as to make this event a turbulent crisis. Its lopsided, tormented characters and its narrative mannerisms are often exasperating, but the author's sensitiveness and good taste never let these peculiarities get entirely out of hand."

+ — Nation 154:201 F 14 '42 120w

Reviewed by Henry Sturgess

New Statesman & Nation 23:374 Je 6 '42 500w

"The art which Miss Godden practices is, perhaps, a minor one, but in this book, as in 'Black Narcissus,' she has brought it very nearly to perfection." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p7 F 8 '42 1100w

"Emily . . . is drawn with sympathy and imagination. The Indian characters are equally well done; but Emily's parents are a few shades too exotic and artificial, which lessens the effect of the novel as a whole." John Hampson

+ — Spec 168:214 F 27 '42 260w

"In the course of the telling, Miss Godden gets in some beautiful local color and some sharp child psychologizing. She shows a sensitivity to moods that is almost reminiscent of Virginia Woolf. But there is so much mystification, soft-focus symbolism and feminine theatricality that an almost fine novel becomes too dreamlike and sinister for words. Extreme sensitiveness breeds a type of melodrama, even of ham, all its own."

+ — Time 39:90 F 16 '42 360w

"The story is of the delicately implied and rarefied kind, touched not so much by the common breath of life as by a quivering sensibility. It is, nevertheless, a good story, poetically suggestive and at times to be described as exquisite, though somewhat self-consciously exquisite. That self-consciousness has been Miss Rumer Godden's failing in earlier novels, which cultivate beauty too assiduously. Here, however, although in the soliloquies which thread her glancing style of narrative there is a degree of preciousness, the pursuit of beauty is less strenuous."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p77 F 14 '42 1000w

"I didn't understand why it was written, unless as a way of preserving some uncommonly sharp, uncannily physical description of the sights and sounds and smells of provincial India." Robert Littell

Yale R ns 31:xii spring '42 30w

GODOLPHIN, FRANCIS RICHARD BOROUM, ed. Greek historians; the complete and unabridged historical works; with an introd, revisions and additional notes by [the editor]. 2v 1001;964p $6 Random house

938 History, Ancient. Greece—History 42-11883

"The complete and unabridged historical works of Herodotus, translated by George Rawlinson; Thucydides, translated by Benjamin Jowett; Xenophon, translated by Henry G. Dakyns; Arrian, translated by Edward J. Chin-nock." (Subtitle) Glossary. Index.

"Slight revisions in the translations, additional notes, indexes and in appendixes several often inaccessible short historical works make these scholarly volumes particularly valuable to historians."

+ Booklist 38:365 Je 1 '42

"The translations themselves are competent without being inspired. . . I found it most interesting, myself, and stimulating. Only I think . . . it is above the heads of undergraduates; it is much too complex for the average extra-mural buyer; and it is not quite suited for a learned reader. It would have been better to write a separate exposition of each of these very different authors, as well as the general preface on the type of history they were writing; and possibly to add notes which should bring them together, showing their dependence on one another, their similarities, and their differences. We should be grateful to have the text of these great historians so well arranged and indexed. But if they were to be explained at all, they should have been explained more fully." Gilbert Highet

+ — Nation 156:24 Ja 2 '43 1900w

New Yorker 18:76 Ap 18 '42 20w

GODWIN, ELISABETH. Life with baby; a manual in photographs; with a foreword by J. Taylor Howell; photography by Lawrence Madison; directed and comp. by Milton Fox Martin. 96p $2 Duell

649.1 Infants—Care and hygiene

(W) 42-23059

Photographs and brief text describe the step by step procedure for new mothers of bathing, dressing, feeding, and preparing the baby for sleep.

"With all the baby books, nothing in print will prove more helpful to a mother whose first baby has just come back with her from the hospital, than this series of large photographs."

+ Books p20 D 13 '42 180w

Library J 67:740 S 1 '42 40w

GOGARTY, OLIVER ST JOHN. Elbow room. 52p $2 Duell [pa 10s 6d Cuala]

821

42-11660

"Ireland's witty poet, Oliver St. John Gogarty . . . is doubtless aware of the current harsh scene, but his poetry has the long-range view. It belongs as much to any period as does the work of Ben Jonson. There is more than a touch of Herrick in the joie de vivre that marks such pieces as 'An Appeal From the Judgment of Paris.'" Christian Science Monitor

GOGARTY, O. ST J.—Continued

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds
Books p18 Je 7 '42 650w

"There are only 21 poems in this collection, and not all are great poetry. Some of them verge on the sing-song, but compensate for that by being shrewdly philosophical and incisive, and containing lines that sparkle," Pearl Strachan

+ — Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 4 '42 370w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '42

"Mr. Gogarty's latest collection of poems, 'Elbow Room,' forces the reader to the conclusion that prose is the more fortunate medium for his satiric fantasy. The piece that lends its title to the book is among the best, with some smart, titillating rhymes. By far the worst is the 'Elegy on the Archpoet.'"

New Repub 106:742 My 25 '42 90w

"The best of Oliver Gogarty's poems are the ones we can think of as a kind of improvisation, and when these are witty and satirical as in that exquisite early satire on Dublin snobbery in the person of Dr. Mahaffy, 'The Death of Diogenes, the Doctor's Dog,' we feel we would give a good deal for a whole collection of them. Unfortunately for Oliver Gogarty's own natural style, he got himself too much under the influence of Yeats." M. M. Culum

+ — N Y Times p5 Ap 12 '42 650w

"Gogarty, as we know, is an Irishman, a scholar, a wit, a writer both of verse and prose, and one whose lyrical gift was praised by the late William Butler Yeats. I have enjoyed reading his book very much." W. R. B.

+ Sat R of Lit 25:7 My 2 '42 110w

GOLDEN, CLINTON S., and RUTTENBERG, HAROLD J. Dynamics of industrial democracy [foreword by Russell W. Davenport]. 358p $3 Harper

331.88 Trade unions—U.S. Labor and laboring classes—U.S. 42-9389

"Practical study of collective bargaining, by two directors in the Steel Workers Organizing Committee who have represented labor in many cases involving management-union disputes in the steel industry. Actual cases are objectively, but anonymously, presented to show reasons, psychological and social as well as economic, both for failures in adjustment of such problems in the past and for successes obtained by modern techniques of collective bargaining. The authors, though partisans, do not hesitate to place the blame for non-cooperation on labor as well as management." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Solomon Barkin

Am Econ R 32:635 S '42 950w

Reviewed by T. R. Fisher

Ann Am Acad 222:232 Jl '42 650w

Booklist 38:324 My 1 '42

"Though perhaps claiming too much, book is forward-looking and important in its field. Recommended." G. W. Hill

+ — Library J 67:267 Mr 15 '42 90w

Reviewed by Lewis Corey

Nation 155:484 N 7 '42 1000w

"While this volume of intimate case studies illustrating management-union relationships may prove to be only the first of a series, the chances are that a long time will elapse before we get a more useful one. The authors are straight-shooting, hard-hitting and unusually well-balanced labor leaders who have had the privilege of participating in the bringing together and the rise to power of as promising a labor organization as this or any other country has seen." M. L. Cooke

+ New Repub 106:770 Je 1 '42 1000w

"The authors are in sharp contrast in point of view from orthodox labor leaders. Their approach to the labor problem is not Malthusian—that of making labor scarce by immigration restriction or limited membership in unions or various brakes on the output per worker. Greater production with wider distribution is their fundamental philosophy. What these authors have to say about industrial democracy is exciting. They deal with philosophy and method, a combination that makes this book unique." Bernhard Ostrolenk

+ N Y Times p20 My 10 '42 1050w

"This book, written in good humor and with pithy wisdom, is required reading for practically everybody." J. A. Fitch

+ Survey G 31:393 S '42 750w

GOLDMAN, RAYMOND LESLIE. Murder behind the mike. 273p $2 Coward-McCann 41-27719

Detective story.

Booklist 38:235 Mr 1 '42

"Here's a carefully constructed and fairly impressive item about murder in a radio studio, with timely trimmings." Will Cuppy

+ Books p11 Ja 4 '42 190w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p12 Ja 4 '42 160w

"Newspaper and broadcasting backgrounds voraciously handled. Action steady and dialogue peppery. Detection good, although killer is rather shadowy. Satisfactory."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:19 Ja 24 '42 40w

GOLDTHWAITE, EATON K. Don't mention my name. 307p $2 Duell

42-19129

Detective story.

"This unpretentious offering has secrets, action and a touch of homespun in the characters." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 Ag 9 '42 100w

"The story moves rapidly, but in too many different directions at the same time." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p15 Jl 26 '42 200w

GOMEZ, NATALIE. Your garden in the city; introd. by F. F. Rockwell; phot. by Jessie Tarbox Beals and Mattie Edwards Hewitt; drawings by Clara Coffey. 247p $3 Oxford

635.9 Gardens. Gardening (W) 41-24110

Directions for gardening in the city—in city yards, window boxes, and terraces, and advice on plant material. Partial contents: City gardening is not country gardening; Searching for garden sites; Design; Construction; Soil; Insect pests and fungi; Window boxes; Terraces and roof gardens; Tools and accessories. Index.

Booklist 38:185 F 1 '42

Bookmark 3:8 Mr '42

"Miss Gomez appears to be a good deal of a realist—as, indeed, any good plant person has to be. She knows that healthy flowers and shrubs can't be expected from the stuff that passes for soil in most town backyards, so she tells in detail how it must be improved. Around this general theme of providing favorable growing conditions she develops a practical handbook of genuine worth which, if one faithfully follows its precepts, will come as close to guaranteeing a happy ending as is humanly possible." R. S. Lemmon

+ Books p32 D 7 '41 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '42

GOOCH, GEORGE PEABODY. Studies in diplomacy and statecraft. 373p $5 (12s 6d) Longmans

940 Europe—Politics

A42-4939

"Dr. Gooch has an unrivalled knowledge of the diplomacy and the personalities of the last seventy years. In this book he has collected a number of essays and lectures in which he has treated the problems that proved intractable and produced two world wars and has discussed the responsibilities of different statesmen and the general character of the conflicts in which they took part. Dr. Gooch adds three more general lectures, on the French Revolution as a world force, on politics and morals, and on Hobbes and the absolute State." Manchester Guardian

"As one of the two historians to whom the British Government confided the task of editing for publication the British official documents bearing on the war (Dr. Temperley was the other) Dr. Gooch is, of course, steeped in the international politics of the time. He sees the events with the eyes of a diplomatist, and a diplomatist whom nothing escapes. He does not attempt in this volume to estimate the social and economic causes and changes that complicated the relations and desires of the different European Governments. He is interested in the political motives that guided their plans, their intrigues, their friendships, and their enmities."

J. L. Hammond

+ Manchester Guardian p3 J1 15 '42 450w

Reviewed by R. C. K. Ensor

Spec 169:153 Ag 14 '42 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p404 Ag 15 '42 1500w

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING INSTITUTE, NEW YORK. Good housekeeping cook book [Katharine Fisher, director; Dorothy Marsh, head of Foods and cookery]. 947p il $2.50 Farrar

641.5 Cookery (W) 42-36112

In addition to recipes, contains chapters on planning and serving meals, marketing, box lunches, cooking for one, two, or a crowd, outdoor meals, and use and care of kitchen equipment. Index.

Booklist 38:269 Ap 1 '42

Bookmark 4:7 N '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:64 Ap '42

GOODEN, ARTHUR HENRY. Roaring River range. 254p $2 Houghton

42-36125

Western story.

Booklist 38:276 Ap 1 '42

"Yes sir, Mr. Gooden is a man to watch if you like Westerns." Will Cuppy

+ Books p18 Ap 19 '42 70w

Wis Lib Bul 38:68 Ap '42

GOODENOUGH, FLORENCE LAURA, and MAURER, KATHARINE M. Mental growth of children from two to fourteen years; a study of the predictive value of the Minnesota preschool scales. 130p $2.50 Univ. of Minn.

136.72 Mental tests. Child study 42-37231

"Based on the continuous testing and study of a large group of children from 2 to 14 years of age, covering a 12-year period. The findings include evidence that mental growth does not always proceed at a fixed rate; that there appears to be a sex difference in the age at which tests begin to have predictive value; that children rarely lose what they have already attained in mental growth; and that, as they approach maturity, a larger portion of complete growth is included in each measurement." (School & Society) Bibliography. Author and subject index.

"As stated in the subtitle, this book is 'A Study of the Predictive Value of the Minnesota Preschool Scales,' and will be of greatest interest and value, as the foreword suggests, to the 'careful student and professional worker in the field of mental measurement.' There is, however, much of interest to the medical man who deals with children." W. S. Langford

+ Am J Pub Health 32:1406 D '42 320w

School & Society 56:136 Ag 15 '42 90w

GOODMAN, JACK, and GREEN, ALAN BAER. How to do practically anything; il, by Anne Cleveland [pref. by Frank Sullivan]. 203p $1.75 Simon & Schuster

817

42-4278

"An easy guide to complete chaos in your business life, your social life and your love life." (Subtitle) This spoof on the "how to"

books contains instructions on how to do, or not to do, any number of things, among them how to raise a dog, how to operate a miniature camera, how to woo and win a woman, how to move, how to drive a car, and how to sail a boat.

Bookmark 3:9 Mr '42

"This is a book of frustration. . . It is a comical book that, as luck would have it, is actually a comical book. No matter where or when [the authors] wrote the book, even if in their New York offices on the boss's time, they did all right. They ought not to have used 'practically,' an abused colloquialism employed by virtually all inaccurants. They mean 'impractically' anyway." F. P. Adams

+ Books p2 F 1 '42 750w

New Yorker 17:64 F 7 '42 80w

"There are neat lines and slap-happy situations in every chapter, but between the better passages the boys seem to be trying to be funny if it kills 'em. But, since Mr Goodman is advertising manager of Simon & Schuster, it would be reckless to predict that the volume won't sell. Very reckless."

Springf'd Republican p7e F 1 '42 190w

GOODMAN, LOUIS SANFORD, and GILMAN, ALFRED. Pharmacological basis of therapeutics; a textbook of pharmacology, toxicology and therapeutics for physicians and medical students. 1383p $12.50 (50s) Macmillan

615 Pharmacology. Poisons, Therapeutics 41-2605

"In the past, most important pharmacological discoveries have been made in German universities and German commercial laboratories, but in recent years the work of American pharmacologists has been growing rapidly in importance. [This work by two professors] of Yale, is a valuable review of this American work. . . It contains thousands of references to recent work, a large proportion of them to papers published in 1940. It opens with 100 pages on anaesthetics, and there are 180 pages on cholinergic and adrenergic nerves, more than 100 pages on sulphanilamide and related drugs, 88 pages on hormones and 60 pages on vitamins, with equally complete sections on other branches of pharmacology." Nature

"Although this comprehensive treatise is written from a clinical point of view and is designed primarily for the use of medical students and practicing physicians, it can be recommended to chemists as constituting a valuable survey of the whole field of practical therapeutics. The book should prove useful as a work of reference for chemical libraries, for it provides authoritative and fully documented information concerning the actions and uses of the established drugs and of recently introduced therapeutic agents of recognized value or promise. Any one interested in the general subject of medicinal chemistry, whether it be in the capacity of student, teacher, or organic research worker, will find innumerable items of interest in this excellent book." L. F. Fieser

+ Am Chem Soc J 63:1773 Je '41 450w

"In spite of a few omissions, the text as a whole is very full and up to date, and gives a very fair account of controversies still raging. It is the kind of work that might have been the fruit of the collaboration of a team of authors, and it is difficult to think how two men did it." J. H. Gaddum

+ Nature 148:710 D 13 '41 550w

GOODMAN, PAUL. The grand piano; or, The almanac of alienation. 217p il $2.50 Colt

42-19164

"This novel is plotless; it is even without locale in relation to its temporal and spatial sequences, although its events are played against the background of the Empire City. . . The leading characters are Hugo Eliphaz, a strictly up-to-date version of Andrew Under-shaft; Laura, an esthetic idealization of the current if declining Marxian viewpoint that Eliphaz wishes to coordinate into the capitalist system; Horatio Alger, symbol of adolescence

GOODMAN, PAUL.—Continued
and school life . . . Mynheer or Dyck representative of traditional order in contradistinction to Lothario, Freudian representative of disorder. . . The action consists only of the discussions and arguments indulged in by these and other minor characters." Books

"What we are ultimately left with is not necessarily a surrealist but rather a realist allegory retelling 'Everyman' in terms of the current composition, an allegory untraditional enough to demand re-reading." Julian Sawyer
Books p8 S 6 '42 480w

"This novel is well below the level of talent that Mr. Goodman has shown in his short stories."

— Nation 154:720 Je 20 '42 180w

GOODMAN, PAUL. Stop-light; five dance poems, and an essay on Noh. 93p il $2 5x8 press, Harrington Park, N.J.

811

42-9492

"Paul Goodman's dance poems are based, indirectly, on the Noh-plays. These are not intended to be dramatic, in the Western sense, of unfolding an action. Their aim is rather an 'initiation into a true awareness.' There are always three characters: a traveler, who represents the audience; a spirit, who represents the idea of the poem; and a chorus, who interprets the two to each other. . . The occasions of Mr. Goodman's poems are ordinary enough, usually occurring in New Jersey: a visit to a cousin, a birthday, a morning awakening, a cycling trip, a stop-light on a lonely road." New Repub

"The style—a loose blank-verse interspersed with short lines and with prose—is fluid; the thought is always interesting, and the stylized form allows him to make use of such phrases as 'how curious this is!'—'how strange!'—with full effect. A poet with such a strategic sense as these dance-poems reveal may develop along unexpected lines." Lloyd Frankenberg

— New Repub 106:371 Mr 16 '42 250w

Reviewed by Dudley Fitts

Sat R of Lit 25:13 Ap 25 '42 340w

GOODMAN, PHILIP. Franklin street. 277p $2.75 Knopf

818

(W) 42-5064

Reminiscences of the author's youth in Philadelphia some fifty years ago. His character sketches of his father and mother, both of whom possessed strong personalities, dominate the book, and recall Clarence Day's Life With Father. The Goodmans moved away from Franklin street in 1902, the last of the "original" settlers to go, but not before the characteristics of his neighbors had impressed the author so that he could describe them vividly forty years later.

"Joyously raffish, completely irreverent, and wholly entertaining is Philip Goodman's book of memoirs. . . In many ways it will recall Clarence Day's Life With Father for like Day, Goodman remembered most vividly the things that made his parent a vital and heart-warming character." Rose Feld

+ Books p3 Mr 1 '42 850w

"This entertaining survey of the mediocre people who lived on the street is given with gusto, charm and humor. The author's . . . affectionate loyalty to his parents and his vivid pictures of their strong personalities were, to me, the outstanding feature of the book, which, while it held my attention, I should not care to recommend to others since there are so many fine books from which to choose." A. M. Colt

Library J 67:39 Ja 1 '42 60w

"There is much fun and a happy zest for living in it, though it strikes the reader rather as a warmly good-humored book than a primarily humorous one. . . There are many good yarns in these recollections, gossipy, warm-hearted, scandalous and funny. They are all tinged with the young Philip's inquisitive and interested point of view, matured through the years between the living and the writing of them. A readiness to accept and absorb everything as it came along runs through these pages and gives a friendly color to the Goodman style even when it plays a bit pompously for a laugh." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 15 '42 750w

"Mr. Goodman's writing is his mind realized in print: clear, realistic, humorous, searching, loving, unsentimental. We are grateful for it. If there ever be another such, it will have to be worthy of Day and Goodman." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 25:18 Mr 14 '42 450w

GOODSPEED, EDGAR JOHNSON. History of early Christian literature. 324p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

281.1 Christian literature, Early 42-9439

Traces the development of Christian thought and the rise of creeds, rites, and liturgy, as evidenced in the writings of Justin, Paul, Melito, Hippolytus, Eusebius, and others. Select bibliography. Chronology. Index.

Booklist 38:323 My 1 '42

"For one who wants a good general view of Christian literature during those crucial three centuries between the New Testament and St. Augustine, the one best way to get it is to buy and read this volume. It is not hard to read for, as everyone knows, Professor Goodspeed has a style that can carry gracefully even the great weight of his erudition. But one who is enough interested in the subject to read the book will probably want to keep it by him for reference and as a guide to further reading and study in the field."

+ Christian Century 59:634 My 13 '42 130w

"Students of the early Christian literature as well as the layman will find in this latest child of Professor Goodspeed's pen much valuable and interesting information, attractively told." A. F. G.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 9 '42 1000w

"This is an invaluable book of reference—the last word upon an important field of study." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 156:14 My 15 '42 130w

"This, in the best sense of the word, is a popular book, such as only an experienced master of his subject could have written. . . Two general criticisms might be made: the treatment of heretical works and doctrine might with advantage have been longer, and the accounts of the more notable writers are sometimes a little too cursory even for an introductory book." M. L. W. Laister

+ — Class Philol 38:61 Ja '43 1800w

"One of the great values of the volume is the focusing of attention upon the vast amount of literature still undiscovered and the clear-cut way this is brought to attention in the hope that in successive years many of these lacunae will be filled. As has often been piously remarked, 'God has yet more light to let break forth.' It is to be confidently expected that critics and archaeologists will be the agents of this hoped-for refulgence. The curious notion still persists among the ignorant that all the discoveries have been made, and that biblical and patristic scholars are simply sifting old sand. Books like this should go a long way toward disabusing that notion." M. S. Enslin

+ Crozer Q 19:321 O '42 1050w

"The book will be used for reference by all students working in this field. It ought to be said, however, that it was written to be not merely a work of reference but a readable history of literature in one specific field. At least one reader can testify that the author has achieved his aim, for there is not a dull page in the whole three hundred." F. C. Grant

+ J Religion 22:322 Jl '42 700w

GOODWIN, GRENVILLE. Social organization of the Western Apache. 701p il $4.50 Univ. of Chicago press

970.3 Apache Indians

42-11483

This posthumously published volume contains the results of the author's ten years of intimate contact with the Apache, during which he spent much time living with them, learning their ways of life by actual experience as well as by hearing their tales and traditional folklore from the lips of young and old. Index.

Reviewed by G. A. Reichard

Am Anthropol 44:693 O '42 1750w

"This volume cannot be ignored by the historian of the Southwest or by that goodly number of historians who think and write of the Apaches in terms of frontier wars of reprisal and extermination. It would be hard to conceive of a more complete ethnological study of a primitive people. The Western Apache is seen as nearly as possible through his own eyes as a member of his own organizations."

+ Am Hist R 48:202 O '42 70w

"This book differs from the usual analysis of Indian life in two main particulars. The first is the magnificent use of source material. The details are illuminated by literally hundreds of direct quotations from informants. These create an atmosphere and carry a conviction that no mere recital by a white observer could equal. They make one who has been among the Apache nostalgic for the sights and sounds they recapture. Secondly, there is Grenville Goodwin's own attitude toward his work and toward his subjects. He went among the Western Apache sincerely and respectfully, to learn. His was a manner and temper that inspired confidence. He came away with a sympathetic understanding of Apache ways which is always fair without ever being sentimental. He would have been happy to know that he has communicated that understanding to us." M. E. Opler

+ Am Soc R 7:723 O '42 650w

Christian Century 59:83 Ja 21 '42 80w

Reviewed by John Gillin

Social Forces 21:111 O '42 550w

GOODWIN, WILLIAM B. The truth about Leif Ericsson and the Greenland voyages. 445p il maps $3.50 Meador

973.13 Leif Ericsson. America—Discovery and exploration 41-4989

Reconstruction of the story of Leif Ericsson in America. The author identifies the American site of Vinland as the harbor of Portsmouth, New Hampshire, and its adjacent shores.

"Mr. Goodwin has given an ambitious title to his book but to no purpose, for it cannot conceal the fact that his work makes no contribution to the subject." Halldór Hermannsson

Am Hist R 47:318 Ja '42 420w

"All that one can say about Mr. Goodwin's theory is that it is a theory no more susceptible of proof than half a dozen other theories; and indeed the present reviewer finds it less convincing than some others, perhaps because of the somewhat incoherent manner in which Mr. Goodwin marshals his arguments. There are two features of the book, however, worthy of note. The first is the contention that the Norumbega of the sixteenth-century maps was in fact the Vinland of the Norsemen, the memory of which had persisted among sailors; and the second is the evidence adduced regarding the finding of actual archaeological remains of the Norse occupation of North America."

W. S. Wallace

Canadian Hist R 22:319 S '41 400w

GORDON, MRS DOROTHY (LERNER). All children listen. 128p $1.50 Stewart

371.333 Radio in education. Education of children 42-18825

Survey of educational values of radio programs for children, in the United States and other countries. The author is a pioneer in the field herself. She points out the importance of the radio in teaching the ideals of democracy. Bibliography.

Booklist 39:2 S '42

Pratt p20 D '42

"Of interest to parent-teacher groups and others concerned with the problem."

+ Wis Lib Bul 38:158 N '42

GORDON, MATTHEW. News is a weapon; introd. by Elmer Davis. 265p $2.50 Knopf 940.54887 World war, 1939—Propaganda

42-24537

For four years the author, who is now in the Office of war information in Washington, has been collecting material on the subject of the operations of enemy use of the news as propaganda. He gives case histories of these methods of attack, and advises Americans to be on guard in judging war news.

Booklist 39:135 D 15 '42

"This book is worth reading, though much more study of the subject will have to be made, but Mr. Gordon has taken Axis propaganda out of the realm of mysticism and shown it to be almost a science." R. G. Spivack

+ Books p24 N 29 '42 1250w

Christian Science Monitor p22 N 18 '42 500w

"Highly recommended as valuable to war effort." Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 67:950 N 1 '42 90w

Reviewed by Neil MacNeil

N Y Times p30 D 13 '42 750w

GORDON, PATRICIA. Not-Mrs-Murphy; il. by Ralph L. Boyer. 122p $1.50 Viking

42-25518

Fanciful tales about what happened to seven American school children on each day of the week when the driver of the school bus was sick with measles. The substitute driver, Not-Mrs-Murphy, took them on five delightful excursions.

"Just as we settle down to the erroneous notion that all the fairy tales have been written comes along a really new book of fantasy for the fairy-tale age and begins the process of elbowing into literature that takes place whenever such a tale is written. For consider the competition: a fantasy for children this year must stand comparison not only with this year's fantasies but with imaginative literature old as Alice or recent as Mary Poppins. Whether this one is vigorous enough to get past that competition, children alone will decide, but it is a genuine competitor." M. L. Becker

Books p12 N 22 '42 320w

Cath World 156:378 D '42 70w

"A beautifully conceived and fanciful story which should appeal to imaginative children not yet touched by the dreadful cynicism of adolescence." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 37:116 N 20 '42 20w

Horn Bk 19:34 Ja '43 70w

"Good entertainment and the kind of fancy children themselves make and appreciate. Recommended for children eight to ten." J. E. Wooster

+ Library J 67:1106 D 15 '42 110w

GORDON, WENDELL CHAFFEE. Expropriation of foreign owned property in Mexico. 201p $3.25; pa $2.50 Am. council on public affairs

333.13 Eminent domain

"Dr. Gordon has presented a careful and well-documented analysis of the economic, legal, and international aspects of the Mexican expropriations. The discussion centers around the oil controversy, for agreements have recently been reached between the Mexican and American governments on the land problem, and the railroad problem has been dormant for some time—probably, Dr. Gordon suggests, because the foreign bondholders have already written off their investments." Harvard Law R

Reviewed by F. O. Wilcox

Am Pol Sci R 36:383 Ap '42 340w

"It is to be regretted that Dr. Gordon does not discuss more fully the Mexican economic and political problems which, he recognizes, underlie the disputes. However, his appraisal of the extent of the properties and of the laws and decrees leading to the expropriations is very valuable for an understanding of the controversy."

GORDON, W. C.—Continued

+ — Harvard Law R 55:1422 Je '42 200w

GORHAM, MRS ETHEL RUTH (BLOEHM).
So your husband's gone to war! 223p $2
Doubleday

396 Woman—Social and moral questions
42-21947

Essays on what to do when your husband goes to war, and how to solve the perplexing problems of everyday living in war time.

Booklist 39:95 N 15 '42

"It is all to the good that this detailed advice is so unsentimental that nobody is urged to be cheerful and nobody's pet prejudices coddled."

+ Books p18 O 11 '42 230w

"Those who are like the author in unwished-for singleness, and the reading public generally, will find it a fund of spine-stiffening humor and sound good sense." Peggy Capron

+ N Y Times p20 O 4 '42 440w

Wis Lib Bul 38:182 D '42

GORMAN, HERBERT SHERMAN. Brave general. 632p $3 Farrar

Boulanger, Georges Ernest Jean Marie—
Fiction (W) 42-100

Historical novel dealing with the rise and fall of Georges Boulanger, military hero and political adventurer who almost succeeded in becoming dictator of France in the late 1880s. The story is told largely from the point of view of a young French woman who becomes a member of the household of Boulanger's mistress, Madame de Bonnemains.

Reviewed by R. E. Danielson
Atlantic Ap '42 450w

Booklist 38:234 Mr 1 '42

"Mr. Gorman's appetite for the cliché is insatiable. It is hard to believe, but at Clemenceau's appearance in the story some one looks in his eyes and 'has the illusion of staring into the face of a tiger.' There are several more characters from Rue de l'Eglise who supply a great deal of comic relief. There are topicalities galore, offhand references to Debussy and Rimbaud, music-hall songs, bric-a-brac of the period—everything except real life and real human beings." H. N. Doughty, Jr.

— Books p8 F 8 '42 1100w

"This novel about General Boulanger is also a novel about France, and about human ambition and human weakness, and about life. At any time it would be outstanding in keen interest as in comprehensive excellence, and it should certainly be read beyond this tormented moment in which it appears. But there could be no better time than this for the absorbed perusal of this story of the idol that a humiliated people set up to worship in their dreams' bright image, and of some of those people who were living their human lives in the Paris of Boulanger's day." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p4 F 8 '42 1400w

"The French atmosphere is soundly presented and there's a romance that is touching and credible."

New Yorker 17:61 F 7 '42 60w

Reviewed by André Maurois
Sat R of Lit 25:6 F 7 '42 680w

GOTTSCHALK, LOUIS REICHTHAL. Lafayette and the close of the American revolution. 458p $4.50 Univ. of Chicago press

B or 92 Lafayette, Marie Joseph Paul Yves Roch Gilbert du Motier, marquis de. U.S.—
History—Revolution—French participation

42-12337

"This third volume dealing with the youth of Lafayette carries on the method established by Louis Gottschalk in 'Lafayette Comes to America' and continued through 'Lafayette Joins the American Army' (Book Review Digest, 1935,1938). With precise and full documentation, and with every effort at accuracy, Mr. Gottschalk follows his hero almost day by day, with much of the absorbing story told in Lafayette's own words or the words of his friends and associates." (Books) Index.

Reviewed by Bernhard Knollenberg
Am Hist R 48:354 Ja '43 950w

Reviewed by V. F. Barnes
Ann Am Acad 224:232 N '42 450w

Reviewed by Carl Van Doren
Books p17 My 3 '42 950w

Christian Century 59:530 Ap 22 '42 160w

"This book is clearly not intended for popular reading. It is confusing, here and there, because of the piling up of unnecessary facts and the failure of the author to distinguish between great and small events. He is completely lacking in the sense of drama... This reviewer does not hesitate to predict that when the Lafayette series is completed Dr. Gottschalk will be the recipient of a Pulitzer prize, though we may be sure that he is not writing with that reward in mind." W. E. Woodward

Nation 155:38 J1 11 '42 500w

"This volume is valuable for its wealth of new factual material on the co-operation between the American and French forces in the final scenes of the Revolution; a co-operation in which Lafayette played a major part, for he was the natural chief of liaison. It is valuable for its fresh treatment of the taking of Cornwallis's army, a feat in which Lafayette had a larger role than has hitherto been credited to him. But it is valuable, above all, for the new light in which it places the personality of the young Frenchman." Allan Nevins

+ Yale R n s 31:816 summer '42 490w

GOUDGE, ELIZABETH. Blue hills; il. by Aldren A. Watson. 288p $2 Coward-McCann
(W) 42-23554

Sequel to the author's City of Bells (Book Review Digest, 1937). Hugh Anthony, grandson of one of Torminster Cathedral's canons, wanted a very special birthday picnic in the hills above the town. Everyone invited was to make a wish, and everyone did. The outcome of those wishes made a very exciting day for Hugh Anthony, his friend Henrietta, the dean of Torminster and several others.

Booklist 39:107 N 15 '42

"Reading this soft, happy story in war time is like taking to a featherbed in a thunderstorm; it doesn't change what is going on, but if you believe in it the effect on the nerves is fine. And why not believe?" M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 S 27 '42 450w

Cath World 156:378 D '42 90w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 18:423 N '42 100w

"Could be read aloud beautifully. Many two-color illustrations by Aldren A. Watson. Recommended for children ten to twelve." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 67:686 Ag '42 70w

"When the everyday world seems too grim, and the highroads too crowded it will refresh mind and body to steal away into the Blue Hills with Elizabeth Goudge to a place where dreams come true and fairy tales live." P. D. Edie

+ Library J 67:893 O 15 '42 40w

"Stories which pass from the real to the unreal have a charm all their own, but the transition must be made skillfully so that the world does not break in upon the other and so that the reader is aware in which of two worlds he finds himself. Because Miss Goudge does not make a clear distinction between the real and the fanciful elements in her tale, 'The Blue Hills' is confusing and the morality into which it frankly turns when the members of the picnic party meet the strange gatekeeper, will seem wordy and dull to child readers. Miss Goudge has drawn some delightful children in her books. Her older people are often convincing, and few writers can describe English country more charmingly.

She is most successful, however, when, as in 'Island Magic,' she keeps her feet firmly on the ground." A. T. Eaton

+ — N Y Times p20 N 8 '42 550w

"Well, if I put my neck out, I put my neck out—this is the best book written about children for unstuffy, ageless adults and for imaginative children since Kenneth Grahame wrote 'The Wind in the Willows.' I don't say Miss Goudge is as good as Mr. Grahame was in 'The Golden Age.' Where he had an odd toughness, she has a gentle resilience. But her children are as real as his, as carelessly, carefully inhabitants of their own world, even if they are merciful to the world of grown-ups." Richard Ellis

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 O 5 '42 340w

"Most likely to become a part of the world's literature."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:60 D 5 '42 50w

GOUDGE, ELIZABETH. Castle on the hill. 346p $2.50 Coward-McCann [8s 6d Duckworth]

(W) 42-36216

England in 1940 is the scene of this story of an oddly assorted set of characters, brought together in a castle in the southwest for a brief period, before the war changed everything again. Charles Birley, elderly writer of history living at the castle, his ancestral home; Miss Brown, middle-aged spinster trying to forget the wreck of her own home by acting as housekeeper at the castle; the two young Birleys—Richard, the aviator, and Stephen, the pacifist; Jo Isaacson, musician turned street player; and the two little evacuees from London, are the chief actors.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (15) B & T (1) RB (1) W (1)

Booklist 38:346 My 15 '42

"Elizabeth Goudge's writing has a lyric quality which is at its best in her short stories. Here her deftness and sensitiveness have their moments, but the whole is too finely drawn. One gets from the book in a way quite other than was intended, I think, an appreciation of what Englishmen and Englishwomen have undergone and of the courage with which suffering has been met. It would be comforting but also dangerous, I believe, to stake the future on the lessons that this story finds in those tribulations." Mary Ross

+ — Books p24 My 10 '42 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '42

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford
Manchester Guardian p3 My 22 '42 100w

"Elizabeth Goudge's new novel is one more indication of the effects of today's upheaval. The bubbling happiness, the joy in life—of nature no less than of the spirit—that distinguished all her writing have gone. . . . There is reality in the book; and there is beauty. How should there not be in a novel by Elizabeth Goudge? But they do not form the book's substance. Always, too, her work has been built, implicitly but surely, on a foundation of personal philosophy; but here it is tenuous, misty and unsatisfying. . . . What does shine through everything is Elizabeth Goudge's passionate love for England." J. S. Southron

+ — N Y Times p16 My 3 '42 500w

"'The Castle on the Hill' is not the excellent novel it could have been. There is too much ideological talk of the sort in which the figures seem to address each other but in which really the author lectures the reader. . . . Only in the chapter describing the fight and death of the R. A. F. pilot does Miss Goudge show her strength, in the lyrical and clear rhythm of a prose of which each word seems to be chosen with infinite care. . . . The figures, however, that one will remember out of the novel are Moppet and Poppet, a pair of London Cockney children as vital, noisy, and endearing as ever appeared in a novel." R. R. Plant

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:14 Je 27 '42 450w

"Miss Goudge over-works coincidence; she should remember fiction needs the strangeness of truth, if it is to carry conviction. She has talent, but her material is considerably weakened by the sentimentality of her attack." John Hampson

+ — Spec 168:540 Je 5 '42 100w

Time 40:91 J1 13 '42 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p245 My 16 '42 330w

GOUDY, FREDERIC WILLIAM. Alphabet, and elements of lettering; rev. and enl. with many full-page pl. and other il. drawn and arr. by the author. 101p $6 Univ. of Calif. 745.6 Lettering. Alphabet 42-36231

"A serviceable guide to good lettering. . . . This was originally published in 1918, and reprinted several times. The University of California Press has now put out a new edition, considerably augmented by a general disquisition on letter history and design by Mr. Goudy. The core of the book is still the twenty-seven plates, each about seven by eleven inches, of the upper and lower case alphabet, a to z, the ampersand, and numerals. Each plate shows a letter in fifteen traditional forms of calligraphy and formal type designs, in sufficiently large size to display their vagaries and peculiarities." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 38:371 Je 1 '42

"Goudy's 'Alphabet' is a book which stands on its own record and it will make very little difference what the reviewers find to say about it. It was the first important book on lettering to appear in America at the end of the World War I. . . . It has lived steadily through some five or six reprintings and the new, revised edition shows itself without loss of its original vigor, yet enriched by thoughtful reorganization of the text." Hellmut Lehmann-Haupt

+ Publisher's Weekly 141:1692 My 2 '42 1150w

"Such a comparative view is extremely useful in distinguishing the evolution of letter forms as well as their differences, and since Mr. Goudy is our foremost letter designer, such a book of model letters is a sound guide for all persons engaged in painting or drawing signs of all sorts, from postage stamps to war posters."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 Je 6 '42 160w

Reviewed by C. P. Rollins

Sat R of Lit 25:19 D 12 '42 430w

GOULD, DOROTHEA. Very first aid; pictures by Elizabeth Ripley. 46p 50c Oxford

614.8 First aid in illness and injury—Juvenile literature 42-36181

First aid manual for nine and ten year olds, which can be used by them in the absence of adults. Deals with emergencies—dog bites, burns, cuts, poisoning, drowning, etc.

Booklist 38:334 My 1 '42

"The timeliness of the tiny book need not be emphasized, for though war is not mentioned and bandaging goes no further than explaining how to put sterile gauze over a cut, a little child whose mother is absorbed in pressure points will be pleased to get this manual of preliminary practice." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 J1 19 '42 210w

Reviewed by Claire Nolte

Library J 67:415 My 1 '42 60w

New Yorker 18:115 D 12 '42 40w

GOULD, MARY EARLE. Early American wooden ware and other kitchen utensils; il. by [the author]. 230p $4.50 Pond-Ekberg co., State & Andrew sts, Springfield, Mass.

973.2 Kitchen utensils. U.S.—Social life and customs 42-18677

"A book for collectors on a subject for which there appears to be little material available. Excellent photographs of representative articles in the author's collection illustrate the account of the ways of identifying early wooden utensils, their uses, and methods and tools used in making them." Booklist

GOULD, M. E.—Continued

Booklist 39:8 S '42

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books p20 S 27 '42 400w

GOVAN, MRS CHRISTINE NOBLE (J. N. DARBY, pseud). Carolina caravan; il. by Helen Blair. 224p $2 Houghton

(W) 42-5829

The McKensies were orphans, and red-headed Kitty, aged sixteen, found the burden of being head of the family rather hard. When the neighbors proposed to separate the children they rebelled, joined forces with a friend who owned a truck, and drove to a South Carolina island, to spend the summer in a friend's cabin. This story for girls of eleven to fifteen describes that adventurous summer, and the way in which the McKensies circumvented the neighbors.

Booklist 38:311 Ap 15 '42

Books p10 My 10 '42 380w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 11 '42 90w

"Like other books of Christine Noble Govan, this is peopled with natural children and contains a wealth of lively conversation. The Carolina coast with its great plantations, its terrifying swamps, its cypress trees and thick myrtle bushes, as well as its blue water and long sandy beaches with gulls and horseshoe crabs, is well described. So, too, is the coming of the great storm to the island." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:110 Mr '42 120w

Reviewed by A. L. Shea
Library J 67:416 My 1 '42 100w

"As Mrs. Govan draws them [the characters] are amazingly alive and thoroughly likable. As the many readers who have enjoyed Mrs. Govan's 'Those Plummer Children,' with the irresistible little Negro twins, 'Sears and Roebuck,' will remember, Mrs. Govan writes with a fine spontaneity and a delightful humor." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 22 '42 550w

"A human, modern story garnished by authentic Southern atmosphere and dialect."

+ New Yorker 18:76 My 23 '42 70w
Wis Lib Bul 38:71 Ap '42

GRAEBER, ISACQUE, and BRITT, STEUART HENDERSON, eds. Jews in a gentile world; the problem of anti-Semitism [prepared] in cooperation with Miriam Beard [and others]. 436p $4 Macmillan

296 Jews—Political and social conditions
42-3100

A composite volume made up of articles by a number of writers on anti-Semitism. The material is grouped under seven heads: The problem of race; The history and sociology of anti-Semitism; The psychology of anti-Semitism; The American scene; The rhythm of two worlds; The mirage of the economic Jew; Perspective for the future. Index.

Reviewed by Gustav Ichheiser
Am J Soc 48:129 Jl '42 1600w

"The student of social and political theory will find these essays enlightening." M. Q. Sibley

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:576 Je '42 450w

Reviewed by W. E. B. Du Bois
Ann Am Acad 223:199 S '42 400w

Reviewed by John Cournos
Atlantic Mr '42 220w

Booklist 38:361 Je 1 '42
Bookmark 4:3 N '42

"An intensely interesting and important compendium." Arthur Settel

+ Books p25 Mr 8 '42 600w

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
Cath World 15:754 Mr '42 320w

"One puts this book down with varying emotions, with some bewilderment, with some bitter disappointment, and yet with much hope. . . The papers, in general, exhibit objectivity and dispassionateness (with some repetitiousness and verbosity). Most of them are brilliant attempts at the analysis of a problem that is bad and may grow worse, and which, if not properly dealt with, may bring destruction to our country and its most sacred institutions." G. G. Fox

+ Christian Century 59:529 Ap 22 '42
1600w

Reviewed by J. N. Moody
Commonweal 35:594 Ap 3 '42 650w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:773 Jl '42 20w

"Sixteen outstanding scholars, more than half non-Jews, have produced a thoughtful and valuable volume which, in bringing the conflict into the open and clarifying the ideals of our democracy, should go far in establishing a more stable and harmonious relationship between Jew and Gentile." G. O. Kelley

+ Library J 66:902 O 15 '41 60w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr
Nation 154:659 Je 6 '42 1000w

Reviewed by E. R. Clinchy
Pol Sci Q 57:620 D '42 1100w

"This is a disappointing book. It fails to reach the goal set forth by its editors. . . Here, of all places, the old moth-eaten slogans and shibboleths mouthed by the antisemites are brushed off and paraded. Indeed, this book, or one should say certain parts of it, makes a strong case for antisemitism by explaining it in the palaver of the social sciences which for a long time have been advertised as the new savior of mankind." Baruch Braunstein

— Sat R of Lit 25:16 Ag 29 '42 500w

Reviewed by L. O. Kattsoff
Social Forces 20:521 My '42 400w

Reviewed by Sol Liptzin
Survey G 31:260 My '42 500w

"The seventeen essays comprising this volume represent a thoughtful, sincere effort to understand and control the problem of anti-Semitism. More integrated than is usually the case, the symposium attacks this vital question from many angles. . . and includes among the contributors both Jewish and Gentile experts in these fields. Though somewhat lacking in the comparative point of view—there is insufficient emphasis on the parallels and contrasts between the situation of the Jews and that of other minority groups—the essays present a comprehensive view of anti-Semitism and trace its shifting grounds, from the religious to the economic to the current racialist." M. R. Davie

+ Yale R n s 32:189 autumn '42 1000w

GRAEFENBERG, ROSIE (GOLDSCHMIDT) (COUNTESS WALDECK) (R. G.). Athene palace. 357p $2.75 McBride

949.8 World war, 1939—Rumania, Rumania—
Politics and government 42-4353

The author arrived at the Athene Palace, Bucharest's largest and most luxurious hotel, on the day Paris fell, in 1940. For the next seven months she lived there, viewing with fairly dispassionate eyes, the downfall of a nation. The whole human impedimenta of the crisis—diplomats, generals, Gestapo spies, dispossessed landowners from Bessarabia, journalists, and demi-mondaines from all over Europe seemed to pass thru the Athene Palace, and they and the world which they helped to break passed in review before the author's eyes. She has here set down her experiences and deductions.

"The book is fast-moving and entirely readable. The author describes corruption with a kind of tolerant good humor, and tragedy without patches of purple. The setting is exotic. One feels that it is as dead, today and tomorrow, as it is glittering and fictitious yesterday." R. E. Danielson

+ Atlantic Ap '42 200w

Booklist 38:272 Ap 1 '42
Christian Science Monitor p12 My 29 '42 400w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:783 J1 '42 20w

"Her record of these seven months is graphically told and informal but not personal; she is the journalist who watches, listens, and reports. She firmly believes Hitler's order will never unite Europe. Recommended." R. T. Manlove

+ Library J 67:40 Ja 1 '42 80w

"In spite of its gossipy background, this account of Nazi propaganda carried on with two sets of agents, one official, the other unofficial and more efficient, is a valuable contribution to current history. . . . Anyone who wishes to learn something of their fate would do better to read Donald Hall's 'Rumanian Furrow,' but no person who is interested in the machinations of grafty Rumanian politicians, beguiling feminine entanglements, Balkan glamor, and underground Nazi plotting should miss this witty and fascinating book." Rustern Vambéry

+ Nation 154:343 Mr 21 '42 800w

"Although not particularly well written, it is well put together, always readable and often witty. There is perhaps a little too much emphasis on hotel glamor, old-world aristocrats and lady spies. . . . However, after attending fifth-columnist parties and extracting semi-official secrets from the dignitaries of the Third Reich, Countess Waldeck settles down to discuss the Nazi set-up. Royal mistresses and lady spies recede, and intelligent analysis has the day. The chapter on German order is very well worth reading. Countess Waldeck never protests too much; sometimes, one feels she might protest a little more. But all is forgiven in the end, when her remarks are as shrewd as her conclusions are agreeable." Sybille Bedford

+ New Repub 106:304 Mr 2 '42 420w

"Shrewdly done, though you may feel that the author is too complaisant with all concerned."

+ New Yorker 17:62 F 7 '42 90w

"The professional observer, a person who sees all, misses nothing, can neatly disentangle any network of human motives no matter how complex, and who withal retains ironical objectivity, this wise guy is the model historian of our time. Heaven forbid that passion should underlie the observations. Heaven forbid that the chronicle should be biased by convictions. We want such historians to be sophisticated, unshockable, amused by plot and counterplot, no more than annoyed by disaster, for then we are sure that what we are being served is the truth. In her book 'Athene Palace,' Countess Waldeck achieves this kind of perfection." Virgilia Sapieha

+ Sat R of Lit 25:9 F 14 '42 550w

Time 39:88 F 16 '42 1800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p453 S 12 '42 100w

GRAHAM, BESSIE. Bookman's manual; a guide to literature. 5th ed rev and enl 829p $5 Bowker

028 Booksellers and bookselling. Bibliography—Best books. Reference books—Bibliography (W) 41-51924

"This excellent bibliographic guide is enlarged by more than 100 pages by publications of the years since the fourth edition [Book Review Digest, 1935]." Booklist

Booklist 38:56 O 15 '41

"As a bookseller's guide to literature, the five editions of The Bookman's Manual will continue to fill a unique and honored place on the librarian's shelf of book lists and literary manuals." A. G. Higgins

+ Library J 66:1028 D 1 '41 700w

"There are some errors in classification, in listing revisions, and otherwise; but they are not numerous. In spite of faults, the Manual may be used with great pleasure and profit by the student of cultural history if its limitations and special purpose are kept in mind. One can turn, for instance, to chapters on American poetry or fiction, Continental drama, or Russian literature, for extended and well-arranged lists, or one may find for Hawthorne or Hardy or Zola a list of works chronologically arranged, with full bibliographical detail, as well as a short list of biographies of each author and the dates of his birth and death. An author, title and series index makes it easy to find the information about any of the thousands of books listed." J. M. Gambrell + Social Educ 6:386 D '42 450w

GRAHAM, FRANK. Lou Gehrig, a quiet hero. 250p il $2 Putnam

B or 92 Gehrig, Lou (W) 42-8657

Biography of one of the most famous of the Yankee baseball players of the last two decades, who died at the age of thirty-eight, last year.

Booklist 38:308 Ap 15 '42

"It is possible to learn more about the spirit of a country—especially of a democratic country—by a study of heroes than in any other way open to the average reader. By this biography, affectionate yet restrained, one looks into the heart of America. . . . A sports columnist's tribute, this is more than a story of his career as a baseball star; it is the life story of 'a quiet hero.' . . . The closing scenes of this career, whose poignancy would be unbearable were it overplayed, are presented so quietly that all their dignity is revealed. There are many interesting photographs." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Mr 29 '42 250w

Wis Lib Bul 38:85 My '42

GRAHAM, FRANK DUNSTONE. Social goals and economic institutions. 273p $3 Princeton univ. press

330.1 Economics. Social sciences 42-17276

"Timely analysis of applied economics and its relation to author's conception of a 'social Utopia.' Based on thesis that the road we must travel is road of 'power-cum-freedom.' General locus of subject is vaguely defined area common to ethics, politics, and economics. Program of reform presented is an attempt to describe an institutional mechanism that might serve as embodiment of liberal values for these times." Library J

Reviewed by A. B. Wolfe

Ann Am Acad 224:221 N '42 500w

"This very fine discussion of the bearing of economic practices and institutions upon the attainment of the objectives of a good society deserves a fuller review than it is possible to give it at this time. Meanwhile it is recommended to the attention of those who want a stimulus and a guide to their economic thinking."

+ Christian Century 59:862 J1 8 '42 100w

Reviewed by L. G. Ligutti

Commonweal 36:474 S 4 '42 450w

Reviewed by J. B. Fogg

Library J 67:475 My 15 '42 80w

"Professor Graham's book is in the main stream of the revaluation of social thinking which characterizes the social revolution now in process. . . . His main conclusion is sound—that the line of progress lies in a more acute and determined use of the reason rather than in a reversion to romantic or mystical behavior. . . . The detailed content of his book is not, to this reviewer, so satisfactory as its postulates." George Soule

+ New Repub 107:357 S 21 '42 480w

GRAHAM, MALBONE WATSON. Diplomatic recognition of the border states; pt. 3, Latvia. 399-564p pa $1.75 Univ. of Calif.

341 Recognition (international law). Latvia —Foreign relations (36-27836)

"[This] is the third in a series of studies by Professor Malbone W. Graham dealing with the borderlands of the Russian Empire. Like the first two [Book Review Digest, 1936, 1939] this is an account of a struggle for diplomatic recognition following a successful movement for independence from Russia. Professor Graham concentrates on the developments of the four years immediately following the Russian Revolution." Am Pol Sci R

GRAHAM, M. W.—Continued

"The book is well written, and documentation throughout is excellent; many of the documents cited in the footnotes are given in textual form in the latter part of the book." N. L. Hill

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1211 D '41 230w

Reviewed by Peter Lejins
Ann Am Acad 222:203 J1 '42 350w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:579 Ap '42 10w

GRAHAM, WALTER JAMES, ed. See Addison, J. Letters

GRAJDANZEV, ANDREW JONAH. Formosa today; an analysis of the economic development and strategic importance of Japan's tropical colony. (Institute of Pacific relations. Int. research ser) 193p pa $1 Inst. of Pacific relations

330.9529 Formosa 42-18735

"By using official Japanese figures and the reports of semi-official agencies, a picture of Japanese colonial exploitation is presented which makes the charges against other powers fade into insignificance. Figures are presented to show that instead of Japan pouring money into Formosa, most of the costs of development have been borne by the colony itself. . . . Such economic domination has its counterpart in the political sphere. . . . we may say that after forty-five years of Japanese rule Taiwan is a colony in the government of which the islanders have no voice whatsoever and in which the Japanese themselves as citizens have little or no influence. The island is ruled by the governor-general with the help of the army and police." Am Pol Sci R

"In its quiet way, this study gives the reader a greater sense of the gulf separating Japanese and American philosophies of life and government than many more lurid and popular publications. The volume furnishes basic facts supplied by the Japanese themselves, and describes a colonial regime which should be compared with the activities of the United States in the Philippines. The study should be in the hands of all persons interested in the Far East." A. E. Nuquist

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:791 Ag '42 450w

"The Japanese militarist who peruses this volume will feel that Mr. Grajdanzev is a very demon in his exposures of truth as shown in Nipponese statistics." H. F. MacNair

+ Ann Am Acad 224:210 N '42 650w

GRAMLING, OLIVER. Free men are fighting; the story of World war II, by Oliver Gramling and Associated press correspondents around the world. 488p maps $3.50 Farrar

940.53 World war, 1939- (W) 42-24798

A running account of the present war, from August, 1939 to June, 1942. It is pieced together from dispatches and accounts of some sixty-five A P correspondents, plus a few others who have covered the war. Index.

Booklist 39:135 D 15 '42

"There is some good reporting in the book. Readers' tastes will, of course, differ, but there will probably be general agreement on the particular merit of such outstanding stories as Drew Middleton's on the talk of English countrymen in a village pub on the eve of war, on the London air-raid shelter presided over by Mickey Davis, the dwarf, and on what East End Londoners think of the Soviets; Edwin Shanke's on the feelings of a German woman at the approach of war; Robert St. John's on things seen and heard in Greece." W. R. Deuel

Books p53 D 6 '42 800w

Reviewed by R. G. Doyle
N Y Times p5 D 27 '42 750w

"Mr. Gramling includes human oddities as well as battles, and manages to dovetail single events into a significant whole. Readable and skillfully done."

+ New Yorker 18:98 N 21 '42 90w

"A concise, fast-paced, dramatic, and valuable history of the war. . . . It is exciting history written by two score men, fresh from the hushed tension of government offices—men scrambling with refugees on machine-gunned roads, men in quiet villages feeling the pulse of people headed for new and confused destinies, men on battlefields in deserts, jungles, and hills. These are stories written under pressure. . . . More important, these correspondents not only saw the deeds and heard the words, but made the American people privy to the machinations of men and depicted the shadow of coming events for them." Cecil Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 25:23 D 5 '42 1050w

GRAMOPHONE SHOP INC., NEW YORK.

Gramophone shop encyclopedia of recorded music. [rev ed] 558p $3.95 Simon & Schuster

781.9734 Phonograph records. Music—Bibliography (W) 42-24376

"A revised version, with a new typographical arrangement. Many composers of distinctly popular music are omitted. No prices are given; sets available for automatic operation are indicated. Contains listings from European manufacturers through December 1940, American recordings through June 1942." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1936.

Booklist 39:105 N 15 '42

Commonweal 37:186 D 4 '42 180w

"The book assembles and arranges in convenient form the information that is to be got only from a number of catalogues; on the other hand a statement on the front of the jacket—that the book lists the best performances of the best works—which gives the impression that it is also a selective guide, is misleading. The best are listed, but together with the less good, and with nothing to distinguish one from the other in music, performance, or recording." E. H. Haggin

Nation 155:458 O 31 '42 180w

GRANT, AMELIA HOWE. Nursing: a community health service. 277p $2.50 Saunders

614.073 Nurses and nursing. Public health 42-8293

"This textbook is designed primarily to give undergraduate student nurses an understanding of the role of the nurse in the field of public health. . . . Miss Grant is the present director of the Bureau of Nursing in New York City's Department of Health." Survey

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

+ Am J Pub Health 32:1295 N '42 400w

"The book is concisely and clearly written, with material presented in a well organized fashion. A helpful bibliography for undergraduate students is included, chosen to supplement and expand the material carried in the text. With the great increase in numbers of volunteers serving in health agencies today, it would seem that this text might also be widely useful in giving the more earnest volunteer a better understanding of the community health programs with which she is assisting." Katharine Faville

+ Survey 78:349 D '42 300w

GRAPEWIN, CHARLES ELLSWORTH. Meg Randall. 297p $2 Liveright

42-50417

Story of a beautiful young girl, brought up in almost convent-like seclusion, who met and married that rare combination—a gambler who was "on the straight."

"Mr. Grapewin must be credited with presenting the season's acme of innocence, and you will be happy to learn that Monty Rogers did not take advantage of it." Lisle Bell
Books p30 N 22 '42 180w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p41 N 22 '42 120w

GRATTAN, CLINTON HARTLEY. Introducing Australia. 331p il maps $3 Day 919.4 Australia (W) 42-36004

A comprehensive survey, in topical arrangement, of the continent of Australia, its geography, history, economic and social conditions, foreign relations, and cultural life. The book is based on three visits made by the author during the last fifteen years, one of over a year's duration from December 1936 to September 1938. Index.

"The author has done an excellent job." Alfred Manes

+ Ann Am Acad 221:203 My '42 550w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Atlantic Mr '42 200w
Booklist 38:188 F 1 '42
Bookmark 3:13 Mr '42

"At this desperate moment when we are having to revise every value in the Pacific Ocean, we are fortunate in this country to have Hartley Grattan's fine account of our seven million allies who live in Australia. Ben Robertson

+ Books p1 Ja 11 '42 1000w

"The reader will find in it answers to most of the questions that the subject suggests and will in addition find the material presented in an easily digestible form. The book is one that should certainly be widely read. In another sense, however, the author has not been nearly so fortunate, for the events of the past few months must have modified considerably some of his conclusions, had he been able to foresee them." G. C. Andrew

+ Canadian Forum 22:59 My '42 750w

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
Cath World 155:119 Ap '42 400w

"In this concise volume, lightened with touches of humor and enriched with illustrative anecdotes and photographs, the author introduces us to a great people and their country, about which we Americans know too little. More than that, he gives us an insight into their problems and tells how they have courageously met them." L. J. Warford

+ Christian Century 59:728 Je 3 '42 450w
Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '42

"Mr. Grattan writes from a full firsthand knowledge, a wide experience and scholarship and with a deep sympathy and understanding of Australia's problems and ideals. His knowledge of the facts and his comprehensive acquaintance with Australia's general and specialized literature is truly remarkable." J. G. Murtagh

+ Commonweal 35:371 Ja 30 '42 1250w

"Australia is still a country about which most Americans know little or nothing. But the fault is not entirely theirs, for, strange as it may seem, until the appearance of this book nobody had taken the trouble to write the kind of general account of that country and its people that would be at the same time interesting and reliable. Introducing Australia at last supplies this long felt need, and in view of the important position that the great island-continent occupies in the war-ravaged Pacific, the book is one that should be very widely read. Grattan has done an excellent job." Alvin Adey

+ Current Hist 2:64 Mr '42 600w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:580 Ap '42 50w

"The title of this book is somewhat misleading, since it is an introduction to the 'Australian' rather than to the 'continent.' It is an interesting and careful study, complementary to the geographical approach but paying very little attention to the physical environment. The author is keenly interested in Australian politics, trade, and government; and the book is rather unusual since he voices a strong sympathy for the workingman rather than for the more prosperous Australian." Griffith Taylor + Geog R 32:330 Ap '42 650w

"Should be widely read." M. A. Gray
+ Library J 67:39 Ja 1 '42 70w

"A book on Australia could not be more opportune. Hartley Grattan, after years of preparation, has hit the right moment for publication, just as the Labor Prime Minister of the Commonwealth is impelled by events to remind his countrymen and the world that the South Pacific is a single oceanic region inseparable from the American continent. Mr. Grattan enjoys advantages for his study such as fall to very few Americans." S. K. Ratcliffe

+ Nation 154:69 Ja 17 '42 800w

Reviewed by W. C. Rivers

New Repub 106:404 Mr 23 '42 120w

"To all of us who have been crying 'mea culpa' Hartley Grattan's book, 'Introducing Australia,' will prove a godsend. It answers precisely the questions that all of us are asking. This is the primer in the course of instruction that we need. The author's attitude in writing this book has much to do with its peculiar adaptability to the present problem. Mr. Grattan plans a much longer and more detailed study of Australia and its problems. This book is the introduction. Thoughtful persons in this country want a much longer and detailed examination of those problems as they have the opportunity to make it, and they will welcome this chance to approach those materials in the company of a distinguished and discriminating guide." R. A. Smith

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 11 '42 1150w

"Well-informed, up-to-the-minute interpretation of our South Pacific ally."

+ New Yorker 17:56 Ja 3 '42 50w

"There is a warm objectivity about Grattan's approach to his subject although on some matters it would be more interesting to have his personal opinion. On all questions of national controversy Grattan invariably allows the leading partisans to state their cases for the reader's judgment. Much of what he writes will be painful to the more conservative. But at this critical juncture the future of Australia may well turn on whether its leaders can cast aside traditional blinkers and overcome vested interests to attain the all-out effort necessary for national survival." Howard Daniel

+ Pacific Affairs 15:118 Mr '42 500w

Pratt p22 O '42

"The publication of Mr. Grattan's introduction to the Sixth Continent is very timely. It should not be inferred, however, that it was whipped up overnight to capitalize on a public's passing fancy. This is a thoughtful, searching study produced after the author had made several tours of investigation down under, conversed with Australians of all ranks, and read widely in Australian letters." L. E. Frechtling

+ Sat R of Lit 25:12 Ja 3 '42 410w

"Events have intensified the need to know more of a people and a country both of which will become more closely allied with the United States in thought and military action. Such knowledge is to be found in this book of sober fact and deduction, written with a skill that leaves no taste of pedantic didacticism. . . Mr. Grattan has tried to see the country as a whole, and to include in his book what he considers important and interesting to American readers."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:2 Ja '42 650w

Reviewed by Leonidas Dodson

Social Studies 33:376 D '42 360w

"A good, compact, authoritative book on Australia by an American writer was something urgently called for. Here, indubitably, it is." S. K. Ratcliffe

+ Survey G 31:215 Ap '42 550w

Time 39:71 Ja 5 '42 90w

"The reader may at times feel that Mr. Grattan has filled his pages too full, cluttered them here and there with too many quotations, in his desire to present in so short a form the results of so long and fruitful a labor. But this is a small debit to charge against a book which is distinguished by its studious analysis and shrewd interpretation. One puts it down with a sense of the extraordinary power that emanates from this lonely continent, despite its small population—a power which no doubt originates in the frontier spirit still dominant in Australian life." A. W. Griswold

GRATTAN, C. H.—Continued
+ — Yale R n s 31:642 spring '42 650w

GRAVES, ALONZO, pseud? Eclipse of a mind.
722p $5 Medical journal press, 343 E. 50th st, N.Y.

616.895 Insanity 42-3862

"A very full record (over 700 pages), in autobiographical form, of the experiences of a mental case of the manic-depressive type, through four hospitalizations and the preceding and intervening events, with clinical comments by attending physicians." Christian Century

"The data should be of importance to the psychiatrist and the student of abnormalities of personality and conduct, but have little legitimate interest for the non-professional reader."

Christian Century 59:665 My 20 '42
70w

Reviewed by M. B. Singer
Ethics 53:75 O '42 360w

GRAY, ELIZABETH JANET. Adam of the road; il. by Robert Lawson. 317p $2 Viking
(W) 42-10681

Tale of a minstrel and his son Adam, who wandered thru southeastern England in the thirteenth century. Adam's adventures in search of his lost dog and his beloved father led him from St Alban's Abbey to London, thence to Winchester, back to London, and then to Oxford where the three were at last reunited. For grades six to eight.

Booklist 38:334 My 1 '42

"Without display of erudition, the framework of history is sound and the sense of place as strong as if written on the spot. The appearance of this book, from type to Mr. Lawson's many drawings, is so right it falls upon the eye like music on the ear."

+ Books p14 My 10 '42 450w

"Authentic in its historical details, and a charming, live story as well, this book is perfect background reading for English history and literature and one you will want for your own book shelves. This is a book that will live because of its beauty and worth." F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 29 '42 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '42

"Elizabeth Gray has re-created, with superb effect, a period of English history glowing with life and color. . . With the sympathetic pictures by Robert Lawson this absorbing story will take its place among the finest historical stories for children." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:178 My '42 160w

"Careful historical background is reproduced with color and sense of life. For younger children than author's previous books. Fine illustrations by Robert Lawson." Eleanor Kidder

+ Library J 67:476 My 15 '42 100w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie
Library J 67:890 O 15 '42 40w

"Only a mature writer thoroughly at ease with her material and gifted with the power to imagine deeply and sensitively could have painted a picture of medieval life and drawn the portrait of an appealing character in a fashion so warm, so mellow, so quietly spontaneous. . . Robert Lawson is at his best in these splendid drawings of countryside, castles, towers, inns and wayfarers, which have the same living quality, the same romance of adventure as the text. This is a book beautiful in style and spirit and one that will bear many rereadings." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 My 17 '42 850w

"A truly delightful tale. . . The period detail, much of it new and fascinating, is thoroughly woven into the story. The book is handsome, too, with its wide-spaced type and fine, rich illustrations."

+ New Yorker 18:75 My 23 '42 80w

"A swiftly-paced story makes history as much fun as the Henty books."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:60 D 5 '42 40w

Wis Lib Bul 38:168 N '42

GRAY, MADELINE, and URBAN, ROBERT
C. Bright idea book. 223p il $2.50 Dutton
790 Amusements. Hobbies 42-18028

Magic, sports, earning money, teaching your dog, hobbies, and puzzles are included in this book for young people. Simple small illustrations in black and white.

Booklist 39:35 O 1 '42

"The ideas are good for summer or winter, and the book is stout enough to survive camp treatment and be later borrowed by all one's friends at school." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ag 9 '42 200w

"Funny little line drawings by Mr. Urban well illustrate the clear instructions. Welcome addition where new material of this type is needed." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 67:686 Ag '42 60w

"Excellent entertainment for the 'restless child.'"

+ School & Society 56:72 Jl 18 '42 20w

GRAY, PETER S. People of Poros; a portrait of a Greek island village; il. by Muriel Hannah. (Whittlesey house publication) 325p $3 McGraw 914.99 Greece—Social life and customs.

Poros (island) 42-21875

A picture of life on the Greek island of Poros, written by an American who has made two lengthy visits there, one in the early thirties and the second just before war broke out in Europe.

Booklist 39:136 D 15 '42

"This is island life as reported by one who never desired to improve it, who savored to the last turn of phrase, to the faintest trace of seasoning, sound or smell, to the least expression of human feeling, all that took place among intensely human friends. . . Nothing in print has brought us closer to the Greeks of today." M. L. Becker

+ Books p3 O 4 '42 700w

Christian Century 59:1322 O 28 '42 130w

Reviewed by C. H. Bishop
Commonweal 37:260 D 25 '42 110w

Reviewed by A. M. Colt

Library J 67:737 S 1 '42 70w

"Poros was no travel section paradise. But —again—it had character, and that was what mattered to Mr. Gray and, because he writes simply and with perception, it is what will matter to the reasonably discerning reader. There is nostalgia in it, but no suggestion of that escape from reality which in other years sent Americans hurrying to far islands." J. K. Hutchens

+ N Y Times p32 O 4 '42 600w

GRAY, WOOD. The hidden Civil war; the story of the Copperheads. 314p il maps $3.75 Viking

973.71 U.S.—Politics and government—Civil war 42-21467

Study of the Copperhead movement from 1860 to the end of the Civil war. It presents a picture of the defeatism, revolt against war's demands, and the treachery within the ranks, which endangered the Northern side, and shows some odd parallels to the appeasers and Fifth columnists of the present day. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. E. Danielson
+ Atlantic 170:166 D '42 240w
Booklist 39:46 O 15 '42

"Elaborately documenting his book and writing with force and clarity, the professor doesn't yield his objective viewpoint until the final page, when the old failing of the teacher who attempts to rewrite history catches up with him. Only then does he yield to the pedantic urge to lecture and to lead, an error not serious when his patriotism is so obviously prompting him." Lloyd Lewis

+ Books p7 S 27 '42 1350w

"Timely book; with many quotations from contemporary press; for serious student of history rather than general reader. Recommended for large libraries." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 67:680 Ag '42 70w

Reviewed by Margaret Leech
Nation 155:550 N 21 '42 270w

Reviewed by Richard Hofstadter
New Repub 107:517 O 19 '42 500w

Reviewed by Margaret Leech
N Y Times p5 S 27 '42 900w

"Sound study of the Copperhead movement, never before so adequately explained."

+ New Yorker 18:72 S 12 '42 60w

"Dr. Gray, in this admirably thorough work, has given us a history of the interaction of defeatism and secession of 1861-65 which has appositeness to the present national crises." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 25:15 S 26 '42 550w

GRAYSON, DAVID, pseud. See Baker, R. S.

GREEK political experience; studies in honor of William Kelly Prentice. 252p maps $3 Princeton Univ. press

320.938 Political science—History. Greece—Politics and government. Prentice, William Kelly 41-24541

"This Festschrift is the work of fourteen classical scholars: Norman T. Pratt, Jr., J. Penrose Harland, George M. Harper, Jr., B. D. Meritt, P. R. Coleman-Norton, Malcolm MacLaren, Jr., Charles Alexander Robinson, Jr., O. W. Reinmuth, John V. A. Fine, Sherman LeRoy Wallace, Glanville Downey, David Magie, Whitney J. Oates, and Allan Chester Johnson. The book has a central theme and the contributors have succeeded in keeping close to it throughout." J Philos

"It is a worthy offering to a distinguished teacher and scholar." J. W. Swain

+ Am Hist R 47:825 J1 '42 500w

"Although the several topics overlap, there is little repetition of arguments. Modern parallels with antiquity are introduced discreetly but effectively. The style is uniform and pleasant. The book is full of stimulating suggestions and I have enjoyed reading several of the essays over again." D. S. Mackay

+ J Philos 39:330 Je 4 '42 1800w

Nation 154:579 My 16 '42 90w

GREEN, ANNE. Lady in the mask. 336p $2.50 Harper

(W) 42-5831

A romantic tale of Italy in the last decade of the fifteenth century. It recounts the story of the adventures of one Gregorio on a trip to Milan with gifts and messages for Duke Lodovico.

"This is the charm of the book. Simonetta, Uncle Serpieri and Gregorio are enticing individualists but their personal affairs are less absorbing than the lavish panorama of the Renaissance through which they pass." Page Cooper

+ Books p10 Mr 8 '42 600w

"The truth is that the fictional characters in this novel are not on the whole very interesting despite their flamboyance—and this is true even of Gregorio, that arch scoundrel and wit, who appears to be such a favorite of the author's. Far more provocative are the portraits Miss Green paints of Ludovico and Leonardo, and of Beatrice d'Este, the Duke's capricious, gay young wife, who was supposedly a childhood friend of Simonetta's. Because she has studied them so scrupulously, and often used their own words, Miss Green's historical characters are more real than her imagined ones." E. H. Walton

N Y Times p6 Mr 8 '42 800w

"A clever, brightly colored costume piece, with a thieving, conniving, and amusing rogue as the chief character. A romantic reconstruction of a romantic period, with a complicated and not very important plot and plenty of entertaining characters."

+ New Yorker 18:63 Mr 7 '42 40w

"We are used to seeing Renaissance tapestries when they are old and faded. This is the tapestry when it was new, the colors bright, even cheerfully garish, the woven figures clear and distinct, the pattern lively. The author—and this is an achievement for any historical writer—writes about the period as though it were the present, not the past." R. C. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 25:12 Ag 8 '42 380w

GREEN, HORACE. Triumph; Grant's final victory; a play. 129p $2.50 Stewart

812 Grant, Ulysses Simpson—Drama 42-7221

An episodic play based on the life of U.S. Grant from Galena days in 1861 to his death.

"The last Grant is much like the first, and the play inevitably lacks the progress found in Sherwood's 'Abe Lincoln in Illinois.' Hendrick van Loon contributes an interesting introduction." W. P. Eaton

Books p17 Mr 22 '42 130w

Wis Lib Bul 38:117 J1 '42

GREEN, JULIAN. Memories of happy days. 320p $3 Harper

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 42-36391

The author was born in Paris in 1900, the son of an American business man who was European representative of an American firm. This volume of "memories" is chiefly devoted to the author's childhood and school days and his experiences in the first World war as an ambulance driver. There follows more briefly an account of his years at the University of Virginia, his return to France, and the early years of literary success.

"It is not an exciting book; the pictures are painted in pastels rather than in oils; but it leaves the reader with a respect and admiration for the author's modest honesty. It may also serve as an introduction to Mr. Green's Personal Record, 1928-1939, where we have a richer and more meditative account of the writer's problems and ambitions than it was his purpose to give here." Theodore Spencer

+ Atlantic 170:162 D '42 240w

Booklist 39:119 D 1 '42

"These memories of a happy childhood and youth in France challenge comparison with two masterpieces, Renan's 'Souvenirs' and Anatole France's 'Book of My Friend.' Green loves his instrument, language, no less than his two great predecessors. He is even freer than they from obvious artifice. The supreme stylist is the one whose style defies analysis." Albert Guerard

+ Books p3 N 1 '42 1600w

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 5 '42 550w

Reviewed by C. H. Bishop
Commonweal 37:210 D 11 '42 500w

Reviewed by A. R. Eaton
Library J 67:680 Ag '42 80w

Reviewed by Justin O'Brien
Nation 155:549 N 21 '42 650w

GREEN, JULIAN—Continued

"Memories of Happy Days" is not the sort of autobiography that one expects from any novelist, French or American. . . . His book gives us one thing, however, and that is a mood, a powerful feeling of nostalgia growing out of simple and apparently neutral statements of what he did or saw. Here as in his novels, he succeeds by strictly prosaic methods in achieving the effects of poetry." Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 107:614 N 9 '42 360w

"Julian Green has written his first book in English. It is a book of vivid and diversely interesting personal remembrance, from imaginative childhood on into the novelist's maturity. And it is one of the most innately beautiful and subtly communicative books to be written by any American about France." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p3 N 8 '42 1300w

"The literary memoirs at the end are conventional, the rest true and touching."

+ — New Yorker 18:83 N 7 '42 50w

"Whether 'Memories of Happy Days' is read as a picture of life in Paris or as the development of an artist, it will prove interesting and rewarding." E. C. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 25:7 N 7 '42 950w

Reviewed by Lee Varley

Springfd Republican p10 N 4 '42 500w

Time 40:118 D 14 '42 430w

Wis Lib Bul 38:184 D '42

GREEN, PHILIP LEONARD. Pan American progress. 214p $2 Hastings house

341.1 Pan Americanism. U.S.—Relations (general) with Latin America. Latin America—Relations (general) with U.S.

(W) 42-17326

Traces the development of inter-American relations from the times before Bolivar to the present day, covering the political relations between the Americas as well as many non-governmental efforts toward inter-American understanding. Index.

Booklist 39:2 S '42

School & Society 56:28 Jl 4 '42 30w

GREENE, EDWARD BARROWS. Measurements of human behavior. 777p il $3.50 Odyssey

151.2 Mental tests

41-12737

"This book is a response to the desire of teachers for a text which will present a more comprehensive treatment of behavioral measurement techniques and procedures than is available in any single volume hitherto published. It has been planned to serve the needs of those students in the second, third, and fourth years of college who are preparing for work in medicine, journalism, education, industrial relations, social work, or applied psychology. . . . The book is arranged in three parts. All of Part I, which deals with basic considerations in measurement, must be understood by those who wish to study the rest of the book. Most of the chapters in Part II, which deals with typical measuring instruments and their uses, and in Part III, which deals with persistent problems in measurement, may be read separately without serious loss of context." (Pref) Bibliography. Glossary and index.

"The book should be useful as a handy source for students and others who desire a first acquaintance with the kinds of tests used for any given purpose." T. C. McCormick

+ Am Soc R 7:441 Je '42 360w

"A book which should cover a long-felt need. The author has achieved a prodigious feat in combining in one textbook the wealth of material which has been previously largely scattered in psychological and personal journals. . . . As a textbook for a course in mental measurements of psychological tests, the book will probably prove to be too comprehensive. It is, in reality, two textbooks condensed into one." A. W. Brown

+ — El School J 42:313 D '41 900w

GREENE, EVARTS BOUTELL. Religion and the state; the making and testing of an American tradition. 172p $2.75 N.Y. univ press

261.7 Church and state in the U.S. Religious liberty 42-1794

"The author, professor emeritus of American history in Columbia University, presents in six lectures, with appropriate documentation, the main outlines of the European tradition of church-state connection, the transplanting of that tradition to America, the process of liberalization leading to separation in our system, and the problems which still remain, especially those relating to education and to freedom of conscience." Christian Century

Reviewed by W. W. Sweet

Am J Soc 48:276 S '42 380w

Reviewed by T. I. Cook

Am Pol Sci R 36:549 Je '42 850w

"Apart from exposing the complexity of Church-State relationships in America, this work is principally valuable as a handbook. Very compactly, Mr. Greene has covered a vast range of material, and touched on every salient feature of his theme; but it was of course impossible in so slim a volume to deal thoroughly or profoundly with any phase of the subject. Moreover, even so objective a summary was bound to be in a sense one-sided." N. F. Langford

+ — Canadian Hist R 23:88 Jr '42 400w

Christian Century 59:49 Ja 14 '42 60w

"This authoritative study is condensed and so clearly and simply written that it is profitable reading for every thoughtful citizen or church member." W. F. Thompson

+ Churchman 156:14 N 15 '42 270w

Reviewed by A. H. Campbell

Library J 66:1093 D 15 '41 80w

"This volume of lectures is a welcome addition to the meager list of scholarly books on American ecclesiastical history. . . . Teachers of American history should find the volume especially useful." E. S. Morgan

+ New Eng Q 15:390 Je '42 280w

GREENE, HARRY ANDREW; JORGENSEN, ALBERT NELS, and GERBERICH, JOSEPH RAYMOND. Measurement and evaluation in the elementary school [ed. by F. B. Knight]. 639p il $3.75 Longmans

371.26 Mental tests. Examinations. Education of children 42-5856

"This book is designed especially for the use of elementary-school teachers and students of elementary education. It presents a practical introductory discussion of the essential principles of measurement and evaluation in the elementary school. This volume is essentially a revised and expanded treatment of an earlier volume which appeared under the title of 'The Use and Interpretation of Elementary School Tests,' 1935. New material is presented on measurement of personality and physical and health education. Included are discussions of such topics as: the general background and methods of educational measurement and evaluation; achievement tests—the construction and use of standardized, essay and informal objective tests; intelligence tests and their use; personality tests and their use; subject fields—the relation of curriculum and objectives to testing and the use of various measurements and evaluative techniques in each instructional area; statistical methods necessary for the appropriate use of tests and for the interpretation of results; general summary on the broad uses of test results." School & Society

"Written from the point of view of the classroom teacher, [this] is a handy reference book on testing at the elementary-school level. The reviewer recommends it as a desirable addition to the professional library of the classroom teacher. It might well serve as a basic textbook in a first course in testing, but advanced students in education and specialists in testing will find the book somewhat elementary." G. J. Froehlich

+ El School J 42:712 My '42 650w

School & Society 55:112 Ja 24 '42 100w

GREENHILL, MICHAEL, and DUNBAR, EVELYN MARY. Book of farmcraft; with a foreword by A. G. Street. 96p il $1.75 (5s) Longmans

630 Agriculture—Juvenile literature

A "how-to-do" it book for the amateur at farmer work. The right way and the wrong way or the easy way and the hard way are demonstrated in both text and illustration. Index.

"After studying Miss Dunbar's drawings, I feel the self-congratulation of one who has done his or her drill to perfection, solely because the N.C.O. (in this instance a trim and gracious instructress) has made it harder to blunder than to do the routine correctly. . . Mr. Greenhill has done his share wisely, writing not too much. But his advice will bear reading a good many times and will be memorised by many." Thomas Hennell

+ Spec 168:308 Mr 27 '42 300w

"Anyone who thinks of working on the land will save himself or herself much mortification, and the farmer much time and trouble, by a careful study of this book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p179 Ap 4 '42 180w

GREGG, HAROLD. Art for the schools of America [ed. by Frank W. Cyr]. 191p il $2 Int. textbook

707 Art—Study and teaching 41-51438

"A book prepared by one who has had experience with teaching in country schools and in small towns. The book grows out of the environment of the country rather than the city. The author believes that art no longer need be the special privilege of children in a big city school. The book is well illustrated and includes four color plates, examples of children's work in the schools." School Arts

Booklist 38:206 F 15 '42

Pratt p9 D '42

School Arts 41:5a My '42 70w

GREGORY, JACKSON. Border line. 248p $2 Dodd

42-4610

Western story.

Booklist 38:276 Ap 1 '42

"No dull moments in this horse opera." Will Cuppy

Books p18 Ap '42 80w

GREGORY, JACKSON. Man from Texas. 259p $2 Dodd

42-23863

Western story.

Booklist 39:122 D 1 '42

"Fine open-air stuff." Will Cuppy

+ Books p31 N 8 '42 100w

"A sparkling and engrossing tale of the kind that Western fans have come to expect from the skillful and versatile Jackson Gregory."

+ N Y Times p36 N 22 '42 230w

GREGORY, JACKSON. Two in the wilderness. 258p $2 Dodd

(W) 42-18362

Western story.

Booklist 39:12 S '42

"An active and pleasing tale of love and shooting in the early West." Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 S 6 '42 60w

GREGORY, PADRAIC. When painting was in glory, 1280-1580. (Science and culture ser) 275p il $3.75 Bruce pub.

759.5 Painting—Italy. Painters, Italian. Painting, Renaissance 41-27485

"In his introductory chapter the author—a distinguished Irish architect and man of letters—makes clear and emphatic his thesis that all great art in literature, music, sculpture and painting stems from religion or patriotism.

The succeeding chapters discuss the painters that crossed the great stage of Italy's art world from Cimabue to Correggio and the Venetians. . . This first American publication of the author—the fruit of twenty-five years of study in the European art galleries—is further enriched by sixty-five full-page reproductions of famous paintings, and by a lengthy bibliography and an index." Cath World

"This is a book which combines sound and scholarly art criticism with spiritual understanding, something rarely found in these days." A. McC. Sholl

+ Cath World 155:114 Ap '42 470w

"Another book which extols the glories of the past and which repeats the old wail: 'How wonderful was the past and how very mediocre is the present—to say nothing of the future!' The author displays vast erudition on questions with which any student of painting, sculpture and architecture is fairly well acquainted." Maurice Lavanoux

— Commonweal 35:323 Ja 16 '42 450w

GREIG, MAYSIE (JENNIFER AMES, pseud). Diplomatic honeymoon. 275p $2 Doubleday

42-15690

An English girl and a young American lecturer, survivors from a sinking ship, land in Sicily. Because America has not yet entered the war, the American suggests that the girl pose as his wife and thus escape internment. The result is complications within complications.

"Writing with her usual fluency, Miss Greig has only minor difficulties with American idiom, as when her hero says that he is chicken-hearted, meaning kind-hearted." Lisle Bell

Books p17 Jl 12 '42 130w

"The end is arranged sweetly to suit Miss Greig's faithful readers." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p23 Je 28 '42 160w

GREIG, MAYSIE (JENNIFER AMES, pseud). Girl from nowhere. 277p $2 Doubleday

42-10306

Romantic story of Jamaica and England during the present war. Janice had lived some time in Jamaica while her father experimented with unsuccessful inventions. When the war broke out Janice sold an heirloom to Terry Hammond and with the proceeds set out for England. Terry's wife, for whom he bought the jewel, was the jealous type, and the stage was set for excitement.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p16 Ap 26 '42 70w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p18 My 3 '42 220w

GREIN, LUDWIG. Peace and bread. 128p $1 Dorrance

914.3 Germany—Social conditions 42-12933

"A simple story of a simple German family from 1907 through the first war. The idea is that it 'helps one to understand why the leadership of even a Hitler seemed preferable to then existing conditions.' Since the story ends about ten years before Hitler came to leadership, it does not throw much light on that matter." Christian Century

Christian Century 59:665 My 20 '42 60w

Churchman 156:31 O 1 '42 110w

GRENE, DAVID, tr. Three Greek tragedies in translation. 228p $2.50; text ed $1.75 Univ. of Chicago press

882.08 Greek drama—Translations into English 42-19142

"This book is intended for two kinds of readers: first, for the students who study Greek tragedy in translation either in courses specifically devoted to that subject or in general drama courses and, secondly, for people outside universities who care to find out what a Greek tragedy is like." (Pref) Contents: Prometheus Bound, by Aeschylus; Oedipus the King, by Sophocles; Hippolytus, by Euripides.

GRENE, DAVID—Continued

Booklist 39:197 Ja 15 '43

"The translator's introductions are full and instructive. He has dealt skillfully with the difficult problem of rendering the Greek into an English form—partly free verse and partly prose—which preserves the dignity and simple formalism of the original without pomposity. The subtle rhythms of the Greek texts and their no less subtle stylized quality cannot be translated."

+ Christian Century 59:1007 Ag 19 '42 70w

Reviewed by E. P. Richardson
Commonweal 39:50 O 30 '42 500w
Library J 67:1013 N 15 '42 50w

GREW, JOSEPH CLARK. Report from Tokyo; a message to the American people. 88p $1.50; pa $1 Simon & Schuster

952 Japan. World war, 1939—Japan (W) 42-50523

"A collection of former Ambassador Grew's speeches and statements, all stressing the point that Japan (like Germany) is seriously bent on universal conquest and the establishment of a universal slave state. The Japs will not collapse and nothing less than the total annihilation of their ruling class will bring permanent peace in the Pacific." New Yorker

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (5) N Y Times (5) PW (1) RB (1)

Booklist 39:181 Ja 1 '43

"I venture to say nothing about the merits of [his] conclusions. I can only say that they are reached by an exceptionally intelligent and experienced observer, thoroughly sincere and altogether free from prejudice, whose carefully worked-out arguments are designed to appeal to the intelligence and not to the emotions, and who is, therefore, no spellbinder, despite the intense feeling with which he states his case. The book is a little one, it may be got either as a pamphlet, running to scarcely more than 100 pages of reading matter, or in book form. It is swift, easy and surprisingly exciting reading." Rodney Gilbert

+ Books p1 D 13 '42 1950w

Reviewed by Max Fischer

Commonweal 37:303 Ja 8 '43 120w

"The close student of world affairs will find little new in 'Report from Tokyo,' but it affords an excellent antidote for the decade of muddled and wishful thinking which preceded Pearl Harbor." D. W. Mitchell

+ Nation 156:65 Ja 9 '43 300w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 107:830 D 21 '42 600w

"It is to be hoped that this little work, valuable and useful as it is, may prove only the prelude to another work, bigger in size and scope, in which Mr. Grew will relate the fascinating story of the diplomatic drama in which he played a leading role, and outline, on the basis of his ripe judgment and experience, a formula for lasting peace after victory in the Orient." W. H. Chamberlin

+ N Y Times p18 D 13 '42 1000w

New Yorker 18:60 D 26 '42 70w

"Here is no propaganda piece put out to whip up patriotic emotion. It is an exposé of the Japanese military machine. . . It throws light without heat on a ruthless, cruel, cynical military power. It is a damning record of Japanese imperialism, the more so because from beginning to end it is written dispassionately and fairly. It is a gentleman's document through and through." H. C. Wolfe

+ Sat R of Lit 25:20 D 5 '42 900w

GREY, ZANE. Majesty's rancho. 297p $2 Harper

(W) 42-20805

Western story.

Booklist 39:34 O 1 '42

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p13 Je 21 '42 100w

GRIFFIN, ROBERT A., ed. School of the citizen soldier; adapted from the educational program of the second army; Lieutenant General Ben Lear, commanding; assistant ed, Ronald M. Shaw. 558p maps $3; civilian defense ed $2.40 Appleton-Century

973 U.S.—History. U.S.—Defenses. World war, 1939—U.S. (W) 42-20782

"Adapted from the educational program of the Second Army, this book tells briefly and interestingly what every American ought to know about his country; its geographical environment, constitutional development, military history, the evolution of its foreign policy, its economic problems, military and naval organization, and the characteristics of its enemies, Germany and Japan, and their methods of waging war. It summarizes the events which brought the United States into World War II and makes clear the principles for which America stands and for which she is fighting. In addition, it aims to answer many vital questions, such as those relating to the sources of raw materials, minerals, and foodstuffs." (School & Society) Index.

"The treatment is temperate, carefully organized, and, for the most part, well written. The soldier receives authoritative information on what we have stood for and why, and on whom and how we are fighting. . . The book is stimulating. It should be very helpful to citizen civilians as well as citizen soldiers." G. C. Robinson

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:1187 D '42 180w

Booklist 39:30 O 1 '42

Reviewed by John Chamberlain

New Repub 107:506 O 19 '42 1200w

"May seem over the heads of an army, the bulk of which never finished high school. But the text is neither academic nor 'dese and dose.' Obviously considerable mental sweat was expended in making each statement direct and clear and in terms of one-syllable thought; still, there is no sign of writing down to an audience. The course is keyed to soldiers but, as the title suggests, the emphasis is on the citizen. It is man's stuff, written in man's language, and it should inform as well as inspire one of any stage of education." S. T. Williamson

+ N Y Times p10 S 20 '42 700w

School & Society 56:120 Ag 8 '42 180w

GRIFFITH, ERNEST STACEY. Modern government in action. 31p $1 Columbia univ. press

320.15 Political science, Administrative law. Democracy 42-22075

Three essays on the adequacy of the traditional tripartite conception of government to function in an era of technical specialization. The author, director of the legislative reference service of the Library of Congress, suggests a new approach, based on research and organized planning, which will make possible the group leadership, toward which we as a nation seem turning. Index.

"A most stimulating book. . . Mr. Griffith's ideas may very well serve as a charter for post-war political planning."

+ New Repub 107:801 D 14 '42 90w

"All in all, 'The Modern Government in Action' will persuade thoughtful citizens that after the war we must not merely tutor half the world in economics and politics, but apply a few realistic precepts at home. This neaty book of 83 pages deserves the widest attention." Marshall Bagdon

+ Spring'd Republican p6 O 24 '42 1000w

GRINSTEAD, JESSE EDWARD. The killers of Green's Cove. 254p $2 Dodge 41-24077

Western story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p10 D 28 '41 70w

"In its kind this is a veritable masterpiece of clever plotting, skillful development, expert characterization and clear and effective writing." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p27 F 15 '42 120w

GRINTER, LINTON ELIAS. Design of modern steel structures. 452p il $5 (24s) Macmillan

624.17 Steel construction 41-15331

"This book on the Design of Modern Steel Structures forms a companion to Vol. 1 of the Theory of Modern Steel Structures [Book Review Digest, 1937]. Taken together they are intended to cover all of the problems of analysis and design that can be treated to advantage in the usual undergraduate courses in statically determinate structures." (Pref) Contents: Riveted connections; Welded connections; Pins and bolts for connections; Timber construction; Tension members; Compression members; Beams and girders; Combined direct stress and flexure; Stress and stability; Design of plate girders; Roofs for industrial buildings; Design of a low truss highway bridge; Office buildings; Design of a tall building; Design of continuous beams; Specifications. Index.

"Written for students and beginners who have as much knowledge of structural theory as is provided in the elementary course in strength of materials, this book seeks to provide a transition into actual design practice in the field of bridges and buildings. By being more direct and explicit than is common in undergraduate texts, it should fulfill its purpose in rather high degree. . . This is an unusually well written and well organized text for students of statically determinate structures."

+ Eng N 127:88 D 18 '41 270w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:62 O '41

GROLIER SOCIETY. Progress of science; a review of 1942; ed. by S. Edgar Farquhar, and H. Horton Sheldon. 404p $2.95 Grolier soc.

500 Science

"More than one hundred contributors, two editors and three assistants have labored together to produce this timely volume, the second in what appears to be a series of annual publications. The book consists of unrelated articles, written for the most part by competent, recognized authorities and arranged alphabetically after the fashion of an encyclopedia. It contains hundreds of unusually good illustrations, many of which are portraits accompanying biographical sketches of currently active scientific workers; others show new highway construction, chromosomes, fossils, dams, turbines, plant varieties, sun spots, and other matters of general interest. . . Among the best articles are Chew's on agriculture, Sinnott's on botany, Land's on the merchant marine, Egloff's on petroleum, Caldwell and Moulic's on electronics and radio, and Buchsbaum and Dropkin's on zoology." Books

"The articles vary exceedingly in scope, method and value; but in general they attempt to deal in brief space with advances and discoveries made in 1941, rather than with the state of each subject as a whole. Many of the authors save space objectionably by omitting the names of workers responsible for the accomplishments described; but others, like Professor Newhall, of Johns Hopkins, writing on psychology, are scrupulous in giving proper credit to investigators by name. . . The articles on the Army and Navy contain much of interest, but their author, Mr. H. H. Douglas is not giving away any military secrets. This volume is readable and informative, but there are tremendous advances occurring in research, invention and manufacturing which will have to wait for the first post-war issue." H. M. Parshley

+ Books p12 S 27 '42 350w

Scientific Bk Club R 13:2 Ap '42 180w

GRONOWICZ, ANTONI. Bolek; rendered into English by Jessie McEwen; il. by Zhenya Gay. 240p $2.50 Nelson

42-23223

"Here is a picture of Poland in those last few days before the fury of the Nazis desolated it. Bolek, with his family and his new friends from America, go to Warsaw to visit his soldier father, and for a few days, in spite of misfortune, Bolek revels in the ancient and modern sights of the historic city. When the enemy strikes they have many adventures on their roundabout escape to America, where Bolek finds generous assurance of his dream of becoming a musician." N Y Times

Booklist 39:186 Ja 1 '43

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p9 S 20 '42 400w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:889 O 15 '42 60w

"Idealistic and certainly good literature, although a bit too long. Has value particularly for American communities where there are children of foreign parents, for it shows loyalty to new country as well as pride in the old. For fifth and sixth grades. Recommended for large libraries." J. E. Wooster

+ Library J 67:955 N 1 '42 90w

"The story is overlong for its slight plot and drags its way through rather more informative dialogue than is necessary, but we have so little about Poland for younger children that this description of its people and life is a timely reminder of a nation with a great and romantic past, and the peasant life is described with warmth and a true poetic sense." E. L. E.

+ N Y Times p40 N 15 '42 200w

GROSECLOSE, ELGIN EARL. The firedrake. 354p $2.50 Lippincott

42-3949

"In the Eighteen Fifties it seemed as if man had conquered nature, as if there were no limit to his achievement or end to his prosperity, as if audacity were the sure weapon for measureless triumph. That was when the missionary's wife, Abigail Carfax, became Boston's most glamorously popular novelist and when the architect Fenton Sweyton built the largest and most daring of all the clipper ships. And that is the time and scene, this is the story's framework." N Y Times

Booklist 38:251 Mr 15 '42

"[The] narrative style has a kind of formal richness, which is curiously arresting, even charming. The portrait of Abigail Carfax has real power; one believes not only in her historical existence, as a type of woman, but in her personal attraction, her beauty and warmth and endowment for love and tragedy. Altogether this is an unusual and notable novel. If one were obliged to file a complaint, it would be the rare objection that the book might have been longer, to deal with such an ambitious theme." Isabel Paterson

+ Books p3 F 15 '42 1000w

"The book is written with great beauty. It seems to have arisen from a long and serene contemplation, as though the author were turning over in his mind the hidden dangers that threaten our inner consciousness." N. E. Monroe

+ Cath World 155:116 Ap '42 360w

Christian Century 59:355 Mr 18 '42 130w

"Not recommended for purchase, in spite of the fact that the author, in earlier books, Ararat and Persian Journey, had distinction in style." M. E. Clark

Library J 67:40 Ja 1 '42 50w

"Excellent and unusual new novel by the author of Ararat [Book Review Digest, 1939]." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p6 F 15 '42 800w

"The style is paced to the story—stilted, humorless, and formal as a minuet. And yet Mr. Groseclose is so pure-heartedly committed to his fine old Puritan morality that his book, instead of turning out to be an unconscious pastiche, becomes a queerly interesting museum piece. The flowering-of-New-England atmosphere, too, is conveyed with grave correctness." Clifton Fadiman

GROSECLOSE, E. E.—Continued

+ — New Yorker 17:67 F 14 '42 250w

"Mr. Groseclose is so absorbed in his theme that he fails to give life to his characters or credibility to the relationships among them; and, apparently distrustful of the reader's ability to get the moral, he announces it far too early and too explicitly to make its discovery either surprising or significant." Bess Jones

Sat R of Lit 25:7 F 21 '42 500w

Wis Lib Bul 38:47 Mr '42

GROVE, RUSSELL CLARK. Sinus. 188p il $2 Knopf

616.21 Nose, Accessory sinuses of 41-23589

Discussion of the sinuses, their nature, symptoms of disease, diagnosis and treatments. The author, who is chief of the ear, nose and throat division of the Roosevelt hospital allergy clinic, New York, has written this book for the layman. Index.

Booklist 38:185 F 1 '42

"The eminence of Dr. Grove in his field assures authoritative information on a subject that for good—or bad—reasons takes up the greater part of the attention of a great many sufferers today. The luminous clarity of his style, however, is more than we have a right to expect from a sinus specialist; he writes with an ease, real or apparent, that many professional writers might envy, and with a plainness that leaves no doubt as to just what he means to say."

+ Books p22 Ap 19 '42 200w

Pratt p21 My '42

"Dr Grove has made a highly technical subject understandable to the general reader." C. B. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p8 D 9 '41 400w

GROVES, ERNEST RUTHERFORD. Christianity and the family. 229p $2 Macmillan

261 Family. Family—Religious life. Sociology, Christian (W) 42-11798

"A plea to the Protestant ministry for a more practical, understanding interest in the family and a greater appreciation of its relation to Christianity." (Pref) Part one is devoted to the family as an ally of Christianity; part two, to the church as an ally of the family. Based on lectures given on the Rauschenbusch Foundation of the Colgate-Rochester divinity school. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:419 J1 1 '42

Christian Century 59:499 Ap 15 '42 70w

"Many sane, wholesome and pertinent suggestions are offered. One wishes the author had also dealt with the family as a training center for Christian economic and social ideals. Ministers and teachers will find in these pages many helpful ideas." C. L. Willard, Jr.

+ Churchman 156:16 Ag 1 '42 180w

"Written definitely to give guidance to the minister in his dealing with family problems, this book is an invaluable aid which all ministers will do well to possess." Gordon Poter

+ Crozer Q 19:255 J1 '42 200w

J Home Econ 36:486 S '42 110w

Reviewed by R. W. Wieman

J Religion 22:451 O '42 210w

"In a certain sense this book sums up, it seems to the reviewer, the spiritual inwardness of Professor Groves' lifework. Those who have read some of his other books will wish to see this last work. It is a practical application of sociological knowledge of the family life which illustrates what sociology should do for every human institution." C. A. Ellwood

+ Social Forces 21:114 O '42 500w

"While the emphasis of this book is upon interpretation, it also has a generous amount of practical suggestion and guidance as to procedure. It has a value for all students of family life." L. F. Wood

+ Survey 78:285 O '42 450w

Wis Lib Bul 38:82 My '42

GROVES, ERNEST RUTHERFORD; GROVES, MRS GLADYS (HOAGLAND), and GROVES, CATHERINE (MRS JOSEPH PEELE). Sex fulfillment in marriage; introd. by Robert A. Ross; il. by Robert L. Dickinson. 319p $3 Emerson

612.6 Sex. Sexual hygiene. Marriage 42-18387

"This book discusses the sexual adjustments of marriage with frankness and with definiteness, in the light of recent science. It is written for the married and for those about to be married with the purpose of helping them achieve in their married life the satisfactions of a harmonious, progressive and character-making fellowship." (Pref) Index.

"These new works by the Groveses, [See also Groves, G. Marriage and Family Life. Book Review Digest, Ag '42] like their many earlier publications, are competent, serious in purpose, well informed, and based on much experience of various kinds. . . But they do not stand alone and cannot stand comparison with other books in the field. They lack distinction in certain important respects. To begin with, they are verbose in the extreme. . . and they are pedestrian in manner. Their chief novelty is in the presentation of numerous fragmentary case histories commonly without specific comment, a procedure that is usually irritating if not baffling to the reader."

— + Books p26 N 8 '42 150w

"Well organized and with a clarity and simplicity of style greatly appreciated by the average reader, the book will be very helpful to young couples entering marriage. It should also be of value in college courses in marriage to illuminate the portion of the course devoted to the sexual aspects of marriage although it makes no pretense of covering other phases of marriage adjustment. . . Occasionally one feels that too many words have been wasted upon an unessential point, but in general it is simply and tactfully written." B. H. Rafferty

+ J Home Econ 34:684 N '42 200w

"Out of a careful reading of Sex Fulfillment in Marriage, written in its simple unacademic style for unacademic or academic people, ought to come a better understanding of a still too-often misunderstood part of everyday living." B. M. Moore

+ Social Forces 21:252 D '42 650w

"This is the first cooperative book of the Groves family. It is a satisfactory source of intelligent and accurate information for those about to enter into marriage. Written with understanding and reasonableness." I. S. Wile, M. D.

+ Survey 78:350 D '42 200w

GROVES, GLADYS (HOAGLAND) (MRS ERNEST RUTHERFORD GROVES). Marriage and family life. 530p $3.50; text ed $3 Reynal

173.1 Family. Marriage (W) 42-14712

This book is in four parts: part one deals with the problems of the individual members of a family, father, mother, children and adolescents. Part two discusses preparation for marriage in chapters headed: The meaning of marriage; Courting; Society's stake in marriage; Choosing the mate; Being engaged. Part three takes up various questions of adjustment after marriage. Case studies, illustrative of the preceding chapters, are included in part four.

Booklist 38:379 Je 15 '42

Books p26 N 8 '42 150w

Christian Century 59:665 My 20 '42 130w

"The book is suitable as a basic text for both short and more intense courses, for adult groups, or for senior high school and college classes. The index is adequate." L. A. Lynde

+ J Home Econ 36:485 S '42 250w

"Drawing from long experience as a teacher of sociology and Director of Marriage and Family Council, as well as from her personal experience as wife and mother, Mrs. Groves has written a useful book integrating the pertinent contributions from medicine, psychology, mental hygiene, sociology, and home economics. . .

The diversity of the subject matter and the accuracy of factual statements, checked by a large corps of cooperators, should make the book widely useful." I. S. Wile, M.D.

+ Survey 78:286 O '42 170w

Wis Lib Bul 38:114 J1 '42

GRUBBS, HENRY ALEXANDER. Jean-Baptiste Rousseau, his life and works. 310p $3 Princeton univ. press [14s Oxford]

B or 92 Rousseau, Jean Baptiste 41-9353

"In this book Professor Grubbs unites the apparently disparate elements of the life and works of Jean-Baptiste Rousseau, in whom he sees 'the principal representative of an epoch in French poetry and of a phase in its evolution.' The first part of the book is devoted to the life of Rousseau: his beginnings as a poet, the 'Affaire des couplets,' with his ensuing banishment and wanderings through Europe; the second part consists of a critical appreciation of Rousseau's literary productions. There is also a short bibliography which should arrest the attention of those interested in continuing a study of Jean-Baptiste Rousseau." Mod Philol

"To some extent the unity of Mr. Grubbs' book suffers from the triple aim of being biography, history, and literary criticism, but in spite of this defense of his reputation Jean-Baptiste is still not Jean-Jacques and works about him are not likely to fill many shelves in our libraries. This fact exonerates Mr. Grubbs for trying to include every aspect of his subject in this work, but the fundamental unity is maintained by keeping always before us the character of the hero, irascible, vindictive, unforgiving, yet pitiful." Edith Philips
+ — Am Hist R 47:843 J1 '42 550w

"Although Professor Grubbs states that he has not tried to write an exhaustive critical work, he has, nevertheless, made a fair and adequate study of the once famous Jean-Baptiste Rousseau. He has also succeeded in giving to the varied adventures of the poet the allure of an entertaining and harmonious narrative." A. J. Whallon, Jr.

+ Mod Philol 39:436 My '42 700w

GRUBER, FRANK. Buffalo box. 279p $2 Farrar 42-18155

Mystery story.

"A typical Gruber story, probably this author's best to date. Simon Lash struck us as an improvement on Johnny Fletcher, the other Gruber detective curiously—nay, all but incredibly—connected with books and bookishness. He is interested chiefly in our native pioneer history, not so much in grammar. Says he: 'I collect Americana like some people collect china or pipes.'" Will Cuppy
Books p23 S 20 '42 230w

"The action is always quick on the trigger and brings a complicated mystery to a surprising end." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p10 S 13 '42 240w

"Agreeable."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 S 12 '42 40w

GRUBER, FRANK. Gift horse. 283p $2 Farrar 42-22696

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p26 O 25 '42 200w

"Good."

+ Boston Globe p19 O 28 '42 40w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p38 O 25 '42 180w

"Agile-witted and herculean pair get into and out of amazing sequence of tough spots and unravel two rather incidental murders. Fantastic—and funny."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:18 N 14 '42 50w

GRUBER, FRANK. Gunsight. 223p $2 Dodd 42-19433
Western story.

Booklist 39:34 O 1 '42

"You will find real Western thrills in this fast and furious account of Jim Parker's adventures on the plains in the days of Billy the Kid. Among the treats are a ruthless gang of lead-pumpers, and love's young dream, all done to a turn." Will Cuppy

Books p12 Ag 16 '42 40w

GRUBER, FRANK. Mighty blockhead; a Johnny Fletcher mystery. 279p $2 Farrar 42-6758
Detective story.

Booklist 38:331 My 1 '42

"Our latest theory is that Mr. Gruber has his tongue in his cheek." Will Cuppy
Books p10 Mr 15 '42 150w

Reviewed by Kay Irvin

N Y Times p14 Mr 1 '42 240w

Sat R of Lit 25:22 Mr 7 '42 40w

Time 39:80 Mr 2 '42 40w

GRUENBERG, MRS SIDONIE (MATSNER), ed. Family in a world at war. 298p $2.50 Harper

173 Family. World war, 1939—U.S.

(W) 42-16042

Contents: The family—war or peace, by S. M. Gruenberg; The home front and the national defense, by P. V. McNutt; Nutritional aspects of public morale, by T. T. Mackie; Science of nutrition at the home base, by Louise Stanley; The family in the national emergency, by L. K. Frank; The American family: flexible and resilient, by E. C. Lindeman; Social security and the national purpose, by A. M. Rosenberg; Educational problems in camp and community, by M. A. McCloskey; The impact of the draft on the American family, by L. B. Hershey; The toll of intolerance upon the intolerant, by D. M. Levy; Unity in diversity, by E. R. Clinchy; At home in the world, by P. S. Buck; Emotional strains in time of crisis, by J. S. Plant; Children of Great Britain in wartime, by Susan Isaacs; The work of women in England, by M. M. Eliot; a challenge to American women, by D. C. Fisher; Women and war jobs, by A. W. M. Wolf; The adolescent and his problems today, by C. B. Zachry; Attitudes of youth and morale, by E. D. Roosevelt; The outlook of youth in a world at war, by H. Y. McClusky. Appendices: Children in wartime; Parents in wartime; Children's charter in wartime; Suggested reading.

Reviewed by R. A. Bolt

Am J Pub Health 32:1408 D '42 230w

Booklist 38:435 J1 15 '42

Bookmark 4:3 N '42

Books p15 Je 21 '42 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 J1 '42

"Despite the variety of tones and the many points of view, the book has unity because all the authors are enthusiastic about the family as an institution." Katharine Roy

+ J Home Econ 34:742 D '42 200w

"Family morale is the basis of all morale." But if the public at large is agreed in the acceptance of this axiom, public knowledge is less widespread as to the breadth and detail of the subject and less sure of the answer of what to do about it. Hence the value of this symposium, which combines comprehensive information with vigorous challenge, as twenty authorities discuss various aspects of family life under these present war conditions." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p11 Ag 2 '42 800w

New Yorker 18:71 Je 13 '42 40w

Pratt p19 D '42

GRUENBERG, S. M.—Continued

"The volume serves admirably to bring together valuable material for mothers' study groups and for professional courses which need up-to-the-minute supplements to their usual material." Ruth Benedict

+ Sat R of Lit 25:23 J1 4 '42 700w

"A symposium, it suffers much from lack of unity. The contributions were apparently written for other occasions and merely incorporated into the volume. They obviously were not planned and written for one purpose. The articles dealing directly with the role of the family and the status of children are excellent. But the discussion of 'Social Security and the National Purpose' or the chapter on 'Educational Problems in Camp and Community,' interesting though they are, have little relation to the theme." I. S. Wile, M.D.

+ — Survey 78:286 O '42 270w

Wis Lib Bul 38:114 J1 '42

GUCKER, FRANK THOMSON, and MEL-DRUM, WILLIAM BUELL. Physical chemistry. 683p il $4 Am. bk.

541.3 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 42-3752

"This book is designed as a text for the first course in physical chemistry. It is intended to acquaint the student with the experimental basis of the science, familiarize him with the modern theoretical explanation of these facts, show him some of the problems to which physicochemical principles have been applied in many fields of chemistry and related sciences, and give him a reasonable facility in handling similar problems." (Pref) Index.

"This text presents an unusually clear and well-balanced picture of the general or non-technical aspects of physical chemistry. . . Its style is in general simple and direct. It is abundantly and satisfactorily illustrated. While this text would certainly be classed as non-mathematical, the authors have not hesitated to use algebra freely and simple calculus whenever it appeared necessary. Considerable space is devoted to the historical aspects of the subject. Each chapter is followed by a well-chosen, annotated reading list." Robert Livingston

+ J Phys Chem 46:781 Je '42 350w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:38 J1 '42

GUDIOL, JOSE. Goya [ed. by André Gloeckner]. 121p il $4 Hyperion

759.6 Goya y Lucientes, Francisco José de 41-51975

Volume contains reproductions of Goya's paintings and a biographical and critical essay by Mr Gudiol.

"Mr. Gudiol makes this monograph one of the best issued by the highly effective Hyperion Press. The student will value the numerous reproductions, but if he is wise he will not neglect the text." Royal Cortissoz

+ Books p8 J1 12 '42 900w

Reviewed by E. A. Jewell

N Y Times p21 My 10 '42 280w

GUEDALLA, PHILIP. Mr Churchill. 346p il $3 Reynal [8s 6d Hodder]

B or 92 Churchill, Winston Leonard Spencer (W) 42-1091

Biography of Winston Churchill, which describes his background briefly, and traces his career from the time when he was a "small red-headed pupil, the naughtiest boy in the class," in a private school at Brighton, to the now-famous meeting somewhere on the Atlantic ocean of the Prime minister of Great Britain and the President of the United States. Index.

Reviewed by Howard Robinson

Am Hist R 48:11 O '42 650w

"Mr. Guedalla has brought more than courage to his task. He has brought perception, perspective, and an intelligent enthusiasm which holds objectivity in respect. No good Life can be written unless the biographer loves his subject, but the barrier between affection and idolatry must be high and wide. Mr. Guedalla knows this. True, the reader sometimes wishes his style were less titivating. The unfriendly might call it pert and jaunty, and the impartial must admit that his clever paragraphs never lose consciousness of themselves. His trick of facetious understatement is less noble than irony and much more irritating. But when that is said, this reviewer acknowledges that he wouldn't, shouldn't, couldn't lay the book down until he had come plumb upon the index." Ellery Sedgwick

+ — Atlantic Mr '42 550w

Booklist 38:208 F 15 '42

Bookmark 3:14 Mr '42

"For a final explanation of Winston Churchill one will some day have to go deeper than this; the agony of modern Britain and of modern democracy must involve even greater tragedies than that of the triumph of the mediocre over the able. So one must leave it; only to add, after shaking off the stylistic spell, that this is a good book. It is soundly studied and well worth reading. It is not the final word on Winston Churchill, but it is certainly the best thing so far available outside his own writings and speeches, and should have a great sale." Walter Millis

+ — Books p1 Ja 25 '42 1450w

"This book is pleasant enough to read; but it partakes more of the nature of a panegyric than a serious study, it goes in for eulogy rather than criticism. . . The book is not weighty enough to deserve attention from persons engrossed at present with matters that possess grave and even tragic significance. Considered merely as a skillfully written discussion of some aspects of a figure that looms immense in the contemporary world, of course it has its claim upon attention."

+ — Cath World 156:253 N '42 160w

"No topic could be more timely than Mr. Churchill, and Mr. Guedalla is, if not his prophet, his most appropriate biographer. Not being quite his subject's prophet, nor his partisan, nor his uncritical apologist, is one of the author's qualifications. . . The biographer is incidentally unjust to Mr. MacDonald, and grossly unjust to Mr. Hoover. But to his subject, he is critically just." W. E. Garrison

+ — Christian Century 59:114 Ja 28 '42 1000w

"Philip Guedalla's 'Mr. Churchill' is a brilliant book by a brilliant writer about a brilliant statesman. It is not the sort of study to which the painstaking inquirer, intent on building up an armory of facts about Mr. Churchill's career, would naturally turn. This is not to say that the facts are not there. If it interests you to know that at school Mr. Churchill was called 'Carrots,' you will find this circumstance faithfully recorded by Mr. Guedalla." Harold Hobson

Christian Science Monitor p11 F 14 '42 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 J1 '42

"If the reader concedes at once that this biography of England's great leader is a purposeful war book rather than an impartial study, he will find it rewarding and inspiring. For Mr. Guedalla has employed his excellent literary gifts to compose a prose Churchilliad which is likely to become the seed book of a long series of sagas." F. X. Connolly

+ — Commonweal 35:465 F 27 '42 700w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:579 Ap '42 40w

"An entertainingly drawn portrait of a leader in world affairs. The author has written in his characteristic style, selecting for emphasis the salient and dramatic events in a life full of action. . . The book is recommended for all types of libraries for its characterization, its readability, and its list of authorities." F. L. D. Goodrich

+ Library J 67:39 Ja 1 '42 90w

"Half a dozen lives have been published since the war began, but this, as was bound to be the case with Mr. Guedalla, is in a class of its own. This has not fallen heavily from the tired hands of a writer for the day's market. The book ripples with light and wit to the very last page. Indeed, in the last pages Mr. Guedalla's pen and his imagination are more vividly at work than ever." H. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 28 '41 430w

"Of the many biographies of Churchill which are making their appearance, Guedalla's is the first, at least the first to be published here, which rises above journalism and gives us a full-length portrait of the man and some understanding of his springs of action. It is of course much too early to have a definitive portrait, not only because we lack the historical perspective but also because his own history and that of his tragic and heroic era has not yet been brought to completion. What is possible at this particular moment Guedalla has done, though the biography is hardly sufficiently critical to weigh his weaknesses as a statesman against his remarkable equipment as a commander of an embattled nation." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Nation 154:122 Ja 31 '42 900w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates

New Repub 106:272 F 23 '42 850w

"The book is interesting, partly, of course, because its subject is interesting, but, partly, also, because Mr. Guedalla has been content to supply an outline and has managed with only an occasional deviation, not to be unduly tempted by the occasions for fine and picturesque writing Mr. Churchill's career so amply yields. He has narrated a story; he has not sought to provide an explanation. And he has hardly offered a pinch of incense on the altar of Mr. Lytton Strachey. Granted the delicacies of his problem, his book must be pronounced a very attractive failure. That is really a considerable achievement. But the book does not yield us the secret of Mr. Churchill; perhaps we shall not have it for another generation." H. J. Laski

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:458 N 29 '41 1000w

"As a veteran biographer Mr. Guedalla has kept himself well in hand. His writing has never been better and he has done what he set out to do with an easy and masterful efficiency. But there is no straining after magniloquence. For he has been too close to the scene of Churchill's triumphs and failures to entertain any illusions about the man—the great man of a great moment—whose human qualities appear in all that he says and all that he does." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p1 Ja 25 '42 2100w

"A clear, reliable, and emphatically English biography. It is written with less than Mr. Guedalla's customary virtuosity, for the pyrotechnics of Churchill's career supply their own sufficient brilliance. Not without its touches of decorous irony, it is the work of a respectful admirer, of a political historian who is in a way more interested in his subject's past than his present and is extremely cautious about his future. I consider it the best of the recent studies of Churchill—not especially revelatory, certainly not over-detached, but informed, intelligent, and devoid of the mawkish hero worship of such a book as René Kraus's. It will do until the final job comes along, which will be many years after Churchill's death." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:63 Ja 24 '42 800w

Pratt p5 O '42

"This book has a sobriety that suggests the frightening quality of Mr. Churchill upon a mind that has shown no reverence towards Palmerston, Gladstone, and Wellington. He makes from time to time a slight and envious protest against Mr. Churchill's brilliance as a writer, slyly suggesting that the magnesium of rhetoric has got into the dynamite of his prose. But it is an honest, and factual portrait of a man of infinite capacity, who received press-cuttings with his milk bottle." Cecil Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 Ja 24 '42 1150w

"As to the content of Mr. Churchill, its subject has in his own extensive writings provided his biographers with ample material. They have only to select, to condense, to arrange. But everything depends on how that is done. Mr. Guedalla has seen his book as a whole from the beginning. His portraiture is a work of confident skill. There is no character-study as such, no formal assessment of the Prime Minister's statesmanship or his achievements as orator or writer. Yet all that emerges insensibly from the narrative. Mr. Guedalla is content to let the facts tell their story, and they tell it, of course, very much the more convincingly for the brilliance of the expression which his talented pen lends them." Wilson Harris

+ Spec 167:514 N 28 '41 1000w

"The personality of Winston Churchill has been so deeply etched into the American mind and the facts and fables of his long and colorful career have been told so widely and in such detail that it would seem a volume on his life would be merely an assembly of common knowledge. Yet Philip Guedalla, English biographer and historian, has succeeded in making his 'Mr. Churchill' both lively and informing, adding a few new portrait touches and a surprising amount of pertinent, but not hitherto exploited, material."

+ Springfield Republican p7e Ja 25 '42 1000w

"Until the final story is chronicled with that total perspective which the passage of time alone can yield, Guedalla's superb portraiture is unlikely to be surpassed." Mandel Herbstman

+ Survey G 31:333 J1 '42 600w

Time 39:73 F 2 '42 1400w

"For Mr. Guedalla the theme is set in the prologue, with the political suffocation of Lord Randolph by the Goats; and it works itself out through tragedy to triumph in the career of Lord Randolph's son. The lightness of touch, the sardonic wit, the delicate sense of English prose rhythm with which this thesis is carried through are such as we always expect from Mr. Guedalla."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p590 N 29 '41 2750w

Wis Lib Bul 38:46 Mr '42

"Mr. Guedalla has set out to paint a portrait; and that for him is the supreme function of the biographer. The biographer is no mere lackey to the historian, still less a photographic assistant to the sociologist on field work. First and last, he is an artist, albeit one operating with the intractable material of irreducible facts. There can be no pretense, then, of making his creation 'objective' in any laboratory sense. His principles of selection and rejection are set by the delicacy of his own insights; and his idiom may differ from that of his fellow artists as conspicuously as Romney's from Sargent's. His primary duty is not to interpret or expound but to fashion out of recorded episode and event a living sense of personality in action. That is what Mr. Guedalla has undertaken to do for Britain's Prime Minister; and he has accomplished his purpose with a superb and conscious artistry." C. H. Driver

+ Yale R n s 31:618 spring '42 650w

GUERARD, ALBERT JOSEPH. Robert Bridges; a study of traditionalism in poetry. 332p $3.50 Harvard univ. press

821 Bridges, Robert A 42-634

"A scholarly appreciation of this poet's complete works including a discussion of the principles and issues at work in modern poetry. Contents: Lyric poetry; Dramatic poetry; The testament of beauty; The nature of the traditional poet. Includes copious notes and an index." Booklist

Booklist 38:306 Ap 15 '42

"To clarify even a little the actual principles and issues at work in modern poetry is a notable service. And so the competence with which Albert Guerard jr. lays down the premises for his study of Robert Bridges's poetry renders a valuable book more than doubly valuable. A poet of considerable stature emerges from the strange obscurity of being remembered by every one as Poet Laureate but known only superficially by critic and layman alike. And Mr. Guerard's ideas about poetry are uncommonly lucid and sound; his book has a rare pertinence to his subject, taken narrowly or broadly." Howard Baker

+ Books p9 Mr 15 '42 800w

"Mr. Guérard carefully traces all the conscious and unconscious influences that made Bridges what he was and soberly evaluates his work by solidly objective standards. His book is as well done as such a book can be." Theodore Maynard

GUERARD, A. J.—Continued

+ Cath World 155:375 Je '42 360w

Reviewed by George Barker

Nation 154:400 Ap 4 '42 900w

"Mr. Guérard perhaps overrates Bridges on the basis of an insufficient canvas. Yet his brilliantly written book is of decided value because it is serious, informative, highly provocative, and the first of its kind." A. J. Green

+ N Y Times p16 My 24 '42 1050w

New Yorker 18:80 Ap 25 '42 20w

"Mr. Guerard's chapters on 'The Testament of Beauty' do for that masterpiece all that scholarship can do, from analysis of verse form to tracing of origins and to consideration of philosophical content. The poem is such a storehouse of the western heritage, and Bridges had made himself master of so nearly all the best thought of our great tradition, that analysis merely heightens the wonder and delight of it. It is illuminating to pursue the influence of George Santayana on Bridges: the eclecticism of the two men had much in common."

+ Spring'd Republican p6 My 4 '42 700w

Wis Lib Bul 38:65 Ap '42

GUERARD, ALBERT LEON. France of tomorrow. 287p $3.50 Harvard univ. press

940.5344 World war, 1939—France. Europe

—Politics. World war, 1939—Peace. Democracy A42-1721

The purpose of this book is first "to elucidate a set of contemporary events, those which led to the fall of democratic France. Its second purpose is to advocate definite policies which will enable France and the world to breathe once more." Contents: The France of tomorrow; The Franco-German conflict; Democracy in France; France free in a united Europe. The introduction: The France of Tomorrow was also published separately in 1941.

"Professor Guérard's book is acknowledgedly not a work of history, yet almost every paragraph is barbed with pithy historical allusion. Much of it deals with a hypothetical future, but at no time does it seem flighty. Perhaps it might best be summed up as one of those cullings of chips from the historian's bench which upon rare occasions make a volume of unusual and timely significance." H. B. Hill

+ Am Hist R 48:338 Ja '43 490w

"Professor Guérard's book is centered around a discussion of the events which led to the downfall of democratic France and the policies which must be pursued if France and the world are once more to enjoy a peaceful and progressive existence. So broad is its scope, so penetrating its analysis, that it might well have been called 'The World of Tomorrow.' Its pages are so packed with scintillating thought that it is difficult for the reviewer in the limited space at his disposal to do justice to its many interesting features." J. E. Gillespie

+ Ann Am Acad 223:224 S '42 1000w

"To all who wish to think seriously of the future of Europe, as well as for the naive souls, French and others, who think that a victory can or should restore the political status quo of 1939, this wise and generous book is most warmly commended." D. W. Brogan

+ Books p3 My 17 '42 1350w

"Mr. Guérard expresses himself so vividly, with such force and precision, that any attempt to find words other than his own threatens to disfigure his thought. In fact, several of his sentences may eventually live as slogans. Besides being an intellectual feast, Mr. Guérard's humor, which at times approaches sarcasm, makes the reading of his book a most entertaining adventure." Denyse Close

+ Cath World 155:759 S '42 800w

"While I am far from approving all Mr. Guerard's ideas, the general tendency of his book is excellent. It should be read and meditated by all who wish to understand what happened in June, 1940, and to reflect upon what the France and the Europe of tomorrow will be." Pierre Cot

+ Nation 154:574 My 16 '42 1200w

"The France of Tomorrow' is a calm and carefully written but not unimpassioned plea against political nationalism. . . . Mr. Guérard is cool and tolerant and usually right in his judgments; he represents the best type of liberal thinking, of which today there is far too little. At the same time he is a little distant in spirit from the staff headquarters and government offices where the future of France and the world is being shaped in terms of policies adopted day by day. He is even farther from the battlefields where those policies are tested. And he tends to forget that even the wisest of our statesmen cannot write the peace unless we first beat Hitler." Malcolm Cowley

+ New Repub 106:579 Ap 27 '42 750w

"Professor Guerard writes an attractive style, he has read widely, and his pages reflect sincerity, amiability and good-will. Unfortunately, his thinking leaves something to be desired." Hoffman Nickerson

+ N Y Times p22 Je 7 '42 1000w

Reviewed by André Maurois

Sat R of Lit 25:12 My 23 '42 750w

"Despite some special pleading . . . and a discursiveness that only the inherent vitality of his thinking and the charm of his style can condone, his book stands as a powerful and engrossing expression of all that is best and noble and non-sectarian in contemporary speculation." Leo Gershoy

+ Yale R n s 31:836 summer '42 600w

GUNN, JAMES EDWARD. Deadlier than the male. 277p $2.50 Duell

42-14627

"Four murders, one near murder, one torture sequence, one bit of near incest, one nymphomaniac, one scientist monster, one homicidal maniac, one dipsomaniac, and any number of bedroom scenes of varied degrees of temperature." New Yorker

"What James Gunn particularly excels in is the handling of the complexities of a very involved plot. His story is as well paced as a good movie scenario. The character delineations do not come off so well. This in spite of the fact that he obviously sets great store by his understanding of character. But 'Deadlier Than the Male' is good entertainment." Milton Hindus

+ Books p12 My 3 '42 550w

"Despite a substantial debt to 'The Postman Always Rings Twice,' the book is original, exciting and clever, with a glorious Rabelaisian character named Mrs. Krantz, some scenes that are beautifully funny in a lusty way and a powerful ending."

New Repub 106:550 Ap 20 '42 70w

"His novel is on the James Cain order, but bloodier, nastier, tougher, and about three times as absurd. However, it contains a brace of old harridans who are not unamusing and a couple of passages that, if you don't find yourself snickering, may chill you pleasantly." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 18:77 Ap 25 '42 90w

GUNTHER, JOHN. Inside Asia. 1942 war rev ed 637p maps $3.50 Harper

950 Eastern question (Far East). Asia—Politics. Asia—Biography (W) 42-11515

"This revision of Inside Asia [Book Review Digest, 1939] attempts to bring the story of the whole continent, in all its detailed complexity, up to date. I include brief sketches of Japanese political development since 1939 . . . of the continued superb quality of Chinese national resistance to Japanese infiltration and penetration . . . of the early and spectacular Japanese successes in the Philippines, Malaya, Singapore, Burma, and the Dutch East Indies; of the occupation of Indo-China and Siam; of the problems of Pacific strategy since the catastrophe at Pearl Harbor; of the continuing tense stalemate between Indian nationalists and the stubborn British in India . . . and of the fluid, complex, and quickly shifting pattern of forces in the Near and Middle East." Pref.

Booklist 38:333 My 1 '42

Reviewed by Alvin Adey

Current Hist 2:224 My '42 500w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 5 '42 40w

Wis Lib Bul 38:95 Je '42

GURVICH, GEORGI DAVIDOVICH. Sociology of law; with a pref. by Roscoe Pound. 309p $3.75 Philosophical lib, inc, 15 E. 40th st, N.Y.; Alliance bk.

340.1 Law—Philosophy. Jurisprudence. Sociology 42-7186

"In [this book] nearly all the significant theories correlating law and fundamental social phenomena are discussed and in [it] a comprehensive and original sociological theory of law is developed. Different kinds of law are correlated with the various types of social relations. Such 'frameworks of law' as trade-union law or family law are correlated with the various types of social groups, and such 'systems of law' as feudal law or bourgeois law, with the various types of 'all-inclusive societies.' These fundamental problems are examined from a unifying point of view, since the author affirms that all-inclusive societies must be understood as 'syntheses and equilibria' of real groups, and these groups as 'syntheses and equilibria' of social relations, and that a corresponding relationship exists between the different levels of legal phenomena. A very promising 'frame of reference' is thus created." Yale Law J

Reviewed by E. A. Hoebel

Am Anthropol 44:711 O '42 750w

Reviewed by Max Rheinstein

Am J Soc 48:524 Ja '43 950w

Reviewed by F. R. Aumann

Am Pol Sci R 36:754 Ag '42 800w

Reviewed by J. B. Lightman

Am Soc R 7:876 D '42 400w

Reviewed by E. A. Hoebel

Columbia Law R 52:1241 S '42 1550w

"Those readers who are familiar with Professor Gurvitch's work in French will not find much new in the way of constructive analysis, but they will find additional critical material. For those not yet familiar with his writings, this book offers profitable reading." E. N. Garland

J Philos 39:613 O 22 '42 430w

"Needless to say, Dr. Gurvitch's discussion has many profound insights and makes many substantial contributions. It does not, in this reviewer's opinion, result in a viable sociology of law. It is further regrettable that a book which devotes nearly two-thirds of its space to a review of the literature of the field provides neither an index nor an organized bibliography." Harvey Pinney

— + Social Forces 20:516 My '42 360w

"The book serves to point vigorously the need for American legal sociology to gather itself together more 'systematically,' and to find out explicitly what kind of prose it has been managing to talk all these years, and how amazingly far the game has gotten without discernible communication among the players. Gurvitch's theory of the entrance of fresh material and outlook into organized 'law' is not only the best since Kantorowicz but it represents an advance over the latter's deep but neglected work." K. N. Llewellyn

+ Survey G 31:437 O '42 650w

"This is a brilliant book. . . However, the findings are vitiated by the very unfortunate conception of law which underlies the work—a conception of philosophical, or more precisely, phenomenological origin. . . This lengthy criticism should not be considered as invalidating the initial statements of this review. Gurvitch's work is outstanding, and a number of his propositions after careful re-statement may play a great part in the advancement of general sociology and the sociology of law. It is because this work is so excellent that its basic concepts should be subjected to careful analysis." N. S. Timasheff

+ — Yale Law J 51:1049 Ap '42 1900w

GUS, UNCLE, pseud. See Rey, H. A.

H

HABERLER, GOTTFRIED. Consumer instalment credit and economic fluctuations. (Financial research program. Studies in consumer instalment financing) 239p $2.50 Nat. bur. of economic research

658.883 Instalment plan. Business cycles 42-13716

"This volume, the ninth in a series of studies in consumer instalment financing, analyzes the effect of consumer instalment credit on the cyclical fluctuations in general business. Among the topics covered are the influence of instalment credit on aggregate expenditure, the causes and economic consequences of instalment credit fluctuations, and methods of controlling instalment credit. Illustrated extensively with charts and tables." Management R

"This study, initially launched as the capstone of the consumer instalment credit series of the National Bureau of Economic Research, is an incomplete and unsatisfactory conclusion to an otherwise excellent series. Heralded on the jacket as an attempt to answer objectively questions that have long been dealt with on the basis of hopes and fears, the book leaves one with unfulfilled expectations." C. E. Warne

— Ann Am Acad 224:224 N '42 500w

Management R 31:440 D '42 60w

HADER, BERTA (HOERNER), and HADER, ELMER. Story of Pancho and the bull with the crooked tail; ill. by [the authors]. [56p] $2 Macmillan

(W) 42-21757

Jolly colored picture-story book about Mexico for grades one to three. Don Fernando's best cattle were being lured away by a wild bull, and no one could seem to catch him. After several cowboys had failed, the small boy Pancho succeeded in getting the bull tied to a tree. In celebration Don Fernando awarded Pancho a purse of gold and there was general rejoicing.

Booklist 39:35 O 1 '42

"You must take my word for it that this is one of the gayest of the Hader picture books, for it would not be fair to reduce such big, brilliantly colored scenes to plain black and white." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 1 '42 320w

Churchman 156:15 N 15 '42 30w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:882 O 15 '42 50w

"Although content seems rather light for the price, the author's illustrations are attractive, and stories of Mexico are timely." Alice Martin

+ — Library J 67:955 N 1 '42 60w

HADHAM, JOHN. Between God and man. 104p pa $1.25 (3s 6d) Longmans
230 Christianity

"The Anglican priest who writes under this pen-name has already attracted a number of readers by his Penguin Special 'Good God'; and he now follows this up with a short study of 'bridge-building' between God and man; the burden of the book being that all such bridges so far constructed have broken down, and that a new one is needed. It is the intellectual presentation of the Christian Faith, as offered by the teachers and preachers of to-day, that troubles the author's conscience." Times [London] Lit Sup

HADHAM, JOHN—Continued

"This able Anglican discussion seems headed toward radical proposals, but in the end the specific suggestions do not go beyond a somewhat mild reinterpretation of traditional Christian teaching."

Christian Century 59:1122 S 16 '42 90w
Times [London] Lit Sup p316 Je 27 '42 360w

HAGEDORN, HERMANN. Sunward I've climbed; the story of John Magee, poet and soldier, 1922-1941. 166p $1.75 Macmillan

B or 92 Magee, John Gillespie (W) 42-22679

Biography of John Magee, an American aviator-poet, aged nineteen, who was killed in action in December, 1941. He was born in Shanghai where his father was a missionary; was educated in China, Japan, England, and America; and in September 1940 he enlisted in the R.C.A.F. The book is based, largely, on his letters to his parents.

Booklist 39:100 N 15 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p24 O 18 '42 650w

"Not a remarkable book. . . Nevertheless [it] is valuable for what it reveals of a singularly rich and beautiful character. Those who, in obtuse maturity, and by selfishness and apathy in time of peace, build a world in which such youths are sacrificed, should read the excerpts from the boy's letters, written while at Rugby." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 O 31 '42 400w

Library J 67:795 S 15 '42 20w

"It is a fairly candid account. Americans reading it will fairly quickly mark the boy down as being about as objectionable an exotic as they have encountered since the old days of Saki and Wilde. . . As Mr. Hagedorn has handled this perplexing task of writing about a youth recently dead, the 'biography' emerges as a sort of apology and tribute. It splits almost blankly in the middle: the first part positively annoying for its content of narcissism, the second so compelling as to earn solemn and profound respect for the youth." C. B. Palmer

+ — N Y Times p24 O 25 '42 750w

HAGEN, PAUL, pseud. See Frank, K. B.

HAGER, MRS ALICE (ROGERS). Frontier by air (Brazil takes the sky road) phot. by Jackie Martin. 243p $3.50 Macmillan

918.1 Aeronautics—Flights. Brazil—Description and travel (W) 42-22638

"Author, who had flown around South America in 1939, was so interested in aviation pioneering in Brazil that this trip (1941) of 15,000 miles was made at invitation of Brazilian Government. Flown by Air Force pilots in military planes, completely without censorship, author had every opportunity to study problems and achievements. Written as personal adventure; gives sympathetic and lively idea of vast country, its varied population, problems, and contrasts. Appendix of well-authenticated facts about general situation in aviation and training school for pilots and civil aviation statistics. Sixty-four pages of photographs by Jackie Martin. Map." Library J

Booklist 39:68 N 1 '42

"The book adds measurably to our knowledge of a great nation which has become a recent ally."

+ Books p29 O 25 '42 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '42

"Mrs. Hager and her ace photographer, Jackie Martin, present [Brazil] in a highly National Geographic style. Their travels are varied and pleasant, their observations not too deeply significant, their tone every so often on the flowery feminine side. 'Frontier by Air' is rather informative, easy reading." Edward Skillin, Jr.

+ — Commonweal 37:19 O 23 '42 140w

"Timely and highly recommended." Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 67:843 O 1 '42 130w

Wis Lib Bul 38:161 N '42

HAGGARD, HOWARD WILCOX, and JELLINEK, ELVIN MORTON. Alcohol explored. (Am. assn. for the advancement of science ser) 297p il $2.75 Doubleday

616.861 Alcoholism. Alcohol—Physiological effect 42-15439

A study of the scientific knowledge men have gained about the effects of alcohol and the causes of alcoholism. "Dr. Haggard is the Director of the Laboratory of Applied Physiology of Yale University. Dr. Jellinek, also of Yale University, is vice-chairman of the Scientific Committee of the Research Council on Problems of Alcohol and editor of the Council's Reference Work. Both authors are editors of the Quarterly Journal of Studies on Alcohol." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 39:4 S '42

"[The authors] are competent, thoughtful, judicial-minded, and although they are not particularly exciting writers, they certainly know what they are about." Stanley Walker

+ Books p10 Jl 19 '42 1150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '42

New Repub 106:902 Je 29 '42 60w

"After a careful scrutiny of every page of this book one will be unable to say that it makes a case either for alcohol as a beverage or against it. In their exploration Drs. Haggard and Jellinek have been as completely objective as it seems possible to be. This objectivity does not, however, hamper a breezy style. . . This is not a crusader's book. The authors have apparently tried to keep as close to facts as is humanly possible, and they have written both unemotionally and agreeably." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p20 Ag 9 '42 500w

"There is so much loose, emotionally colored talk concerning the use of alcohol that it is of particular interest to read a book that deals with the subject from a scientific angle. Two eminently qualified doctors have undertaken the task of presenting conclusions gathered from various sources, and of evaluating the material thus derived. From the misconceptions, errors, and fallacies connected with the subject true knowledge has been sorted out, and from the combination of actual and tentative solutions a basis is formed for dealing intelligently with the problem as a whole."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:3 My '42 390w

Reviewed by M. G. Gray

Survey 79:31 Ja '43 600w

HAGOOD, MARGARET JARMAN. Statistics for sociologists. 934p maps $4 Reynal

311 Statistics 41-21005

"This text is designed primarily for the first year of statistics for students in sociology. . . The purpose of the text is twofold: to afford the student an understanding and appreciation of quantitative research methods in order that he may comprehend and evaluate the past and current researches of others in his field; and to afford the student a mastery of the procedures of statistical analysis and especially of the interpretation of the results of statistical analysis, in order that he may utilize these tools correctly and confidently in his own work." Intro.

Reviewed by Clark Tibbitts

Am J Soc 48:263 S '42 400w

"Dr. Hagood has performed a notable service to all sociologists, not merely to the beginning students of social statistics to whom the work is addressed. Other texts have outlined the steps in computing the various statistics, in making tests for significance. Dr. Hagood's contribution lies in the simplicity and clarity of her description of the complicated settings in which statistical methods are or can be useful to the sociologist, so that even the mathematically unsophisticated (and these comprise 90 percent of all) can safely find their way. The student who deplores both the prevalent uncritical use of statistics and the incomplete analysis of statistical data will find powerful support." W. M. Fuson

+ Am Soc R 7:440 Je '42 400w

"This textbook is a teachable one; graduate students who have had some contact with it comment favorably upon its clear and stimulating presentation. Its usefulness could be increased by bringing together in one place every important formula employed, and in a few instances by a more schematic, step-by-step presentation of the procedures to be followed by the student. The charts are excellent, and an appendix contains tables frequently used as aids to computation." Hugh Carter
+ Ann Am Acad 221:244 My '42 270w

HAGSTOTZ, HILDA BOETTCHER. Educational theories of John Ruskin. 294p $2.50 Univ. of Neb.

370.1 Ruskin, John. Education 42-22128
"Systematic account of Ruskin's educational ideas, and of his experiments in teaching working-men, young girls, and those Oxonians who attended his public lectures when he was Slade Professor of Fine Art." Sat R of Lit

"Dr. Hagstotz is a painstaking writer, and extremely conscientious in her presentation of her material. Some would prefer a treatment that had rather more light and shade in it, but no one can complain that any knowledge about Ruskin's educational theories is withheld. It is all here." R. E. Roberts
+ Sat R of Lit 25:64 D 5 '42 180w

School & Society 56:308 O 3 '42 40w

HAHN, EMILY. Mr Pan. 294p $2.50 Doubleday (W) 42-15982

Collection of sketches about a very gallant Chinese gentleman, called Mr Pan. Some of the chapters have appeared in The New Yorker.

Booklist 38:427 J1 1 '42

"Set in Shanghai, Emily Hahn's delectable novelized portrait of a modern Chinese gentleman 'Mr. Pan,' is a perfect tonic astringent prescribed to follow the recent overdose of Lin Yu-tang, Pearl Buck, Alice Hobart, et al. . . You look by the grace of Emily Hahn, into the soul of an Ally—and find it good. Miss Hahn herself, when last heard from, was in Hongkong." F. H. Bullock
+ Books p4 My 24 '42 1150w

"Author has lived in China many years and knows her subject thoroughly. Recommended. Will be enjoyed by young people." E. M. Olcott
+ Library J 67:319 Ap 1 '42 40w

Nation 154:743 Je 27 '42 180w

Reviewed by S. E. Hyman

New Repub 107:92 J1 20 '42 20w

"Mr. Pan is not meant to be the exponent of either ancient or modern China. Naturally he is Chinese, very much so, but above all he is Mr. Pan, highly individual, well rounded and warm hearted fellow whom one would well like to count among one's friends." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p7 My 24 '42 800w

New Yorker 18:67 My 30 '42 40w

HAIG-BROWN, RODERICK LANGMERE
HAIG. Timber; a novel of Pacific coast loggers. 410p $2.75 Morrow

(W) 42-36058

A tale of loggers in the Pacific northwest timber country. The chief characters are two friends, Johnny Holt and Alec (Slim) Crawford, and the story follows the daily course of their lives at work and at play, in happiness and in tragedy. Glossary.

Reviewed by Wilson Follett

Atlantic Ap '42 120w

Booklist 38:234 Mr 1 '42

"'Timber' is neither a nature novel nor a propaganda story about labor. Nor is it, in the ordinary sense, a romantic novel, though Johnny's and Julie's love story is no small part of its strength. Mr. Haig-Brown has made it all of these things and at the same time a novel of a trade so closely bound up with the earth that things happening within its scope partake of the earth's own violence and strength." J. H. Jackson

+ Books p2 F 22 '42 800w

New Repub 106:438 Mr 30 '42 50w

"Like all other writers who turn to fiction for the first time after notable success in the field of non-fiction, Mr. Haig-Brown is not at one bound so dexterous a story teller as he well may become. There are structural faults in 'Timber,' moments when dramatic values are lost for lack of a few mechanical tricks. When it comes to description, however, he does not need to yield place to any one. His book has the veritable ring of axes and the smell of fir forests in it." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p22 F 22 '42 750w

"This is a technically expert, colloquial, and likable story."

+ New Yorker 18:69 F 21 '42 50w

Wis Lib Bul 38:87 My '42

HAINES, DONALD HAMILTON. Shadow on the campus. 278p $2 Farrar

(W) 42-22716

Story of life in a large western university during the months from September, 1939 to November, 1940. For older boys.

"There is so much in the story that items get in each other's way, but strong conviction and easily recognized evidence on which such conviction is based keep it pushing to the moment when Michael—beating Pearl Harbor by a good margin—leaves for action. . . It is not Mr. Haines's best story, but it will be the longest remembered." M. L. Becker
+ — Books p6 Ja 10 '43 500w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:897 O 15 '42 30w

"Author has so much to say about so many phases of college life that the more serious issues may be blurred for most sixteen- and seventeen-year-olds." M. B. Snow
Library J 67:957 N 1 '42 110w

"War and young America's share in it is the real background in this 'college' novel. It will give today's boys and girls food for thought while they enjoy every page of it."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:26 N 14 '42 50w

HAINES, HELEN ELIZABETH. What's in a novel. (Studies in lib. service) 283p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

809.3 Fiction—History and criticism

(W) 42-17421

"The author discusses the functions and values of fiction, surveys the changing moods and manners of fiction-writing from mid-Victorian days to our own times with critical and evaluative comment upon a multitude of novels, presents a panorama of recent and contemporary fiction in Europe and Latin America, discusses the uses of history and of symbolism and 'the lure of crime,' and ends with a chapter on the art of reviewing a novel." Christian Century

"The book will not interest those who look first in a novel for literary distinction, but it is full of informative and intelligent discussion of the world we live in as revealed in its novels." Elizabeth Drew

Atlantic 170:108 Ag '42 200w

Booklist 38:438 J1 15 '42

Bookmark 4:9 N '42

"For any one who is concerned with fiction from the point of view of reader interest and who must know in some detail the vast and varied terrain which is the province of the modern novel, Miss Haines's book is welcome and useful."

+ Books p24 N 22 '42 200w

HAINES, H. E.—Continued

"This is one of the wisest and most comprehensive of books about the modern novel. . . It will be greatly to the advantage of those who read much fiction—and most serious minded people ought to read more of it than they do—if they would take enough time off from the reading of novels, to read this enlightening book about them."

+ Christian Century 59:886 J1 15 '42 100w

"While a must book for librarians, as guide in book selection and argument for distribution of fiction by libraries, book is of value to all students of contemporary literature." E. V. Baldwin

+ Library J 67:581 Je 15 '42 100w

Nation 155:489 N 7 '42 120w

Pratt p16 D '42

"All in all, there is so little nonsense and so much that is suggestive and interesting in Miss Haines's compact pages that, though her weakness is a desire to touch on everything, her book is, I think, a solidier and better job than a good many 'critical' interpretations of the novel which have everything in them except any interest for the reader of fiction." H. M. Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 25:14 J1 25 '42 360w

School & Society 56:28 J1 4 '42 30w

"Helen Haines has here compiled an excellent guide to fiction, so arranged that one may readily look up books according to their subject matter and their era. . . Wealth of knowledge, lucidity of expression and control of her material permit Miss Haines to fit hundreds of novels into a large general plan designed to emphasize the informal 'teaching' values of the content of fiction, and prove the novel to be not an escape, but a life experience." Ruth Wolf

+ Social Studies 33:375 D '42 550w

Wis Lib Bul 38:134 O '42

HALDANE, JOHN BURDON SANDERSON.

New paths in genetics. 206p $2.50 Harper [7s 6d Allen, G]

575.1 Genetics 42-7881

"This latest of a long series of brilliant contributions to biological science is based on lectures delivered at the University of Gröningen, Holland, in March, 1940, and was prepared for publication while he was in the midst of especially gruelling research for the British army. Its object is to show the relations of genetics to medicine, embryology, biochemistry, and eugenics, and to indicate some of the most hopeful lines of future progress." (Scientific Bk Club R) Indexes.

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley

Books p22 Ap 5 '42 600w

"This stimulating text presupposes more than elementary interest in genetics and would be valuable to students of medicine, embryology, biochemistry, and other sciences concerned with advancement in human living." D. F. Lucas

+ Library J 67:267 Mr 15 '42 100w

New Repub 106:902 Je 29 '42 90w

Reviewed by C. H. Waddington

New Statesman & Nation 23:246 Ap 11 '42 600w

"The book will be of special value to students and research workers in those branches of science as well as to geneticists in general." Scientific Bk Club R 13:4 Ap '42 240w

Times [London] Lit Sup p28 Ja 17 '42 420w

HALE, CHRISTOPHER, pseud. See Stevens, F. M. R.HALE, NANCY (MRS CHARLES WERTEN-BAKER). Prodigal women. 704p $3 Scribner 42-21901

Story of three women from their girlhood thru the nineteen-twenties and thirties. The scenes are variously laid in or near Boston, in Virginia, and in New York. The chief characters are two sisters, southern girls, and the odd little New Englander whom they chose as a friend. The story follows the course of their love affairs and marriages.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (14) B & T (1) N Y Times (15) PW (3) RB (3)

"This brilliant novel is a picture of one kind of hell, what one might call the Gulf of the Self-tormentors. Location and story are realistic enough and the telling is almost scientifically calm, without malice or extenuation; but the characters—all but one or two—are damned. . . How Miss Hale can write! From the first page, one is caught by the push and tide of her style. There appears to be nothing she cannot do. Her sense of dialogue is unerring; her psychological insight is at times profound; her feeling for beauty is constant in spite of the sordidness of much of the life she portrays." R. M. Gay

+ Atlantic 170:144 N '42 360w

"This is a woman's book. It's a book about sex in an age when the subject of sex is unfashionable in the light of world politics and economics and war. But it is also a book about cruelty, which is eminently fashionable today. It is a book about the viciousness in men, which is axiomatic today. One trusts that in its realistic portrayal of these years in women's lives, it is an historical novel. One knows that in any event it is a fervently, brilliantly written story." William Soskin

Books p3 S 27 '42 1850w

"All in all the book is serious, well written, and represents considerable achievement, but the abundance of material makes it unwieldy." Frances Ferney

+ — Commonweal 37:47 O 30 '42 220w

"To anyone acquainted with Nancy Hale's intelligent well-knit short fiction, her 700-page novel must be a great disappointment."

— Nation 155:457 O 31 '42 270w

Reviewed by Isaac Rosenfeld

New Repub 107:688 N 23 '42 700w

"The intensity of Miss Hale's preoccupation with the disorders of love gives her a convincing power, albeit a limited one. What she might do with wider concerns is another matter, but her style is admirably adapted to the story she has to tell, the bitter wisdom she distills." Lorine Pruette

N Y Times p6 S 27 '42 1300w

"This is a novel of full stature, skillfully projected, and in some places beautifully written."

+ New Yorker 18:67 O 3 '42 90w

"Single incidents are handled with much skill. Miss Hale is wonderfully deft, too, in pointing up a place, a character, or a situation. . . [She] is equally clever in catching special inflections of speech, notably of her Southern family who, if she had been willing to throw out most of her Bostonians in their behalf, would have ranked among the genuine comic creations of modern fiction. . . If the rest of the book were handled with an equally light touch, if the connections between the stories of the three women were less crudely made, if Miss Hale had eliminated half of the tiresome repetition in the unhappy love-life and mental breakdown of Maizie. . . she would have achieved the kind of novel readers of her compact shorter pieces had been led to expect. As it stands, she has included too much to give genuine life to her characters, her obsession with the sex struggle becomes monotonous, and her mechanical structure is oddly clumsy for so accomplished a writer." Bess Jones

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:15 O 5 '42 850w

Reviewed by Alden Stevens

Survey G 31:602 D '42 70w

HALIDAY, GEORGE VINCENT, and SWANSON, WILLIAM ELMER. Ship repair and alteration. 378p il $2.75 Cornell maritime 623.8 Ships—Repair (W) 42-17459

"Though it should be of some value to all shipyard workers, this book has been written by shipfitters for shipfitters—and especially for shipfitters engaged in alteration and repair work. It is intended as a handbook for the average fitter in the average repair yard, and as an aid and an encouragement to the helpers, apprentices and others who would follow his respected calling." (Introd) Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 J1 '42
N Y New Tech Bks 27:44 J1 '42

HALL, MRS ESTHER (GREENACRE).
Sharon's career; with il. by Suzanne Suba.
267p $2 Random house

(W) 42-18667

Tale of a summer of antique selling, in which Sharon Hawes, just finishing her first year at Wellesley, finds employment and happiness and the means of reuniting her severed family. For older girls.

"The antique business in the book is the real thing as far as it goes, and the excitement of its chase, the rapidity with which a real antiquer corrects a mistake by a new transaction—these will hold any one who ever handled a Betty lamp, a pie wheel or a hog scraper." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ag 16 '42 400w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 O 7 '42
300w

"Most characters well portrayed; others, and a few improbable incidents, partly redeemed by author's style. Good light fiction for girls over fourteen and for mothers." Maude Adams

+ Library J 67:687 Ag '42 60w

"The characters, with the exception of spunky, amusing Gran, are not very clearly defined, nor is their motivation entirely convincing, but the account of Sharon's business ventures makes a plausible and entertaining story for girls, with interesting details." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 16 '42 210w

HALL, JAMES NORMAN. Under a thatched roof. 228p $2.75 Houghton 814

(W) 42-24642

A volume of essays by the co-author of the Bountiful books. Some of the essays are autobiographical, others deal with books and literary matters or contain the writer's reflections on life in general.

Booklist 39:134 D 15 '42

"Here is a man who has found life well worth living, and he tells of rich moments enchantingly. He is not preaching. It is merely here that he laughed and there he felt peace, and on other occasions he had a sensation of sheer joy. And while you are 'Under a Thatched Roof' those moments are yours, not just for the moment, but for later enjoyment, too." M. C. Hubbard

+ Books p4 D 6 '42 600w

"James Norman Hall is, one perceives, a true essayist—one who values his ivory tower (in his case a thatched roof); one who is urbane rather than polemical, and has the quality he has attributed to other essayists, a certain fallowness of mind which permits him to wait for the reception and nourishment of the germs of thought."

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 D 5 '42
600w

"The whole book is good. There are times, even now, when we may sit still, and read, and remember, and think. That is the example James Norman Hall gives us, under his thatched roof, or anywhere." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p14 N 8 '42 800w

"There are no tales of Tahiti in this charming book. It is the product of a man who has given himself time to think, and who has maintained an independent mind, the stuff of which Thoreaus were made." Cecil Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 25:11 D 12 '42 650w

"Under a Thatched Roof' is recommended reading for days like these. Under Mr Hall's roof-tree one may draw aside from the screaming pressure of time and events and spend a quiet hour or two where civilization is still evaluated in terms of courtesy, urbanity and kindness, but where there is also quiet strength to defy those who insist on interpreting civilization in terms of the 'hammer and anvil.'" E. H. Carlson

+ Spring'd Republican p7e N 29 '42 700w

HALL, JOSEF WASHINGTON (UPTON CLOSE, pseud). Behind the face of Japan. 427p $4 Appleton-Century

952 Japan—History. Japan—Foreign relations. National characteristics, Japanese

(W) 42-36350

"Revision and partial rewriting of author's Challenge [Book Review Digest, 1934], with very considerable substitutions for superseded biographies and descriptions of ominous political situation. Mr. Close says, 'It is the distillation of an immense amount of research among periodicals and little-known records. The writer was not unwayed by personal things, hopes, and apprehensions, but he tried to hold his camera steady. The data required for this book had perforce to be gathered, in many cases, from informal sources.'" (Library J) Index.

Booklist 39:105 N 15 '42

"Though easy to read, his book is essentially sound and it packs in an amazing amount of reference material. Its chief merit in the eyes of this reviewer is neither its erudition nor its entertainment value, but the fact that it makes the Japanese comprehensible and human. Although the burden of their own 'fanatic idealism' is weighed by as brutally shrewd a group of sword-rattlers as this world has ever seen, one still comes away with the notion that Japan can become a decent member of the family of nations—provided we first deliver her from the worst side of herself." R. G.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 N 17 '42
650w

"Informal approach is both the weakness and the strength of the book. This popularization of widely scattered information will find many uses in the circulation department. Biographical material will be especially useful for ready reference." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 67:907 O 15 '42 130w

"Upton Close's 'Behind the Face of Japan' could have well been a companion volume to Hugh Byas's. It isn't. . . . It is a pity the revision could not have been made with greater care, for with a few major deletions and a few fresh personality sketches the volume could have been a useful handbook." Mark Gayn

— Sat R of Lit 25:21 D 5 '42 180w

"This edition of Upton Close's book reveals the nature of the Japanese people in a peculiarly convincing manner." F. M. Mohler

Spring'd Republican p7e N 1 '42 1050w
Wis Lib Bul 38:185 D '42

HALL, MARJORY. Bread and butter; il. by Jean Baker. 214p $2 Houghton

(W) 42-19432

"In this sequel to Success in Reserve, Laura Lou, a recent high school graduate, sets out to earn her 'bread and butter,' plus the money needed to go to college, by opening a bakeshop. With the help of friends who give freely of advice and labor, she finally makes the bakeshop pay and finds that her winter at home has brought fun as well as funds." Library J

"This is a busy little small-town story of life among the sub-debs, rather than vocational fiction, though it would be possible to pick up some information on how a modern bakeshop, catering to a select trade, keeps out of the red." M. L. Becker

Books p10 N 8 '42 280w

"Useful for girls of eighth and ninth grades who ask for entertaining modern stories." L. A. Cathon

+ Library J 67:796 S 15 '42 80w

"The details of Laura Lou's business venture are scarcely specific enough to put this into the class of vocational stories, and everything works out for her more fortuitously than one dares hope for in real life, but the moods and misgivings of youth trying to find itself are treated with real understanding, all the more convincing because of the easy lightness of touch." E. L. Buell

HALL, MARJORY—Continued

+ N Y Times p9 S 6 '42 300w
Wis Lib Bul 38:168 N '42

HALLADAY, MRS ANNE M. Up and down South America. 127p il $1; pa 60c Friendship press

Children in South America 42-14741

"Nine little stories describe simple, homey activities of boys and girls in various South American countries." Library J

Christian Century 59:758 Je 10 '42 10w

"Although the influence of a missionary or of missionary work is emphasized in each, it is the colorful, picturesque details of everyday living, sympathetically presented, that will make the lasting impression for nine- and ten-year-old children." Miriam Snow

+ — Library J 67:631 J1 '42 50w

HALLIDAY, BRETT, pseud. See Dresser, D.

HALPER, ALBERT. Little people. 402p $2.50 Harper

42-22583

Interwoven stories of a group of "little people," the employees of an exclusive clothing store in Chicago.

Booklist 39:71 N 1 '42

"Mr. Halper does not write well, in a literary sense, but he writes with a force and vividness and sympathy that override such matters as grammar and style. He writes the idiom of the masses and he gives his gallery of portraits genuine vitality." F. H. Bullock

+ — Books p6 O 25 '42 800w

Nation 155:457 O 31 '42 140w

Reviewed by Isaac Rosenfeld

New Repub 107:687 N 23 '42 270w

Reviewed by Harold Strauss

N Y Times p7 O 11 '42 700w

"This is a more mature novel than the author's last, but Mr. Halper still shows more feeling for the underdog than for the subtleties of English prose."

+ — New Yorker 18:74 O 10 '42 50w

Pratt p12 D '42

"It has been said that Halper cannot write. That was never true, but it is true that he is growing perceptibly in technical means and effectiveness. The emotional impact of the separate tragedies of Helen and of Al, the varied approaches to such characters as John Narhigian, Fanny Nussbaum, Chetwood, Miss Boyle, the sure capture of the department store atmosphere, not as an external spectacle but as a mechanism viewed from within, a clerk's eye view—these imply not only an intent but, as well, good literary craftsmanship for its consummation. Certainly there is no surer ear than Halper's for the half-inarticulate talk of the little people, choked with clichés and repressed passions." N. L. Rothman

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:15 O 17 '42 550w

HALPINE, CHARLES GREHAM. Pilot's meteorology. 220p il maps $2.50 Van Nostrand 629.1324 Meteorology in aeronautics

41-26431

"This work has been written in simple language, without mathematical formulae, complicated diagrams, advanced physics, or differential equations, and anyone who flies can easily understand the various weather reports and maps." (N Y New Tech Bks) Glossary. Index.

Booklist 38:205 F 15 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:9 Ja '42

HALS, FRANS. Paintings, by N. S. Trivas. (Phaidon press art bk) complete ed 231p $4.50 Oxford [15s Allen, G]

759.9 Paintings, Dutch

[42-36124]

"In his introduction Mr. Trivas explains that his object is not to record 'finds' nor to question attributions but to catalogue the authentic works by Frans Hals 'which are in a sufficiently good state of preservation to permit the study and appreciation of the artist's facture'—his strong point. This method of selection reduces the number of paintings listed in the volume to approximately one-third of what is generally attributed to Hals. Six of the plates are in colour, and to illustrate 'facture' there are some excellent large-scale photographs of details. The catalogue is fully detailed, and besides a general index there is an index of museums and collections." Times [London] Lit Sup

Bookmark 3:8 My '42

"The manifest soundness of the method of selection prompts a criticism. Beautiful as they are, colour-plates so much reduced in scale as these can give no more than a general impression of the originals; would it not have been more helpful if two or three of them had been devoted to the full-sized reproduction of details in which the quality of the artist's brushwork could be properly appreciated?"

Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 6 '42 200w

New Statesman & Nation 23:214 Mr 28

'42 140w

"About as thoroughgoing a study of this Dutch master's works as could be imagined. A hundred and seventeen paintings are reproduced along with forty-odd detail studies. Great care has been taken in determining attributions."

+ New Yorker 18:72 Mr 21 '42 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p118 Mr 7 '42 450w

HALSTEAD, IVOR. Heroes of the Atlantic; the British merchant navy carries on! 235p il $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Drummond]

940.545 World war, 1939—Naval operations. Merchant marine—Great Britain 42-3312

Descriptions of the work of the British seamen in the present war. The book is divided into four sections: Britain's sea story; The second World war; The merchant navy triumphs; The merchant navy ashore and at sea.

"The author may have enjoyed writing the book but, unfortunately, with the exception of some bits of schoolboy history and a few uninspired personal yarns, the contents could easily be culled by any one who read the daily papers during the past two years." P. J. Searles

— Books p20 Mr 8 '42 170w

"Mr. Halstead's book is more than a relation of episodes. It is an attractive account of the meaning and the maintenance of seapower."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p639 D 20 '41 220w

HAMBIDGE, GOVE. Prime of life. 243p $2 Doubleday

818

42-455

In a series of short essays, the author describes one day in his own life—his fiftieth birthday. Beginning with the early morning chorus of birds outside his home in Chevy Chase, Maryland, he follows thru with bits about his family, his co-workers in the Department of Agriculture, his friends who drop in to call in the evening, and closes with midnight and his stint of writing done. His philosophy of life comes out in the course of the book, as well as his personal impressions of some of the people he has come in contact with in his work in Washington: notably Vice-president Wallace.

Booklist 38:232 Mr 1 '42

"While this work is essentially a personal evaluation of [the author's] own affairs it is, in a sense, the evaluation of an American way of life. . . The book [is] a collection of informal but exceedingly well written little essays. . . Loving Washington, Mr. Hambidge grows reasonably eloquent about the many advantages of living there. But he is a little over-enthusiastic about the nature of men and women whose employer is Uncle Sam." Rose Feld

+ — Books p12 Ja 11 '42 500w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Ja 26 '42 430w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '42

Commonweal 36:188 Je 12 '42 140w

"Not an important book, but pleasantly written for those who like simple fare." G. E. Brown

+ Library J 67:39 Ja 1 '42 80w

New Repub 106:277 F 23 '42 50w

N Y Times p16 F 15 '42 420w

New Yorker 17:68 Ja 24 '42 80w

Reviewed by Beulah Amidon
Survey 78:349 D '42 250w

HAMBRO, CARL JOACHIM. How to win the peace. 384p $3 Lippincott

940.531 World war, 1939—Peace. International cooperation 42-24540

The president of the Norwegian parliament, and of the League of nations assembly, discusses the question of Germany and Japan after this war. He stresses internationalism in postwar planning, and cooperation in economic, financial, and educational affairs. Index.

Booklist 39:136 D 15 '42

Reviewed by Hiram Motherwell
Books p44 D 6 '42 500w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin, Jr.
Commonweal 37:98 N 13 '42 550w

"As a piece of literary craftsmanship, this book leaves much to be desired. It is not well planned. Its separate chapters read often like detached essays: it contains much repetitious matter. But its fervent conviction, its breadth of outlook, and its solid common sense, make it one of the important recent contributions to the question of the peace." Allan Nevins

+ — N Y Times p1 D 13 '42 1900w

HAMILTON, EDITH. Mythology; il. by Steele Savage. 497p $3.50 Little

290 Mythology (W) 42-12948

A retelling of the stories in classical mythology with a supplementary section on Norse mythology. While the author has not attempted to reproduce the style of the ancient writers, she has attempted to keep distinct the various sources from which the tales have been drawn—Homer, Ovid, etc. Index.

Booklist 38:379 Je 15 '42

Bookmark 3:3 My '42

Reviewed by John Erskine
Books p7 My 10 '42 1000w

"Her method is, after an excellent and stimulating introduction, to tell the myths briefly in as nearly as possible the words of the poet or poets who told each particular story best. Her taste is firm and discerning. . . Her own style is clear, graceful, a little softer than the Greek or the Latin (as English is sure to be) but precise and economical so that her prose remains in the classic key. And it is extremely fresh." E. P. Richardson

+ Commonweal 36:186 Je 12 '42 490w

Reviewed by Maude Adams

Library J 67:583 Je 15 '42 50w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:890 O 15 '42 20w

"A model of what popularization can be in the hands of a writer both learned and imaginative. The first thing one is tempted to say about 'Mythology' is that it is a Bulfinch for our time. But that is hardly a description, even a suggestion, of what Miss Hamilton has done. In a prose at once edged and colorful, she has thrown the whole of even familiar Greek and Norse mythology into a fresh and luminous context. She has never overpressed suggestions and intimations. She has distilled into incidental observations the whole meaning of mythology itself to the modern scholar and man of letters." Irwin Edman

+ Nation 155:239 S 19 '42 1600w

"Classical mythology has long needed such a popular exposition as Miss Edith Hamilton has given us in this volume, which is at once a reference book and a book which may be read for stimulation and pleasure. Its merit is largely derived from the author's interest in Greek and Roman myths, which she sees not merely as outworn fancies of dead antiquity but as living fables not wholly deprived of meaning for our time, or, for that matter, for all time. Created when the world was young, there is in them, as in most things engendered in humanity's youth, a quality of timelessness, inherent and unforgettable." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p4 My 24 '42 850w

"Greek, Roman, and Norse myths may seem a little remote these days, but the author retells them here with a sure taste and scholarship that help to restore their quality as perennial and refreshing fables about human nature, including our own. Excellent introductions to each section. The treatment of the Norse sagas is relatively scant, however."

+ New Yorker 18:79 My 9 '42 60w

Reviewed by Padraic Colum

Sat R of Lit 25:14 Ag 1 '42 1150w

"In her lucid style, which so happily combines wit, wisdom and a revivifying enthusiasm, Edith Hamilton has written a book which will undoubtedly become a bible for theatre lovers as well as a comforting companion for many a hard-driven young scholar." Rosamond Gilder

+ Theatre Arts 26:491 Jl '42 330w

Wis Lib Bul 38:114 Jl '42

HAMILTON, PATRICK. Hangover square; or, The man with two minds; a story of darkest Earl's court in the year 1939. 308p $2.50 Random house [8s 6d Constable]

[41-21169]

Psychological study of an Englishman, afflicted with schizophrenia. The effect which his strange malady had upon George Bone and upon his intimates is traced with meticulous detail, thru a series of sordid events, ending in tragedy. The time is 1939.

"The potentialities here are enormous. But Mr. Hamilton has not attempted to fill out his brief, brittle and swift story to the dimensions of a serious realistic novel. Neither his English Fascist nor his brown-shirt types, few of his minor figures seem to be real people. They are symbols; for this is a symbolical tale of England on the outbreak of war. Wherefore it is rather more clever in invention and serious in aim than profound as a novel. But it is an item; no question about that. I do not think I have ever used the word before—save possibly in a forgotten moment of weakness—but this, just as a story, is gripping." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p5 F 22 '42 800w

"It would have been a better book if the climax had not been so long postponed, since the greater part of it is filled with the sordid and repetitive detail of perpetual drinking and George's too frequent deception by the horrible Netta." J. D. Beresford

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 15 '41 80w
Nation 154:320 Mr 14 '42 200w

"In the first half, George's mental ills and general unhappiness are seen through half a dozen eyes and the analysis is always the same, nothing fresh, no further enlightenment. You can call it boring. And hanging the fascist label on the girl and her gang simply doesn't take because it's mere name-calling. And finally, the schizophrenia itself is just a come-on to the reader. A man doesn't need the help of a split personality to do in a dame like Netta. It should be a pleasure. Which leaves us where we started. Ever heard of Somerset Maugham?" Max Gissen

New Repub 106:342 Mr 9 '42 250w

HAMILTON, PATRICK—Continued

"As a thriller, Hangover Square is hardly to be over-praised; it is tense, exciting and frightening. . . . The author's power of building up credible characters, the neatness of his story, and the importance of his subject, combine to make an excellent novel." A. F. West
+ New Statesman & Nation 22:186 Ag 23 '41 550w

"Mr. Hamilton writes with a directness, a simplicity and restraint which enable him to surmount even such dangers as those of the white cat episodes. A grim, powerful, sympathetic novel, sensitive, atmospheric, exceptionally well balanced, 'Hangover Square' need have no fear of any of the comparisons it will undoubtedly suggest to every experienced reader." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p7 F 15 '42 900w

"With what seems to this unlearned reader almost academic obedience to the dicta of psychiatry, the narrative shuttles trickily between the two Georges. Mr. Hamilton's horrors are all of the mind, and he manipulates them with extraordinary skill, though perhaps at slightly excessive length. . . . 'Hangover Square' stands up firmly as a first-class melodrama of abnormal psychology, but as a satire on a decadent society it wavers and hesitates. Gifted as is Mr. Hamilton, he is no Aldous Huxley." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:67 F 14 '42 600w

"The book contains too many repetitions: the bad people are too limited, the good people too nice, the hero too sentimental, the seediness too dreamlike, the tone too light, and the whole affair too long." John Hampson
Spec 167:218 Ag 29 '41 430w

"As a study in progressive drunkenness and mental disintegration, 'Hangover Square' is a masterly composition, but as a novel its merits are dubious, since there is not sufficient strength in any character to arouse the sympathies of the reader. Consequently it is curiosity rather than interest in the plot that carries the reader to the end. Hamilton's style is repressed, underwritten rather than heightened, and the dramatic progress is deliberate, a slow pyramiding of events to a murderous conclusion that is written with no acceleration of dramatic tempo." L. S. M.

+ Spring'd Republican p7e F 15 '42 550w

Time 39:100 Mr 16 '42 150w

"It is an ingeniously told story, quietly horrific in effect. Mr. Hamilton has an experienced way with the sordid and the gruesome, and his naturalism, though it runs to the trivialities of cinema advertisements and like matters, is nicely selective in dialogue."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p385 Ag 9 '41 480w

HAMLIN, JOHN H. Flying horses; a story of the merry-go-round; il. by Charles Hargens. 254p $2.25 Lippincott

42-20564

Describes in story form how the first merry-go-round came to America, and how a boy who loved ponies made it possible for many children to have pony rides.

"Very interesting subject, and it is unfortunate that it was not handled with more sparkle, as befitting the gay role of the carousel. However, there is story interest in this really sober struggle to give American children their first merry-go-round." R. W. Stewart

+ Library J 67:910 O 15 '42 90w

"The story moves slowly, but the material is fresh and unhackneyed. It provides an interesting sidelight on American village life at the end of the last century, and young Dan, with his determination to make his way in the world through his own efforts, and his devotion to the pony whose life he saved, will interest readers from 12 to 15. The illustrations by Charles Hargens are spirited and informing." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p21 N 8 '42 360w

School & Society 56:196 S 5 '42 30w

"This book catches the atmosphere of the past without any of the obviously educational detail that children distrust. The boy's efforts to learn his chosen work are sympa-thetically described, and the melodrama is perfectly acceptable in a book for early teen age readers." M. G.

+ Spring'd Republican p7e N 22 '42 280w

Wis Lib Bul 38:188 D '42

HAMMETT, DASHIELL. Complete Dashiell Hammett. 5v in 1 $2.50 Knopf

42-20563

Omnibus volume containing five novels: Red Harvest; The Dain Curse; The Maltese Falcon; The Glass Key; and The Thin Man (Book Review Digest, 1929-1931, and 1934).

"All first-rate work, it holds its own with the years and is thus grand for a second perusal, not to mention the fun of having the whole saga in one big fistful." Will Cuppy

+ Books p12 J1 26 '42 150w

N Y Times p26 N 29 '42 140w

New Yorker 17:60 J1 25 '42 20w

"Needed in every respectable mystery library, and interesting re-reading to see how an exceptionally good writer has progressed. Staple goods."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 Ag 1 '42 40w

HAMMOND, HAROLD FRANCIS, and SORENSON, LESLIE JOHN, eds. Traffic engineering handbook; a joint publication of Inst. of traffic engineers and Nat. conservation bureau. 320p il $3.25 Inst. of traffic engineers, 60 John st, N.Y.

388.3 Traffic regulations. Automobiles—Accidents. Accidents—Prevention 41-21582

"Fourteen authorities on the many elements of traffic engineering have contributed to this pioneer attempt to bring together within the covers of one book the fundamentals of traffic engineering. The book is not prepared as a textbook. . . . Introductory chapters discuss vehicle motion, the motor vehicle and the pedestrian and include a large amount of statistical material. Subsequent chapters take up traffic accident records, and traffic surveys, pavement marking, traffic signs and signals, including the timing of control signals, speed restrictions, one-way and through streets, roadway design, traffic islands and loading zones, curb and off-street parking, and lighting." Eng N

Eng N 127:96 N 20 '41 140w
N Y New Tech Bks 27:13 Ja '42

HAN SUYIN, pseud. Destination Chungking. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 367p $3 Little B or 92 Chinese-Japanese war, 1931- (W) 42-36180

Autobiography of a young Chinese woman of good family. In her book she describes her childhood in Peking, where she knew Tang Pao, who later became her husband; her trip to England for graduate work in obstetrics, where she again met Pao who was studying at Sandhurst. Back in China, she tells of the Japanese attack on Shanghai; her marriage and Pao's departure to serve in the army of Chiang Kai-shek; and her interval of quiet in the ancestral home, before the bombing of Chungking.

Booklist 38:329 My 1 '42

Bookmark 3:14 My '42

"In many ways it is the youth of the author which gives this book its distinction and its charm. For in presenting China's fight for freedom, in describing the hardships of the people, in avowing her faith in ultimate victory, she writes with a passion and ardor which are the supreme possessions of the young in heart and in years." Rose Feld

+ Books p3 Ap 26 '42 1100w

"Excellent descriptive writing, heightened by understanding of enduring traits of Chinese character and unshaken faith in nation's ultimate victory, makes this more than 'just another book about China.' Recommended for library purchase." M. J. Messler

+ Library J 67:319 Ap 1 '42 70w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Library J 67:895 O 15 '42 50w

Reviewed by G. E. Taylor
New Repub 106:739 My 25 '42 60w

"It is an absorbing, beautifully written book, at once intense and wide-spaced in its interest and significance. And it is open to criticism precisely on the one score of being written almost too beautifully. The Chinese autobiography (the name Han Suyin is fictitious) has been rewritten and elaborated by an anonymous author—presumably American—who has graced the task with literary sensitiveness and skill; graced it too much. Beside the stark straight-forward simplicity which brings China utterly to life in the novels of Lin Yutang and Pearl Buck, this true chronicle's exquisitely rich style is like a lovely veil, dimming the contours of reality. None the less, its appeal is deep and human, and it should be very widely read." Katherine Woods

+ — N Y Times p16 Ap 26 '42 1250w

"The description of Chungking life under the Japanese bombs is notable."

+ New Yorker 18:79 Ap 25 '42 30w

"One admires Han Suyin's good English. But one cannot help feeling the pity that thousands of Chinese young women today, who would have more to say than Han Suyin, are not able to master this useful foreign language. Let us call her book authentic inasmuch as every Chinese young woman through these recent years must have written a part of it." S. H. Chen

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:19 My 2 '42 600w

HANC, JOSEF. Tornado across eastern Europe; the path of Nazi destruction from Poland to Greece. 337p $3 Greystone

940.5 Europe—History. Europe—Politics. Germany—Foreign relations. World war, 1939- 42-11317

"A distinguished Czechoslovakian now lecturing at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, Tufts College, covers the recent history of all Eastern Europe in this volume. It depicts the quest for stabilization after Versailles, the brewing of the Nazi tornado, and its destructive passage across Czechoslovakia, Poland, the Balkans and Greece." (Publisher's note) Maps on end papers. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by T. W. Riker
Am Hist R 48:114 O '42 370w

Reviewed by Oscar Jászi
Am Pol Sci R 36:971 O '42 600w

"Based on a thorough knowledge of the subject matter and a sympathy with all small nations, Mr. Hanc, who has fully mastered the English language, presents in his latest work one of the most valuable contributions to the understanding of a vital element of the world war and peace." Milifé Kybal

+ Ann Am Acad 223:204 S '42 600w

Bookmark 3:10 My '42

"Very correctly, Mr. Hanc stresses the fact that durable peace cannot be assured without the participation of the United States in laying its foundations and maintaining the structure built upon it. He also sounds a timely warning that peace is based upon bread and that the standard of living of eastern Europe must be raised, primarily through industrialization and more intensive farming. Mr. Hanc submits highly seasoned views, and few guides are more reliable than he is in the maze of eastern Europe." Emil Lengyel

+ Books p4 Mr 29 '42 1000w

"A sound and comprehensive survey." R. G. Woolbert

+ Foreign Affairs 20:783 Jl '42 80w

Reviewed by Rustem Vambery
Nation 154:661 Je 6 '42 250w

"A thought-provoking book, well worth reading."

+ New Repub 106:646 My 11 '42 40w

"The book is fundamentally sound and extremely valuable at present, useful to the ordinary individual, the knowing diplomat or the statesman who wishes to be accurately informed on the complex political problems of the period following 1918 in this European region which is so often disputed and misunderstood. Here is a book which at a propitious moment not only fills an evident void in contemporary political literature, but which also corrects some errors still accepted in the world, even in the world of diplomacy and government." Milos Safraek

+ N Y Times p9 Mr 29 '42 1250w

"'Tornado Across Eastern Europe' is a sane and honest account of most timely history and as such will be welcomed by all students of our day. It helps us to understand the dreams and efforts of the Eastern European nations and why their tragedy has become vital to our continent." H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 My 23 '42 600w

Reviewed by Frederick Rein

Spring'd Republican p8 Ap 30 '42 1000w

"A book which is both illuminating and useful, unique in structure and sound in conclusions." Otakar Odlozilik

+ Yale R n s 31:839 summer '42 1050w

HANDLIN, OSCAR. Boston's immigrants, 1790-1865; a study in acculturation. 287p il maps $3.25 Harvard univ. press

325.7446 Boston—Foreign population. Boston—Social conditions. Irish in Boston A41-4664

"The inspiration of Mr. Handlin's study was found in the fact that, during the period indicated, Boston was transformed from a comfortable commercial center with a culturally homogeneous population, to an industrial metropolis, 'torn by intergroup hatreds and conflicts arising out of the influx of thousands of foreigners.' To a discussion of this transformation the author devoted his doctoral dissertation, studying the economical, physical and ideological adjustment or maladjustment of the immigrant, and pointing out the causes which contributed to the condition that prevails at the present day when two groups, Irish and non-Irish, each possess 'cohesiveness and the consciousness of its own identity.'" Cath World

"Dr. Handlin has handled this subject with considerable distinction. As a local boy with a special and nostalgic interest in his theme I recognize with delight the justness of his picture. But its significance extends beyond this parochial concern, it is part of a profound revolution that during the nineteenth century changed the old America into what we know today." H. L. Shapiro

+ Am Anthropol 44:314 Ap '42 900w

Reviewed by M. R. Davie

Am Hist R 48:360 Ja '43 490w

"Handlin has not neglected the nonideological factors, but, in the opinion of the reviewer, he has not given them sufficient emphasis. The book is, nevertheless, an invaluable guide to the understanding of Boston society, past or present." W. F. Whyte

+ Am J Soc 48:519 Ja '43 900w

"Handlin presents a scholarly, unbiased, and revealing account of the development of this movement and its impact upon the entrenched Boston population. The story of the resulting clash of cultures and the eventual working adjustments is revealing. The book is an excellent case study in the great problem of social assimilation." H. P. Fairchild

+ Am Soc R 7:288 Ap '42 400w

"A monograph which is eminently readable and characterized by imagination as well as learning." L. M. Hacker

+ Books p20 F 22 '42 600w

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 154:501 Ja '42 340w

New Repub 106:277 F 23 '42 100w

"Some things the book leaves unclear. It lacks a section map of Boston—rendering many pages of the text unintelligible to readers unfamiliar with the city. The early statement about little poverty and no pauperism is contradicted at several points later on. . . Also, if the Irish read the English-language Catholic press, and one assumes they did, what does Handlin mean by his references to 'language difficulties'? Nevertheless, to call attention to matters unclear is not to suggest that the volume is unworthy of the company of Hansen's. It is a fine job, and readers not afraid of armies of footnotes will find it worth their while." S. L. Jackson

HANDLIN, OSCAR—Continued

+ — Spring'd Republican p7e F 1 '42 800w

HANNA, EVELYN. Sugar in the gourd. 313p $2.50 Dutton 41-26741

Triangle story of present-day Georgia, in which two sisters fall in love with the same man, a handsome Northerner. At first he is attracted to Claire, the sophisticated extrovert; but he later marries Sabina, who is quieter and more remote.

"'Sugar in the Gourd' is not a wholly successful novel, because its two themes fall apart and fail to fuse in an emotionally acceptable ending, but it is much better and more rewarding reading than many a book technically more nearly adequate. Its fault is largely the defect of a virtue—the range of the author's interests and the resulting prodigality of her offering. That zest, the precision of her writing, and her narrative gift, make the work of Evelyn Hanna well worth watching." Mary Ross

+ — Books p7 Ja 25 '42 700w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p7 Ja 25 '42 480w

Wis Lib Bul 38:31 F '42

HANSEN, HARRY. The Chicago; il. by Harry Timmins. (Rivers of America) 362p $2.50 Farrar

917.731 Chicago river. Chicago—History (W) 42-25855

The Chicago river is said to be hardly more than "a creek that doesn't know which way to go," but it has had an important part in the development of the city of Chicago. The book is largely a history of the city, told with many anecdotes, and showing the effect of the river upon the history of the city. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 39:181 Ja 1 '43

"There was little any writer could do about a sewer that runs inland, a short river that runs backward, but there is always a lot a writer like Hansen can do with the City of Chicago." Lloyd Lewis

+ Books p2 Ja 17 '43 1050w

"Recommended." E. H. Crowell

+ Library J 67:950 N 1 '42 60w

"This is not Sherwood Anderson's, Ben Hecht's, Lloyd Lewis's or Eugene Fields's Chicago. It is somewhat the Chicago of the old Auditorium, not that of either World's Fair or of the Opera House. It is Mr. Hansen's Chicago, new in many ways. Some who thought they were fairly well acquainted with the city will think more kindly of it after seeing it through Mr. Hansen's eyes." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p8 D 13 '42 1300w

"An entertaining book, though a little prosy on occasion."

New Yorker 18:104 D 5 '42 70w

Reviewed by Allan Nevins

Sat R of Lit 25:9 D 12 '42 1100w

HANSON, EARL PARKER. Stefansson, prophet of the North. 241p il map $2.50 Harper

B or 92 Arctic regions—Juvenile literature. Stefansson, Vilhjalmur—Juvenile literature (W) 41-24242

"Of Icelandic descent and hardened to the rigors of winter in Dakota, blessed with a gift for languages and possessing a keen scientific mind, Stefansson seems peculiarly fitted for a life of discovery among the Eskimos of the far North. The narrative accounts of the different expeditions are thrilling. They include the account of his eleven years' residence with the Eskimos, as one of themselves, and his swiftly organized search, with Sir Hubert Wilkins, for the Russian explorer, Levanovsky. Stefansson's contribution to scientific studies of diet, based on his own meat-eating experiences, are interesting. For older boys and girls." (Horn Bk M) Index.

Booklist 38:178 Ja 15 '42

"The book is honest and stimulating, with many photographs, and, though its subject is noted for disrespect for heroes, this is a hero story." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 F 15 '42 270w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 23 '42 160w

"Drawing from Stefansson's own books, as well as from his personal acquaintance with the explorer, Earl Hanson writes not only an exciting tale of adventure, but a revealing biography as well." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:33 Ja '42 120w

"A thoroughly stimulating and absorbing biography." Elizabeth Babcock

+ Library J 67:42 Ja 1 '42 60w

Wis Lib Bul 38:30 F '42

HANSON, VIRGINIA. Mystery for Mary. 274p $2 Doubleday 42-13271

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p13 My 31 '42 150w

"The author has chosen a rather unfortunate manner of presenting what might otherwise have been a much better story." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p21 My 24 '42 220w

HARBAGE, ALFRED BENNETT. Shakespeare's audience. 201p $2.25 Columbia univ. press

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Stage history 41-26970

"In the following pages I have collected and tried to interpret justly the evidence on the size, social composition, behavior, and the aesthetic and intellectual capacity of Shakespeare's audience. I have been as objective as it is possible for me to be, realizing that in a reconstruction from fragmentary materials the greatest hazard to the truth lies in the bias of the workman. My desire to avoid distortion explains the infrequency with which I have quoted the plays of Shakespeare himself. . . In quoting from Elizabethan works, I have retained the old spelling except in the few cases where I have expanded abbreviations indicated by archaic symbols, and I have retained the old punctuation except the italics." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Harbage, in his opening paragraph, looks in upon the audience leaving the first performance of Hamlet, and throughout his book he never loses the sense of the reality of that moving throng; he regards the Shakespearean audience with a quiet fondness that lends a glow of humanity even to his statistics." J. J. Knights

+ Canadian Forum 21:380 Mr '42 420w

"Professor Harbage, whose competence has been demonstrated by several previous works of scholarship, reopens the whole question [of Shakespearean audiences], weighs evidence more carefully than it has ever been weighed before, and comes to some fresh conclusions. Because he carries his learning lightly, his little book is also entertaining reading." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 154:233 F 21 '42 800w

Reviewed by David Mathew

Spec 168:467 My 15 '42 500w

HARCOURT-SMITH, SIMON. Fire in the Pacific [Eng title: Japanese frenzy]. 236p $2 Knopf [6s Hamilton, H]

952 Eastern question (Far East). Japan—History. World war, 1939—Japan (W) 42-18168

A survey of the events of the last eleven years in the Far East which led up to the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. The book was completed early in 1942. The author was for some time a member of the British diplomatic corps in the Far East and is now connected with the Foreign office.

Booklist 39:8 S '42

"It is a short book but the facts are all there, presented accurately if with a certain bias, which is perhaps inevitable on the part of a former British diplomat who saw the picture for many years through British official spectacles. This is not to imply that Mr. Harcourt-Smith is trying to excuse British policy for its shortcomings. He is often critical of it. . . Here in capsule form are all the important events in Japan's relations since the beginning of her dealings with the Occidental nations. What seems regrettable, in view of the author's own experience in the Far East and his contact with many of the events, is that his account is entirely impersonal." Wilfrid Fleisher

+ Books p3 Ag 2 '42 950w

"Permanent value of book may be slight, but, as primer of Japanese history, it is useful today and should have wide appeal to general public that wants quick and readable information on Far East. Recommended for public and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 67:627 J1 '42 80w

Reviewed by Dorothy Woodman

New Statesman & Nation 24:46 J1 18 '42 500w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

N Y Times p8 Ag 16 '42 1050w

"The author's tart, clear-headed irony about Singapore and other matters, which he considers failures of intelligence rather than material, may remind you that the British still contrive to be their own best critics. Much of the stuff is familiar, though, and the book is a little shaky on detail and strategy."

+ — New Yorker 17:58 J1 25 '42 110w

"It is with an eager gusto, blighting wit, and searing satire that Mr. Harcourt-Smith proceeds to summarize the events in the Far East since 1930, against a sketchy but highly effective background of Japanese history and Japanese character. . . It is a rather notable achievement to have 'Fire in the Pacific' succeed in being a very sound book in general argument and conclusions, for it is filled with absurd errors of fact, geography, and history." Hallett Abend

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:7 Ag 15 '42 650w

"This is a wild book: wild in small ways as when Hankow is placed 1,700 miles from the sea and also in bigger matters. For instance, Mr. Harcourt-Smith states that the collapse of Japan would now render almost certain Hitler's speedy defeat by the Russo-American-British combination. He describes the Japanese people as 'seventy-five million mad-men, all prepared to commit any crime at the behest of the State.' In the light of such sweeping statements as these it is reasonable for the reader to assume that Britain, in the course of some two hundred years in the Far East, has not been so invariably in the wrong as the author suggests."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p323 Je 27 '42 390w

HARDIE, CHARLES DUNN. Truth and fallacy in educational theory. 152p $2 Macmillan [6s Cambridge]

370.1 Education A42-3483

"By reducing a variety of theories to a series of basic propositions Mr. Hardie is able not only to observe how far conclusions follow from premises (and what premises are implied by conclusions), but also to discover whether each proposition concerned is a definition, a statement of fact, or an expression of feeling, and, where it is a statement of fact, how far it is justified by experience and experiment. In this way he deals rapidly with Rousseau and the naturalists, treats Herbart with proper respect and accords Dewey more conscientious consideration than some will think he deserves. The way now cleared and the method established, he proceeds to examine the whole subject afresh." Spec

School & Society 56:104 Ag 1 '42 30w

Reviewed by Lettice Fowler

Spec 168:358 Ap 10 '42 550w

HARDING, DENYS CLEMENT WYATT. The impulse to dominate. 256p $2.50 Norton [7s 6d Allen, G]

301.15 War. Social psychology. Peace

[A 42-547]

"Dealing with the psychological causes of war under such headings as 'Propaganda and Rationalization,' 'War as a Cultural Product,' 'Social Unity in War-time' and 'The Compensations of War,' the author treats war as a psychological disease, a social regression and gives suggestions for its prevention." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Index.

"This is a valuable and important book. It is to be hoped that men's preoccupation with the task of winning the war will not lead to its being overlooked." R. H. T.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 6 '42 300w

"This is one of the best books on social psychology that has come my way for a long time. It is well and clearly written; its ideas are stimulating and suggestive; the illustrative detail with which they are set forth is various, fresh and apt. . . Where there is so much ground for praise there is some for censure. Mr. Harding is not always free from the charge which can be brought against so many psychological books, of telling us portentously what we already know and giving weight to platitudes by wrapping them in jargon." C. E. M. Joad

+ — New Statesman & Nation 22:427 N 15 '41 950w

"Mr. Harding writes simply from a very clear mind, and as his style is singularly free from jargon the average reader will find him much more readable than most writers on psychological problems."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p659 D 27 '41 240w

HARDY, KAY (MRS DOUGLAS JOHN CONNAH). Beauty treatments for the home. 198p il $3 Funk

747 House decoration (W) 42-36179

"The smart way to make draperies, slip covers, lamp shades, accessories. How to upholster and re-upholster, finish and refinish furniture, etc." (Subtitle) Gives step-by-step instructions, with diagrams and illustrations. The author is president of the American School of Design. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:325 My 1 '42

"This book is definitely not one of those flossy, pretty-pretty books on how the rich decorate their palaces. It is a practical guide for John Q. Public and his wife."

+ Boston Globe p17 Ag 5 '42 230w

HARDY, WILLIAM GEORGE. All the trumpets sounded; a novel based on the life of Moses. 501p $2.75 Coward-McCann

Moses—Fiction (W) 42-14356

A novel retelling the story of Moses and picturing life in ancient Egypt three thousand years ago. Nearly half the book deals with Moses' early life as a Prince of Egypt, adopted grandson of the Great Pharaoh; his years of exile in the desert and the years when he led the Hebrews out of Egypt and into the wilderness, are compressed in the second half.

Booklist 39:102 N 15 '42

"All The Trumpets Sounded' owes its effectiveness and richness to its author's resourceful imagination. It is not so much biography filled out by imagination as imagination pegged on a few historical events which are not too binding and a few biblical traditions which are conveniently open to interpretation. Mr. Hardy's Moses is a study not of a god or a symbol but of a man—an extraordinary man to be sure, but full of flaws, plagued by doubts.

HARDY, W. G.—Continued

groping. He may not be your Moses or mine but he is a convincing creation—and in fiction that is what counts." Milton Ruffoff

+ Books p8 J1 26 '42 800w

Reviewed by J. F. Davidson

Canadian Forum 22:125 J1 '42 390w

"This fictionalized account of the life of Moses, by author of Father Abraham, brings into sharp focus a Biblical character who has never seemed quite real. Egypt, vivid, lush, and corrupt, makes fascinating background. Moses' early life as a prince of Egypt, the scene where he learns of his Hebrew parentage, life in the desert, and his leadership of his people out of Egypt, all are dramatically and powerfully presented. Enthusiastically recommended." Esther Potter

+ Library J 67:476 My 15 '42 70w

"Mr. Hardy's long and circumstantial life of the Jewish leader is especially engaging in the section that deals with the proud young Egyptian prince as yet unaware of his mission. A curious provincialism in the prose and in the treatment of the female characters lowers the intensity of an interesting story."

+ — Nation 155:98 Ag 1 '42 90w

"Mr. Hardy has set out to tell a plausible tale, and he has certainly succeeded. Moses' troubles, as he pictures them, sound real enough and should we add, modern enough? Mr. Hardy has not lived through such an epoch as ours for nothing." John Cournos

+ — N Y Times p17 J1 26 '42 1050w

"A better-than-average Biblical novel. . . Although Mr. Hardy doesn't seem to be working at it very hard, he makes his background sound authentic, his characters real instead of stuffed, and his plot dramatic instead of merely respectful."

+ New Yorker 18:55 Ag 1 '42 70w

"The author brings to this undertaking a thorough knowledge of archaeology, a familiarity with the Near East, and a writer's gift for illuminating detail. But, to clear up matters right here, he has not the superior philosophical conception that stamps Thomas Mann's Biblical cycle, nor the all-embracing mastery of the theological, mythological, and psychological elements that were blended indissolubly in the 'Joseph' stories. Once, however, this has been conscientiously stated, one can safely say that G. W. Hardy's biography of the great deliverer of the Hebrews is a story of grand scope, gathering momentum as it moves along, and surprisingly gripping in spots. Finally it throws a new light on the familiar figures of the Old Testament." R. R. Plant

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:6 Ag 1 '42 900w

Wis Lib Bul 38:187 D '42

HARGRAVE, JOHN. Montagu Norman [Eng title: Professor Skinner alias Montagu Norman]. 239p il $2.75 Greystone [8s 6d Gardner]

B or 92 Norman, Montagu. Banks and banking—Great Britain 42-6682

"Mr. Hargrave, more novelist than biographer by habit, finds in the governor of the Bank of England a personality that appeals to his imagination. Mr. Norman, a British banker who looks like a Portuguese courtier of three centuries ago, has a passion for inconspicuousness but manages to make himself the most noticeable figure on the street. When he adopts an alias (as 'Professor Clarence Skinner,' for example) his disguise is as obvious as the false whiskers and smoked glasses of a sleuth in melodrama. But the real interest centers in Sir Montagu's monetary theories, his devotion to gold, and his power in determining the financial policies of the British government." (Christian Century) Index.

Reviewed by L. M. Hacker

— Books p12 Mr 8 '42 1000w

Christian Century 59:187 F 11 '42 100w

"One regrets the book that Mr. Hargrave might have written, frankly fictional, doing for its subject what Howard Spring did, in 'Fame Is the Spur,' for Ramsay MacDonald. But when, some day, an official biography of Montagu Norman appears, Mr. Hargrave will deserve the credit of having supplied in advance the astringent and savory corrective."

Honor Croome

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 4 '42 600w

"If Mr. Hargrave knew more about his subject, this book might have been a valuable contribution to the history of the period since the end of the First World War. But it is a very disappointing performance, and all the more so because as the leader of the Social Credit movement in England his approach is highly critical of banks and bankers, and also because he can write with snap and vigor." Alvin Adey

— Current Hist 2:63 Mr '42 470w

"This book is not dull. Mr. Norman, in all likelihood, is not the Napoleonic dreamer and schemer his biographer makes him out to be, but he is an apt text for a man with a theoretical axe to grind. In spite of an occasional inaccurate and unfair statement, the book presents a vivid and informing account of the twenty years twilight of the gold standard. Mr. Hargrave seems to think that the Governor is now reposing in a kind of Barbarossa's mountain, waiting to come out at the proper moment to re-establish the kingdom of debt and gold. For myself, I don't believe that the twilight will be followed by that kind of dawn." Palmer Harman

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:19 F 28 '42 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p706 D 2 '39 70w

HARGROVE, MARION. See here, Private Hargrove; foreword by Maxwell Anderson. 211p $2 Holt

355.12 U.S.—Army—Military life

(W) 42-17460

Collection of articles about the first stages of becoming a soldier in the American army, as it seemed to a former newspaper man whose introduction to army life took place at Fort Bragg, North Carolina. The pieces were first printed in The Charlotte (N.C.) News, on which paper the author has worked.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (23) N Y Times (21) PW (3) RB (4) W (1)

"The author is at his laughable best when describing what actually happened to him or when setting down those marvelous bull sessions which fill in the chinks. He is at his second best when he becomes conscious of what he is doing and proceeds to talk to you like an older brother. The naturalness and gayety of this book are, I think, a little marred by this note of tonic fraternalism." Edward Weeks

+ — Atlantic 170:132 S '42 130w

Booklist 39:2 S '42

"As a contribution to the lighter side of war, 'See Here, Private Hargrove' rates a medal. And medals, by the way, are 'chest hardware.'" Lisle Bell

+ Books p3 J1 26 '42 700w

Commonweal 37:123 N 20 '42 70w

"Clever, reportorial writing, clean humor, glossary of Army slang. Will attract readers who have boys in the service and may prove an amusing gift to men at camp, where it will strike responsive chord. No lasting value, but quality of writing is above that usually found in this type of book." H. R. Burdett

+ Library J 67:629 J1 '42 70w

"A delightful book about the trials and tribulations of a rookie. We recommend it as an antidote for those who worry about their boys in our army camps."

+ Nation 155:245 S 19 '42 120w

"The author has no more talent or imagination than a phonograph record, but like a phonograph record he can pick up stuff fine. His own stuff consequently ranges from naive to teary; the army gags, army talk and army fables he recounts are fresh and roundly funny and the whole book is just the thing to send to your kid brother in the service."

+ New Repub 107:126 J1 27 '42 70w

"Nothing in Private Hargrove's book could be comfort to the enemy, but almost every line in it could contribute to his confusion. For a book like this, with its cheerful impudences, couldn't come out of a New Order, or a Greater Co-Prosperity Sphere. . . Trivial and inconsequential? Possibly. . . A young man who apparently refused to take civilian life too seriously makes the same refusal about Army life, which he likes, and his little book is a pleasant companion for an hour or so." S. T. Williamson

+ N Y Times p2 J1 26 '42 650w

"All this is long since a tradition, of course, but it comes out fresh and cheerful and funny in the Corporal's wisecracking memoirs, embellished by the attitude of a new generation. The author does hammer his points about the sergeants, however."

+ — New Yorker 17:59 J1 25 '42 90w

"Light and humorous in style, this small book provides an excellent insight through a trainee's eyes into life in the army training camps today. The selection of material is good in that it has variety and deals with most of the experiences common to all of us in the army. . . In spots Hargrove's style becomes monotonous. Why must all of his sergeants be so restrained and have the same super-patient approach to the rookie? Even their vocabularies are so much alike as to be uninteresting. Most of the sergeants of my acquaintance have been much more picturesque and original when similar situations have arisen." R. P. Kellogg

+ — Survey G 31:436 O '42 290w

Time 40:95 Ag 10 '42 450w

Wis Lib Bul 38:158 N '42

HARING, CLARENCE HENRY. Argentina and the United States. (America looks ahead) 78p 50c; pa 25c World peace

982 Argentina, Argentina—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S.—Foreign relations—Argentina 41-25917

"Two chapters on Argentine history and two on the nation's economy provide a necessary background for the final chapter on Argentina's position in the present world crisis." Am Pol Sci R

Am Hist R 47:697 Ap '42 70w

Reviewed by W. T. R. Fox

Am Pol Sci R 36:384 Ap '42 150w

Canadian Forum 21:349 F '42 270w

HARKNESS, RUTH (MRS WILLIAM HARVEST HARKNESS). Pangoan diary. 295p $2.50 Creative age

918.5 Peru—Description and travel. Indians of South America—Peru (W) 42-14830

The author, who in 1936 brought the first baby giant panda out of China, later went to Peru in search of an almost legendary small grey bear. She did not find the bear, but she lived for months in the Peruvian mountain village of Pangoa, and this volume describes her life there and the people she met. Chief among these was the part-Indian entomologist who was her guide, friend, and refuge in time of trouble, during her stay in Pangoa and Lima.

Booklist 38:424 J1 1 '42

Reviewed by Robert Peck

Books p12 Je 7 '42 500w

Boston Globe p19 Je 3 '42 80w

"While not purporting to be a travel book, the delightful but unpretentious tales of people and places give a more intimate picture of unknown Peru than is to be gained from the usual book of travel. Especially gratifying is the absence of tinsel and fanfare." A. M. Colt

+ Library J 67:531 Je 1 '42 100w

"Among books from South America this one is altogether unusual and it is unfailingly interesting. . . Its atmosphere is well reproduced, with sympathy rather than effort."

+ N Y Times p5 Je 14 '42 650w

"A most entertaining escape into a land where the people have never heard of today's catastrophic war." F. G. Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 25:10 Je 6 '42 380w

"Mrs. Harkness is a keen observer of people and places, and she fills her book with graphic descriptions of both. Sensitively appreciative of beauty, she nevertheless is capable of creating crawling, itching pictures of snakes and insects. Fact and legend are intermingled even as they are in the lives of the Indian people she came to know. Certain episodes and characters stand forth in cameo-like clarity."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:4 Je '42 420w

HARLAND, ELIZABETH M. Farmer's girl. 312p $2.50 Daye [8s Cassell]

630.942 Agriculture—Great Britain. World war, 1939—Great Britain. Women as farmers 42-19804

"These are the personal experiences of a woman who, shortly after the beginning of the war, answered an advertisement for 'someone of intelligence to help run farm; experience unnecessary.' The farm was a large one in Norfolk, and the job, though nominally the bookkeeping involved in its management, in actual fact brought the author into direct contact with almost every practical job on its thousand acres." Times [London] Lit Sup

"A detailed and very pleasantly written two-year chronicle of an English farm in the special conditions of war. It has a limited interest to the American who enjoys reading about country living in England, an almost unlimited interest to those of us who, having a practical acquaintance with American farming, inevitably compare and contrast the English methods at every point." Wilson Follett

+ Atlantic 170:148 O '42 220w

Bookmark 4:7 N '42

"Miss Harland is businesslike and unsentimental in her account, and it has a humor and an observation which make it living and exact." Diana Forbes-Robertson

+ Books p19 Ag 23 '42 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '42

"A solidly worthwhile book, unpretentious, salty with quiet humor and full of charm." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p8 Ag 23 '42 1100w

"A nice, warm, quiet book that tells you, in dialect, a lot about the Norfolk countrymen and perhaps a little too much about the technical details of English farming methods."

+ New Yorker 18:60 Ag 29 '42 90w

"Miss Harland has a real gift for quick, incisive character sketches, and all the people, major and minor, she tells us about emerge as real as herself. The farmworkers in particular live strongly and vividly for us; their tough make-up, salty remarks and Norfolk dialect are a continuous delight."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p268 My 30 '42 300w

HARLOW, ALVIN FAY. Weep no more, my lady. (Whitlsey house publication) 455p il $3.50 McGraw

917.69 Kentucky (W) 42-13818

A combination of history, anecdote, songs, and gossip, which adds up to a character sketch of the state of Kentucky, and the people who made the state what it is today. Index.

Booklist 38:440 J1 15 '42

"A delight to everybody with a passing or permanent interest in Kentucky's natural endowments, her tall tales and the by-products of her history. The book has the stamp of authenticity without the dust of the archives. The cracker barrel has contributed no less than the steel stacks. . . Countless small scraps of information bubble up to give agreeable froth to the surface and to keep the reader sailing along." B. T. Anderson

+ Books p3 Je 7 '42 650w

HARLOW, A. F.—Continued

"Of stories handed down and memories of his own family, of wanderings from show-place to hinterland, of word-picture and record of local talk, Mr. Harlow has made an individual and delightful reconstruction of a commonwealth."

+ N Y Times p8 J1 5 '42 700w

"Good-enough Americana, but the prose is loose and dawdling."

New Yorker 18:74 My 16 '42 50w

"Mr. Harlow's admiration for Kentucky and for Kentuckians is unbounded. . . His knowledge is encyclopedic; his humor generous; his style garrulous, sentimental, journalistic, and informal. One leaves his pleasant pages regretfully. . . The only trouble is that Mr. Harlow has been so captivated by the quaint, the odd, and the colorful that he has been tempted to overlook the normal and the cultured." J. M. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 25:10 Je 20 '42 550w

HARLOW, WILLIAM MOREHOUSE. Trees of the eastern United States and Canada; their woodcraft and wildlife uses. (Whittlessey house field guide ser). 288p il $2.75 McGraw

582 Trees—North America (W) 42-3392

Manual for the identification of trees of the eastern United States, giving photographs of bark, twig, leaf and fruit, but not many of whole trees. Contains some human interest material, and scientific and historical information. Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:227 Mr 1 '42

"Most pocket-size handbooks for identification of trees severely limit themselves to their primary purpose. Mr. Harlow . . . also has an eye for what might be called the human interest of trees. . . The abundant illustrations, of leaves, buds, bark, nuts, and even tree flowers, indicate that Mr. Harlow has had experience in teaching city folks to name the forest trees."

+ Books p22 Mr 8 '42 110w

HARNEY, MARTIN PATRICK. Jesuits in history. 513p $4 America press

271.5 Jesuits 42-7838

"Father Harney sketches briefly the portraits of Jesuit saints, missionaries, theologians, educators, administrators, orators and scholars for the past four hundred years; describes the Constitutions of the Society and its inspiring Spiritual Exercises; gives us details of the Jesuit missions in India, China, South America, Canada and the United States; tells of the glorious work of the Society in the Counter-Reformation of Germany, Austria, Poland, Belgium and Switzerland; and pictures vividly its cruel suppression by the Bourbon princes and Pope Clement XIV., and its restoration by Pope Pius VII." Cath World

"This is a book to keep on one's shelves. It will not satisfy readers deeply interested in some one particular field of the Jesuits' activities, for all narrative detail is necessarily brief. But it is a reference book for particular fields—its 'Partial Bibliography of the Society of Jesus' covers all fields—and it is good to come on a book which gives the reader a clear sense of flowing with time through four hundred years of continued story." Edna Kenton

+ Books p18 Mr 8 '42 1350w

"We recommend this book highly. If a bit lacking in literary grace, it is a marvel of condensation, scholarly in tone, fair to all opponents, critical of false legends, and kindly but accurate in refutation." B. L. Conway

+ Cath World 154:758 Mr '42 550w

"Father Harney's lucid and most interesting sketch of the story of his beloved Society opens up on every page the greater vistas of the story of the Church itself, and this is natural, even when not intended explicitly, for it is of the very essence of the work of the Jesuits during the four centuries traced in these well-written and authoritative pages to be the action promotion of the universal Church." Rt. Rev. J. A. Kyan

+ Commonweal 35:14 O 24 '41 950w

HARPER, ROBERT S. Road to Baltimore. 254p $2 Mill

42-17218

Romantic tale of stage coaching along the road from Wheeling to Baltimore in 1836. Henry Clay and a young ward whom he is escorting to Washington are among the characters, and Beau Stark, just back from the war in Texas, is another. Beau's attempt to discover a lost brother brings him into conflict with the girl's fiancé, and a stage coach hold-up is the climax.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p13 Je 21 '42 180w

"It is obvious that considerable research has gone into the account of stage coach travel in those days, and unfortunate that the writing is so amateurish." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p22 J1 26 '42 140w

HARPER, WILHELMINA, ed. Easter chimes; stories for Easter and the spring season; il. by Wilfred Jones. 223p $2 Dutton

Easter—Juvenile literature (W) 42-9475

Collection of stories and poems useful for Easter and the spring season, with children from six to ten. Partial contents: Easter, by Hilda Conkling; Who calls? by F. C. Sayers; The rabbits' song outside the tavern, by Elizabeth Coatsworth; Easter, by Joyce Kilmer; Meeting the Easter bunny, by Rowena Bennett; An adventure in April, by Rowena Bennett; The flowers of Easter, by N. B. Turner; At Easter time, by L. E. Richards; The pink rabbit, by Rose Fyleman; Down a sunny Easter meadow, by N. B. Turner; Easter morning, by A. L. Fisher; I heard it in the valley, by Annette Wynne.

Booklist 38:444 J1 15 '42

"The latest of Miss Harper's collections, each of them useful to any one seeking program material for holiday celebrations, fills a gap in such a bookshelf; there is less of such material for Easter than one might expect, considering the importance of this feast in the calendar. A primary school can use this anthology the more freely as it is a group of spring stories rather than stories of a distinctly religious character." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Mr 29 '42 170w

Christian Century 59:433 Ap 1 '42 60w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p10 J1 27 '42 70w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 18:179 My '42 60w

Reviewed by J. E. Stromdahl
Library J 67:582 Je 15 '42 70w

"Miss Harper, who has already given us several excellent anthologies of seasonal stories and poems, 'Ghosts and Goblins,' 'The Harvest Feast' and 'Merry Christmas to You,' has now filled in a gap where there has been a notable dearth with this volume of Easter tales and verse culled largely from contemporary writers." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 29 '42 240w

Wis Lib Bul 38:143 O '42

HARPER, WILHELMINA, comp. For love of country; stories of young patriots; il. by Wilfred Jones. 257p $2 Dutton

(W) 42-17802

Nineteen stories of historic events in our history, in each of which a child played an important part. Age appeal twelve or over. Contents: A Christmas gift for the general, by J. C. Nolan; The three cornered-hat, by R. G. Carter; The swiftest nag in Albemarle, by C. C. Coblenz; The sampler, by Cornelia Meigs; For skylark and gypsy, by M. L. Hunt; The boy who voted for Abe Lincoln, by Milton Richards; The road to freedom, by E. H. Drake; Sallie, by Elsie Singmaster; Betty's ride, by H. S. Canby; Montgomery the loyalist, by C. C. Coblenz; Beneath the saddle, by R. G. Carter; Horses for the King, by Cornelia Meigs; Tobe the faithful, by Elizabeth Kilham; Riding for Paul Revere, by Gertrude Robinson; A message for Washington, by Eleanor Sickels; Betsy Dowdy's ride, by Ellis Credle; Carolyn trail, by Alexander Key; The garden Mercy planted, by C. S. Bailey; Riding Lucy Lee, by Elizabeth Coatsworth.

Booklist 39:16 S '42

"It was no easy task to collect nineteen American patriotic tales in which children take part, and if their standard of excellence is on the whole lower than that of her previous collections, this is due only to the material at her disposal. Stories of this kind, written for children's magazines to appear in months with patriotic holidays, seldom escape a perfunctory quality. Our history, too, is an affair of grown-ups, in which few children's names appear." M. L. Becker

Books p7 S 6 '42 280w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 24 '42 130w

"Well written stories by recognized authors." Maude Adams

+ Library J 67:687 Ag '42 70w

HARRAL, STEWART. Public relations for higher education. 292p il $3 Univ. of Okla. press

371.2 Publicity. Advertising—Schools, Colleges and universities—U.S. 42-17996

"Proposes to examine candidly the public-relations techniques now in operation, and to present workable plans and procedures that are vital to a wider public appreciation of the problems and the aspirations of institutions generally. More than 20 phases of public relations in higher education are covered, including the press, radio, exhibits, alumni activities, short courses, the role of administrators and faculty, pictorial publicity, extension programs, and the steps necessary to organize a public-relations program." School & Society

Booklist 39:115 D 1 '42

School & Society 56:56 Jl 11 '42 80w

HARRINGTON, JOSEPH. Scandal rag. 240p $2 Smith & Durrell

42-22994

"Recounting his adventures as a newspaper man in the first person, Peter J. Haller is one of those dyed-in-the-bottle cynics you read about but seldom meet. . . Evidently his only talent is in keyhole journalism, and 'Scandal Rag' describes his success in that field. Back in his home town after fifteen years of roving and hack writing, he gets out a paper of sensational headlines and scurrilous text." Books

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p16 Ag 23 '42 130w

"'Scandal Rag' is a glib story told with the professional smoothness which a reporter applies to a big news break just before deadline. It is entertaining, easy, reading. But you can't take stock in either the story or its characters. They are not believable." J. W. Riley

Boston Globe p17 S 2 '42 250w

Reviewed by Drake de Kay

N Y Times p22 S 13 '42 400w

HARRIS, CYRIL. One braver thing. 416p $2.75 Scribner

42-21301

At the close of the American Revolution there were thousands of English loyalists in America who were sent into exile. The Binneys, a New Jersey doctor and his four grown children were among the exiles. The story traces their long and difficult journey by ship to Nova Scotia, and the struggles of the two remaining members of the family to take up land and make a home there.

Booklist 39:48 O 15 '42

Reviewed by A. B. Tourtellot

Books p2 S 27 '42 800w

"Although the odds against this feat are growing heavier by the day, Cyril Harris has found a fresh and exciting piece of story material in the American Revolution. . . Cyril Harris, who is a Nova Scotian by birth, has told this story throughout in simple, factual, down-to-earth detail. He knows the country and circumstances faced by the loyalist refugees and writes about them without heroics, and almost as if he had been there himself. This is the most moving and durable quality of a novel which conceivably may disappoint readers who like their historical fiction splashed with more gore and gold lace. It makes, in addition, a heroic story." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p8 S 27 '42 850w

New Yorker 18:59 S 5 '42 120w

Wis Lib Bul 38:187 D '42

HARRIS, MRS FLORENCE LA GANKE, and RIDLER, DOROTHY ABIGAIL. Food 'n' fun for the invalid; Decorations by Frank Lieberman. 255p $2 Barrows

649.8 Cookery for the sick. Amusements. Diet in disease 42-18072

This book for the home nurse contains tables of foods for different types of diets (liquid, soft, convalescent), menus, and recipes. In addition special diets are given for the allergic, the overweight, and the diabetic. The last section is devoted to ways of entertaining the sick child or adult and includes games, mental tests, and gift suggestions. Index.

Booklist 39:4 S '42

Books p13 Jl 26 '42 150w

Reviewed by D. E. Shank

J Home Econ 34:743 D '42 230w

HARRIS, MRS LEILA (GOTT), and HARRIS, WALTER KILROY. Lost hole of Bingoola. 207p il $1.75 Bobbs

Children in Australia (W) 42-21761

A story of two boys, one white, one black, in the Australian bush. The white boy, Syd, saves the other boy's life after he has been ejected from his own tribe, and later the black boy, Binda, proves his own loyalty and devotion to Syd. Glossary.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p9 S 27 '42 300w

Cath World 156:383 D '42 50w

"Timely and authentic, with glossary that no doubt would be useful to many Americans in Australia. Well illustrated by Will Forrest. Ages twelve to fifteen." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 67:958 N 1 '42 110w

"This is a story tense not only with danger and adventure but with the more significant tension of conflicting loyalties in the simple, innately honorable mind of a native boy. It is one which will be especially interesting at this time for its graphic and fascinating account of life among the whites and the aboriginals of those strange vast spaces of Australia's interior." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p44 N 15 '42 300w

HARRIS, MURRAY GEORGE. Lifelines of victory. 160p $2 Putnam

940.531838 World war, 1939—Transportation 42-19534

"An analysis of the principles on which Allied strategy is of necessity based. The fallacy of the arguments of the advocates of action at any price is clearly shown. The only way the war can be lost, the author believes, is if a superficially informed public high-pressures politicians, who in their turn stampede the High Command, into adventures embarked upon, when and where communications cannot deliver a sufficient concentration of power." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 39:46 O 15 '42

"This timely and important book by the brother of Air Marshal Arthur T. Harris is more than a counterblast to the do-or-die adherents of 'an immediate offensive' strategy. It is a thoughtful and comprehensive study. . . . If there is any lack of balance and danger in this lucid and convincing book it is in the almost complete absence of the concept of the bitter fighting which will certainly be necessary for the final victory." H. A. De Weerd

HARRIS, M. G.—Continued
+ — Books p2 S 13 '42 1050w

Christian Science Monitor p10 D 19 '42 600w

"We have ultimate superiority in productive resources and in man-power, the author agrees; therefore, so long as we maintain our lines of communication, the odds are with us. That one believes to be true, and it would be conclusive if victory necessarily went by odds. But there are so many other relevant questions to which the author does not give convincing answers that the book fails to impress this reviewer—who does not himself take any part in the second-front-now campaign. As a brief study of the worldwide communication lines in our control it is interesting, but even here the absence of any quantitative estimates robs it of force." Ralph Bates

+ — Nation 155:242 S 19 '42 180w

"Marshals every hoary and petrified military axiom to prove that the only real danger to our cause is that public opinion might 'stampede' the High Command into an attack before we are completely and ideally prepared for it. In the best brass-hat tradition, he asks civilians only to be patient and to assume that the military knows its business."

— New Republic 107:357 S 21 '42 90w

"It is natural that in a war volume like the one here reviewed there should occur many place names. A few of these in the text, as well as in the index, one regrets to see misspelled. The addition of two or three sketch maps like the one opposite Page 6, to include other places mentioned in the text would make somewhat easier reading of this work, which is a valuable contribution to the understanding of this war." A. M. Nikolaieff
+ — N Y Times p22 S 27 '42 550w

"I was able to find only one fault with this useful book: Murray Harris, who is billed by his publishers as the British Air Marshal's brother and whose own work is his best introduction, subordinates his intimate knowledge of the Near East to the thesis of his book. This thesis he has put forward admirably 'strategy is the study of communication.' Harris now owes us a book on the Middle East. Until he gets around to writing it, his 'Life Lines of Victory,' a real contribution to our thinking on war, stands to his lasting credit." R. Strausz-Hupe

+ Sat R of Lit 25:7 S 26 '42 1000w

HARRIS, RUTH GREEN, and PICCOLI, GIROLAMO. Techniques of sculpture; a simple creative approach. 88p il $2.25 Harper

731 Sculpture—Technique (W) 42-6420

A book giving the basic principles of the sculptor's technique whether he is working with clay, wood or stone. The authors are respectively an art critic, and a sculptor and teacher of art. Index.

Booklist 38:305 Ap 15 '42

Bookmark 3:8 My '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:65 Ap '42

HARRIS, SEYMOUR EDWIN. Economics of social security; the relation of the American program to consumption, savings, output, and finance. 455p $5 McGraw

331.2544 Finance—U.S. Taxation—U.S. U.S.—Economic policy. Insurance, State and compulsory 41-18846

"This study might be termed an approach to some basic aspects and problems of the American social security program from the point of view of modern economic theory. The author is not interested in social security as an institution to improve the lot of its beneficiaries, but in its effects upon the volume and fluctuations of output and employment in the economy as a whole. It is a study addressed to the students of banking and monetary theory, fiscal policy, and economic fluctuations, at least as much as to people who are interested in social security for its own sake." Am Econ R

"This is a book which all those who have responsibility for formulating the social security legislation of the country should read. It is valuable also to all students of modern economic theory and of social insurance. It is an excellent illustration of the possibilities which theory affords for the sound solution of complicated economic problems." E. E. Witte

+ Am Econ R 32:189 Mr '42 1050w

"It is not without good reason that the author has dedicated his thoroughly well-grounded work to J. M. Heynes. In fact, the contributions of this outstanding English scholar are prerequisites to Harris' explanations, a large part of which will hardly be understandable to readers not adequately trained in mathematics." Alfred Manes

+ Ann Am Acad 221:235 My '42 340w

Booklist 38:125 D 15 '41

"The book's greatest value, is its careful, logical statement of these hypotheses. It thus provides a clear-cut demonstration of the pressing need for elementary, grass-root studies designed to provide factual information on which sound public policy can be formulated. Students of the economics of social security will find this summary of possible implications, opinions, and hypotheses well worth reading." Dale Yoder

+ J Pol Econ 50:462 Je '42 550w

HARSANYI, ZSOLT. Lover of life; tr. from the Hungarian by Paul Tabor, in collaboration with Willa and Edwin Muir. 678p $3 Putnam

Rubens, Sir Peter Paul—Fiction

(W) 42-6284

Long biographical novel picturing the life and times of the Flemish painter, Peter Paul Rubens. The time is from Rubens' thirteenth year, to his death in 1640.

Booklist 38:330 My 1 '42

"This long novel of Zsolt de Harsanyi will have little or no attraction for the student or the scholar: it is addressed frankly to the large uncritical public which likes its biographies to be big and bouncing. Everything required is here, what Rubens thought and said and did in his contacts with statesmen and rulers and prelates and his apprentices, his two wives and numerous offspring. Nothing very subtle about it, and occasional awkwardnesses. . . . Mr. de Harsanyi does contrive, nevertheless, to present a lively picture of Western Europe at the onset of the seventeenth century." Iris Barry

+ Books p8 Mr 29 '42 550w

"The author of 'The Star Gazer' is of course not unknown to the reading public. In that earlier novel, the writer dealt competently with the life of Galileo in the story form. His newer tale transcends his former achievement quite notably. The Hungarian author has managed not merely to make the figure of Pieter Paul Rubens an intensely living reality. He has done better. He has fetched to life also the whole period during which that famed Flemish artist labored." J. H. Powers

+ Boston Globe p17 Ap 8 '42 480w

"Harsanyi's detailed description of this dense political jungle and one great man's purposeful mission in its midst, is always authentic and often excellent. The chapters about Rubens' intimate life, especially those about his second marriage at the age of 50 to the 16-year old Helene Fourment, are not free of a certain sentimental touch, difficult to avoid in a work that tries to be a popular novel as well as a thorough biography. Books that combine both elements without running the risk of becoming somewhat superficial psychologically are rare indeed. Considering this particular problem and the extraordinary complexity of the subject, 'Lover of Life' is a remarkable book." Marianne Hauser

+ — N Y Times p6 Mr 29 '42 1200w

Pratt p12 O '42

"Long before the reader has turned the six hundredth page, he wonders why the author did not take a few liberties with historic fact. A Rubens without sensuous delight, without opulence of form and texture, is a Rubens in black-and-white, no Rubens at all." Oliver Larkin

Sat R of Lit 25:5 Mr 28 '42 270w

Time 39:104 Ap 13 '42 450w

HART, ALAN. Dr Finlay sees it through. 370p $2.50 Harper

42-15038

After several years of semi-retirement abroad, Dr Finlay, the middle-aged hero of this book, returned to find the small private hospital he had founded in ruins, his older colleagues in town inclined to greediness and even unethical behavior, the younger ones discouraged or rebellious. The story tells how Dr Finlay fights the battle for better conditions and finds new happiness for himself.

Booklist 39:11 S '42

"This novel holds your attention not because it is a careful and well informed chronicle of what are called social and economic problems but because it shows a professional fight with greater clarity than is often permitted the laity. Most doctors won't like it, even those who agree at heart with the author's diagnoses and prescriptions; they naturally dislike seeing white coats removed in public. Some of them, however, and certainly many of the much bigger group who are at once the laity and the patients will find here a briskly told story which is both enlightening and entertaining." Mary Ross

+ Books p10 My 31 '42 900w

"Sympathetic, excellent in many ways as the novel is, that part of the plot which concerns Dr. Finlay's discovery of the truth about his most important enemy seems far-fetched, and the last-page climax is too abrupt. But the book is an exceptionally interesting one, and, as might be expected from the author of 'The Undaunted,' it is full of people as real to us as those we meet every day, people in whose affairs we take a genuine interest." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p7 My 31 '42 750w

Wis Lib Bul 38:120 J1 '42

HART, ALBERT GAILORD, and ALLEN, EDWARD D. Paying for defense [prepared in collaboration with Mary Jean Bowman [and others] of the economics staff of Iowa state college. 275p $2.50 Blakiston

336.73 Finance—U.S. U.S.—Defenses. U.S.—Economic policy 41-15542

"Assisted by nine members of the economics staff of Iowa State College, the authors present a program for financing the defense effort. Their central thesis is that sound defense financing—that is, such as will distribute the burden fairly and also prevent inflation—rests on increasing income taxes—if necessary, by abolishing exemptions altogether. While they admit that this program must be supported by sound banking, price-control and labor policies, they have nothing to say about these matters." Christian Century

"Readers of the book will appreciate the clarity and brevity of the authors' exposition. They will also admire their courageous, and on the whole, cautious and helpful use of available statistical materials." B. F. Haley

Am Econ R 32:160 Mr '42 1200w

"While there is very little in this volume that is entirely new, there is much that is new to laymen, including most congressmen and some government officials. But it usually takes skillful presentation, a good deal of repetition, and time to educate and move policy-makers, legislators, and others to accept untried policies and practices. This is a good synthesis of various related proposals to achieve a definite purpose; the treatment is informing and thought-provoking. The conclusions are summarized so that an intelligent layman can understand what action is proposed, even if he does have to take many of the assumptions and statistical estimates and justifications on faith, possibly with some doubts mingled with his beliefs." R. G. Blakey

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:144 F '42 700w

"The book has been made obsolete to a very large extent by the enactment of the new revenue law [September 1941] and other developments which have taken place since that time. The book exemplifies the dangers to which authors expose themselves in expressing their discussions in terms of specific conditions of temporary nature instead of in more general terms. Despite the shortcomings indicated, the study is to be commended for the provocative character of its discussion. The proposals are set forth boldly, without hedging, and are supported with an array of impressive facts." Paul Studenski

+ — Ann Am Acad 220:208 Mr '42 950w

Christian Century 58:1084 S 3 '41 60w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:780 J1 '42 10w

"The economists who collaborated in this enterprise, have performed a great public service. The book presents in language which everyone can understand the reasoned opinions and conclusions of an able group of specialists, and formulates a war-finance program which articulates the best of current professional persuasions. . . . Critical comments on matters of detail should not be interpreted as qualifying my remarks. The authors have done an important job opportunely and have done it well." H. C. Simons

+ — Harvard Law R 55:888 Mr '42 1500w

"Professors Hart and Allen and their colleagues in the Economics Department of Iowa State College are to be congratulated for producing an exceptionally able and well-written analysis of the most immediately outstanding of contemporary economic problems." L. H. Seltzer

+ J Pol Econ 50:456 Je '42 800w

Reviewed by S. E. Harris

Pol Sci Q 57:607 D '42 550w

HART, ARCHIBALD, and LEJEUNE, FRANCIS ARNOLD. Latin key to better English. 226p $2 Dutton

422.4 English language—Etymology 42-20004

"A practical guide to more effective reading, writing and speaking of English for those who have never studied Latin as well as for those who did, but have forgotten it." (Subtitle) Twenty prefixes, fifty important Latin words, and one hundred and sixty additional words listed, with English meanings, derivatives, uses, etc. Index of English words.

Booklist 39:64 N 1 '42

"A pleasant unpedantic little book, meant to be read rather than pored over, and it does impart a goodly amount of useful and interesting information. . . . 'Basic Anglo-Latin' would seem to be the most practical, the most scholarly and esthetically the most pleasing interlingua." Albert Guerard

+ Books p26 N 29 '42 420w

"If you like words you will find this book good to explore within, and it is bound to improve the high school child's attitude toward Latin as well as his use of the English language."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 28 '42 230w

Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 28 '43 330w

HART, HENRY HERSCH, Venetian adventurer. 284p il maps $3.50 Stanford univ. press B or 92 Polo, Marco 42-5333

Biography of Marco Polo, the man, describing his life from boyhood to death, and filling in details not found in earlier books about him. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by L. C. Goodrich

Am Hist R 48:307 Ja '43 850w

"Mr. Hart has so excellently combined scholarship and vivid writing that the thirteenth century comes to lusty life under his touch. . .

HART, H. H.—Continued

Mr. Hart's book is the biography for which Marco Polo students and travel fans have been waiting. It is a superlative treatment of a difficult subject, done with authority and charm." Thomas Sugrue

+ Books p18 Ap 5 '42 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '42

Manchester Guardian p3 D 4 '42 200w

"'Venetian Adventurer' is the first book to offer a full and living re-creation of that legendary yet vitally real and important thirteenth-century hero, Marco Polo. And to appreciation of a work of notable scholarship must at once be added the happiest welcome for a piece of fascinating reading."

+ N Y Times p5 My 24 '42 500w

"Although it is now some six hundred and fifty years since a Venetian adventurer brought back to Europe the first good account of the Far East, and although a bibliography of the books about Marco Polo since that time would fill a longer volume than Dr. Hart's this is the first biography of the great traveller in English (and indeed, as far as I know in any language) which combines competent scholarship with the readability and picturesqueness which Polo's extraordinary story deserves. It is a short book, 'as readable as a novel'. . . and it is singularly lacking in pedantry or pretentiousness, but phrases which impress the casual reader only with their aptness or vividness, are likely to impress the scholar with the broad learning and patient research from which they have been coined." Garrett Mattingly

+ Sat R of Lit 25:9 Ap 18 '42 400w

HART, JAMES DAVID. The Oxford companion to American literature. 888p $5 (28s) Oxford 810.2 American literature—Dictionaries, indexes, etc. (W) 41-12647

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

Bookmark 3:3 Ja '42

Reviewed by B. M. Kelley

Cath World 154:625 F '42 380w

Pratt p18 F '42

"As far as an English reader is able to test it this book has proved infallible; it fairly bristles with unknown names as well as including all past and present American writers familiar to a European student of American literature. The synopses of novels and plays are well done, although they might occasionally be briefer; the critiques are, for the most part, sane, judicious and comprehensive."

+ Spec 168:518 My 29 '42 130w

"A check of entries with the Cambridge History of American Literature shows that a remarkably high proportion of the entries in that set are included and in addition many entries for authors, titles and movements of the present day. A comparison of the Oxford Companion to American Literature with Pierce, An Outline of Canadian Literature, shows the listings for major Canadian literature in the former volume to be incomplete. Although there are entries for such authors as Carman, Roberts, Halliburton and Leacock, there are none for Pickthall, Johnson, Le May, Garneau and Howe. There is a full discussion of the 'Star spangled banner' but no reference is made to the Canadian national song. On the whole, however, Canadian items have been included more generously than is usual in a work primarily of United States interest. . . It is recommended for general use."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 13:16 Ap '42 1100w

"The work should prove of great value to students and critics and of interest to the general reader."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p227 My 2 '42 210w

HART, WILLIAM JOHN. Stories of our national songs. 70p $1 Wilde

784.71 National songs, American 42-24377

"Brought together in this little volume are four of our great national songs [Star-spangled banner, America, America the beautiful, ful, Battle hymn of the Republic]. . . The plan of this book is to present the words of each song, and then follow the same with some authentic account of the circumstances under which it was written. Details have been gathered either from the authors, members of their family, intimate friends, or those who were well informed concerning the facts." Foreword

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 D 27 '42 100w

Churchman 156:16 N 15 '42 20w

Reviewed by S. J. Johnson

Library J 67:1069 D 1 '42 50w

HARTILL, PERCY, ed. Into the way of peace, by communicants of the English church. 192p $1.25 Fellowship of reconciliation, 2929 Broadway, New York [6s Clarke, J]

172.4 Peace. Christianity [A 41-4021]

"This book is written by eleven members of the Anglican Pacifist Fellowship. Several of the authors are clergymen. Those who are known in America are Canon Charles E. Raven, C. Paul Gliddon, J. Middleton Murry and Evelyn Underhill. Among the subjects discussed . . . are the scriptural basis of pacifism, the idea of the just war, the philosophy of Christian pacifism, the ecumenical contribution of pacifism, peace prayers, the church's duty and opportunity, pacifism and social reform." Christian Century

Christian Century 58:1513 D 3 '41 100w

"Whether or not you agree with the point of view expressed, this book will at least clarify and help you to understand the background and basis of Christian Pacifism." W. A. Lawrence

Churchman 156:16 S 1 '42 300w

HARTNEY, HAROLD EVANS. What the citizen should know about the air forces; il. by Alan Haemer. 226p $2.50 Norton

358.4 Aeronautics, Military (W) 42-11422

A survey of the air defenses of the United States in the army, navy, marine corps and the coast guard. Covers the organization of the various forces, the training of enlisted men and officers, as well as such subjects as aerial photography, gliding, parachutes and balloons. Index.

Booklist 38:342 My 15 '42

Bookmark 3:5 My '42

"It must regretfully be said that Colonel Hartney's account of the air forces is not up to the standard set by the rest of the series. There is a dogged plodding that leads to the goal of detailed accuracy but by-passing all paths of interest." P. J. Searles

— Books p11 My 17 '42 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:36 Jl '42

"Colonel Hartney in his book on the air forces occasionally lapses into some empiricisms and minor inaccuracies; the final chapters on air strategy and tactics and unity of command are by no means a satisfactory discussion of these broad subjects, and the writing is sometimes pedestrian. Nevertheless his book is an informative study." H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p13 My 17 '42 60w

New Yorker 18:71 My 12 '42 20w

Reviewed by J. I. Greene

Sat R of Lit 25:11 Jl 4 '42 160w

HARTWELL, DICKSON. Dogs against darkness; the story of the Seeing eye. 236p il $3 Dodd

636.74 Seeing eye, incorporated, Morristown, New Jersey. Blind. Dogs—Training (W) 42-21608

Popular story of the Seeing eye school at Morristown, New Jersey, where dogs are trained to be the eyes for their blind owners. Includes stories of the dogs, their trainers, and some of their masters. Photographs.

Booklist 39:28 O 1 '42

Reviewed by David Tilden
Books p20 O 18 '42 500w

"Mr. Hartwell tells his story simply. He never strains for the organ stops for effect but plays everything straight. If certain passages lump your throat the effect comes from the situation, not from literary trimming. The story of the Seeing Eye unfolds naturally. It is never maudlin, never theatrical. It is a neat job of reporting with the fascinating material always under control." Meyer Berger
+ N Y Times p22 O 18 '42 900w

HASEY, JOHN F. Yankee fighter; the story of an American in the Free French foreign legion. 293p il $2.50 Little

940.548173 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American (W) 42-18540

Young John Hasey was an American salesman for the Paris firm of Cartier when the war broke out. Unable to fight for France he joined an ambulance corps and later went to Finland. After France fell he joined the Free French forces, saw service in Africa and Syria, was decorated, wounded, and sent home, hoping to get into action again when he recovers. His book, combining personal autobiography and the record of his adventures, was written at his dictation by a Boston newspaper man.

Booklist 39:8 S '42

"'Yankee Fighter' is a remarkable book. It is remarkable because its undistinguished but workmanlike prose delineates an authentic hero, personable, modest and stubborn in his courage." J. T. Whitaker

+ Books p5 Ag 9 '42 1050w

"Lieut. Hasey's record is an absorbing one and it is superbly chronicled. The recital is made in the first person but the clear, lean prose and the unlabored style definitely reflect the Globe's own columnist, Joseph F. Dinneen, to whom Lieut. Hasey told his story. It has proved a fortuitous collaboration. But if the stylistic dress is distinctly Mr. Dinneen's, the interesting biographical material that provides the prelude to war and the subsequent adventures . . . is exclusively Lieut. Hasey's own kaleidoscopic adventure." Lafayette Marchand

+ Boston Globe p17 Ag 5 '42 500w

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 7 '42 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '42

"Fast-moving, honest account of widely publicized exploits. Straight personal adventure; very little background information." J. C. Shipman

Library J 67:680 Ag '42 80w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:895 O 15 '42 10w

"Hasey's vivid depiction of campaign conditions in theatres of war in which our own forces will soon be engaged gives this memoir a peculiar timeliness." Drake DeKay

+ N Y Times p8 Ag 16 '42 1000w

HASKELL, HENRY JOSEPH. This was Cicero; modern politics in a Roman toga. 419p il maps $3.50 Knopf

B or 92 Cicero, Marcus Tullius (W) 42-23710

A biography of the Roman essayist, orator, and politician, written chiefly from the point of view of an observer of modern politics. Mr Haskell is the author of The New Deal in Old Rome (Book Review Digest, 1939). Index.

"'This Was Cicero' is a difficult book to review in any reasonable space because it is a well packed book. Aside from Cicero it presents a whole gallery of arresting, frequently surprising, portraits—Pompey, Julius Caesar, Octavius, Antony, Marcus Brutus, Cato and especially Atticus are limned with extraordinary clarity and precision. Probably they are all over-simplified; but possibly there is more of the essential man in these sketches than one can find in long, labored and scholarly biographies. Let it be added hastily that this is not an intimation that Mr. Haskell is unscholarly." G. W. Johnson

+ Books p7 N 8 '42 1500w

"A more vivid portrait of the Roman orator and statesman than might be expected of figure so remote and so completely associated with study of classical Latin. Political intrigues, conspiracies, and aspirations of the period have been presented in so modern a dress that the biography might well be duplicated in our own times—of some conservative politician with a gift of oratory. Recommended for college libraries and for readers who like full-flavored biography in colloquial language." Walter Hausdorfer

+ Library J 67:907 O 15 '42 110w

"One could compare this book to a biography, say, of Milton written 1,500 years hence which failed to convey the outlook and language of Paradise Lost and the prose tracts but confined itself to Milton's activities in the Puritan cause. The result might be to inake future readers wonder why Milton had been so admired. But to catch exactly the intellectual and literary, as well as the political, temper of Cicero's life and age would be to write the final book on the subject, and Mr. Haskell's more limited book has its own high merits of vigor, freshness and contemporaneity." J. H. Finley, Jr.

+ N Y Times p8 Ja 17 '43 1050w

"Despite minor lapses, for the general intelligent reader this is likely to be the best life of Cicero past, present, or to come." A. R. Bellinger

+ Sat R of Lit 26:9 Ja 16 '43 450w

"H. J. Haskell, editor of the Kansas City Star, has made a hobby of Roman history. The first result of his interest was an entertaining account of 'The New Deal in Old Rome'. Now Mr Haskell offers a new book on one of the most interesting and important figures of the later Roman republic—Marcus Tullius Cicero. In 'This Was Cicero' curious readers can meet a Cicero whose life and personality are considerably more fascinating than grim high school tussles with the orations on Cataline ever brought to light."

+ Springfield Republican p10 N 5 '42 750w

HATCH, EDWARD WHITE. American wine cook book. 315p $2.50 Putnam

641.5 Cookery (wine) 41-26015

"The book begins with a chapter on wine, comparing American and foreign products, classifying them, and offering general suggestions for their use. Succeeding chapters concern soups, sauces, fish, meats, poultry and game, eggs and cheese, vegetables, salads and salad dressings, fruits, desserts, and dessert sauces." (J Home Econ) Glossary, Index.

Booklist 38:173 Ja 15 '42

J Home Econ 34:254 Ad '42 100w

HATCH, RICHARD WARREN. All aboard the Whale! il. by Marc Simont. 216p $2 Dodd 42-23669

Three young Americans, between the ages of nine and twelve, were in difficulties because of the destructive habits of their pets, a crow and a small black dog. The story describes their summer of work on a towing barge, where they earned money to pay for the damage caused by Joe Pye, the crow, and Feathers, the dog.

"We thoroughly enjoyed The Whale."

+ Cath World 156:377 D '42 120w

"Humor and good writing, from the author of The Curious Lobster, combined with his love for life on sea and shore make this an exceptionally jolly story."

+ Horn BK 19:36 Ja '43 100w

"Told with humor and liveliness that will appeal to nine- to twelve-year-old readers who want plenty of things to happen. Happy climax completes children's efforts. Make-up attractive. Black-and-white illustrations by Marc Simont in keeping with spirit of story." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 67:1106 D 15 '42 100w

HAUCK, MRS LOUISE (PLATT) (PETER ASH, LOUISE LONDON, pseud.). Gardenias for Sue. 236p $2 Dodd

42-6759

"On her first visit to Southern California Sue was enchanted by the lavish show of color that nature offers. A born gardener, she could hardly wait to get her pretty fingers loamy in a garden, and soon had the back yard a riot of blossom. Her second enthusiasm was a young designer in an aviation plant. . . They quarreled because his absorption in planes didn't harmonize with her passion for posies." Books

Booklist 38:331 My 1 '42

"'Gardenias for Sue' is not very deeply rooted in reality." Lisle Bell

Books p17 F 22 '42 150w

HAUGEN, EINAR INGVALD, ed. and tr. Voyages to Vinland; the first American saga; newly tr. and interpreted; il. by Frederick Trench Chapman. 188p $3.50 Knopf

973.13 America—Discovery and exploration 42-23982

A new rendering of the Icelandic sagas about the early voyages to America, so arranged as to give a continuous account. Contains several chapters on the historical evidence and background of the sagas. Index.

Booklist 39:181 Ja 1 '43

"Here is a book that tells the whole tale in a fresh and convincing manner. It makes fine reading and should be an excellent source of reference in a field that is considerably bedeviled by fantastic theories and emotional approaches. Professor Haugen is to be congratulated on a work that gives a purely reasonable account of ancient truths that are wrapped in some of the strangest developments and wildest imaginings of all history." Lincoln Colcord

+ Books p3 Ja 3 '43 1300w

"With his essays on all aspects of the Vinland story and the various controversies and problems it has raised, and with the vivid and pleasant rendering of the saga narrative Professor Haugen has turned out a delightful volume. To Americans of Scandinavian descent it is a veritable treasure. I hope it may be so to all Americans." Sigrid Undset

+ N Y Times p5 N 15 '42 1850w

"Let it be said by one who was brought up on the sagas in their original language, that this straightforward linguistic garb clothes them far better and comes much nearer to their spirit than the archaic and flowery style of many of the earlier translations. . . This makes very interesting reading and the cumulative historical evidence of the discovery is correspondingly impressive. . . In several well-written and most enlightening chapters Mr. Haugen deals with the background and the various phases of the Vinland voyages. His treatment is scholarly and bears ample testimony to his wide reading on the subject." Richard Beck

+ Sat R of Lit 26:14 Ja 2 '43 600w

Wis Lib Bul 38:185 D '42

HAUSER, CONRAD AUGUSTINE. Teaching religion in the public school. 300p $2 Round table

377.1 Religious education 42-18333

"A popularization of the author's earlier book, Latent Resources in Public Education. The author holds that the non-sectarian elements of religion should be taught in the public school, while the particular communal content of the major faiths should be taught in Sunday, weekday and vacation church schools. Education is a social function that should be carried on through community cooperation of the several social agencies especially the school, the church and the home." Christian Century

Christian Century 59:562 Ap 29 '42 70w

"This book will give parents, pastors, and educators a pain in the mind until they, too, face this opportunity to set free the youth of public schools from the prisons of secularism." William Grime

Churchman 156:31 Je 1 '42 210w

Pratt p9 D '42

School & Society 55:224 F 21 '42 50w

"Hauser's book is important in its presentation of a point of view, but it does not seem to the reviewer that it has critically penetrated the problems of 'teaching religion in the public school' nor that the author has given a 'non-sectarian' transcendence to his view of religion." E. J. Chave

+ School R 50:472 Je '42 650w

HAUSER, HEINRICH. The folding father; tr. by Barrows Mussey; pictures by Tibor Gergely. [24p] $1 Lothrop

42-7374

"A devoted father found himself far from home in a country he didn't like. There was a plane service, but the pilot said he was too heavy. So a Chinese laundryman suggested that he should be ironed out flat, folded and mailed home like a letter. No sooner said than done; papa arrived safe—but unrecognizable. The directions for restoring him were in Chinese. At the last moment he fell into the bathtub, began to expand just like a prune, and there he was, glad to be home again." (Books) "A reprint of p. 201-205 in Last port of call (New York, Stackpole sons, 1938), a translation by Barrows Mussey of the author's Notre Dame von den wogen." (Library of Congress card)

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 Mr 22 '42 150w

"Any child who has seen the fascinating unfolding of those Chinese paper flowers which bloom only in water will recognize at once the logic of this nonsense tale for 4 to 6 year olds. . . The burden of explanation of this original extravaganza falls largely upon the pictures. These are truly illustrative in the literal sense, clear-cut almost to the point of hardness, amusing without being too grotesque, and with the text make up a whole which children find highly diverting." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p8 My 24 '42 200w

HAUSER, HEINRICH. Time was; death of a Junker; tr. by Barrows Mussey. 308p $3 Reynal

B or 92 Germany—Nazi movement. Germany—Social life and customs 42-1519

The narrative of a German of the Junker class, describing his own life for some thirty years, and with it the downfall of his Germany. He begins with a description of his own family, which had ramifications all over Germany in 1911; he ends with his final departure from his homeland for America.

Booklist 38:208 F 15 '42

Bookmark 3:10 My '42

"A sound and dramatic book, which will reveal the weaknesses of its author clearly enough—he makes no attempt to conceal them—but which will help every one who reads it to understand Germany and Hitler." G. N. Shuster

+ Books p4 Ja 11 '42 1050w

Reviewed by J. F. Thorning

Cath World 154:756 Mr '42 600w

"Only one with the skill of an able novelist, and with the knowledge and the emotions of a participant in the events, could have written this moving record. Junkerism is, without question, dead past the possibility of resurrection. Like any other form of aristocratic landlordism, it was bad but not wholly bad. But the total effect of this story is to give substantial ground for believing that in this war the Allies may be saving Germany as well as saving themselves from that dreadful perversion of itself that Germany has become."

+ Christian Century 59:83 Ja 21 '42 280w

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 19 '42 50w

"Since Nora Wahn's splendid book 'Reaching for the Stars,' published about five years ago, no book has come out so able to give you a rather unbiased picture of how Germans lived through the days of the Kaiser, the Weimar Republic and the Third Reich. . . Such a colorful life, told by a real poet, makes fascinating reading. You will enjoy Hauser's book and, just passim, enlarge your understanding for German matters and perhaps realize for the first time how Hitler could bluff an intelligent nation into the desperate violence of his policy." Max Fischer

+ Commonweal 35:466 F 27 '42 390w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:781 J1 '42 30w

"The book differs enough from its class to warrant attention because it shows how the junkers, in attempting to thwart democracy in Germany, played into the hands of the Nazis. Recommended." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 67:40 Ja 1 '42 100w

"In spite of its hybrid character the book is a spellbinder. It is also a model of the art of translation." Betsy Hutchison

+ Nation 154:236 F 21 '42 550w

New Repub 106:153 F 2 '42 60w

"Heinrich Hauser is a novelist, and he writes like a novelist in collecting his own memories: not in orderly explication but as impressions, single instances, sometimes nightmares. . . It is this factor, of course, which gives the value of diagnosis and clinical charting to a personal chronicle whose incidents and characters have the appeal of a picaresque novel and whose notes on the passing of a caste combine legend with commentary." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p16 F 1 '42 1200w

"Not profound, but keen storytelling, with lots of vivid characterizations."

+ New Yorker 17:60 Ja 10 '42 90w

Pratt p5 D '42

"'Time Was' is an illuminating disclosure of the ideas and thoughts of a young German of the Junker class whose honesty cannot be doubted but whose sometimes rather confused and sentimental confessions fail to make his book very impressive—though it helps to convey the chaotic mind of pre-Hitler and Nazi Germany and especially of the younger generation." H. B. Kranz

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:6 Ja 10 '42 600w

Wis Lib Bul 38:30 F '42

HAVENS, RAYMOND DEXTER. The mind of a poet. 670p maps $5 Johns Hopkins press 821 Wordsworth, William 42-1043

"This volume has two parts. The first, a study of Wordsworth's thought, attempts to elucidate the many subtle qualities that make up the mind of the poet. The separate strands of matter-of-factness, powerful imagination, mysticism, and anti-rationalism which combine in Wordsworth's poetry are unraveled and followed to their sources. . . Upon the foundation of this wider investigation the author proceeds to a commentary upon 'The Prelude.' The volume therefore serves the double purpose of a general study of the development of a poet's mind and a specific examination of one of the most revealing products of that mind." N Y Times

"We must always be grateful to Mr. Havens for his forthright exploration of Wordsworth's mind. In a field where success can be only approximated he has, like Childe Roland, at least come within sight of the Dark Tower." W. H. Dunn

+ N Y Times p34 Mr 8 '42 550w

"The book may take rank as the most thorough examination of a very great poet's mind in existence. Its importance is unquestionable. But its arrangement makes it far from easy to read." G. M. Harper

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:9 F 21 '42 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p318 Je 27 '42 2800w

HAVIGHURST, WALTER. Long ships passing; the story of the Great Lakes; il. by John O'Hara Cosgrave, II. 291p $3 Macmillan

977 Great Lakes. Inland navigation—U.S. (W) 42-18481

History of the Great Lakes, their Indians, explorers, settlers and sailors from the days of Jean Nicolet, who in 1634 was the first white man to see the Straits of Mackinac, down to the present-day controversy over the St Lawrence Seaway. Bibliography, Index.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (12) N Y Times (16)

Reviewed by John Cournos

Atlantic 170:142 S '42 200w

Booklist 39:46 O 15 '42

Bookmark 4:10 N '42

"The best and most readable book on the five Lakes I have ever seen." Stewart Holbrook
+ Books p1 J1 19 '42 1500w

"Mr. Havighurst has written with power and imagination of the greatest northern waterway of our continent. Mr. Cosgrave's illustrations are in keeping with the epic quality of the narrative." R. M. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 8 '42 700w

"Unfortunately 'The Long Ships Passing' is queerly written, and to my taste badly written. It is repetitious, its style has not the slightest trace of subtlety, and the general effect is one of far greater poverty than is actually warranted. The pattern of every paragraph is substantially the same, and each seems infused with a certain sententiousness, as though the author constantly felt the need of being dramatic, which leaves the reader rather weary. Yet for all this one can forgive Mr. Havighurst if only because he has gathered together so much that is of sufficient inherent interest." H. L. Binsse

+ — Commonweal 36:404 Ag 14 '42 420w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 67:475 My 15 '42 80w

"A well proportioned and interesting book."

Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p5 J1 19 '42 1300w

New Yorker 18:56 J1 11 '42 70w

Wis Lib Bul 38:136 O '42

HAVILL, EDWARD. Tell it to the laughing stars. 325p $2.50 Harper

42-9121

Steve Lanely, a mediocre commercial artist, striving for a better life, leaves the city and with his wife Ellen settles in a one-room cabin on a ten-acre farm near a New York lake. The story tells of Steve's struggles during the year that follows to prove that he could do better things than he had done before.

"There is a kind of monotony to the book which, though it harmonizes with the monotony of nature itself, leaves the reader unsatisfied. Mr. Havill is like a talented singer who has not yet discovered the power of crescendo in the gamut of his voice." Virgilia Sapieha

Books p14 Ap 5 '42 600w

Reviewed by E. S. Brown

Library J 67:268 Mr 15 '42 50w

New Repub 106:774 Je 1 '42 50w

"'Tell It to the Laughing Stars' is a first novel of unusual fervor and sincerity, written with self-conscious beauty of style and with what sometimes strikes one as deliberate eccentricity of manner. It may not be autobiographical, and probably is not so in literal detail, but the reader will find himself automatically identifying the hero Steve Lanely with the author Edward Havill." Margaret Wallace

+ — N Y Times p6 Ap 5 '42 750w

HAWES, ELIZABETH. Why is a dress? who, what, when, where? 184p $2 Viking

646.01 Clothing and dress (W) 42-36035

The author of Fashion is Spinach (Book Review Digest, 1938) in this new book presents

HAWES, ELIZABETH—Continued
 advice to the would-be designer of clothes for American women. She considers that the best field is to be found in designing for ready-mades; she insists that usually the designer should know how clothes are made as well as designed; and she shows how head, hand and heart are all necessary to success.

Booklist 38:205 F 15 '42

"Dress designing is neither psychology nor sociology nor economics; not an art nor a craft nor a process of mass production. It is all of these things. Women who want to be designers, at a moment when the fashion world is in chaos, will do well to see how these forces work together in one of the most stimulating books on the subject."

+ Books p22 F 22 '42 240w

Pratt p14 D '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:43 Mr '42

HAWES, MRS MARION (EMSLEY). What to read on psychology. 36p pa 40c A.L.A.

016.15 Psychology—Bibliography 42-18943

"This reading guide is 'the joint product of the suggestions of many librarians and psychologists, given final form and adapted to readers' needs' by Mrs. Hawes, with the help of John Chancellor, adult education specialist, American Library Association. . . . Some one hundred and fifty books dealing with various aspects of psychology are listed. The guide is intended to be of use both to readers with little or no knowledge of the subject and to those who already have some familiarity with it. It is divided into three sections—'Everyday living and psychology,' 'The underlying principles,' and 'Other applications of psychology,' the last including business and industrial, social, child, educational, and abnormal psychology, psychological and vocational guidance, and psychological measurements. Each section contains an annotated list of books, graded according to difficulty, and a 'Minimum reading list' containing a selection of the books in the section, subdivided into lists for beginners and for more advanced readers." Library Q

"The excellent arrangement of the pamphlet and the helpful annotations should make the guide one of real value to readers and to librarians consulted about the choice of reading in this field."

+ Library Q 12:879 O '42 180w

School & Society 56:88 J1 25 '42 20w

HAWKINS, NANCY. Let's cook. 2 3p il $1.75 Knopf

641.5 Cookery (W) 42-18135

A cookbook designed especially for beginners, including young people, brides, and men who want to "mess around in the kitchen." Contains a section of general directions; one on cold dishes and one on cooked dishes; and a final one giving a diversity of menus for everyday or special occasions. Index.

Booklist 39:108 N 15 '42

Churchman 156:16 N 15 '42 10w

"Recommended for all libraries as useful tool in any kitchen." J. E. Wooster

+ Library J 67:796 S 15 '42 70w

"For those with culinary ambitions and no experience, who scarcely know a flour-sifter from a colander, here is a cookbook and a manual of kitchen practice to start them on a path of hospitable glory. Simplicity and clarity are its essential keystones." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 16 '42 270w

New Yorker 18:116 D 12 '42 20w

HAWKINS, QUAIL. Who wants an Apple; il, by Lolita and David Granahan. [39p] $1 Holiday

(W) 42-23954

Story of what the little girl, Apple, did on the day the family moved from the city to the country. For first readers.

Booklist 39:108 N 15 '42

"This is a good small story for a small and only child." M. L. Becker

+ Books p30 N 15 '42 150w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:886 O 15 '42 40w

"Nicest thing about this book is the sense of security it must give little girls who have seen their worlds turn upside down on moving day. . . . That first night when her favorite game was played, Apple 'knew that wherever Mother and Daddy were, that was home.'" Miriam Snow

+ Library J 67:911 O 15 '42 100w

HAWLEY, FLORENCE MAY. Tree-ring analysis and dating in the Mississippi drainage. 110p il maps pa $1.50 Univ. of Chicago press [9s Cambridge]

581.134 Trees

41-8896

"Here, at last, is the report on tree ring activities in the Mississippi Valley that many of us have so anxiously been awaiting. The problems we have hoped to have definite information on are about in the following order of importance: 1. Are growth records of trees in the Mississippi Drainage cross-datable? If they are, what species have been found to be so datable, what is their reliability of cross-dating, and what is their datability? 2. What areas, and what span of time, are now covered with tree-ring chronologies? 3. What progress has been made in deriving actual dates, particularly prehistoric? 4. What information is available through these studies as regards past climates? 5. What variations in technique and procedures have been found necessary to adapt Southwestern methods to Mississippi Drainage problems? In the course of this paper all these questions are discussed fully, and satisfying answers given, with the possible exception of the third." Am Anthropol

Reviewed by J. C. McGregor

Am Anthropol 44:482 J1 '42 2000w

"We may not agree with the methods used or the validity of the attempted interpretations . . . but at least in Miss Hawley's book we are given much explicit information without any attempt to minimize or conceal unfavorable though important details. . . . The book, as a whole, is rather a chronicle of detailed methods and personal activities; scientifically it does not seem to have advanced far toward the attainment of its objectives, either archeological or climatic. Too many botanical and meteorological assumptions remain to be cleared away." W. S. Glock

Geog R 32:517 J1 '42 480w

HAWTHORNE, HILDEGARDE (MRS J. M. OSKISON). Long adventure; the story of Winston Churchill. 346p il $2.50 Appleton-Century

B or 92 Churchill, Winston Leonard Spencer

(W) 42-15452

Biography of Winston Churchill written for junior and senior high school students. It covers the whole of his life, including the meeting of Churchill and Roosevelt in the Atlantic, and ends with the Prime minister's return to England after his American trip early in 1942.

Booklist 39:16 S '42

"Hildegard Hawthorne has written good biographies for young folks since she began by telling her famous grandfather's story in 'Romantic Rebel.' But this story of Winston Churchill breaks away from them, leaps out of the category of children's books, and stands as a book for any age young at heart, about a man who always will be so. It should be compared, not with juveniles on its subject, but with the field at large—its chief difference from Guedalla's, for instance, being that it never pulls its punches." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Je 28 '42 430w

Cath World 156:382 D '42 110w

"A warm and skillful biography for young readers."

+ Churchman 156:16 N 15 '42 10w

"The casual young reader will find this biography too long for keen appeal. High school students looking for historical detail concerning Churchill will find it here. The author's reporting on the current scene makes the book a useful addition for libraries' war-time collections." I. S.

+ N Y Times p30 N 15 '42 160w

HAWTHORNE, HILDEGARDE (MRS. J. M. OSKISON). Ox-team miracle; the story of Alexander Majors; decorations by James MacDonald. 236p $2 Longmans

B or 92 Majors, Alexander. West—History (W) 42-23536

Biography in story form, in which Alexander Majors, Pony express rider, freighter on the Sante Fe trail, and Indian fighter is the hero. For older boys.

Christian Century 59:1360 N '42 40w

"A valuable addition to the literature dealing with the expansion of our country to the West."

+ Social Studies 34:48 Ja '43 50w

"This is, of course, biography, but written so vividly and packed so full of incident and action that it is fascinating to 10-14 year-olds."

+ Springfield Republican p7e Ja 3 '43 110w

HAWTHORNE, KENNETH CHARLES. How to get ahead in a defense plant. 270p il $2.50 Crowell

621.7 Manufactures. Gages (W) 42-25350

"A layman's text on the use of gages, calipers, micrometers, blueprints, and simple mathematics, on the composition and use of metallic compounds, metallic coatings, wood, and plastics. It covers the common principles in daily use in industry, and will be useful to the inexperienced adult or young person preparing for a defense job." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 39:96 N 15 '42

"All this is given in the clear and simple style of one who knows his subject fully and also is evidently a good teacher. It should fully meet the aim expressed in the title." James Stokley

+ Books p11 D 20 '42 100w

Wis Lib Bul 38:182 D '42

HAWTHORNE, NATHANIEL. English notebooks; based upon the original mss. in the Pierpont Morgan lib. and ed. by Randall Stewart; pub. with the cooperation of Brown University. 667p $6 Modern lang. assn. [27s Oxford]

914.2 England—Description and travel 41-21963

"From 1853 to 1857, when Nathaniel Hawthorne was United States consul at Liverpool, he kept a voluminous journal. This record, comprising more than 300,000 words, he did not think it fitting to publish during his lifetime. . . In 1870 Mrs. Hawthorne published portions of the journal. . . As a matter of fact Mrs. Hawthorne did what many Victorian editors felt justified in doing; she carefully ironed out everything that seemed undignified in the style, every suspicion of triviality or indelicacy. . . At the present late date there can certainly be no objection to having the notebooks printed as Hawthorne wrote them, and there is much to be said in favor of doing so. This large task has been performed by Randall Stewart, professor of English in Brown University." Christian Science Monitor

"In view of the publication of the Hawthorne journals as long ago as 1870, it seems naive in a reviewer to be hearty in his recommendation of them, naive and gratuitous in a well-read world. But after all there is such a thing as rediscovery, and this complete edition of the text, with learned commentary inconspicuously displayed, will cause many to take up the journals with fresh understanding and lead others to them for a first delighted reading." L. C. Wroth

+ Books p10 JI 19 '42 650w

"Aside from the truly good reading to be found in Hawthorne's hot-from-the-griddle comments on England and the English people, interest attaches to them for the better understanding they give of the writer. His wife tried to make the notebooks convey a picture of a grave, sober, kind-spoken man. His journal as he really wrote it shows him livelier, more virile, caustic, and worldly wise, and much less the dreamer and recluse that tradition has painted him."

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 17 '42 650w

"One may hesitate to accept Mr. Stewart's opinion that this is perhaps the 'richest' book ever written by an American about England, but certainly it is one of the fullest and most interesting. Though giving the most nearly complete text possible, by restoring omitted personal names and by providing informative notes, Mr. Stewart has contributed considerably to that interest." Townsend Scudder

+ New Eng Q 15:166 Mr '42 490w

"Curiously enough, it makes Sophia's husband a bigger man, a more human being, even more approachable. . . and that would have surprised her gentle soul. Mr. Stewart has swept away the cobwebs of niceties and in so doing has revealed Hawthorne as a nicer fellow than most people have imagined. It is not that there was not a stark side to him; there was, but the sharp granite corners are smoothed, even rounded, and we see him in a more fleshly aspect, so to speak, and not as a heavy-mustached, full-haired, two-dimensional descendant of that Judge Hawthorne who was death on Salem witches. Mr. Stewart has done a good job." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p16 Mr 22 '42 900w

HAYAKAWA, SAMUEL ICHIYE. Language in action. 345p il $2; school ed $1.25 Harcourt 422 English language—Semantics (W) 41-8690

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"When a literary editor reads a book twice before reviewing it, that's news. But this one was worth it. It is, indeed, not a book merely to read but one to work through carefully, point by point, analyzing its illustrations, studying the questions that are raised at the end of many of the chapters, and applying the critical principles to one's own mental and verbal processes. Of course the reader does not have to do all that. He can read its 340 pages in one long sitting and have a thoroughly good time with it. But if he wants to learn how to tell the truth and how to tell a lie (from each other), it will pay him to proceed more deliberately." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 59:218 F 18 '42 850w

"A relatively independent account of the uses and misuses of language. There is much less new in all this semantic sophistication than the sophisticates seem to think—especially less to readers of Plato and Locke. Driven to the attempt by practical needs, as were both Plato and Locke, Hayakawa has done a good job of putting into the idiom of the day (it is a Book-of-the-Month selection) certain counsels of clarity and useful warnings to the unwary against linguistic indiscretion. He seems to me to avoid the narrowness of Stuart Chase's Tyranny of Words." T. V. S.

+ Ethics 52:248 Ja '42 240w

Pratt p16 O '42

"A valuable book for those who want to speak accurately and read intelligently."

+ Social Studies 33:96 F '42 20w

Wis Lib Bul 38:11 Ja '42

Reviewed by J. C. Pope

Yale R n s 31:829 summer '42 600w

HAYCOX, ERNEST. Alder Gulch. 303p $2 Little 42-7196

Western story.

Booklist 38:310 Ap 15 '42

"You're not likely to find a better Western story at the moment than this latest by the author of 'Rim of the Desert,' 'Saddle and Ride' and so forth. . . The tale may strike you as a trifle sober-sided at times, but that's the idea—impressive romantic narrative without much comic relief." Will Cuppy

HAYCOX, ERNEST—Continued
+ Books p12 Mr 29 '42 130w

HAYCRAFT, HOWARD, ed. Crime club encore. 4v in 1 $2 Doubleday

(W) 42-25189

Omnibus volume containing four full-length novels of detection. Contents: Verdict of Twelve, by Raymond Postgate; Keep Murder Quiet, by Selwyn Jepson; Warrent for X, by Philip MacDonald; The Case of the Late Pig, by Margery Allingham.

"A bargain for quantity and quality—murder from the right side of the tracks." Will Cuppy

+ Books p26 N 1 '42 400w

"These four novels are among those which Mr. Haycraft considers worthy of a longer life-in-print than is usually accorded to detective stories. This reviewer, for one, thinks Mr. Haycraft is right." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 N 15 '42 140w

"The best detective omnibus to date."

+ New Yorker 18:84 N 7 '42 50w

HAYCRAFT, HOWARD. Murder for pleasure; the life and times of the detective story. 409p $3 Appleton-Century [10s 6d Davies]

809.3 Fiction—History and criticism. Detective stories (books about) (W) 41-16907

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

Bookmark 3:8 Ja '42

"Mr. Haycraft has made a workmanlike job of his task, he seems to have read everything and forgotten little; his taste is good, and he writes most satisfying praise of 'Trent's Last Case' and 'The Moonstone.' . . Mr. Haycraft communicates a vast amount of useful information about his subject, and my only complaint is that he uses such uncouth words as 'detective, determinative, solvability, and auctorial.'" Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 19 '42 180w

"A history of the detective story that is at once scholarly and entertaining. Here we read of many aspects of the craft, and of detective writers and their tales from Poe to modern times. The work is one which will be of interest to all concerned with books and trends in reading, whether they are detective 'fans' or not."

+ Library R pxvi autumn '42 100w

"The detective story is no light matter, and now in Murder for Pleasure it has found its serious American historian. Serious indeed, for Mr. Haycraft can exhibit the closest bibliographical research into the first printings of Poe, can pass under analytic review hundreds of novels over a century, can describe the habits and vanities of authors (with intimate revelations), trace fashions in themes, and uncover the economics and rules of the game. But not too serious, for Mr. Haycraft has often a good ironical turn of phrase and a sharp critical sense; he is not easily taken in. It is a book the story-writer as well as the 'fan' can profit from." A. P. W.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 12 '42 230w

"Altogether, Mr. Haycraft has written a penetrating, well-informed book, a book which is rare in that it is both immensely readable and invaluable for reference. A remarkable book altogether. And yet, even another addict cannot help feeling that one of the most remarkable things about it is the enormous number of detective stories Mr. Haycraft has managed to read and still keep his passion for them." George Stevens

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 O 18 '41 2100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p381 Ag 1 '42 1500w

Wis Lib Bul 38:12 Ja '42

HAYDEN, JOSEPH RALSTON. The Philippines; a study in national development. 934p 11 maps $9 Macmillan

991.4 Philippine Islands—Politics and government. Philippine Islands—Social conditions. Philippine Islands—Foreign relations (W) 42-2760

"As its subtitle indicates, this book is a study of the development of a nation in the Philippine Islands. . . In such a study American policy and administration in the Philippines have necessarily been examined. So have the effects which the colonial status has had upon the Islands and their people. . . This book has been written primarily from historical sources, primary and secondary, supplemented by a varied personal experience with the Philippines which covers a period of twenty years. . . Of unpublished sources the author has had access to a wide variety, both official and unofficial. A part of this material is in the 'Hayden Collection' in the possession of the author. Included in this collection are contemporary notes of field studies of Philippine institutions made over a long period of years, and the documentary material which was collected by Colonel Carmi A. Thompson." (Pref) Index.

"It is an outstanding contribution to the literature on the country, and the author's knowledge is illumined by wisdom and sympathetic understanding." Catherine Porter

+ Am Econ R 32:590 S '42 1350w

"For the time being, at any rate, this magnum opus in the field of political science takes its place as the most up-to-date, scholarly, and most nearly definitive study of the Philippine government and people in print. It will remain for an indefinite time to come a principal source for all students of the subject. The fruit of some twenty years' scholarly labor, it is based upon personal, firsthand observations and study as well as exhaustive academic research." A. W. Griswold

+ Am Hist R 48:118 O '42 500w

"He who would understand why the Filipinos are fighting so efficiently with and for the democracies, and are so unitedly against the Japanese, in striking contrast with the other peoples of Malaysia and India, will find the answers thoroughly documented and interestingly presented without equivocation, in this magnum opus by Professor Hayden." O. G. Jones

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:562 Je '42 1250w

Reviewed by L. A. Mills

Ann Am Acad 222:213 Jl '42 450w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Atlantic Mr '42 200w

Booklist 38:231 Mr 1 '42

Bookmark 3:11 Mr '42

"Only in a temporary sense is the book past history. The institutions, trends and characteristics described are but dormant, not extinct. For this reason the volume is of value as a guide indicating the probable future path of a nation when the Japanese blight has been removed. One conclusion appears justified. After the heroic struggle now going on, with Filipino and American fighting and dying side by side, there can never be a complete separation of the two nations. An absolutely independent Philippines, yes, without question, but one bearing the relation of brother to brother with the United States, a relation of two equally independent comrades filled with admiration and affection for each other." P. J. Searles

+ Books p5 F 8 '42 1200w

"This rounded-out and thorough-going study, with methodic attention to details and elaborate documentation, presents a summary description of the history, development and present status of the Philippines in a fashion highly creditable to its author and richly informative to its readers."

+ Cath World 156:126 O '42 230w

"Two decades of preparation have gone into the writing of this book, which will immediately be recognized as meriting a place among the few indispensable studies in its field. Its greatness is demonstrated by the fact that a situation which must certainly have been beyond the expectation of the author has developed since the writing of the book was completed and instead of such an event overturning the value of his contribution, it enhances it." H. E. Fey

+ Christian Century 59:186 F 11 '42 800w
Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '42

Reviewed by Alvin Adey
Current Hist 3:71 S '42 1200w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:582 Ap '42 60w

Reviewed by R. S. Alvarez
Library J 66:1046 D 1 '41 180w
Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 29 '42 230w

"This 'Study in National Development' ought to be required reading for the kind of citizenship that must be developed not only in the Philippines but also, and perhaps more urgently, in the United States. The Japanese, too, might well take a lesson from these pages. For an understanding of the progress of the Philippines and of America's share and responsibility therein, no better guide could be found than Professor Hayden." Catherine Porter

+ Nation 154:197 F 14 '42 800w

Reviewed by W. C. Rivers
New Repub 106:403 Mr 23 '42 950w

"This book will not appeal to general readers who are impatient of 'dry' facts. For those who wish to think intelligently of the Pacific problem, and who are willing to take some pains to that end, it will be invaluable. It would be even more worth while if Dr. Hayden had found space to draw more fully on his wealth of information about the Filipino people themselves. He gives us no traveler's picture of the country and only a sketchy account of how the masses of the people live." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p3 F 8 '42 1500w

"Readable, exhaustively documented, and evidently definitive."

+ New Yorker 17:62 F 7 '42 90w

Reviewed by K. J. Pelzer
Pacific Affairs 15:230 Je '42 1050w
Pratt p14 O '42

"A weighty tome, packed with invaluable information, and written by a man who has been intimately connected with the University of the Philippines for nineteen years, comes to the reading public at a most crucial moment. When people literally hold their breath for the daily news from Luzon, this book provides the detailed background, vital to an understanding of these islands."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:3 F '42 420w

Reviewed by E. O. Hauser
Survey G 31:256 My '42 160w
Wis Lib Bul 33:45 Mr '42

HAYEK, FRIEDRICH AUGUST VON. The pure theory of capital. 454p $3.50 (21s) Macmillan

330.1 Capital A 41-2540

"The aim of this book is to describe the role of capital in a dynamic, capitalist economy, on the basis of the concepts which the Austrian school has developed for its purpose, viz., 'stages of production' and 'period of production.'" Ann Am Acad

"The reviewer has read the book with mixed feelings; admiration for the thoroughness and the acumen of the analysis was mingled with regret that Hayek has not liberated himself completely from the shackles of an approach which, historically important as it was, today should be reduced to its proper place, viz., to represent one element only in the theory of general equilibrium, short-run and long-run, static and dynamic." Hans Neisser

+ Ann Am Acad 219:198 Ja '42 1050w
Economist 140:276 Mr 1 '41 240w

"In spite of the fact that the work has the appearance of a complete and formal treatise on capital, it seems to the reviewer to lack a certain unity. Much of the analysis is conducted on a high level of abstraction and according to assumptions which are very remote from reality. . . This book has many illuminating phrases and penetrating criticisms. It is an important milestone in Dr. Hayek's personal development. But it is not yet the 'Pure Theory of Capital.'" K. E. Boulding

+ J Pol Econ 50:130 F '42 650w

Manchester Guardian p7 F 7 '41 220w
Times [London] Lit Sup p142 Mr 22 '41 650w

HAYES, CARLTON JOSEPH HUNTLEY. Generation of materialism, 1871-1900 [with 62 il. drawn from unusual sources and specially chosen by the author]. (Rise of modern Europe) 390p maps $4; school ed $3 Harper
940.28 Europe—History. Europe—Politics (W) 41-22911

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"This stimulating volume is 'living history', written by a man who has keenly observed and sincerely interpreted his age. Many persons will disagree with the author's point of view. Others, however, will accept some of the criticism heaped upon the heads of sectarian liberals. At the same time they will maintain that, like the church and Marxian socialism, these liberals were working to reach a Utopia but failed largely because of the weaknesses and limitations of man." F. C. Palm

+ Am Hist R 47:852 Jl '42 700w

"A volume which will certainly rank with the best ones by its unusual ability of synthesizing the events and trends of a complex period, its rare charm of style, and its catholic width of understanding and of gracious tolerance." Hans Kohn

+ Ann Am Acad 220:236 Mr '42 900w

"This book is the mature fruit of Professor Hayes's rich mind and scholarship." Francis Downing

+ Commonweal 35:515 Mr 13 '42 900w

"Since the work is an essay in historical interpretation . . . the main facts about each important event and development, as sifted out after an immense amount of research, are disposed of in brief summaries at the appropriate point. Since, too, the purpose is to bring together all the many social, economic, religious, scientific and artistic as well as the political and military developments, the problem of picturing the trend of the age as a whole has bristled with the usual perplexities of reconciling the demands of chronological and topical arrangement. But these difficulties have been overcome, and being written in a style that is clear and unpretentious, though sprinkled with touches of irony and sarcasm, the volume is thoroughly readable." Alvin Adey

+ Current Hist 2:61 Mr '42 800w

Reviewed by Lewis Corey
Nation 155:136 Ag 15 '42 950w
Pratt p14 O '42

Reviewed by R. A. Mackie
School & Society 56:359 O 17 '42 750w

"This book is important in historiography, for it presents a successful attempt to analyse a period which has hitherto admitted chiefly of description. The book is also important to the layman who desires to understand contemporary life." Francis Williamson

+ Survey G 31:88 F '42 700w

Wis Lib Bul 38:29 F '42

HAYES, CHARLES EDWARD. Four winds. 379p $2.75 Macmillan

42-25513

Northeastern Kansas is the scene of this story of a poverty-stricken farmer and his family in the years before the present war. It portrays the steady deterioration of the Hardin family, as they lose their home, their live stock, and their tools; as the children leave home, and the parents grow old and hopeless. The narrator is Gene, the only steady son, who thinks back on those hard days, while he works in California.

HAYES, C. E.—Continued

"Hayes succeeds notably in capturing the feeling of the lad who is telling the story of his unfortunate family. There is plenty of drama in the book. . . . But seen through the boy's eyes it is a series of incidents which are unusual but not too exciting. It is this understatement, this acceptance of helplessness and defeat which give the book its distinctive flavor." Rose Feld

+ Books p12 N 29 '42 650w

"'The Four Winds' is as drab as it is moving. Comparison with 'The Grapes of Wrath' is inevitable. But Mr. Hayes's viewpoint is even more grim than Mr. Steinbeck's; unlike 'The Grapes of Wrath,' this novel offers no sturdy faith to lift the reader, no courage to make him prouder of his American heritage. For Mr. Hayes finds only slow ruin in the picture he is drawing." William Du Bois

N Y Times p6 N 29 '42 850w

"By using young Gene as narrator the author is able to temper considerably the hard and angry pessimism which otherwise would have rendered the yarn too unpleasant. Although naive and pathetically ignorant, Gene is sensitive and imaginative, and when this Faulknerian narrative passes through the sieve of his kindness and affectionate nature, it touches our emotions, not merely our nervous system." R. A. Cordell

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:21 D 19 '42 380w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 13 '42 360w

HAYES, JAMES M., ed. In praise of nuns; an anthology of verse. 224p $2 Dutton

821.08 English poetry—Collections. American poetry—Collections. Nuns—Poetry 42-19100

An anthology of poems by both Catholics and non-Catholics. Among the poets included are: Alice Meynell, Owen Meredith, Cardinal Newman; Ernest Dowson; Christina Rossetti, Coventry Patmore, Sister M. Madeleva.

"There is much fine gold in this attractive volume, and every poetry lover, whatever his creed, who has been stirred to admiration by the courage and virtue of nuns (and who has not?) will be happy to find such glowing tributes paid them as often in his heart he has silently offered." J. J. Reilly

+ Cath World 156:627 F '43 430w

"Considered from the point of utility, this volume is a reasonably successful attempt to gather between covers the best and sincerest praise (in poetry) of our Catholic sisterhood. There are many who will welcome the book, both as filling their own desires for something along these lines, and as making a creditable gift-volume for some friend in the convent. . . . Considered poetically, the book is a disappointment. Out of 135 pieces, hardly more than 30 meet the requirements of good poetry. . . . However, as indicated, the book fills a demand; to those who like religious verse that is clear, honest, and always elevated, and are willing to look elsewhere for the sterner examples of pure poetry, this anthology will prove pleasant and inspiring reading." John Duffy

+ — Commonweal 37:100 N 13 '42 280w

Springf'd Republican p10 O 29 '42 280w

HAYES, LAURENCE JOHN WESLEY. Negro federal government worker; a study of his classification status in the District of Columbia, 1883-1938. 156p pa $1 Howard univ. Graduate school

325.26 Negroes—Employment. U.S.—Officials and employees 42-10174

"Discrimination against Negro workers is characteristic of the federal service, with the result that few Negroes are found in the classified service outside of custodial and sub-clerical positions. That is the conclusion reached by [the author] after he had surveyed the classification status of Negroes in government departments and agencies at Washington. [He] contends that existing civil service regulations provide too many opportunities for racial discrimination. Since the book was written, the use of photographs on civil service applications has been discontinued, and the President has directed federal departments and agencies to refrain from discriminating against Negroes. But Mr. Hayes would go further. He would have the rule of three changed to a rule of one; he would have laws and regulations to prohibit discrimination; and he would have certain high administrative positions reserved for Negroes." Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by Hylan Lewis

Am J Soc 47:1007 My '42 200w

Reviewed by E. O. Stene

Am Pol Sci R 36:169 F '42 220w

"This is a useful and enlightening compilation of data bearing on a neglected area of governmental labor policy." S. D. Spero

+ Ann Am Acad 220:251 Mr '42 500w

HAYNES, WILLIAMS. This chemical age; the miracle of man-made materials. 412p il $3.50 Knopf

660 Chemistry, Technical (W) 42-5319

Studies on the historical development and present status of the chemical industries, written for the layman. "The stories of sulfonamide derivatives, of the American monopoly of wood naval stores, and the Japanese monopoly of the camphor trade are told. Perhaps the pièce de resistance of the book lies in the three chapters devoted to rubber, in its raw state, its vulcanization—an American contribution—latex, and the already well-organized industry of synthetic rubber, made from butadiene, that has such great possibilities. How the petroleum refinery has changed from a simple distilling operation into an organic chemical plant; how mannitol, sorbitol, and glycerin are made from American farm products for a variety of uses; how paper came from cellulose, rayon from wood pulp; how nylon was developed; what a boon the plastic age will be—these subjects are of close interest to us all." (Scientific Bk Club R)

Booklist 38:343 My 15 '42

Bookmark 3:7 Mr '42

Reviewed by G. W. Gray

Books p22 Mr 1 '42 800w

"The occurrence of a number of mistakes that can be corrected in the second edition does not detract seriously from the value of the book. The author has given us a breezy, interesting, and essentially correct account of the more important achievements of chemists, without which our daily life would be far different from what it is. The lay reader and many chemists can profit by reading it." C. E. Waters

+ — Chem & Eng N 20:483 Ap 10 '42 700w

"A truly fascinating book about the most modern chemical developments has at last been written in a way that almost anyone can understand and appreciate. The author's lively, sprightly style, which sometimes used to irritate his less facile friends when he roasted them on the 'We' page of Chemical Industries, now comes into good stead as he spins stories of subjects the layman might otherwise find dull, heavy and uninteresting. Always, too, there is evidence of careful research and uncanny ability to draw on the widest possible sources of historic as well as current information."

+ Chem & Met Eng 49:209 My '42 360w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '42

"Technical facts and anecdotes from the lives of eminent chemists are skillfully blended to make instructive and fascinating reading. A bibliography and a glossary are appended. Recommended." H. A. Von Urff

+ Library J 67:40 Ja 1 '42 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:22 Ap '42

Pratt p7 D '42

"'This Chemical Age' is an excellent successor to Slosson's 'Creative Chemistry' written in 1920 and still first-rate reading. Haynes's book when read in conjunction with Slosson's will show even more clearly the significant chemical revolution which has been taking place during the peace between the two World Wars." Bernard Jaffe

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 F 21 '42 950w

"An unusually readable and illuminating book that contains the latest information on almost everything from 'sawdust to stardust.'"

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:2 F '42 450w

HAYNES, WILLIAMS, and HAUSER, ERNST ALFRED. Rationed rubber and what to do about it. 181p $1.75 Knopf

678 Rubber (W) 42-16605

Study of the rubber shortage in the United States in which history, present needs, chances for substitutes, reclaimed rubber, and synthetics are considered. Of the authors the first has been for twenty years publisher of Chemical Industries and an authority on making chemical synthetics. Mr. Hauser is assistant professor of chemical engineering at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and is the inventor of the Revertex process.

Booklist 38:436 JI 15 '42

Bookmark 4:7 N '42

"The book is entertainingly written for the general public and not for the rubber chemist." J. T. Blake

+ Chem & Eng N 20:1543 N 25 '42 230w

"The great value of this little book lies in the way the authors have brought together so much information on rubber and presented it so interestingly and in such brief fashion. It will provide a lot of good material for discussions and arguments this summer and next winter when people's patience as well as their tires have been worn pretty thin."

+ Chem & Met Eng 49:171 Ag '42 350w

Reviewed by R. M. Hunter

New Repub 107:93 JI 20 '42 1100w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:44 JI '42

"This [is a] vitally informative book."

+ N Y Times p9 JI 5 '42 350w

"Good material, though rather hastily done." New Yorker 18:62 Je 27 '42 80w

"In the midst of the confusion concerning the complicated problem of rubber supplies for military and civilian uses in this country, this small volume comes as a beam of brilliant light on a dark night. If it does no more than drive home the dire seriousness of the current situation it will have accomplished a most desirable service. But it does far more than that, for it contains all the factual information concerning all kinds of natural and synthetic rubber that one needs as a basis for formulating an intelligent policy of immediate action to alleviate the situation."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:2 Ag '42 210w

HAYS, ARTHUR GARFIELD. City lawyer; the autobiography of a law practice. 482p il $3 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Lawyers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 42-17237

Autobiography of a New York "liberal" lawyer best known, perhaps, for his connections with the Civil Liberties Union. Index.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (5) N Y Times (4) W (1)

"I am happy to say . . . 'this book begins, and Arthur Hays has good reason. He has had a good time practicing law in the City. We share it in this 'autobiography of a law practice'—almost all of it, except the good fees he earned from the good time he had. The cause of both is plain to read. Arthur Hays likes people. He is shrewd and witty. He is persistent. He puts on no side. He has few prejudices, but they also make this a good book." C. P. Curtis, Jr.

+ Atlantic 170:98 Ag '42 650w

Booklist 39:31 O 1 '42

Bookmark 4:14 N '42

"This book is better than a success story—it is an adventure story, candid and lively and refreshing. Many of the public events with which Art Hays has been associated are of political or social importance, and the book would be interesting and valuable on their account." Floyd Dell

+ Books p5 JI 12 '42 1100w

"It is all interesting and much of it is vivid, but it is not altogether easy reading."

Boston Globe p19 Ag 10 '42 260w

"Altogether this is a book that no candidate for the Bar should leave unread, for these are the words of a patriot, an American most unusually devoted to the principles which underlie democracy and freedom everywhere." O. G. Villard

+ Harvard Law R 56:333 O '42 1650w

"Somewhat conceited autobiography of law practice of liberal, dissenting New York lawyer. . . Of interest to large libraries, to lawyers, and occasional reader. An opposite to Country Lawyer." H. A. Wooster

Library J 67:475 My 15 '42 70w

"The layman may find Mr. Hays's book rather technical in spots, but in most instances the material is so interesting, and is presented so vividly, that the legal phraseology is forgivable. 'City Lawyer' may not be Mr. Hays's most important book, but it is by far the most readable." George Joel

Nation 155:77 JI 25 '42 800w

"That Mr. Hays has written a deep or philosophical book no one would pretend. Yet there is such a ring of true, wholesome, sound American liberalism all through it that one must recommend it wholeheartedly for widespread perusal." O. G. Villard

+ New Repub 107:124 JI 27 '42 650w

"This book does, indeed, describe a certain type of American, who may be of any race, religion, occupation or worldly position. It is a stimulating and useful type, and this is a stimulating and useful book—not too personal, not too original, not 'literary,' but very good and leisurely, (maybe at times too leisurely) conversation." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 16 '42 1200w

"Brisk, witty, heterogeneous, but, even so, it seems to be written in the standard style for lawyers' memoirs."

+ New Yorker 18:56 JI 11 '42 90w

Pratt p5 D '42

"A vivid and entertaining account of one of the outstanding personalities of the American bar and some of the innumerable and impressive activities in which he has been involved, told in an easy, clear and direct way that often heightens the drama of an episode by its very simplicity." Dorothy Straus

+ Survey G 31:435 O '42 600w

Time 40:91 JI 13 '42 450w

Wis Lib Bul 38:135 O '42

Reviewed by H. A. Fenn

Yale Law J 52:200 N '42 700w

HAYSTEAD, LADD. Farm for fortune, and vice versa; a handbook for city farmers. 207p $2 Putnam

630.1 Agriculture (W) 42-36059

Sensible advice for the city people who think they could make a success of farming, in terms of hard cash. Includes ten questions for incipient farmers, with adaptability to farm life depending on your answers. Partial contents: Is a farm the best investment today for a city person? What should I pay for a farm? What about soils? What kind of farming should I do? Machinery and equipment; Tenancy and labor; Finance and management.

Booklist 38:227 Mr 1 '42

"This book is all things to all men. If you want to be a farmer, if you love the soil, if you love the odor of the stable, you will delve deeply and, we suspect, profitably in this book. If, on the other hand, your wife has told you 'we ought to have a farm'—and a farm is a security in this changing world—you can lean back and say, 'Oh, nuts,' and quote Mr. Haystead as your authority." T. L. Stix

+ Books p26 Mr 8 '42 250w

HAYSTEAD, LADD—Continued

"The author's arguments are convincing, his advice thoroughly sound. He does not mean to deter those who are honestly in search of a more expansive and wholesome existence in a more placid environment—and who are willing and eager to work for it." M. W. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 16 '42 340w

"This practical handbook is written with directness and crisp humor by a man who knows how to put information across; it's good sense and good reading."

+ N Y Times p3 My 3 '42 340w

Wis Lib Bul 38:43 Mr '42

HAYSTEAD, LADD. Preacher's kid; drawings by John Gincano. 216p $2 Putnam

42-24736

Memories of the author's boyhood, which he spent in a Protestant parsonage in a lumber and mining town in the Pacific Northwest. He has more than the usual "preacher's kid" troubles, for his town had a large contingent of Catholics to fight with, besides the members of his own faith, who thought he would carry tales. Not only that, but he had domestic troubles too. The story is told in a mixture of fact and fancy.

Booklist 39:224 F 1 '43

Reviewed by Ellis Tinkham
Books p22 N 8 '42 500w

Reviewed by H. L. Bailey
Springf'd Republican p7e D 13 '42 170w

HAYWOOD, CAROLYN. Primrose day; il. by [the author]. 200p $2 Harcourt

(W) 42-36060

The story of a little English girl, aged seven, who comes to America to live. Her life on the ship coming over, after she arrives, and at school where she has some trouble to adjust herself to American ways, is told for ages six to eight.

Booklist 38:253 Mr 15 '42

"Carolyn Haywood's stories of school life in suburban America, in which little girls can read about other little girls who might be next-door neighbors, have established themselves as aids to easy reading. Not only by large type, many pictures and a lifelike atmosphere but by a mild yet steady plot interest these books not only make it easy for a little girl to read but make her want to do so. This offering, more ambitious, is quite as successful." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Mr 8 '42 360w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 27 '42 180w

"Miss Haywood knows how to write simply and understandingly of children's interests and, as well, how to draw them in happy, characteristic action." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:106 Mr '42 90w

Reviewed by Florence O'Gara

+ Library J 67:225 Mr 1 '42 50w

"Boys and girls respond so readily to Carolyn Haywood's books because she manages to put into her stories the delight in simple things, the joys of anticipation and the pleasure in celebrations that are part and parcel of childhood. . . The drawings have life and humor and exactly fit the text—a point held to be strongly in their favor by young readers. For boys and girls from 7 to 9." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 My 3 '42 280w

New Yorker 18:74 My 23 '42 50w

HAZEN, ALLEN TRACY. Bibliography of the Strawberry Hill press; with a record of the prices at which copies have been sold; together with a bibliography and census of the detached pieces by A. T. Hazen and J. P. Kirby. 300p il $10 Yale univ. press

015.421 Strawberry Hill press—Bibliography
A42-3477

"This compendium started out to be a catalogue of Strawberry Hill Press imprints in the superb Horace Walpole collection of W. S.

Lewis at Farmington, Connecticut. Both Mr. Lewis and Mr. Hazen, however, believed the ends of scholarship and of utility alike would be better served if the book included imprints which Mr. Lewis lacks (there are not many) and if it described interesting copies in other collections. The result is an inclusive bibliography of one of the most fascinating publishing ventures ever undertaken." (Sat R of Lit) List of owners of copies. Index.

"Learned and delightful work. . . The Yale University Press has done its usual dignified, handsome job in the production of this latest work drawn with so much skill and knowledge from the resources of the great Walpole collection at Farmington." L. C. Wroth

+ Books p14 S 6 '42 1450w

"This is a thorough and competent job of research, organization, and presentation. The Yale University Press has dressed it with a sturdiness and dignity wholly suited to its purpose." J. T. Winterich

+ Sat R of Lit 25:10 Ag 29 '42 270w

HAZLITT, HENRY. A new constitution now. (Whittlesey house publication) 297p $2.50 McGraw

342.733 U.S. Constitution. U.S. Politics and government 42-23821

Basing his views on words and acts during the present crisis the author attempts to show how our Constitution has proven itself incapable of meeting emergencies, and that there is a tendency to set it aside and to govern dictatorially. He advocates a new constitution which would provide for a cabinet form of government, directly responsible to the people and immediately removable by the people. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 39:132 D 15 '42

"Students of government can find Mr. Hazlitt's book a starting point for inquiry about the flesh and blood of politics as well as about the bones. For collateral reading as a basis for classroom discussion this book, taken in segments, should prove extremely useful. Students can be led to think about fundamental governmental problems to advantage even if the leader is urgent in advocating some form of government other than our own." T. E. Powell

+ — Books p6 N 1 '42 2050w

"The importance of improving the American system of government is unquestioned. Hazlitt's particular solution, however, is full of weaknesses and dangers that apparently he does not see." Carol Thompson

+ Current Hist 3:450 Ja '43 1000w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 67:907 O 15 '42 130w

Reviewed by E. S. Corwin

Nation 155:624 D 5 '42 1400w

Reviewed by Walton Hamilton

New Repub 107:754 D 7 '42 1800w

"Mr. Hazlitt's main object is doubtless to provoke discussion, and this his lucid, closely reasoned, moderately phrased book will do. It is well worth reading, especially by those initially prejudiced; it is well worth thinking about." Allan Nevins

+ N Y Times p3 N 1 '42 1900w

"A provocative book, well-written and unequivocal. . . If Mr. Hazlitt is a bit of a White Queen, it is no doubt due to his concern over the future of free institutions—and in this concern we shall all share." C. J. Friedrich

+ Sat R of Lit 26:6 Ja 2 '43 1550w

Reviewed by Walter Hamilton

Yale Law J 52:186 N '42 3200w

HEARD, GERALD. Dialogue in the desert. 74p $1 Harper

232.952 Jesus Christ—Temptation 42-11844

In dialog form presents the issues with which Jesus struggled during the forty days in the wilderness. The second voice represents the temptations which assailed him during his fast.

Booklist 38:379 Je 15 '42

"In subtlety of analysis, depth of feeling and beauty of language, Mr. Heard has written nothing better than this."

+ Christian Century 59:499 Ap 15 '42 70w

"This is good for lent and for lending!" T. F. O.

+ Churchman 156:31 S 1 '42 90w

"While there are many good things in the book, and the spirit throughout might be designated spiritual, the constant special pleading vitiates its usefulness. One cannot escape the deduction that ideals that inhibit groups from participating in political and national activities, and produce parasites on the body politic—that all such ideals are contributory causes to the defects of our civilization and are blameworthy." I. G. Matthews

+ — Crozer Q 19:247 J1 '42 500w

HEARD, GERALD. Man the master. 334p $2.50
Harper [10s 6d Faber]

901 Civilization 41-24165

"Through the chapters which he calls 'The Diagnosis,' Mr. Heard traces the principle of expansion which has marked human achievement these last four hundred years, pointing out that growth can continue only if the grasp of cohesion overtakes the rate of expansion. . . . From carefully documented historical data Mr. Heard concludes that 'our present societies have endured because they were founded by men who, though they called themselves rationalists and were deists, were far nearer to, and less in conflict with, their subconscious than we are.' . . . In his 'quadritype organization' all groups and professions together make up an organic society wherein the individual may come to his full stature. He sees special need for the psychiatrist as the arbiter of a new justice. And finally, he sees the present crisis—whose real issue is the ultimate nature of force—as an opportunity for spirituality." Christian Century

"Probably none of Gerald Heard's books is so devastatingly personal in its implications as this one—Man the Master. While he is dissecting history with surgical acumen, disclosing the bony framework of government and lifting to view the sinews of science, he is performing an autopsy with intent to save living society whose crisis, he feels, is a psychological crisis in which every individual participates. The authority of his own disciplined life is apparent in his conclusions. It is this oddly personal quality of his brilliant analysis which is the book's most marked characteristic." M. H. Bro

+ — Christian Century 59:449 F 4 '42 1000w

"There is much subtlety and much fine insight in Mr. Heard's book. But the world he sees is not the world the reviewer sees. Nor is the hope he cherishes the reviewer's hope of the future. . . . Mr. Heard has deep and profound convictions. But he is, in the main, a pedantocrat; and he is sometimes sadly superior." Ernest Barker

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 D 2 '42 400w

HEARD, GERALD. Murder by reflection. 283p $2 Vanguard

Detective story. 42-22857

"'Murder by Reflection' is hardly up to snuff, though it does boast a new method of causing death. . . . What we say is, why not revive that grand old sleuth, Mycroft, tell the world who he really is—it's a swell selling point—and go on from there?" Will Cuppy

— Books p25 O 4 '42 300w

"Far more important, this is not actually a tale of crime-and-puzzlement but a psychological horror story, and one of spine-tingling originality and excellence, by a philosopher-author whose nom de plume is only a slight disguise." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p10 O 11 '42 360w

"An evocation of a distant day more than a mystery—mostly done with mirrors. A new method of murder, and skillful writing, are not quite enough to save this book."

New Yorker 18:84 O 24 '42 60w

"Past and present, reality and fantasy, are blent into a somewhat esoteric tale. Erudite." Sat R of Lit 25:41 O 24 '42 30w

HEARD, GERALD. Reply paid. 274p $2 Vanguard

Detective story. 42-9896

"Grade A thriller." Will Cuppy

+ Books p21 Mr 8 '42 240w

"The story is a fascinating one, provided you are able to endure an overdose of Mycroft's cryptic utterances which drive Silchester to the verge of distraction." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p12 Mr 15 '42 250w

"A quiet and scholarly book recommended for those who like well-constructed plots."

+ New Yorker 18:72 Mr 21 '42 50w

HEARD, HENRY FITZGERALD. See Heard, G.

HEBERDEN, MARY VIOLET (CHARLES L. LEONARD, pseud). Deadline for destruction. 279p $2 Doubleday

42-13388

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 Ap 5 '42 220w

"Tough and exciting."

New Yorker 18:88 Ap 11 '42 40w

Sat R of Lit 25:30 Ap 11 '42 30w

HEBERDEN, MARY VIOLET (CHARLES L. LEONARD, pseud). Murder follows Desmond Shannon. 274p $2 Doubleday

42-10019

Detective story.

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p14 Mr 22 '42 160w

"Tough and crisp, but with a solution that seems sort of pallid against the lush background."

+ — New Yorker 18:68 Ap 4 '42 70w

"Shivery."

Sat R of Lit 25:15 Mr 21 '42 40w

HEBERDEN, MARY VIOLET (CHARLES L. LEONARD, pseud). Murder makes a racket. 280p $2 Doubleday

42-25236

Detective story.

"Most of the characters are goofy, including desperate Desmond." Will Cuppy

Books p31 N 8 '42 120w

"This is just the book for those who like violent action in large quantities." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p16 N 8 '42 180w

Sat R of Lit 25:18 N 14 '42 40w

HEBERDEN, MARY VIOLET (CHARLES L. LEONARD, pseud). Stolen squadron. 282p $2 Doubleday

42-51967

Planes have been vanishing from a Connecticut plant, and neither the army nor the F. B. I. can trace the culprits. Paul Kilgerrin is called in to solve the mystery, and altho he almost loses his life, he gets to the bottom of the secret.

"Rousing, ruthless, readable." Will Cuppy

+ Books p24 D 13 '42 280w

"Here are hazardous adventures enough to satisfy the most avid thrill seeker who ever sat in an armchair." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 D 13 '42 200w

"Good thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:21 D 12 '42 40w

HEBERT, ARTHUR GABRIEL. Throne of David; a study of the fulfilment of the Old Testament in Jesus Christ and His church. 271p $4 Morehouse [12s 6d Faber]

220.7 Jesus Christ—Messiahship. Bible. Old Testament. Bible. Whole [42-14255]

"A reaffirmation for the contemporary world of the vital unity of the Old and New Testaments. The author maintains that the study of the Old Testament in our time has tended to limit itself to the analysis of the documents and to the use of them as materials for anthropological research, while the positive value of the Old Testament has been looked for in its record of the development of high religious ideals from lowly origins. He aims to restore the claims of theology: that is to say, to take seriously the faith which inspires the Biblical writers in the reality of God and the actuality of His choice of Israel to be His People, and to show how such terms as 'Jerusalem', 'the Throne of David', or 'sacrifice' acquire a greatly deepened meaning when the Divine Purpose is brought to its completion in Jesus the Messiah." (Publisher's note) Index.

"This important book is marked by more than a touch of genius. Much that it says needed to be said; and all that it says is well said. It should contribute in no small measure to that larger understanding of the Bible for which the author pleads." H. H. Rowley
+ Hibbert J 40:199 Ja '42 1000w

"As a book written to restore the claims of theology it scarcely lends itself to any detailed criticism here; one may only remark that if, as Father Hebert states, 'Biblical Scholarship has to a large extent failed in its duty to the Church whose life the Bible nourishes' (p.31), there are those who are of the opinion that the church has failed in its duty to the progress of scholarship."

Spec 167:292 S 19 '41 280w

"This is not the sort of book that is likely to be very popular to-day. Detailed works showing how the prophecies of the Old Testament were fulfilled in the New are rather out of fashion. Nevertheless, the book renders a most important service by its much-needed reminder that there is a definite theological continuity between the Old Testament and the New. This, too, must be said wholeheartedly, even if one does not at all points agree with the author's interpretations."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p368 Ag 2 '41 900w

HEERMANCE, EDGAR LAING. Time stream; a voyager takes a reckoning. 205p $2 Free press assn, 187 College st, Burlington, Vt. 128 Man. Sociology. Life 42-6182

"The author invites us to climb a lofty mountain with him, where we may gain a world view, and trace the 'time stream' of which he writes, from its source to the present day. . . . From this point of vantage he points out what has come to pass through the interaction of human personality and the external world, the coöperation of man and God, the development of moral standards, the advancement of modern science, the growth of altruism, the awakening of national interest, and the present trend toward regimentation. The value of group emotion, the possibility of developing conviction, and the effectiveness of Jesus as a symbol of God are presented as hopeful factors in directing the time stream toward a happy consummation of human life and history." Crozer Q

Christian Century 59:322 Mr 11 '42 90w

"This is an interesting, convincing, and inspiring book; one that makes the thoughtful reader thank God and take courage." Rittenhouse Neisser

+ Crozer Q 19:242 Jl '42 330w

HEFLIN, ALMA. Adventure was the compass; il. by Martha Powell Setchell. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 285p $2.75 Little 917.98 Alaska—Description and travel. Aeronautics—Flights 42-12382

Account of a trip to Alaska by plane, taken by two young women with an eye for adventure. Miss Heflin is a skilled pilot and had been doing solo trips for some time, but both girls were a little unprepared for some of their experiences. Sour doughs, gold dredging, and two minor crackups, they took in their stride and have made a cheerful book about it.

Booklist 38:343 My 15 '42

Bookmark 3:12 My '42

"Miss Heflin, who writes publicity for the makers of the plane she flies, has an excellent nose for a good story and a trained eye for color. She tells her tale with an easy humor which belies the stature of her accomplishment." Rose Feld

+ Books p8 My 17 '42 850w

"Young people will enjoy breezy style." E. T. Dobbins

Library J 67:633 Jl '42 60w

"Their adventures are mildly entertaining. . . . Slangy, superficial, ephemeral; typical day-by-day chitchat for column readers but not enough substance or variety for a book. Doubt appeal for young people, despite attractive open page and catchy headpieces." M. C. Scoggin

+ Library J 67:633 Jl '42 60w

"Fresh-spirited chronicle. . . . A full quota of amusing drawings fittingly illustrates a book that is packed with incident and entertainment, every bit of it good."

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 26 '42 440w

New Yorker 18:80 Ap 25 '42 40w

HEIDEL, ALEXANDER. Babylonian genesis; the story of the creation. 131p pl map $1.50 Univ. of Chicago press

299.219 Creation 42-18999

"The translated texts of the Babylonian accounts of creation, with a scholarly discussion of points of similarity and contrast with the Hebrew Genesis and the possible influence of each upon the other. The author finds that the differences far outweigh the agreements. The question of the dependence of the biblical upon the Babylonian accounts is left open, but 'there is no reason why anyone should be disturbed in his mind or lose his reverence for the opening chapter of the Bible.'" Christian Century

Christian Century 59:982 Ag 12 '42 70w

"This is a valuable collection of material on a much-discussed problem of Old Testament studies. It is presented concisely, not overburdened with technical discussion, neatly printed by the near-printing process. Dr. Heidel is to be thanked for this extremely useful and convenient monograph. May the work dealing with the Babylonian flood stories, which he promises (p. 110), be forthcoming. Equally valuable would be a similar monograph dealing with the Phoenician Genesis making use of the Ras Shamra material and the later Greek sources for Phoenician cosmogony." J. B. Pritchard

+ Crozer Q 19:323 O '42 700w

HEIDEL, WILLIAM ARTHUR. Hippocratic medicine; its spirit and method. 149p $2 Columbia univ. press

610.9 Medicine—History 41-17407

Study of the character of the medical profession among the ancient Greeks, which shows also the connections between Greek philosophy, science, and medicine. Index.

"The book is not difficult to read, or to understand. Its author, however, was a master in his field and he plays upon themes and personalities with the ease and flash of a virtuoso. This, too, is a timely work. Modern medicine has reached the stage of synthesis, where its many heretofore isolated parts fall into a harmonious rational pattern. Hippocratic Medicine will aid us to grasp the transcending significance of this experience." Iago Gladston

+ Am J Pub Health 32:211 F '42 320w

Am Soc R 7:460 Je '42 50w

"Professor Heidel's posthumous work exhibits an enthusiasm for the heroic age of medicine such as may be found in the recent Flexner book on William Henry Welch. It should act as a powerful counter-irritant to more writings like Arrowsmith and The Citadel." W. P. Lemon

+ Christian Century 59:151 F 4 '42 700w

"The book is highly instructive and refreshing." E. N.

+ J Philos 38:717 D 18 '41 240w

HEILNER, VAN CAMPEN. Our American game birds; with a foreword by Theodore Roosevelt; paintings and drawings by Lynn Bogue Hunt. 178p maps $5 Doubleday

799.24 Game and game birds. Birds—Migration (W) 42-1547

Reproductions of paintings in color showing American game birds in their native habitats, with descriptive text by experts. Bibliography. Maps showing distribution. An appendix contains a field guide for identification.

"This volume is a rare combination of the highly authoritative text of Mr. Van Campen Heilner, who knows the world's game birds as few others know them, and the artistic skill of one of our leading wild life artists, Mr. Lynn Bogue Hunt. . . The author and artist might be called the Damon and Pythias of American fields, bays and streams. Constant companions, expert shots and sportsmen in the truest sense, they qualify as no other pair of men to write, paint and sketch this volume." Wilbur Forrest
+ Books p11 F 8 '42 160w

"Any doubt as to the progress in the accurate representation of the many beautiful colors of bird plumage would be completely dispelled by even a casual glance at the magnificent illustrations in Mr. Heilner's volume. . . The varied color tones of the settings arranged for the various species are remarkably true to nature. . . It is a volume that every lover of bird life will be proud to own." A. F. G.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 14 '42 270w

"Mr Hunt has painted his birds and habitats in rich tones yet with great fidelity. He has, moreover, attempted to blend his feathered subjects into their natural backgrounds at all times rather than make them stand out to the neglect of the backgrounds as so many bird artists have done. In his mass pictures, some detail in the bird markings has been sacrificed to the dramatic, but on the whole the illustrations are quite effective. . . Mr Heilner's encyclopedic knowledge of game birds comes from first-hand contacts with sportsmen and birds under all conditions, and his counsel should be appreciated by all sportsmen." C. B. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 11 '42 270w

HEINE, GILBERT M., and DUNLAP, CARL HARRY. How to read electrical blueprints. 318p il $3 Am. tech. soc.

621.31 Blueprints. Electric engineering. Electric wiring (W) 42-11895

"Divided into sections dealing with the reading of architectural, house-wiring, administration, and power station blueprints, together with diagrams for bell and signal wiring, automobile wiring, generators, and motors, and motor control." (N Y New Tech Bks) Nine blue prints included. Index.

Booklist 38:421 J1 1 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:23 Ap '42

Pratt p11 D '42

HEINRICH, HERBERT WILLIAM. Industrial accident prevention; a scientific approach. 2d ed 448p il $3 McGraw

331.8231 Accidents—Prevention. Accidents, Industrial 41-22099

"Since the first edition of this book was published in 1931, there have been additional opportunities to check the effectiveness of the methods that are advocated. They have been proved to be sound in principle and practicable of application. That which was at one time regarded as theory is now recognized as fact. . . Changes have been made in the revised text for the purpose of achieving greater consistency, clarity, and improved arrangement. The treatment of the subject has been enlarged and modernized with regard to illustrations and text. In no way, however, has there been any alteration of the fundamentals on which the original publication was conceived." (Pref) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1931. Index.

Booklist 38:134 D 15 '41

Chem & Met Eng 49:168 Ap '42 150w

Pratt p19 My '42

HEISE, BRYAN. Effects of instruction in cooperation on the attitudes and conduct of children. 98p $1.25; pa $1 Univ. of Mich.

371.3 Cooperation. Child study 42-36837

"This is an experimental study to discover the possibilities of teaching children the democratic method of group thinking. It attempts to evaluate the Curtis cooperative technique which involves utilizing the suggestions of all members of the group and harmonizing and integrating these suggestions to make for unity in group thinking." Social Studies

School & Society 55:252 F 28 '42 40w

"This study deals with a very timely problem. No doubt, the cooperative technique democratically applied is worthy of more attention in its classroom applications as well as in its theoretical implications. Incidentally, the study provides a technique for measuring some of the so-called 'intangible' educational outcomes." M. L. Goetting

+ Social Studies 33:282 O '42 500w

HELLER, BERNARD. Odyssey of a faith. 277p $2.50 Harper

296 Jews—Civilization. Jews—Religion

42-15453

A history of Jewish culture set forth in essays dealing with separate episodes or crises in history. Contents: The nomad turns farmer; The song of Zion at the rivers of Babylon; Jew meets Greek; The Pharisees democratize the faith; The end of the Jewish state; The half-open door; A Luther in the Jewish camp; The scholar defies the politician; Maimonides rationalizes the faith; Fundamentalists on the warpath; False messiahs; The Saint of Podolia; Emergence from the ghetto; The old faith faces a new day; Zionism versus Sinaism. Index.

"The value of this book lies in its cordial estimate of historic Judaism. Mr. Heller rightly understands that it is more than a body of creedal affirmation or theological convictions. He knows that it includes within it all those varied expressions of life which we call culture. The book is written in a lucid style, and is itself, interestingly enough, an admirable exemplar both of Hebraic modes of literary composition and of the spirit of Judaism." James Mullenberg

+ Christian Century 59:1353 N 4 '42 600w

"This small volume constitutes one of the very most engaging and erudite insights into the Jew and his religious philosophy written in this generation. Dr. Heller shows a grasp of the history and culture of the Hebrew people equalled by few moderns." T. F. Ople

+ Churchman 156:16 Ag 1 '42 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '42

"In keeping with the nature of the work, Dr. Heller adopted the essay form—occasionally running into homiletical form—instead of the more integrated and objective treatment which we expect in a book of scientific character. This form lent itself more readily to the author's expression of his personal faith and his enthusiasm for various causes and ideals as well as of his great fondness for philosophic speculation. . . Dr. Heller writes with force and conviction. Occasionally he is carried away by certain enthusiasms in which some critical readers may not be ready to follow him." S. S. Cohon

+ — Crozer Q 19:322 O '42 700w

HELLMAN, LILLIAN. Four plays. 330p $2.50
Random house; 95c Modern lib.
812 (W) 42-7559
Contents: The Children's Hour; Days to Come; The Little Foxes; Watch on the Rhine.

Booklist 38:271 Ap 1 '42

Library J 67:320 Ap 1 '42 20w

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker

N Y Times p19 Je 14 '42 180w

Reviewed by Rosamond Gilder

Theatre Arts 26:346 My '42 650w

HELM, MACKINLEY. Angel Mo' and her son,
Roland Hayes. (Atlantic monthly press bk)
289p $2.75 Little

B or 92 Hayes, Roland (W) 42-24786

Biography of a notable American Negro singer. The story, tho written by Mr Helm, is told in the first person as if by Mr. Hayes.

Booklist 39:119 D 1 '42

"This engrossing book will be read on at least three planes of interest. As a success story it will recall Booker T. Washington's 'Up From Slavery.' As the intimate account of a great singer's struggles it will fascinate hopeful artists. As a commentary on our democracy it may well become one of the books of the year for thoughtful Americans." Arna Bontemps

+ Books p6 N 15 '42 1100w

"The man, more than the musician, is delineated, though there are observations on music, here and there, of a scholarly nature. The writing is closely packed, but it has, nevertheless, an ease which makes 'Angel Mo' very enjoyable to read. It will surely be a source book of prime importance." C. W. Durgin

+ Boston Globe p21 N 11 '42 700w

Reviewed by George Streator

Commonweal 37:354 Ja 22 '43 500w

"Of exceptional interest, not only for vivid sketch of his childhood in the flatwoods of North Georgia and his early struggles for foothold in the music world here and abroad, but also for the record of his achievements, crowned by the Spingarn Medal and a doctorate from Fisk University. His studies in the German lieder and the Negro spirituals make good reading for musicologists. Recommended for purchase." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 67:908 O 15 '42 80w

New Repub 107:866 D 28 '42 80w

"It is not only a story of sound individual substance and interest, but of equally sound suggestiveness. Roland Hayes has taught two continents to value the Negro quality of his voice, the Negro richness of his heritage; and he speaks with fine simplicity and earnestness as a Negro. But he speaks, at the same time, without any rigidity of racial self-consciousness, with no harshness of defensive separatism. His story—and his mother's with it—is told with the naturalness of a sincere man and artist; we are enriched and stimulated as we read." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p8 N 29 '42 750w

"A moving and distinguished volume, thoroughly worthy of the great artist herein portrayed, for it is sympathetic, understanding, with as fine, delicate feeling as Roland Hayes has shown in all his work." O. C. Villard

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 N 28 '42 1300w

"Once in a while, and only once in a while, a book comes off the press that is so exactly right in all its details that a critic can find little to say about it except that it does well and completely the job it sets out to do. Such is Angel Mo' and her Son Roland Hayes."

+ Theatre Arts 27:63 Ja '43 900w

HELSETH, HENRY EDWARD. Devil's behind you. 289p $2 Harper

42-14745

Four young men, some of them little above the tramp class, one a neurotic painter, one a mystery, keep bachelor quarters in a tumble-down shack on the edge of a mill town. They rescue a young girl from two hoboes and when she proves a good housekeeper and companion, adopt her into the household. The story tells how the arrangement works out and finally reveals the secret of the mystery man.

"It is an amusing make-believe, but difficult to accept in terms of reality. Mr. Helseth writes fluently, and smooths the raw edges of the story." George Conrad

Books p8 Je 14 '42 300w

"Despite its faults, the book has strength. One feels the power in it, follows the pathological love story with interest, reads hopefully to the end. But there is a constant irritation with almost genuine conversation, almost realized nobility of character." Charlotte Dean

+ — N Y Times p16 My 31 '42 320w

HEMINGWAY, ERNEST, ed. Men at war; the best war stories of all time; with an introd. by [the editor] based on a plan by William Kozienco. 1072p $3 Crown

(W) 42-24271

Anthology of 82 stories and factual accounts about wars and their effect upon man from Biblical times to the present war. Arrangement is topical, by divisions suggested in General von Clausewitz' On War. These divisions are: War is part of the intercourse of the human race; War is the province of danger, and therefore courage above all things is the first quality of a warrior; War is the province of physical exertion and suffering; War is the province of uncertainty; War is the province of chance; War is the province of friction; War demands resolution, firmness, and staunchness; War is fought by human beings.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (8)
N Y Times (4)

Booklist 39:102 N 15 '42

"Out of the book as a whole there emerges a kind of form and logic, an ordered picture of the immense disorder of war, as absorbing in its own way as are the excitement and drama of the individual selections. . . In the end, the old, old mystery of 'what was it really like?' escapes even these thousand pages, perhaps because it is a mystery which, like that of life itself, each can solve only for himself. . . Curiously enough, one of the ways in which the collection is weakest is in its treatment of the drama and the problems of generalship. A military critic's savage analysis of Gallipoli represents the principal contribution to this important and absorbing field; such a careful and brilliantly perceptive study as C. S. Forester's 'The General' is omitted. Perhaps it did not lend itself to extraction. . . I confess that I liked Hemingway's introduction the least of any article in the book, though this, too, illustrates another aspect of war. It seemed to me, like so many other attempts to deal with war as a whole, angry, chaotic, rambling and pointless." Walter Millis

+ — Books p3 O 25 '42 2000w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '42

"Always impressive, sometimes frightening and occasionally almost unbearably touching. There is much here that will be fairly familiar to the consistent reader and some fine things that he might have missed in times gone by. . . The material concerning the present war that Mr. Hemingway includes in his anthology is of such truth and excellence that one is inclined to believe that we have moved a long way along the road of frankness since 1914-18." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p1 N 8 '42 1450w

"Nearly all the editor's selections are the work of professional writers. No doubt, this is all to the good in some ways, but the plain words of ordinary soldiers, put down in diaries, memoirs, letters, and reports, often seem truer than those of a writer steamed up with his opportunity. I'd be willing to trade a good bit of Mr. Hemingway's material for Colonel Fremantle's reminiscences of Gettysburg, or the whoop-and-a-holler of Davy Crockett's last diary at the Alamo, apocryphal though some of it may be." Vincent McHugh

New Yorker 18:80 O 24 '42 360w

"I regretfully turn in a minority report. The Hemingway who wrote greatly in 'For Whom the Bell Tolls' writes the preface to this collection with an air of self-righteousness that is most intolerable and not to be borne. The general tone of the wandering introduction is that almost everybody else is wrong about war, and that only now has the Great Interpreter collected the few immortal narratives, real and imaginary, that tell you what war is really like. But as soon as we open to the first page of the introduction and read the sentence: 'This book will not tell you how to die,' we know that we are back at the old stand, and that what we have is a collection of pieces to satisfy Mr. Hemingway's curious obsession with death. Having said so much, I cheerfully admit there are some gripping narratives in the book. But I affirm also that the interest of the collection is factitious." H. M. Jones

— + Sat R of Lit 25:11 D 12 '42 380w

Reviewed by Marshall Bragdon

Springf'd Republican p6 D 5 '42 1000w

HENDERSON, ARCHIBALD. North Carolina, the Old North state and the new. 5v maps subs for set $35 Lewis pub.

975.6 North Carolina—History. North Carolina—Biography 41-12324

"Here is a history which, the author tells us in his foreword, is the result of 'prolonged researches, in innumerable quarters . . . in the great repositories of documentary and printed materials of history, both at home and abroad'. Thirty years of such research, 'arduous, wide-ranging, and minute', have 'resulted in a gradual maturation of a philosophy of historiography', with the result that, Dr. Henderson informs us, he has been able in this work to avoid 'many of the defects and weaknesses of other histories of an American state'. Under the terms of his contract he has had no 'authorial or editorial connection' with Volumes III, IV, and V of the series, which contain biographical sketches." Am Hist R

"The present history, written for the general public, contains neither footnotes nor bibliography. The purpose has been to produce 'a more than merely readable, indeed . . . an absorbingly interesting story of the evolving genius of a people'. This purpose has been successfully accomplished, for a history has been written which will indeed prove interesting to the general public. Use is made of numerous monographs and special articles (including many of the author's own) that have appeared within the past few years, so that much material is included which is not to be found in any other general history of the state. The story flows along smoothly." C. C. Crittenden

+ Am Hist R 47:612 Ap '42 650w (Review of v 1-2)

"Sometimes Dr. Henderson carries his dislike of the spectacular to questionable lengths; he refuses to treat in detail such fantastic figures as Blackbeard, the pirate; Willie Jones, who made the singular gift of his name to the sea captain, John Paul, or Helper, the social rebel, who hated slaveholders and slaves with equal bitterness. . . . Nevertheless, here is an enormous storehouse of facts about the people who actually made the State of North Carolina." G. W. Johnson

+ Books p12 S 21 '41 1300w (Review of v 1-2)

Reviewed by S. E. Morison

New Eng Q 15:146 Mr '42 1200w (Review of v 1-2)

HENDERSON, HARRY BRINTON, and MORRIS, HERMAN C. War in our time. 416p il maps $3.75 Doubleday

940.5497 World war, 1939—Pictorial works (W) 42-25752

In photographic reproductions and excellent text the "analytical history" of the present war is told from the Manchurian invasion of 1931 to the Roosevelt-Churchill conference and the battle at Midway and the Coral Sea.

"The reproductions are not all that could be desired, but the authors have done a grand job of rounding up picture high lights while the fire still is burning. They have included many of the best, for which photographers have risked and lost their lives the world over. Most of them were taken by newspaper photographers working against censors, shell fire, bullets or advancing armies. The text is co-ordinated with the photographs to give an intelligent story of how the world was betrayed by its hatreds and its fears. The book will last in a free world as a contribution to history." R. F. Crandell

+ Books p4 D 13 '42 600w

"There are pictures here that will make you proud of your country and its allies, and there are others that will make you blush for the mistakes we have made. Still others, depicting the ruin and destruction caused by bombing raids and the sad plight of the helpless victims, will bring tears to the eyes of even the most hard-boiled. But the net effect of the book will be to make you fighting mad and to strengthen your resolve that those who are attempting to destroy the democratic way of life must be beaten."

N Y Times p2 D 13 '42 360w

"An impressive job, though a little disproportionate in the early sections."

+ New Yorker 18:93 N 21 '42 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 3 '43 170w

HENDERSON, KENNETH ATWOOD, ed. American Alpine club's handbook of American mountaineering. 239p il $2.75 Houghton

796.52 Mountaineering 42-14228

A handbook of mountaineering technique adapted to American mountains and American conditions. In addition to instructions in climbing contains chapters on dangers and rescue work, camping, cooking, first-aid, mountain weather, horse packing, use of airplanes, etc. The book's preparation has been hastened in order to assist the United States Army in its plans for training mountain troops. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:381 Je 15 '42

Bookmark 3:8 My '42

"Every situation a mountaineer is likely to meet is provided for somewhere within these easily consulted, clearly printed pages."

+ Books p11 My 24 '42 130w

Wis Lib Bul 38:95 Je '42

HENDERSON, LE GRAND (LE GRAND, pseud). Augustus helps the navy [il. by the author]. 128p $1.75 Bobbs

(W) 42-21966

It all began in Kentucky when Augustus dropped a frog on the stranger from Maine. The next thing they knew Mr Pringle, the stranger, Augustus and all his family were on their way to Mr Pringle's schooner in Maine. They aimed to help in the war, but little did they know how proficient Augustus would become in the matter of capturing enemy submarines.

"The Augustus stories get better as they go. From the first they had a comicality, an original turn that made the doings of this shanty-boat family different from those of any other family in juvenile literature, but in 'Augustus and the River' sheer fun was the feature, and in this it is the sort of adventure, at once wild and homely, that boys conjure up for themselves in the incessant activity of the years around ten. Augustus is so real a boy, and his wishful thinking so purposeful, it seems impossible that what happens to him in this story did not really take place." M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 N 15 '42 500w

Cath World 156:379 D '42 140w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 13 '42 170w

HENDRYX, JAMES BEARDSLEY. Gold and guns on Halfaday creek. (Carlton house publications) 280p $2 Random house

42-14742

Western story.

Booklist 38:385 Je 15 '42

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p13 My 17 '42 70w

HENNEY, KEITH. Principles of radio. 4th ed 549p il $3.50 Wiley

621.384 Radio

(W) 42-18282

New edition of a textbook first published in 1929. The book "was originally written for the student who had little background in radio upon which to build and yet who wanted to know the basis upon which radio communication existed. . . . Every attempt was made to make the text lucid and practical. . . . This, the Fourth Edition, has been brought up to date, new problems have been added, new phases of radio science have taken the places of other phases which have disappeared." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 39:14 S '42

"A high-school graduate should follow it with little difficulty. Some parts of radio (such as alternating currents and decibels) which might cause trouble to a beginner with slight mathematical training are extensively explained." James Stokley

Books p10 D 27 '42 60w

Library J 67:1063 D 1 '42 10w

HENRY, GENE, pseud. See Sheldon, J. P.

HENRY, JULES. Jungle people; a Kaingáng tribe of the highlands of Brazil [il. by Hans F. Kraus]. 215p $3.50 Augustin

980.3 Kaingangue Indians

41-26784

"An account of the culture of perhaps one of the most illiterate peoples of all time, a people who comprehended neither books nor the clear signs of their own doom." (Am Anthropol) "In the Brazilian Highlands, in the state of Santa Catarina, lives a little known tribe of Indians, the Kaingáng. Although they have been localized on a reservation since 1914, 'many of the old ways of life are still followed and fundamental attitudes remain the same. The culture is far from dead.' Here Dr. Henry, professor of anthropology and one-time student of Franz Boas and Ruth Benedict, lived in the center of their village from December, 1932, to January, 1934." (Scientific Bk Club R)

"The book is not a definitive systematic ethnography in the classical sense, if that be regarded as ground for critical comment, although most of the standard headings are covered. The relation of the tribe to its area and to other tribes is scarcely touched upon; the historical development, so far as it could have been recovered, is far from clear. . . . These cavils aside, however, the book is an outstanding documentation of the proposition that a culture which lacks patterns for the adjustment of internal conflicts cannot stand." John Gillin

+ — Am Anthropol 44:493 Jl '42 700w

Scientific Bk Club R 12:4 D '41 420w

HENRY, RALPH CHESTER (ERIC THANE, pseud). High border country. (American folkways ser) 335p $3 Duell

917.8 Northwest. Frontier and pioneer life —Northwest (W) 42-36241

Anecdotal informal history of that part of the West called the High Border, consisting of the panhandle of Idaho, Montana, Wyoming and North and South Dakota. Index.

Booklist 38:333 Je 15 '42

"I guess you can't get away from it. Montana is tough. And here is a book which yarns its history in very readable fashion." Horace Reynolds

Books p4 My 31 '42 1250w

Library J 67:476 My 15 '42 20w

"Mr. Thane writes entertainingly and with that quality which has come to be called lustiness and which can be overdone. But somehow he does not get at the heart of his subject. . . . To say this is not to condemn his book as unreadable. It is anything but that. He has told, and told very well, a great number of stories about his chosen region. The range of these stories is remarkable, and, taken together, they do give an idea of the astonishing shift and variety of American life during a century or two in just one corner of our democratic empire." R. L. Duffus
+ — N Y Times p9 My 31 '42 1100w

HENRY, ROBERT SELPH. This fascinating railroad business. 520p il $3.50 Bobbs

335 Railroads

(W) 42-8032

Exposition of the whole range of railroading: the evolution of track; laying out the line; rails of steel; the behavior of track; under mountain and river; carriers of the word; the first hundred years of steam; steam—second century; oil, "gas," and "juice;" houses on wheels; terminals and trains; service of supply; railroad men; the business of railroading. Index.

Booklist 38:341 My 15 '42

"Mr. Henry is no sentimentalist to wax poetic over the legend of the high iron. Rather he is a shrewd historian and competent analyst of the business which has been the preoccupation of a large portion of his life. . . . It is a good book, sound, authoritative and well written. Only in what your professional make-up man will call its art, is it notably unexciting." Lucius Beebe

+ Books p22 Ap 12 '42 550w

HEPNER, HARRY WALKER. Psychology applied to life and work. 771p il $5; school ed $4 Prentice-Hall

150.13 Psychology, Applied (W) 41-19948

Applied psychology considered largely from the standpoint of business executives with problem employees. "When discussing the development of one's own personality the author keeps his feet on the ground, makes a few sensible suggestions, and does not overdo it. Vocational problems are discussed both from the standpoint of hiring and from the standpoint of the guidance of the individual, with most of the stress, however, on the former. Of help to the individual will be the chapters on applying for a job, getting promoted, and personal efficiency." (Ann Am Acad) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

Reviewed by L. P. Guest

Am J Psychol 55:304 Ap '42 430w

"This is one of the better books on applied psychology, although it does not attempt to cover the entire field. . . . The treatment is systematic and scientific rather than popular, but it is not especially technical in terminology, and the nonpsychological reader should be able to find much of interest in the book. . . . The book is appropriate for a college text or for the intelligent general reader." H. E. Burtt

+ Ann Am Acad 219:201 Ja '42 380w

HEREFORD, ROBERT A. Old Man River; the memories of Captain Louis Rosché, pioneer steamboatman; il. by Lee Conrey and Daniel S. Bishop. 301p $3.50 Caxton printers

B or 92 Rosché, Louis. Mississippi river

43-76

Memoirs of a steamboatman, who ran away from home at the age of twelve to start his career on the Mississippi and Missouri river boats. He began as a stowaway and ended as a captain and boat owner. His adventures included a visit to the gambling house of the famous woman gambler known as Madame Moustache; he fought on both sides in the Civil war—for a short time; he saw the surrender of the Confederate General Jeff Thompson; river gamblers and roustabouts, romance, war, and peace, were all known to him. The period covered is from 1864 to 1937. Bibliography.

Booklist 39:222 F 1 '43

"This book will delight all those who like running water in their river books. The book is written in the rivermen's language and gives the rivermen's thought; no less an authority than Captain Donald T. Wright vouches in a foreword for that." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p23 Ja 31 '43 700w

"Captain Rosche was enough of a riverman never to allow a few facts to spoil a good yarn and Mr. Hereford is gifted enough not to check too closely. There's no social significance here, no economic theories. It's simply what Lyle Saxon calls 'a good readin' book,' and mighty pleasant readin' it is." Roark Bradford

+ Sat R of Lit 26:20 Ja 2 '43 430w

Spring'd Republican p6 D 7 '42 400w

HERLIN, EMIL. The war in maps. See Brown, E. F.

HERRING, HUBERT CLINTON. Good neighbors. 381p maps $3 Yale univ. press [18s 6d Oxford]

918 Latin America (W) 41-12329

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"The volume is not history, but it is worth reading by historians and other unassorted American citizens. The style is clear, but the load of facts it carries often makes the going heavy."

+ Am Hist R 47:697 Ap '42 140w

Reviewed by L. L. Bernard

Am Soc R 7:137 F '42 480w

Bookmark 3:12 Ja '42

"As a fresh, often brilliant, survey of the main characteristics and problems of the Latin-American republics the book is much to be recommended."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 F 20 '42 120w

"If the object of a book like this is to make readers feel the personality and climate of distant lands, Mr. Herring rings three large bells." Duncan Aikman

+ New Repub 106:274 F 23 '42 700w

"Taken as a whole, this is the best of recent books on Latin America, and it is a matter of regret that one who can write easily and simply should have marred so many of his pages by an obvious striving for literary effect. Such phrases as 'the magnificent conservatives', 'the superb communists', 'the knightly Falangistas', 'the marching Nacistas', can hardly be considered as an evidence of the volume's real merit." Frank Tannenbaum

+ — Pol Sci Q 57:134 Mr '42 1000w

Reviewed by B. P. Adams

Survey G 31:89 F '42 110w

"There are two varieties of books about Latin America. Some, all too few, are 'plain'. . . The rest are 'coloured'. . . Mr. Herring's cool intelligence and long acquaintance with these regions admirably qualified him to produce a practical survey of the 'plain' variety."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p110 Mr 7 '42 650w

HERRMANN, LAZAR (LEO LANIA, pseud). Today we are brothers; the biography of a generation. 344p $3.50 Houghton

B or 92 42-12710

The author, an Austrian Jew, spent the first seven years of his life in Kharkov, but after his father's death the family returned to Vienna. This autobiography tells of his childhood and youth in Vienna, his services in the Austrian army during the European war, and his life in post-war Europe as writer, journalist and film producer. The book ends with his coming to America after the opening of the second World war. Index.

Booklist 38:440 J1 15 '42

"It is a highly interesting portrait with background and foreground that he has accomplished. It is European because it could not help being anything else. It is a kind of farewell and hail." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p4 My 17 '42 1050w

Reviewed by Otto Zausmer

Boston Globe p19 My 6 '42 650w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 106:865 Je 22 '42 1900w

"That Mr. Lania has long admired and is thoroughly at home in the American school of journalism is once again evident in his published 'personal history.' The quantity of experience of this brilliant journalist, novelist, playwright and motion-picture producer is impressive. The quality of this account is derived from his frank sincerity and his evident pleasure in being alive." Milos Safranek

+ N Y Times p4 My 10 '42 850w

"The translation is wobbly in spots but generally readable."

New Yorker 18:79 My 9 '42 160w

"Among the works already produced or still to be written on what appears to have occurred 'only yesterday,' Lania's autobiography will certainly stand out as a moving 'document humain' of a turbulent period. It was a clever idea to give the decidedly biased 'personal history' of a man who, as a journalist, had frequently looked into Clio's workshop, instead of a philosophical treatise purporting to be 'objective.' It is a thoughtful and entertaining book, its somewhat didactic tone being mitigated by the vivid recital of purely human episodes." Alfred Werner

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 My 23 '42 700w

HERSEY, JOHN RICHARD. Men on Bataan. 313p $2.50 Knopf

B or 92 MacArthur, Douglas, World war, 1939—Philippine Islands (W) 42-15211

"This is, I suppose, about as much of the story of Manila, Bataan and MacArthur as can now be assembled out of the scanty news despatches, the available scraps of official information and diligent inquiry here in this country. It is a tragic story; it is fragmentary—it proceeds almost of necessity in a series of episodic flashes which leave so much untold—it is not happy reading, for all its heroism, and it simply runs out at the end into the silences which have fallen over Corregidor and the thick veils which from the Australian headquarters enshroud the future." Books

Booklist 38:383 Je 15 '42

Bookmark 4:14 N '42

Reviewed by Walter Millis

Books p3 My 31 '42 1550w

Cath World 156:250 N '42 70w

Christian Science Monitor p16 J1 13 '42 380w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:895 O 15 '42 10w

"Fortified with scads of already printed news dispatches, buttressed by hitherto unused by-products of Time-Life's vacuum cleaner system of detail-gleaning, and supplemented with original source material from friends of General MacArthur and from families of fighting men of Bataan, Mr. Hersey has made the most of his equipment. The result is cloth-bound journalism at its best. Other and more complete accounts of the fighting on Bataan doubtless will appear. They will be based upon fuller information, but it is a question whether they will exceed, either in craftsmanship or in dramatic power, Mr. Hersey's performance." S. T. Williamson

+ N Y Times p4 Je 7 '42 950w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 18:78 Je 6 '42 300w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R of Lit 25:20 J1 4 '42 1250w

"The biography of MacArthur is shrewdly and competently done. But when Arthur Hersey describes the men of Bataan and their battles, feeling and words blend in the unforced flow that is the pulse of music and writing."

+ Time 39:80 Je 1 '42 900w

HERSKOVITS, MELVILLE JEAN. Myth of the Negro past. 374p $4 Harper
572.96 Negro race 42-447
For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"All praise to the author for bringing to bear on his problem his wide knowledge of West Africa and of American Negro culture and for filling in certain gaps in our knowledge of Africanisms. Lack of space forbids detailed criticisms, but a few may be mentioned briefly. (1) The 'myth' framework of the argument seems definitely overdone. (2) The author's compulsion to correct the story leads him to magnify the importance of many minor gaps in previous works, to depreciate the work of authors who have interpreted the Negro without recourse to Africanisms, and to an unwarranted enthusiasm over the 'practical values' of an exact knowledge of Africanisms. (3) There is not sufficient perspective on the quantitative aspects of Africanisms in relation to gross trends in acculturation. . . Author and publisher have used the system of placing all footnotes in the back of the book—an abominable practice when, as in the present work, the author so frequently does not tell who is being quoted." G. B. Johnson

Am Soc R 7:289 Ap '42 800w

Reviewed by W. E. B. Du Bois
Ann Am Acad 222:226 Jl '42 850w

"For almost two decades, now, Dr. Herskovits has struggled with the Negro Question, and out of it has brought gems of information. This time the good man has plunged into the Negro's past as no other scholar has done. The book is too long and involved to be popular—that is to say, the masses will hardly read it with understanding for many moons—but it should go on the shelves of professional as well as amateur students of America's colored onethenth." George Streator

+ Commonweal 35:570 Mr 27 '42 1050w

"For scholars and even educated laymen the real interest of this book is not its effort to prove that the Negro had a cultural background in Africa but its analysis of the extent to which African culture survives and still influences the behavior and institutions of the Negro. . . The author's analysis of African survivals in the religious life of the Negro is also well grounded, though he indulges in a type of speculation that cannot be regarded as scientific proof of his thesis. . . In making these rather severe criticisms of Professor Herskovits's book, it is not the intention of the reviewer to imply that the book is without merit. In fact, the book is in a number of respects a distinct contribution to our knowledge of the American Negro and should certainly provide a corrective to facile generalizations concerning the survival of African culture in the United States." E. F. Frazier

+ Nation 154:195 F 14 '42 1200w

Reviewed by I. C. Brown
Social Forces 21:110 O '42 600w

Reviewed by Bruno Lasker
Survey G 31:258 My '42 450w
Wis Lib Bul 38:42 Mr '42

HERZBERG, MAX JOHN, ed. Radio and English teaching: experiences, problems, and procedures. (National council of teachers of English. English monograph) 246p $2 Appleton-Century

371.333 Radio in education. English literature—Study and teaching 41-21407

Collection of articles on the place of radio in the classroom and in modern life. Partial contents: The background of radio; History and problems of educational broadcasts; English and radio; Radio in education: a bibliography of publications and of sources of useful material. Bibliography.

Booklist 38:204 F 15 '42

School & Society 54:312 O 11 '41 30w

HESELT, ERNEST HERMAN, ed. See Instituto internacional de literatura iberoamericana. Outline history of Spanish American literature

HESS, FJERIL. Handkerchief holiday; decorations by Edward C. Caswell. 247p $2 Macmillan 42-22144

"Another important story to add to this author's much-read trilogy on Czechoslovakia after the last war and her seven other titles for older boys and girls. This time, [it is] based on citizenship, neighborliness, freedom; and the title derived from the important step taken toward Americanization by the Polish girl when she exchanges her native handkerchief for an American hat. Marcy Curtis comes East from Utah, where she had been teaching school, to begin foreign community work with Russians, Slovaks, Poles, Hungarians and Germans in Marshfield, New Jersey." Library J

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p9 O 25 '42 430w

Reviewed by B. E. Weston
Library J 67:913 O 15 '42 130w

"The story is formless and, perhaps because so many personalities are involved, leaves one with a sense of incompleteness. There is a rather pointless spy episode and Marcy's beaux are left dangling in midair, possibly with a view to a sequel, but in her experiences with her 'handkerchief' girls there are warmth and interest and a challenge to understanding and sympathy for the newcomer within our gates." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p9 N 1 '42 240w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 27 '42 140w

HESS, FJERIL. Leather Pants; il. by Fred C. Rodewald. 278p $2 Macmillan (W) 41-14770

Pete Brandon and his father were stranded in Mexico, with no money, when Mr. Brandon was offered a job in Nevada. An offer of a ride followed and presently Pete found himself on a dry farm, among real cowboys, and wearing leather pants. The story, describing Pete's experiences on the "ranch," is for ages ten to fourteen.

"Pete Brandon is a thirteen-year-old boy of the present day, but he lives through as genuine pioneering as in a hundred years ago. That gives special tang to a rousing outdoor adventure tale." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 F 22 '42 250w

"For boys and girls of ten to fourteen. Highly recommended for all libraries." B. E. Weston

+ Library J 66:799 S 15 '41 50w

HESSE, HERMAN CARL. Engineering tools and processes; a study of production technique. 627p il $4.50 Van Nostrand

621.9 Mechanical engineering. Machine tools 41-24263

"This text has been developed for a one-semester lecture or reading course in engineering shop processes and practices. The first three chapters offer a survey of basic materials, elements and devices, to acquaint the student with engineering nomenclature and terminology. . . The text then takes up the usual shop processes and machines, continues with discussions of production machinery and processes not ordinarily presented in college laboratories, and illustrates the application of these methods to the manufacture of specific parts. The text concludes with a discussion of important considerations in design and the manner in which they affect production economy and feasibility. The presentation is pictorial wherever possible although adequate explanatory material is included." (Pref) Questions and problems. Index.

Booklist 38:227 Mr 1 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:8 Ja '42

HESTER, MRS HARRIET (HAMMOND). 300 sugar saving recipes, 181p $1.50 Barrows 641.5 Cookery (W) 42-36262

A book of menus and recipes for war time. The author is home adviser on a Chicago radio station. Contents: Baking without sugar; Sugarless desserts; Preparing vegetables without sugar; Salads and salad dressings; Busy-day meals; Economy meals; Conserving with leftovers; Wartime replacements; Canning and preserving; The school lunch; Balancing meals. Index.

Booklist 38:436 J1 15 '42
Christian Science Monitor p6 J1 7 '42 90w
J Home Econ 36:486 S '42 80w
Pratt p14 D '42

HETZEL, FREDERIC VALERIUS, and AL-BRIGHT, RUSSELL K. Belt conveyors and belt elevators. 3d ed rev and enl 439p il $6 Wiley

621.8674 Conveying machinery. Hoisting machinery. Belts and belting 41-23623

"This has been a standard work on the subject ever since its publication in 1922; because the second edition of 1926 has been out of print for several years past, it was decided to issue a third edition. The preface to the first edition said, 'This is intended to be a practical book. It is not a mere restatement of what already appears in trade advertisements, nor does it contain descriptions of installations of conveying and elevating machinery. It aims rather to explain principles and the reasons for doing things.' It has been the purpose of the authors to follow the same principles in this present third edition, telling what is new in present-day practice, what is better and why, and what has become obsolete and why." (Pref. to 3d ed) Index.

Booklist 38:192 F 1 '42
N Y New Tech Bks 27:23 Ap '42

HEWES, MRS AGNES (DANFORTH). Jack-hammer; drill runners of the mountain highways. 269p $2 Knopf

(W) 42-19166

Ed Minot, abruptly awakened from his social life in college by the death of his father and the loss of all his money, is lucky to get a job as axeman with a survey party in the northern Cascade mountains. He has both good luck and bad, learns about the dangerous job of road building, and finally establishes a small construction company. For older boys.

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Atlantic 170:149 D '42 120w
Booklist 39:16 S '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p9 S 27 '42 350w

"Mrs. Hewes knows the west coast and many of its engineering problems intimately; her details are therefore accurate and her portrayal of the hard-bitten men, brutal, or generous, tenacious and cool, is a vivid one. She has written a forceful vocational story of the way in which Ed Minot made good." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:341 S '42 90w

"Describes a hazardous occupation, leaving reader with more appreciation and knowledge of highway and bridge construction." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 67:798 S 15 '42 80w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Library J 67:896 O 15 '42 20w

"Mrs. Hewes has provided the kind of vocational reading which we gladly welcome, for it is a dramatic human and convincing story as well as an authoritative picture of the way in which our great highways, with their magnificent bridges, their tunnels through the mountains, are constructed." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 S 13 '42 420w

Wis Lib Bul 38:142 O '42

HEWES, LAURENCE ILSLEY. American highway practice. (V 1) 459p il $5 Wiley

625.7 Roads. Highway engineering (42-2710)

"A comprehensive treatment of present rural highway survey, design, and construction practice in the United States." (Pref) Volume one covers highway location and design, grading the roadbed, landscaping, and various surfaces including sand-clay, macadam, gravel and intermediate bituminous surfaces. Volume two will give the higher types of surfaces.

Booklist 38:247 Mr 15 '42

"Long observation of the practical application of theory to actual highway work gives the author unusual facility in evaluating this new knowledge. Comprehensive bibliographies at the end of each chapter are a valuable element of the book."

+ Eng N 128:80 F 26 '42 160w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:43 J1 '42

HEXTER, JACK H. Reign of King Pym. 245p $2.75 Harvard univ. press [11s 6d Oxford]

B or 92 Pym, John. Great Britain—History—Puritan revolution, 1642-1660 A41-4164

"Not quite three centuries ago (December 15, 1643) 10 men carried John Pym to his grave in Westminster Abbey. Royalists at Oxford had a festive bonfire; London was in mourning for the Parliament leader who was known as King Pym. The story of his career as leader of the House of Commons 1640-43 while half of England was royalist and the other wasn't forms [this] volume." Springf'd Republican

"This is a good and valuable book. In the first section is displayed great competence at meticulous historical reconstruction and in the last pages the brilliant projection of an idea. Even here Dr. Hexter has the self-control not to ride his hobby too hard." T. C. Mendenhall II

+ Am Hist R 48:93 O '42 800w

"The style is lively and the story is handled in a uniformly interesting manner. Like the others in the Harvard Historical Studies, the book is well designed and indexed." Morley Ayearst

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:175 F '42 250w

Reviewed by C. L. Grose

Pol Sci Q 57:638 D '42 290w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 11 '42 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p224 My 2 '42 600w

HEYER, GEORGETTE (MRS G. R. ROUGIER). Faro's daughter. 274p $2 Doubleday [8s Heinemann]

(W) 42-13732

Romantic tale of England in Regency days. The heroine is a beautiful young woman who runs a faro table in her aunt's gaming house in London. Two of the contestants for the hand of the fair Deb are young Lord Mablethorpe, and his older, more worldly cousin, Ravenscar.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p14 My 17 '42 250w

"Altogether, this is a gay and dashing story which should not be taken too seriously." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 18 '42 160w

"The ending of 'Faro's Daughter,' a Regency comedy, is early in sight, and the only question is how that ending is to be arrived at. Arrival is expertly made, with some good phrasing in dialogue but with invention hardly fresh enough. The sound construction calls for a compliment." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 14 '41 80w

"It is all done very neatly and with deft wit." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p23 My 10 '42 280w

HEYER, GEORGETTE—Continued

"Faro's Daughter may appeal to unsophisticated readers, for it is a lively enough effort in 'period' stuff." Kate O'Brien

Spec 167:474 N 14 '41 30w

"A most entertaining battle of wits, ending in a way which may be unexpected as far as the plot is concerned, but which will be no surprise to confirmed romance readers. The story is redeemed from the ruck of such productions by the author's light-hearted wit and her peculiar skill in the delineation of silly women."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p553 N 8 '41 180w

HEYLIGER, WILLIAM. Gasoline jockey; il. by Robb Beebe. 257p $2 Appleton-Century 42-10025

Dramatic story for older boys, a story of the great freight transport trucks which travel between New York and Chicago. Bill Markey got into the game because he found himself getting too used to comfort. In the great fight between Bengal lines and a rival firm, Bill's desire for adventure found an outlet.

"Perhaps there will be a swifter story for boys than this before the year is over, but so far there has not been. What Heyliger himself calls the 'strange excitement of high-strung recklessness' never lets down. . . 'Gasoline Jockey' has in it part of that rough danger-loving, death-defying, real America of which we dream." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ag 2 '42 380w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 27 '42 120w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p17 Je 21 '42 80w

HEYLIGER, WILLIAM. SOS radio patrol. 180p $2 Dodd

(W) 42-8145

Story of four Boy scouts marooned on a river island during a flood, and how they managed to come thru courageously. Grades six to eight.

Booklist 38:311 Ap 15 '42

"William Heyliger has been writing boys' books for thirty years; for half that time I have been reading them, always with respect, as fast as they came out. But none has come out so fast as this, and so far as I am concerned it is the best American Boy Scout story yet written." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Mr 29 '42 330w

"Service and loyalty are emphasized. Recommended." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 67:369 Ap 15 '42 40w

"There is hair-raising suspense in this story, but its tenseness lies not only in physical dangers but in the question of individual characters, convincingly built up by speed and action, meeting the highest tests of fortitude and responsibility." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 26 '42 260w

Wis Lib Bul 38:99 Je '42

HEYM, STEFAN. Hostages. 362p $2.50 Putnam (W) 42-23672

A novel of the Nazi occupation of Prague. It follows the experiences of a group of hostages who are ordered shot for the supposed murder of a Nazi, a murder which, it is revealed, was a suicide, and was being used by Heydrich and his henchmen for their own purposes.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (10) N Y Times (9) RB (1)

"For sheer horror, physical and mental, scenes in this novel reach—some will say pass—the reader's limits of endurance. But they are a part of the design, which is not only to tell a tale of Nazi oppression in the city of Prague but to study the psychology of fear. The narrative itself is as engrossing as one is likely to read in many a day, but hardly more so than the analysis of fear in both victims and oppressors." R. M. Gay

Atlantic 170:156 D '42 250w

Booklist 39:72 N 1 '42

"The author, a twenty-nine-year-old German writer, now settled in this country, is well informed on the happenings in the former Czech Republic. His novel is written with skill and force—a force often mounting to fury." Felizia Seyd

+ Books p5 O 18 '42 1100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '42

"Parts of Hostages are effectively moving, but the writing is uneven in this respect. In constructing the story, the author has overworked the long arm of coincidence. Most of the characters fail to emerge clearly and convincingly." Russell Fraser

+ Current Hist 3:358 D '42 330w

"Stefan Heym's novel about the Nazis in Czecho-Slovakia will set your hair on end. . . You get the impression that Mr. Heym hates violence almost too much, he is so fascinated by it. But neither his sincere passion against Nazism nor the emotions which his readers will bring to his subject can raise his book to the place claimed for it in the ranks of serious anti-fascist literature." Diana Trilling

+ Nation 155:517 N 14 '42 600w

"A powerful first novel, written in excellent idiomatic English. . . The author is no Koestler or Malraux, but for the minor leagues this is a wonderful book."

+ New Repub 107:618 N 9 '42 180w

"There is good melodrama which need not blush in the company of the season's best fiction. The author accepts his characters for what they are, personifications of good or evil, and gets on with the business of history. But there is also moralistic melodrama such as 'Hostages,' in which the author's first concern is to insist, and insist again, that his heroes are good and his villains evil, as if their qualities were still open to question. . . In the last few pages the story rises above itself and comes to a sufficiently moving conclusion." Harold Strauss

+ N Y Times p28 O 25 '42 700w

"Despite a few minor lapses, 'Hostages' is a terrifyingly effective narrative. . . I should warn you that the book includes a torture scene and a rape that belong among the most hideous in fiction. But it also brings us Mr. Heym's triumphant working-out of his knowledge that the terrorist, too, is terrified and can be slain with his own fear." Vincent McHugh

+ New Yorker 18:89 O 17 '42 450w

"Mr. Heym has remarkable skill. In spite of the shortcomings and the patent unevenness of this first novel, both his power of imagination and his psychological insight are notable. Nor is there any doubt as to the sincerity of his wrath. His trouble is that his own ardent desire for retribution gets the better of him as a narrator." Robert Peck

+ Sat R of Lit 25:20 O 24 '42 600w

Reviewed by Sarah Schiff

Spring'd Republican p7e N 15 '42 750w

Time 40:112 O 26 '42 430w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R ns 32:vi winter '43 230w

HIBBERT, MRS ELOISE TALCOTT. Jesuit adventure in China: during the reign of K'ang Hsi [Eng title: K'ang Hsi: emperor of China]. 295p il $5 Dutton [15s Routledge]

951 K'ang Hsi, emperor of China. Jesuits in China. China—History 41-14021

"K'ang Hsi, third Emperor of the Manchu dynasty of China, was undoubtedly one of the great monarchs of history, and it is therefore somewhat remarkable that no complete history of his life and times has been written in any European language during the past 200 years; the present work, compiled from the writings of the Jesuit fathers resident at the Court of Peking, and other contemporary observers, brings together in a consecutive narrative the chief events of his long reign (1662-1722), with especial emphasis on his relations with Europe and on the influence exercised upon the Western world by China under his enlightened rule." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Bibliography. Index.

"It is good reading, whether it is a contribution to scholarship or not; and since there are more people who want authentic color from an Oriental book than those who want the indisputable facts of Chinese history or of missionary work in China, this is probably better reading for most of us than a better book might have been. If some of Mrs. Hibbert's best stories are fiction, they are not fiction of her invention, but are traditions which the Chinese like to believe; and they are passed along in graceful form—so there you are. . . . However, this is neither a satisfactory biography of the Emperor K'ang-hsi nor a satisfactory history of the Jesuits in China during his reign. For years I have been hearing from Europeans and Americans in China how badly both these jobs needed to be done. After reading every word of Mrs. Hibbert's book, with real enjoyment as already testified, I can assure any one who feels like undertaking them that both have yet to be done." Rodney Gilbert

+ — Books p17 Ap 20 '41 1300w

"For the general reader and for the elementary student in the field of cultural relations between East and West, Mrs. Hibbert's popular study of the K'ang Hsi emperor and his Jesuit friends is of considerable value and great interest. For the scholar and the advanced student the work is not one of merit." H. F. MacNair

+ — J Religion 22:103 Ja '42 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p510 O 5 '40 800w

HICHENS, ROBERT SMYTHE. New way of life. 592p $2.75 Doubleday

42-7339

"This is the story of Noel Herriot, a young English curate who for his health journeys to Touggourt in the very center of the Sahara Desert; of Madame de Plunier, the beautiful and seemingly self-contained wife of the French commandant; of la Marechale, the desert tribeswoman who watched over the native dancing house in Touggourt; and of Aziza, the lovely dancing girl in the green shawl who could not resist the call of her people." Publisher's note

"In the novels of Robert Hichens the sands of the desert never grow cold. The radiation of his romances takes care of that. . . . If you are looking for something that will take your mind off the radio for close to 600 pages, here is a story with the ingredients skilfully blended." Lisle Bell

Books p22 Mr 8 '42 260w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse
Manchester Guardian p3 O 16 '42 60w

"The novel is very long but it does not tire the reader, partly because Noel himself is a real person, so real one closes the book wondering what he will do with his life, now that the old ways are forever closed to him by the change which has taken place within him, as well as by his own sincerity. That gradual change is admirably depicted. Very human in his uncertainties, his shyness, his weaknesses, Noel is not flabby, but proves that he can 'take it.'" L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 1 '42 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p501 O 10 '42 330w

HICKERSON, CLYDE VERNON. Twofold power of the gospel. 164p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

252 Sermons 42-18086

Ten sermons by the pastor of the Baptist temple, San Antonio, Texas. It is his thesis that the social gospel and the gospel of salvation are indivisible—one and the same gospel—and one cannot function without the other.

Christian Century 59:758 Je 10 '42 40w

"This book should be required reading for every Southern Baptist minister. It will be helpful to any minister. . . . The only major criticism of these sermons is that they show an apparent unawareness of the present world war. There is only one direct reference to it. Yet much of what they say is admirably suited to the needs of men in the midst of the war." R. C. Kennedy

+ Christian Century 60:18 Ja 6 '43 480w

"This hard-hitting pastor, in a comparatively small volume, places before his readers the naked problems now confronting the citizens of the country. And however much one may disagree with his theology, there will be common agreement in the necessity for righting the wrongs he so vividly depicts, and in the fundamental fact that only through faith in God and the seeking of divine direction will these conditions be ameliorated. It is a volume both to awaken and inspire the reader." A. F. G.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 22 '42 1000w

HICKMAN, CLEVELAND PENDLETON. Physiological hygiene. rev ed 482p il $3.25 Prentice-Hall

613 Hygiene. Physiology 42-18444

Revised edition of a college textbook first published in 1937. "New material on such subjects as preventive medicine and nutrition has been added, as well as two chapters on common infectious diseases and dental hygiene." (Booklist) Glossary. Index.

"There are many errors in the book, but who could write a text covering all of medicine and physiology without getting into trouble? It has one quality absent from most elementary books. Whether right or wrong, the student reader will want to know more! A textbook for college use that accomplishes such an end may be pardoned for errors incident upon too expansive a plan of presentation." C. K. Drinker

Am J Pub Health 32:1296 N '42 400w

Booklist 39:142 D 15 '42

HICKS, GRANVILLE. Only one storm. 427p $2.75 Macmillan

(W) 42-6009

Canby Kittredge, a native of a small New England town, goes to New York and becomes a successful advertising agent. Troubled by the turn of international events, in 1937 he returns to his old home, buys a printing press and settles down with his family. The daily life of the village, and Canby's place in it looms large in this novel of ideas, as he struggles to reconcile his own leanings toward communism with the course of history in the late 1930's.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (14) B & T (1) PW (6) RB (1) W (1)

Reviewed by R. M. Gay
Atlantic Je '42 220w

Booklist 38:275 Ap 1 '42

"Granville Hicks is himself one of those affirmative 'men of good will' whom he celebrates in this town-meeting kind of novel laid in a Berkshire town (1938-'41) in which a town meeting is the crisis. But those who think this is going to be a tract, an epistle, a Utopia (as did this reviewer in advance), will get the surprise of their lives. This is a story, a big American novel, and as fine a one in all those essentials that go to make a novel—story, people, style adapted to theme, meaning and significance—as we have had or are likely to have in many moons." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p1 Ap 5 '42 1500w

"Not only has he written a story which has all the requirements of a good novel, but through the medium of fiction Mr. Hicks has been able to stimulate constructive thought about the social and political problems of our age." Morton DeWolfe

+ Boston Globe p17 Ap 8 '42 500w

HICKS, GRANVILLE—Continued

Reviewed by N. E. Monroe
Cath World 155:371 Je '42 500w

Reviewed by R. H. Goodale
Christian Century 59:959 Ag 5 '42 500w

Reviewed by E. K. Shieler
Churchman 156:14 My 15 '42 150w

"It might be said about Granville Hicks's longish, accurate and somewhat dull novel that the sum is greater than its parts. . . Mr. Hicks is on the side of the angels. But one can't help wondering what Canby Kittredge would have done if Granville Hicks had projected the novel past the time of Germany's attack on Russia." Harry Sylvester
+ — Commonweal 36:92 My 15 '42 450w

"A long and leisurely book, sometimes tedious, sometimes very much alive. Not to the general taste but well done of its kind." L. M. Kinloch
+ Library J 67:224 Mr 1 '42 50w

"'Only One Storm' actually is less a novel than a kind of mental clearing-house for Mr. Hicks's own thoughts, and he makes constant use of his characters—who are so numerous that they have to be listed formally in the front of the book—to dwell upon and explain his own fears and doubts about American society and the state of the world. . . When Mr. Hicks frankly editorializes, and refrains from making his characters do so, he is often moving and thoughtful; and he shows, as he did in 'I Like America,' a sturdy optimism about the world to come. But prospective readers of 'Only One Storm' should still be warned that when they buy it as a novel they are really buying a protracted town meeting in disguise." L. B. Salomon
+ Nation 154:404 Ap 4 '42 240w

Reviewed by S. E. Hyman
New Repub 106:468 Ap 6 '42 350w

"While the intellectual discussions of political faiths make the core of the story, it is the description of life in a small town which gives it its meat and its flavor. The book is crowded with people who are as real as earth and rain, not rustic 'characters' but men and women who are likable and who are not. . . Mr. Hicks tells his story in fine, clean prose that shows the hand of a gifted writer and a superlative craftsman." Rose Feld
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 5 '42 850w

"Much of the argument seems pretty dated, not to say stilted. I like Mr. Hicks best when he drops his brilliant young conversationalists and trots on the scene a group of genuine New England townsfolk. They talk with much natural saltiness, though I cannot say that any of them is very precisely characterized. 'Only One Storm' has a real value, but its value is documentary and historical rather than literary." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 18:63 Ap 4 '42 180w

"It is a novel of ideas, with all the values and sacrifices inherent in that kind of writing. That is, its ideas are more stirring than those who express them, its landscape is intellectual rather than physical, and so also are its passions. The people in this book miss much of the wholeness of life that a creative artist might have given them. Nevertheless they are alive and stirring, if only with the ideas that move them. They illustrate every shade of thought that colors the American mind; with them Hicks is charting that mind for us, as it shifts under the impact of current history." N. L. Rothman
+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 Ap 4 '42 700w

"This wise book is not designed to instruct other peoples about America, but its pattern is universal enough to do so, if they will read." Leon Whipple
+ Survey G 31:296 Je '42 300w

"This is a timely description of the evolution, habits, hopes and hates of a long-neglected U.S. fauna, the intelligentsiac lefties. It is probably the most readably realistic novel yet written about them, because humorless Author Hicks takes these strange creatures almost as seriously as they take themselves. For the same reason, it is one of the funniest." Time 39:87 Ap 6 '42 600w

HICKS, JOHN RICHARD; HICKS, MRS URSULA KATHLEEN (WEBB), and ROS-TAS, LASZLO. The taxation of war wealth. 304p $3.50 (12s 6d) Oxford

336.24 Excess profits tax 41-11523

"The contents fall into two well-defined parts. There is a theoretical analysis concerned with the general problem of war finance, but placing especial emphasis upon the kinds of taxes which are presumed to fall upon incomes associated with the effects of the war effort itself, and the so-called 'capital levy.' In addition, there is a series of chapters which presents in summary fashion the experiences of nations that have already attempted the application of this sort of taxation." Am Econ R

"A more timely book than this would be difficult to imagine. Presenting an interesting and, considering the pressure under which it must have been written, a remarkably thorough analysis of the excess profits tax and the capital levy, this volume is required reading for anyone seriously interested in the problems of taxation during a period of intense war effort." E. E. Oakes
+ Am Econ R 32:153 Mr '42 1500w

"This book was undertaken as the result of a grant made by the National Institute of Economic and Social Research in Great Britain. Although the time allowed for its preparation was limited, the work is a highly informative and valuable study of the taxation of war wealth, and should be read by all students and officials who are concerned with war finance." T. R. Snaveley
+ Ann Am Acad 220:209 Mr '42 500w

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 29 '41 320w

"This valuable contribution to the literature on the taxation of war wealth may be recommended on a number of grounds. It is the fruit of very mature and detached consideration, free from any dogmatic bias. It will retain its value even when expressions of other points of view, more striking and attractive at the moment, are of no further great interest." Heinrich Brüning
+ Harvard Law R 56:145 S '42 1450w

Reviewed by J. V. Van Sickle
J Pol Econ 50:293 Ap '42 700w

"Professor and Mrs. Hicks have, with the assistance of Dr. Rostas, marshalled the economic and financial lessons of the last war, compared them with the experience of other countries, and used them to make practical suggestions. Perhaps the best thing about this book, apart from its lucid style, is the firm political judgment by which economic theories have been tested." R. H. F.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 15 '41 450w

"On all counts—the establishment of general principles, the recapitulation of the lessons of past history, the comparison of the varied experience of other countries in this field, and the concrete proposals put forward—this work is an outstanding contribution to a most important subject." C. W. Guillebaud
+ Spec 166:376 Ap 4 '41 650w

"All will not agree with the authors' conclusions; but their comprehensive treatment will be of value to all. Particularly useful is the thorough analysis of administrative problems and of various difficulties though more might perhaps have been said about the possibility of shifting excess profits taxation to consumers in increased prices. But beyond question the book does much to extend knowledge and clarify thought upon its subject." Time [London] Lit Sup p187 Ap 19 '41 800w

HIGHET, MRS HELEN (MACINNES). See MacInnes, H.

HILDEBRAND, DIETRICH VON. Marriage [tr. by Emmanuel Chapman and Daniel Sullivan]. 64p $1.25 Longmans

173.1 Marriage 42-36203

"A purely theological and speculative consideration of marriage, from the Roman Catholic point of view, by a German Catholic philosopher who, having fortunately escaped from Germany before his anti-nazi sentiments entailed any worse consequences than voluntary exile, is now in America." Christian Century

"Professor von Hildebrand's book has been too little known in this country. Now that it has been translated—skillfully—it will, one may reasonably hope, be widely read."

+ Cath World 156:122 O '42 320w

Christian Century 59:562 Ap 29 '42 60w

"The book is a protest against any low or limited view of the marriage relation and a plea for greater respect for the uniqueness, integrity, and dignity of the individual person. The author's discussion of celibacy, virginity, and procreation is a bit subtle. Although we may not agree with all his conclusions, yet we must admit that the book as a whole is a fundamentally sound protest against the present-day laxity of marriage relations." W. F. Thompson

+ Churchman 156:16 S 1 '42 200w

Reviewed by C. Bruhl

Commonweal 36:234 Je 26 '42 350w

HILL, MRS ERNESTINE. Australian frontier. 332p il $3.50 Doubleday

$19.4 Australia—Description and travel (W) 42-22678

Records a journey from Melbourne, Australia, to the Northwest territory made by a well-known woman journalist. She describes pearl diving, gold mining, crocodiles, native dances, beachcombers, mixed races, among other pursuits and customs. The book was first published in England about five years ago, under a different title: The Great Australian Loneliness. Index.

Booklist 39:69 N 1 '42

"If you ever hear any one say 'there is no more frontier' hand him this book. And for sheer interest in the never-ending story of what men will endure for the sake of a living or of riches, read it yourself. What the author looks like, how old she is, whether married or single you will never know from her book, for she has written about the Australian frontier and its people, not of herself. With zest, humor and a warm sympathy, she brings to life a frontier that may have a future and above all the 'knights errant' of the wayback, as she calls them, who opened the way for the author and have paved the way for the next generation of pioneers." M. C. Hubbard

+ Books p5 N 1 '42 1800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '42

"There is rich and adventurous reading for the American book-lover this winter in 'Australian Frontier.' . . This reviewer, an Australian, recommends Ernestine Hill's book with reservations to the American public." J. G. Mustagh

+ Commonweal 37:99 N 13 '42 280w

"Much needed information. Glossary. Recommended for purchase." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 67:793 S 15 '42 50w

"It is easy to read, it makes full use of adventures traveling in the 'outback' entails, and it manages to suggest the scenery, the climate, and the people of each region with admirable concreteness. 'Australian Frontier' is a good story well told." C. H. Grattan

+ N Y Times p6 O 18 '42 1300w

HILL, MRS GRACE (LIVINGSTON). Girl of the woods. 303p $2 Lippincott

42-6833

Two motherless young people: the girl of the woods, and young Revel Radcliffe, meet and find solace in religion and in each other's company. When worldly relatives try to separate them, they are only partly successful, and in the end the two go on together.

"It is a story very like most of this writer's work, and we are reasonably certain that the resemblance is intentional." Lisle Bell

Books p16 Mr 22 '42 150w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p22 Mr 22 '42 160w

HILL, MRS GRACE (LIVINGSTON) Street of the city. 314p $2 Lippincott

42-23226

Story of a charming American girl, who happened to live on the wrong side of the tracks, and the young man whose snobbish friends thought Frannie was not good enough for him. A secret short-wave transmitter planted in the cellar of Frannie's home brought things to a crisis.

"It is no radical departure from Mrs. Hill's accustomed manner and material. Sophistication is still a synonym for ungodliness, romance is the handmaiden of religion, and young people who seek hymen come hymnin'." Lisle Bell

Books p22 N 1 '42 60w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p28 N 1 '42 180w

HILL, HELEN, and MAXWELL, VIOLET. The children's garden; with il. by Lydia Parmelee. 162p $1.75 Macmillan

41-24969

True story of a wartime nursery school in France, written for children by the two American women who ran the school. There is a story about each of the seventeen little children who came to the children's garden.

"[The children] all seem very real and other children will like to hear about them from this true story book." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:39 Ja '42 100w

"Told in simple, unaffected fashion, these true stories of real children will appeal to boys and girls from 7 to 10. The book is an inspiring record of an enterprise carried out with unselfish devotion and genuine love for children." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 D 28 '41 400w

HILL, JUSTINA HAMILTON. Silent enemies; the story of the diseases of war and their control. 266p il $2.50 Putnam

614.4 Infection and infectious diseases. Epidemics. World war, 1939—Medical and sanitary affairs (W) 42-25916

"By author of Germs and the Man, a distinguished bacteriologist at Johns Hopkins. Straightforward discussion of diseases intensified by war, especially infections. Miss Hill discusses new diseases, role of experiment, the medical corps, jungle diseases, etc." (Library J) Index.

Library J 67:952 N 1 '42 50w

"Precise, up to date, and attractively written, though there is a need for a somewhat fuller and more technical treatment."

+ New Yorker 18:59 D 26 '42 50w

HILL, MAX. Exchange ship. 312p $2.50 Farrar

940.548173 World war, 1939—Personal narratives. American. World war, 1939—Japan. World war, 1939—Prisoners and prisons (W) 43-355

At the time war broke out in December, 1941, Mr Hill was chief of bureau of the Associated press in Tokyo. His book combines the story of his treatment by the Japanese during the months before he sailed away on an exchange ship, with an account of the voyage home and summaries of the stories of other Americans on board. Index.

Booklist 39:221 F 1 '43

"Although loosely written, as might be expected since publishers are anxious to get the latest word before the public as soon as possible, the book is the last word on Japan—and the first to be written by an American imprisoned in the enemy capital." Joseph Newman

HILL, MAX—Continued

+ — Books p4 Ja 17 '43 1250w

"There seems to be need for a popular book of up-to-date information about Japan and her people. It is a pity that Mr. Hill's 'Exchange Ship' does not quite fill that need. While it contains much good material, it is obviously a rather hasty job, lacking a plan, with too many disturbing gaps and repetitions. American correspondents recently out of enemy-occupied Europe have written some excellent analyses of what they saw. It is to be hoped that their example will inspire some of the correspondents just back from Japan." Emil Lengyel

N Y Times p22 Ja 10 '43 950w

"A good deal of fresh information, soberly handled."

+ New Yorker 18:52 Ja 2 '43 50w

Reviewed by Wenzell Brown

Sat R of Lit 26:5 Ja 9 '43 2800w

HILL, RUSSELL. Desert war, 310p $2.75 Knopf 940.542 World war, 1939—Campaigns and battles—Africa. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American (W) 42-18776

The Cairo correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune, who has seen service also in Berlin, Bulgaria, Greece, and Yugoslavia, describes the second British invasion of Cyrenaica. He was permitted to visit oasis outposts, supply dumps, and Tobruk, and traveled with the troops in the thick of the campaign. His book answers many puzzling questions about the war in the desert.

"The book is decidedly timely." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic 170:134 O '42 220w

Booklist 39:8 S '42

Bookmark 4:11 N '42

"It is impossible for me to sit back calmly, coldly and critically appraising a tale written hotly at the front. I know Russell Hill, having met him as a colleague in Cairo; I devoured his book at a gulp, in a single afternoon. I could not let it drop. From writing such as this, I believe, by men temporarily stationed around the various fronts of the war, filing their daily censored stories and anxious to tell more of what they have seen, people at home may really understand how the war is going and why." Allen Raymond

+ Books p1 Ag 2 '42 1500w

"Some excellent maps and pictures greatly increase the value of this book."

+ Nation 155:159 Ag 22 '42 240w

Reviewed by Leigh White

New Repub 107:292 S 7 '42 450w

"The military-minded will enjoy this book, following the British Army along the coast, watching its advances and retreats, its losses and successes. The author has gone into considerable detail in his accounts of tactics and strategy, and his maps nicely mark out the terrain. The layman will enjoy it as the exciting, personal story of a reporter, young in years but wise in experience, who went right up front where the bombs and shells were falling and brought back a lively tale of life and death in the desert." G. H. Copeland

+ N Y Times p15 Ag 16 '42 1050w

Reviewed by Raoul Aglion

Sat R of Lit 25:12 Ag 29 '42 700w

HILL, SAMUEL E. Teamsters and transportation. 248p $3.75 Am. council on public affairs 331.88156 Highway transportation. Motor trucks 42-12770

"The study examines the nature of the industry, its major problems, union attitudes and activities, collective bargaining experiences, and employer organizations. One is surprised at first to note that in this industry employer organizations have received union encouragement. It has been found simpler to negotiate one contract with one organization than to negotiate individually with the many employers in the industry." Am Pol Sci R

"The study should prove useful to the student and to the administrator of labor relations. It should not, however, be accepted as a study of typical employer-employee relationship." C. L. Larsen

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:584 Je '42 230w

"The author has preserved a fine balance in handling his material so that the study, replete with interesting facts, is at the same time surprisingly free from bias and questionable interpretation. It is reasonable to believe that findings would be different in some respects and definitely more useful if the study could be extended beyond the narrow boundaries of the New England area." Dale Yoder

+ Ann Am Acad 222:232 Jl '42 460w

Social Studies 33:240 My '42 30w

HILL, WARREN E., and EWING, CLAUDE H. Materials and methods for vocational training. 171p il $2 McGraw

371.42 Vocational education 42-5508

"In this publication the authors aim to meet the need for a text which will give the vocational teacher entering the teaching profession from industry specific information in an understandable and usable form. It presents a plan for the organization of individual instruction material that combines the shops and related subjects." (School & Society) Index.

School & Society 55:224 F 21 '42 50w

"The strong point of the book lies in its immediate and practical usability by the new teacher. The directions for writing instruction sheets, the differentiation between types of sheets, and the directions for the specific use of each type are exceptionally clear. The examples of types of instruction sheets, taken from those used at the Washburne Trade School, Chicago, are excellent. Directors of vocational-training schools should find this book valuable as a reference book to recommend to new teachers or as a textbook to use in classes for the training of teachers in service." E. C. Wittick

+ School R 50:469 Je '42 650w

HILLARY, RICHARD HOPE. Falling through space [Eng title: Last enemy]. 269p $2.50 Reynal [7s 6d Macmillan]

940.544 World war, 1939—Aerial operations. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, Australian. Great Britain. Royal air force (W) 42-36062

The account of a young British aviator's experiences just before the beginning of the World war, during his few weeks in action, and in his weary months in hospitals thereafter. His plane was shot down in flames, and fell into the North Sea, from which he was rescued, suffering from third degree burns on hands and face. The book also shows the author's development from a rather thoughtless college youth, into a man of understanding.

Booklist 38:231 Mr 1 '42

"It is not easy accurately to convey the quality of this book. It is written by a very young man; an older and more expert practitioner would have handled its central emotional problem more surely, skillfully and perhaps more convincingly, for it is a very big problem. But it could not have been handled more sincerely. And it would not be easy to better the restrained honesty of its account of an R.A.F. fighter squadron, of its men, their backgrounds, their experiences. Something more than just 'another R.A.F. book,' it gives a clearer vision of those few to whom so much is owed by so many than any book I happen to have seen." Walter Millis

+ Books p4 F 8 '42 950w

"Inevitably reminiscent of Saint Exupery's book and astonishingly similar in its conclusions. . . Richard Hillary's accounts of training and fighting with the R.A.F. will hold any boy." M. C. Scoggin

+ Library J 67:894 O 15 '42 60w

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 19 '42 200w

"Mr. Hillary is only now twenty-two. His is a first book both as to writing and thinking. It has not the charm or the brilliance or the resolution of 'Flight to Arras.' But for that very reason it serves to make real for us the individual ordeal in a world at war." Margaret Marshall

+ Nation 154:286 Mr 7 '42 200w

"Mr. Hillary is a good journalist, and his lively book is a self-centred, educated, and rather romantic young man's account of his mind and actions as a fighter pilot. There have been many works on this subject—they begin to be rather boring—but this is an attempt to get a little below the surface, to deal not only with adventure but with its aftermath, and its effects upon a personal philosophy. As Mr. Hillary's philosophy has been a common one for a generation, his story is worth a glance, even if, at the end, he does not take one very far." V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 24:12 JI 4 '42 750w

"Living to tell the tale is one thing; but telling the tale is another. A further consideration is the manner in which the tale is told. On all three the young British fighter pilot who wrote this book qualifies handsomely, and adds luster to the literature of World War II." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 1 '42 700w

"Unless you are of Mr. Hillary's own generation—he's twenty-two, and I intend no irony in saying that he is not old for his age—you will probably skip his Oxford reminiscences and his views on war and patriotism, which are, precisely as you would expect, on a dormitory-discussion level. What gives his brief book real quality is the first-hand stuff on the R.A.F. . . . There have been many R.A.F. books and there will and should be more. This one is top-shelf." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:59 F 7 '42 340w
Pratt p23 O '42

"Most of it has been told before and with a more subjective and personal approach, except for the one brief and very good chapter in which the conversion of a conscientious objector is related. Not too bad a specimen of the usual RAF literature but not too remarkable either." F. P.

Sat R of Lit 25:20 F 7 '42 200w

"The last third of the book is the best. It describes in some detail the long, agonising process by which the author's face and hands have been rebuilt after having been half burnt off when he was shot down. There is no more effective subject than the fluctuating drama of a long and terrible illness. Hillary's treatment is not quite full or detailed enough to produce a great story. But if he will take a big subject such as this, of which he has a real and, in this case, excruciating, first-hand knowledge and cover it exhaustively, he might produce something very good indeed." John Strachey

Spec 169:44 JI 10 '42 500w

"The story of his training and his relatively brief service in the Spitfires is a grand tale well and sensitively told. It reflects the flair for expressive detail which marks the flying writer as distinguished from the fliers who have tried laboriously to write." Marshall Bragdon

+ Spring'd Republican p6 F 7 '42 1100w
Time 39:88 F 23 '42 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p290 Je 13 '42 650w

Wis Lib Bul 38:66 Ap '42

HILLIARD, ALEC ROWLEY. Outlaw island. 307p $2 Farrar

42-22270

Detective story.

Booklist 39:139 D 15 '42

"This is a meaty tale, plumb full of puzzlement and edification. We'd call it an improvement on 'Justice Be Damned,' prize-winner in last year's Mary Roberts Rinehart mystery contest." Will Cuppy

+ Books p16 O 11 '42 200w

"It is a strange and absorbing story that A. R. Hilliard tells, one that will add to the reputation he achieved with his earlier novel, 'Justice Be Damned.'" Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p10 O 4 '42 280w

"The story is not quite square with the reader but has a new angle in the Judge's slant on murder."

New Yorker 18:76 O 10 '42 90w

HILLYER, ROBERT SILLIMAN. My heart for hostage. 276p $2.50 Random house

42-36347

Delicately written story of a young American officer in Paris after the close of the European war, in 1919, and the beautiful French girl with whom he fell in love.

"I wish Mr. Hillyer had made young Reynolds more likable: Edward's distrust and his inhibitions cool off the romance too early, and incidentally cool off our sympathy. The exceptional quality of this book is to be found in individual scenes, in the swiftness with which it translates the feminine moods of Paris and Germaine, and in phrases well polished." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 170:142 N '42 240w

Booklist 39:72 N 1 '42

"'My Heart For Hostage' is a slight story as novels go but it is a deeply touching one. All of the characters of the book come alive in Mr. Hillyer's finely textured prose. The two young lovers are drawn with a tender sympathy and compassion for youth; the old people with a luster stroke and, at times, with satiric subtlety." Rose Feld

+ Books p3 O 11 '42 950w

"Written in restrained prose by well-known poet, with the few borderline scenes delicately handled. Recommended." H. G. Kelley

+ Library J 67:845 O 1 '42 100w

"With a little bounce and humor here would be material for a nice light novel, but instead, unfortunately, Mr. Hillyer has written a thin and nostalgic reminiscence."

+ Nation 155:521 N 14 '42 120w

"Robert Hillyer's second novel is a superbly written book, written perhaps as only a poet familiar with and expert in the disciplines of verse could write it. It is like his own lyrics in its restraint, its high finish, its delicacy . . . written in . . . a prose simple, lucid and flexible, perfectly adjusted to its subject. The result is a sustained performance with brilliant passages of lyric beauty such as the unforgettable scenes of Brittany. It is like a fine lyric in still another sense, and this is that when one is finished with it one is yet not finished with it: it sets up reverberations as various as they are many, charming and troubling, faint and sharp. The story hangs on, and the reader is haunted by what has been said and even more by what has not." Mark Schorer

+ N Y Times p6 O 11 '42 1000w

New Yorker 18:75 O 10 '42 60w

"It is a very simple narrative. You may forget its meaning but you will remember that you read it, and how moving it was." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 25:34 O 24 '42 450w

HIMBER, MRS CHARLOTTE. Famous in their twenties. 136p $1.50 Assn. press

920 U.S.—Biography

42-19411

"[Brief biographies of] ten widely known figures, with radio names conspicuously present—Lowell Thomas, Alec Templeton, Paul Robeson and Daniel A. Poling." Books

Books p15 JI 19 '42 100w

Christian Century 59:862 JI 8 '42 80w

HINDUS, MAURICE GERSCHON. Russia and Japan. 254p maps $2 Doubleday

327.47 Russia—Foreign relations—Japan.

Japan—Foreign relations—Russia

(W) 42-11514

Following his prophetic book: Hitler Cannot Conquer Russia (Book Review Digest, 1941) the author takes up the question of Russia and

HINDUS, M. G.—Continued

Japan, and gives it as his opinion that the two nations will be at war with each other before the present conflict is over.

Booklist 38:362 Je 1 '42

Bookmark 4:11 N '42

"There is a wealth of invaluable background in this book, much of it gathered on the ground in Russia, a keen analytical description of the great transition that has taken place in Russia from the last war down to this war, and there are revealing chapters dealing with the great potentialities of Siberia as an industrial center and with the role of the Arctic as a possible base against an army invading Siberia. All this helps us to see the great Russian problem in its true immensity. Here is a first-rate book, packed with useful information, replete with sound reasoning and likely to turn out as truly prophetic as Mr. Hindus's earlier predictions. It is enormously impressive and deserves a wide circulation." Wilfrid Fleisher

+ Books p1 My 3 '42 1350w

"Mr. Hindus indulges no loose optimism. Emulating the new Russia he so greatly admires, his is an outlook of sober realism, toil, and hard thinking." R. H. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 24 '42 360w

Reviewed by Hallett Abend

Nation 154:605 My 23 '42 900w

"Mr. Hindus has given a stimulating, informative preview of a war in the Far East that, after many false alarms, is quite likely to occur in no distant future." W. H. Chamberlin

+ N Y Times p11 My 3 '42 1100w

"On the whole, inspiring reading at a time when we can well use some." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:74 Ap 25 '42 250w

Pratt p21 O '42

"Mr. Hindus's appraisal of the powers at the command of the Russian people in this war of life and death is no more wishful thinking than his careful analyses of Jap ambitions in respect to them. Mr. Hindus's appraisal constitutes an authoritative book which dispels doubts and inspires hopes." Linton Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 25:12 My 30 '42 650w

"[This] is fascinating reading and contains information not easily accessible elsewhere to western readers, thanks to the Kremlin's close-mouthed attitude." Marshall Bragdon

+ Springfield Republican p6 Ap 25 '42 700w

Reviewed by E. O. Hauser

Survey G 31:364 Ag '42 130w

Time 39:92 Je 8 '42 1050w

HINKLE, THOMAS CLARK. Mustang; a horse of the old West. 247p $2 Morrow

42-16455

Mustang, born on the Horseshoe Ranch, was brought up a favorite horse on the ranch, and allowed to graze at will. When he was four years old a Mexican cowboy stole him, and Mustang's life became a miserable existence as he passed from one bad master to another. Finally he made a dramatic escape and returned to his old home. For readers from ten on.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 Ag 9 '42 400w

"The author, as he has shown in his earlier books, 'Black Storm,' 'Tawny, a Dog of the Old West' and many more, knows the Western country. His cowboys are real and he has faithfully described a fine horse and a group of men fine enough to appreciate him." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Jl 26 '42 280w

HINKLE, THOMAS CLARK. Old Nick and Bob, two dogs of the West. 239p $2 Morrow
Dogs—Legends and stories 41-11115

Bob was a yellow puppy left alone by the death of his mother; Old Nick was the leader of a pack of wild dogs, roaming the western plains of the United States. This story for grades six to eight describes the friendship of the two dogs, and how Bob later saved a human life.

"The American dog stories of Dr. Hinkle are based on understanding of the nature of the tie between dogs and men. Not in cities, not in a society involving kennels and shows, but in open country where a man's own life is not too easy, there can be friendship, love, to which nothing else in nature quite corresponds." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 F 22 '42 320w

"Not particularly well written, but will be enjoyed by readers of animal stories and those boys who like tales of the West. Recommended where there is demand for dog stories." J. E. Stromdahl

+ Library J 66:736 S 1 '41 60w

Wis Lib Bul 38:17 Ja '42

HINTON, HAROLD BOAZ. Cordell Hull; a biography; with a foreword by Sumner Welles. 377p il $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Hull, Cordell (W) 42-36091

Biography of the secretary of state, by a member of the New York Times editorial staff who is also an intimate friend of secretary and Mrs. Hull. Altho the emphasis is upon Mr. Hull's public life, especially during the years since 1933, the book includes some material on his background and early life and training. The book closes with December 7th, 1941, when Cordell Hull removed his glasses and quietly but courageously spoke his mind to the Japanese envoys. Index.

"With many a light touch and also with others less subtle it is made perfectly clear that Mr. Hull has been far from happy with many if not most of his New Deal associates, especially the smart young left-wingers, and yet, despite all the light which the biographer has thrown upon the instinctively shrewd, diplomatic, and forthright prime minister, the reader not intimately acquainted with Messrs. Hull and Roosevelt—with two utterly different personalities—will probably remain puzzled how they could have maintained their partnership as they have, each with a record longer than that of any of his many predecessors." R. G. Blakey

Am Hist R 48:152 O '42 500w

"The chapter headings 'Father of the Income Tax' and 'The New Prime Minister,' and the description of the I'm Alone case, in which the coast-guard cutter chases its prey 'half-way across the Atlantic,' might, for example, cause the meticulous academician to arch his eyebrows. On the whole, however, Mr. Hinton has done an excellent and interesting job in writing the first of the biographies regarding a statesman who has left his mark upon our foreign policy, and who is sometimes described as the most courteous gentleman in Washington." B. H. Williams

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:988 O '42 370w

Booklist 38:250 Mr 15 '42

Bookmark 3:14 My '42

"Like the biography of any living man, this life of Cordell Hull is unsatisfactory because it is unfinished. But in this case it is exciting for there is as yet no hint of a descending curve. The American Secretary of State faces great difficulties in the immediate future, but great opportunities also, and in these pages is more than a hint that he may be equal to both. Hull is still a growing statesman; and one closes the book with the feeling that perhaps the next few years will prove him a much greater man than even this ardent admirer has portrayed." G. W. Johnson

+ Books p3 F 22 '42 1350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '42

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:780 Jl '42 50w

"Although brought down to Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor, the account bears little evidence of haste in preparation. Direct, colorful style, without sensationalism. Informing, timely, useful for quick reference and general reading." J. S. Cleavinger

+ Library J 67:129 F 1 '42 80w

Reviewed by S. T. Williamson

N Y Times p5 Mr 1 '42 1000w

"Some padding, and rather hastily written, but the facts seem to be there."

New Yorker 18:70 F 21 '42 50w

Pratt p5 O '42

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan

Spec 169:153 Ag 14 '42 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p417 Ag 22 '42 360w

Wis Lib Bul 38:67 Ap '42

HIRSCHFELD, CHARLES. Baltimore, 1870-1900; studies in social history. 176p pa $1.50
Johns Hopkins press

309.17526 Baltimore

42-5139

"In the present study, four aspects of life in one growing city at the end of the nineteenth century have been described. At the same time, the relations of each of these aspects to the others have been pointed out. A broad section of urban life has been included: the growth of population—the fundamental human stuff of the city; in the economic field, the development of industry and its effects on labor; the broad cultural function of public education and changes in its conception and practice; finally, the reorganization of charitable activities in principle and method. . . A conscious effort has been made to be as concrete as possible as well as to avoid the pitfalls of a spectacular but atomized anecdotal history." (Intro) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Harold Zink

Am Pol Sci R 36:377 Ap '42 150w

Survey 78:208 JI '42 100w

HIRSHBERG, HERBERT SIMON. Subject guide to reference books. 259p $4 A.L.A.

016 Reference books—Bibliography

(W) 42-36274

"Attempts to provide an alphabetic subject guide to the books needed in libraries for the answering of reference questions. Though primarily designed for the librarian, the book should also be helpful to graduate student and others who 'like to find their own way among books.'" (School & Society) Index.

Booklist 39:1 S '42

Pratt p6 D '42

School & Society 56:448 N 7 '42 50w

HITCHCOCK, HENRY RUSSELL. In the nature of materials; the buildings of Frank Lloyd Wright. 143p il $5 Duell

720 Wright, Frank Lloyd

42-13893

"With its more than 400 illustrations this is the most complete study we have had of Frank Lloyd Wright's work in architecture. Mr. Hitchcock's commentary follows the same chronological order as the plates and the format of the book is such that it is easy to turn from one to the other." (Wis Lib Bul) List of illustrations. Index.

Booklist 38:365 Je 1 '42

"The text is written with scholarly thoroughness, often with the 'Lieber Meister' attitude that Wright himself confessed toward Sullivan." A. L. Kocher

+ New Repub 107:237 Ag 24 '42 600w

Pratt p4 D '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:95 Je '42

"The book is highly recommended as an important contribution to the knowledge of American culture: from it we might learn, if we did not already know, that in our midst there is living a great genius, one of the greatest architects of all history." W. C. Behrendt

+ Yale R n s 32:178 autumn '42 750w

HOBAN, CHARLES FRANCIS, 1906-. Focus on learning; motion pictures in the school; prepared for the Committee on motion pictures in education. 172p $2 Am. council on educ.

371.335 Moving pictures in education

42-17995

"Based upon five years of actual use and evaluation of motion pictures in selected schools throughout the country, this book not only describes the experiences of teachers in using films and the reactions of students but reviews the role of motion pictures in education, analyzes the types of educational films and their contributions to the learning process, and suggests the responsibilities of the teacher in selecting and using films." School & Society

Booklist 39:43 O 15 '42

"Every teacher who uses or plans to use films should read this book because it points out the importance of the films' fitting the educational purpose the teacher has in mind and the contribution of the films to the curriculum in a very readable and practical manner." I. S. Sunderlin

+ J Home Econ 34:743 D '42 130w

School & Society 56:56 JI 11 '42 80w

HOBART, MRS ALICE TISDALE (NOURSE). The cup and the sword. 400p $2.75 Bobbs

(W) 42-19567

A family chronicle and a picture of wine-growing in America, combined. Old Philippe Rambeau had come from France years before the story opens and had founded and built up a winery in California. The story concerns his children and grandchildren and the fortunes of the family business from about 1920 to 1940.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (18) B & T (1) N Y Times (17) PW (2) RB (2) W (1)

"The book is as brisk as a summer board-inghouse. People come and go, there are flirtations and feuds, and the pretty excursions to the vineyards provide a pleasant relief to the family squabbles. But so many characters have the effect of dispersing one's sympathy. . . I could wish that an author as versatile as Mrs. Hobart had avoided two noticeable habits of style—the use of cliché sentences at the chapter's close, and the use of italics when her characters are in thought, a typographical effect which seems to me intrusive." Edward Weeks

+ — Atlantic 170:132 O '42 230w

Booklist 39:11 S '42

Bookmark 4:16 N '42

"It is California, with its beauty and fertility and violence, and especially its grape-growing industry, which counts for more than the human figures. In her attempt to give a whole panorama, perhaps Miss Hobart has overloaded and overcrowded the material. There are not so much too many figures but too many insignificant ones; it does not always seem important what happens to them." Iris Barry

+ — Books p4 S '6 '42 700w

"Four generations of a fascinating, passionate and compelling family move through the pages of Alice Tisdale Hobart's new novel. Here is another clan of pioneer Americans to add to the score that have already become fiction favorites. Readers who sang the praises of Miss Hobart's 'Oil for the Lamps of China' will find the same careful precision in this new novel and the same scrupulous attention to detail that gives a consistent color to the whole story." Elizabeth Watts

+ Boston Globe p19 S 9 '42 400w

Reviewed by N. E. Monroe

Cath World 156:246 N '42 230w

"This tale of family, winegrowing and California lacks the distinction of the author's 'Oil for the Lamps of China.' It is deficient in both focus and suspense, but might appeal to addicts of specifically family chronicles. The reader who knows anything about vineyards

HOBERT, A. T. N.—Continued
would be more than normally interested. . .
And the patriarch of the family stands forth as the symbol of integrity, conservatism and an almost sacramental view of his life work."
+ — Commonweal 37:20 O 23 '42 100w

"Apparently presents economic problem adequately, with plenty of action and interesting characters. Recommended." Emily Garnett
+ Library J 67:739 S 1 '42 80w

"It would be idle to claim that this is the finest novel that could be written about the wine industry. But slight flaws hardly touch the book's sound excellence, in interest and in worth. It is not a few youthful emotions, but the whole fascinating entity of wine-making and marketing, which has possessed Mrs. Hobart's mind and imagination, and which takes life through her study and skill." Katherine Woods

+ — N Y Times p6 S 6 '42 1300w

New Yorker 18:59 S 5 '42 50w

"The Cup and the Sword" is a fine, full novel, redolent of the earth, hot with the sun of California valleys, cool and peaceful with the shade of the tree-sheltered houses and patios." Richard Ellis

+ Sat R of Lit 25:11 S 12 '42 340w

Wis Lib Bul 38:138 O '42

HOBBS, ALBERT HOYT. Differentials in internal migration [thesis]. 122p pa $2. The author, 305 Logan hall, Univ. of Pa., Philadelphia.

312.0973 U.S.—Population. Migration, Internal. Unemployment. U.S.—Social conditions A42-2414

"This field study of migration is concerned principally with a sample of 564 out-migrants and 182 in-migrants from and to the economically distressed borough of Plymouth, Luzerne County, Pa., during the period 1927 to 1937. This long-established community of more than 15,000 persons had more than 97% of the people engaged in anthracite coal mining. The population, 20 percent foreign-born, lost heavily by migration during the period studied." Am Soc R

"Dr. Hobb's short monograph has the look of a Ph.D. thesis, but the look is deceptive, for the work is much more mature, and it combines a community study of the anthracite region with a comprehensive critique of recent developments in the study of internal migration. . . The monograph is least happy when it raises the old issue of 'qualitative factors in migration'. . . Yet Dr. Hobb's need not be taken to task too strongly for this lapse. He has done a good and a thorough job. That he has not learned that sociological facts correlate only with other sociological facts and tell us nothing about biology is an indictment of our universal failure to learn scientific methods instead of isolated academic disciplines." C. M. Arensberg

+ — Am J Soc 48:265 S '42 1200w

"Although sophomoric in spots, this monograph displays the results of careful work, and conclusions are cautiously drawn. The author holds that sociologically significant migration should be studied in relation to gradients. . . However, he gives no hint as to how these gradients are to be measured. Neither does he indicate whether he believes these inter-area gradients are the same for all classes of people concerned, nor whether all people concerned are equally aware of the nature, degree, and significance of the gradients. If gradients are to form the necessary background for the study of selective migration, there is a nice job to be done before the results of migration studies can be properly interpreted." C. R. Lively
Am Soc R 7:574 Ag '42 480w

HOCKING, ANNE (MRS M. N. A. MESSER).
Poison is a bitter brew [Eng title: Miss Milverton]. 301p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Bles]

Detective story.

Booklist 38:369 Je 1 '42

"Here's an attractive time-killer, loose-jointed as a whole and transparent in spots, written with that British charm and competence." Will Cuppy

+ Books p22 Ap 5 '42 200w

"The detection is hardly the best part of the book, of which the chief merit lies in its characterisation, though, as is not uncommon with women writers, Miss Hocking is more successful with her women than with her men. These last, including the detective, and even specially including the detective, all tend to qualify for the tailor's dummy class. But Miss Milverton, Lucinda, Tamsin, and Agatha, are all clearly conceived and strongly drawn." E. R. Punshon

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 N 28 '41 200w

"This is an excellent novel of family life as well as a baffling crime puzzle." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 5 '42 240w

"Superior writing, excellent characterizations, and deceptively transparent plot that leaves reader nicely out on limb before all is made clear. Better grade.

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 Ap 18 '42 40w

Reviewed by John Fairfield

Spec 167:538 D 5 '41 260w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ap 19 '42 190w

"There is no hue and cry, and little help can be obtained from clues; the detective solves
"Superior writing, excellent characterizations, The tale is well told."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p533 O 25 '41 120w

HOCKING, WILLIAM ERNEST. What man can make of man. 62p $1 Harper

901 Man. Civilization—Philosophy 42-17192

A philosophical discussion of man's present dilemma and the possible 'healing fact' that might help him. The material originally appeared in abbreviated form in Fortune (magazine).

"This material is worth putting in permanent form, and worth rereading. Hocking can point out the faults of a wholly materialistic, or relativistic, or hedonistic philosophy without ranting against science and liberalism; and he can insist upon the permanence of some principles and realities without going Thomist. The 'healing fact,' he concludes, is the truth of the existence of God."

+ Christian Century 59:809 Je 24 '42 70w

"A book of only sixty-one pages, it is a brilliant and extremely lucid analysis of our contemporary dilemmas. It is the type of reasoning most needed today. The only disappointment is in the small space devoted to the answer. One would like to see a companion volume, written as simply as this, in which the solution is expanded." J. H. Titus

+ Churchman 156:17 S 1 '42 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '42

"The present indictment of the weaknesses of modern man is accomplished with unusual penetration and brilliance." David Dalrymple

+ Commonweal 36:332 Jl 24 '42 280w

"This is a wholesome book, not to be easily dismissed." E. S. Brightman

+ Crozer Q 20:80 Ja '43 200w

Reviewed by E. E. Aubrey

J Religion 23:75 Ja '43 210w

Reviewed by John Cournos

+ N Y Times p2 Ag 9 '42 600w

Wis Lib Bul 38:132 O '42

HOFFMAN, ROSS JOHN SWARTZ. Great republic; a historical view of the international community and the organization of peace. 167p $2.25 Sheed

940 Europe—Politics. International cooperation. Peace 42-8664

Six chapters, based largely upon papers previously published in the Catholic World and Thought. They sketch the history of organizations for peace, from the days of the Holy Roman Empire to the present, with a final chapter on the League of Nations and its collapse. Index.

"There is much wisdom in this small book—more realistic than academic, although written by a professor. By intelligent, honest analysis, Ross Hoffman discovers the inner significance of facts; then, in this light, he studies present political trends. By such men and by such methods is progress made, whether in the experiments of the physical laboratory or in the interpretation of history." Joseph McCsorley

+ Cath World 155:242 My '42 800w

"Dr. Hoffman is no easy optimist; he is acutely conscious of the obstacles ahead. Nor does he give us a nicely drawn blueprint of the new order; he is too much of a realist for that. The very compactness of his book will prove a disappointment to those minds who like their future as neatly ordered as the objects in milady's boudoir. A year ago I spent a rainy morning with a group of college students and their faculty advisers who were arranging a regional peace meeting. I marveled at the ease with which they included or rejected the various proposals for the world beyond the war. This volume should help them, and other sincere spirits, to dig a little deeper before they begin to build. If it does, there may yet be time to preserve the Christian civilization of the West." J. N. Moody

+ Commonweal 36:67 My 8 '42 750w

HOGAN, INEZ (MRS RANDOLPH BOWERS).

Nappy wanted a dog [il. by the author].

[49p] $1 Dutton

(W) 42-16183

Picture story book for small children, describing Nappy's attempts to annex every dog he saw. Finally a stray dog was found, and Nappy had his own dog.

"A slight infusion of moral never hurt a good story for five-or-six; this one appeals to a little child just as he is beginning very much to want things of his own, and to collide with the fact that somebody else may have got them first. This dog question puts the matter vividly." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 J1 5 '42 350w

"Story of an engaging four-year-old, told simply enough for children eight and nine to master themselves; younger children will enjoy having it read aloud." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 67:686 Ag '42 70w

Wis Lib Bul 38:139 O '42

HOGAN, INEZ (MRS RANDOLPH BOWERS).

Nicodemus runs away [il. by the author].

[55p] $1 Dutton

42-199

In this story Nicodemus, the little Negro hero of other books by this author, decided to run away. He was tired of always doing chores. After several false starts he finally succeeded in reaching a big woods, and there got lost, was terrified by an owl, lost and found his dog, and finally gave it up and went back home. Running away was just too much trouble!

"It is late in the day to say anything new about the Nicodemus books; this one is as funny as the others and has rather more of a story." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 F 8 '42 80w

"Will appeal to children of five to eight years." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 67:182 F 15 '42 60w

New Yorker 18:72 My 23 '42 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 25 '42 50w

HOGBOOM, AMY, and WARE, JOHN FLEM-
ING. One life to lose. 288p $2 Lothrop

B or 92 Hale, Nathan—Juvenile literature

42-25039

"Fictionized biography of Nathan Hale based on extensive research and new material. Early boyhood of the young hero on a rocky Connecticut farm, his life as a student at Yale, and his early conversion to the Revolutionary cause are well pieced together. Recommended for boys and girls of ten to fourteen." Library J

Cath World 156:381 D '42 110w

Reviewed by Emily Hutson

+ Library J 67:1106 D 15 '42 50w

"The early teens will enjoy this book and learn, enjoyably, much about our national beginnings."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 10 '43
110w

HOGNER, DOROTHY (CHILDS) (MRS NILS HOGNER). Animal book; American mammals north of Mexico [il. by] Nils Hogner. 223p $3.50 Oxford

599 Mammals—Juvenile literature

(W) 42-11753

A handbook listing and describing a hundred and seventy "native American animals which live on the North American continent or in adjacent waters, north of Mexico." They are all mammals. Illustrated with drawings. Contains a classification key and an index.

Booklist 38:373 Je 1 '42

"In beauty of appearance and information that while simply expressed goes as far as children usually want to go in an introductory work on natural history, it will be hard to beat this volume, on which it is easy to believe the authors have been for years at work." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 My 17 '42 400w

"Accurate informational book, excellent for ready reference and reading, a valuable addition to home and public libraries." F. E. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 29 '42
90w

"It will be a source of great entertainment for any family of children, adding materially to their knowledge of the animals living in the United States and Canada. The drawings are unusual in this type of book." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:173 My '42 100w

Reviewed by J. L. Sauer

Library J 67:534 Je 1 '42 100w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:892 O 15 '42 20w

"It is doubtful if the pages of 'The Animal Book' will long retain their pristine fairness once it is introduced into the family, for children will inevitably have to share it with any of their elders who have not forgotten the furry charms of the zoo. Its information has been checked by several authorities in the field, but this is not, as the publishers warn us, a scientific encyclopedia, and therein lies its appealing invitation to knowledge. . . . This is an important book for libraries and for the shelves of any child with eyes for the world of wood and field and mountain." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 26 '42 250w

"A handsome reference book which should be useful in any home and school and can be read with pleasure by anyone over twelve."

+ New Yorker 18:78 My 23 '42 50w

Wis Lib Bul 38:141 O '42

HOKE, MRS HELEN L., and FOX, NATALIE. Woolly lamb; pictures by Sally Tate. [16p] $1 Messner

42-20328

Picture story book for the very young. It describes the adventures of a little lamb, whose wool is made of a material which small fingers can stroke.

"There are twenty-three woolly lambs on these pages including cover and jacket, each one captivating to three-year-old eyes and fingers. The story is but a brief anecdote." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 N 8 '42 90w

Cath World 156:372 D '42 30w

HOLBROOK, STEWART HALL. None more courageous; American war heroes of today. 245p $2.50 Macmillan 940.541273 World war, 1939—U.S.

(W) 42-51084

"The people who are doing the very necessary work of considering how to 'win the peace' would never get a chance to put their findings into operation if there were not other men using every effort and risking their lives daily to win the war. For every hero who wins a congressional medal or a distinguished service cross, there are hundreds as good who get little publicity and no awards. This book contains the stories of twenty men whose exploits in this war are the stuff that legends and sagas and epics are made of. Most of them, however, are not one-man stories, for the typical exploit on land or sea or in the air today is a group enterprise. To appreciate the full measure of these heroic achievements, it must be remembered that they have been carried out against enemies who have many of the same qualities of individual courage." Christian Century

Booklist 39:182 Ja 1 '43

Reviewed by H. C. Lewis

Books p22 N 22 '42 900w

Christian Century 59:1595 D 23 '42
130w

"Men and boys, especially, will enjoy this collection. . . Each tale is graphically told." E. F. Kelly

+ Library J 67:908 O 15 '42 70w

"Excellent illustrations of the men whose stories are told lend additional value to a book that is already one to be treasured by American citizens." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p32 D 13 '42 650w

"There are sure to be a number of war books up this alley, but Holbrook will be hard to beat, just as his subject matter will be virtually impossible to beat. The author deserves the thanks of the public, and we think he will get them." Roger Shaw

+ Sat R of Lit 26:16 Ja 2 '43 320w

HOLCOMBE, ARTHUR NORMAN. Dependent areas in the post-war world. (America looks ahead) 108p 50c; pa 25c World peace

325.3 Colonies Mandatory governments
41-21589

"Professor Holcombe sagely assesses the significance of colonial areas and distills the wisdom from more extensive surveys of the governance of dependencies. The author rejects Axis plans for regional empires, and shares the unwillingness of the American public to undertake to curb colonial rivalry by balance-of-power tactics. Rather he recommends an improved mandate system, and notes its substantial adoption by the United States and other American republics in the Convention of Havana." Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by H. F. Angus

Am J Soc 48:289 S '42 200w

Reviewed by H. S. Foster, Jr.

Am Pol Sci R 36:178 F '42 230w

"The little book is an excellent introduction to a subject which is being increasingly discussed." Clyde Eagleton

+ Ann Am Acad 220:215 Mr '42 350w

Reviewed by F. M. Mohler

Springfd Republican p10 Ja 29 '43
600w

HOLDEN, PAUL EUGENE; FISH, LOUNSBURY SPAIGHT, and SMITH, HUBERT L. Top-management organization and control. 239p $4 Stanford univ. press

658.01 Corporations—U.S. Industry—Organization, control, etc.
41-5421

"A research study of the management policies and practices of thirty-one leading industrial corporations." (Subtitle) "Top-management" is variously defined in the book. It means, essentially, the central management of modern American corporations through the board of directors, the officers who actively direct the corporation, and finally the departmental heads of the various branches who carry out its work on a day-to-day basis." Am Econ R

"Top Management Organization and Control is a research study in the right direction. Stockholders, corporate officials, salaried employees, wage earners, the government, and the public all want more information from reliable sources about modern corporate enterprise. A beginning has been made in this study but the emphasis has been given almost entirely to the mechanics of the management's structure. The result is a tentative blueprint of corporate organization and control." J. E. Dalton

Am Econ R 32:175 Mr '42 1800w

"The reviewer is moved to express a word of criticism on the score of what seems to him to be a regrettable lacuna in the text. He is astonished to a degree that the authors did not include in their work a copy of the complete questionnaire, or data sheet, used to gather the factual data obtained. . . The reviewer regards it, furthermore, as unfortunate that the results of the survey as reported do not include adequate treatment of such factors of fundamental significance as the span of control, the optimum of size, and the measurement of management. . . However, this review may fittingly be concluded with the statement that the work of Professor Holden and his associates gives abundant evidence of sound scholarship and penetrating analysis, rising at times to levels of brilliant accomplishment." H. A. Hopf

+ — Management R 30:466 D '41 1550w

HOLDING, MRS ELISABETH (SANXAY). Kill joy. 281p $2 Duell

42-51485

Detective story.

Booklist 39:225 F 1 '43

"If you want something different in a Grade A mystery, this should fill the bill. . . A godsend in a field reeking of the amateur touch." Will Cuppy

+ Books p48 D 6 '42 350w

"It is as if the author has been so intent upon creating an atmosphere of horror and suspense that she has forgotten to provide logical reasons for it all. The character of Dolly scarcely seems to provide a satisfactory motive for a series of senseless crimes." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 D 6 '42 240w

"Horror and humor are delicately mixed in this fine mystery."

+ New Yorker 18:106 D 5 '42 90w

HOLDING, MRS ELISABETH (SANXAY). Lady killer. 275p $2 Duell

42-14364

Mystery story.

Booklist 38:385 Je 15 '42

"Mrs. Holding's writing style, an adaptation of the stream-of-consciousness method, gives her stuff a continuous zip, and her way with plots and people is something you don't see so often in print. Speaking of hideous moods, 'Lady Killer' boasts a quality of cold-blooded fiendishness, that none of the synthetic hard-boiled boys ever come close to achieving, and there are plenty of touches of nature to balance it. For the best new main mystery character in a dog's age we give you Mrs. Honey Stapleton, whom to meet is to cherish." Will Cuppy

+ Books p18 My 3 '42 250w

"This is a skillfully constructed tale and well worth reading, although it may not please those who demand a clean-cut solution." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p17 My 3 '42 220w

"Deft and amusing, with a touch of quiet horror."

+ New Yorker 18:80 My 9 '42 60w

HOLDRIDGE, ELIZABETH (HAMLIN) (MRS DESMOND HOLDRIDGE). Island boy; il. with original lithographs by Paul Lantz. 111p $2 Holiday

(W) 42-16018

The island boy is Jacket, a native of a little island in the Bahamas; Nassau seemed far away to him. His home, family, pets, the building of a new sponging sloop, and his visit to Nassau, are described in this book for ages eight to eleven.

Booklist 38:430 J1 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 My 31 '42 350w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn BK 18:256 J1 '42 80w

"Action a bit slow in the beginning, dialect (though engaging) awkward and ungrammatical, but book breathes atmosphere. Attractive make-up well fitted to text." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 67:582 Je 15 '42 50w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:885 O 15 '42 40w

"Mrs. Holdridge, who is the wife of the explorer, Desmond Holdridge, knows the Bahamas at first hand and has woven many fascinating details of life there into her story so that we see it clearly warm with sun and laughter and work, through the eyes of a very engaging small boy. Paul Lantz's sepia drawings are highly evocative of the people and the setting, and just as decorative." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p8 Je 7 '42 320w

HOLLAND, CECIL FLETCHER. Morgan and his raiders. 373p il $3.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Morgan, John Hunt. U.S.—History
—Civil war 42-50001

A biography of a famous and colorful Confederate general. The book is the result of the discovery of a trunkful of documents, letters, and other papers collected by General Morgan's wife. Bibliography. Index.

"Into this story of Morgan's military career, told in accurate and exciting fashion, Mr. Holland has woven the story of Morgan's courtship and marriage to Martha Ready, the belle of Murfreesboro. He has used it to suggest the romance and dash of the Old South. Thereby much of interest is added to an already glamorous tale." Avery Craven

+ Books p5 Ja 10 '43 950w

Christian Century 59:1496 D 2 '42 70w

"Valuable historically and compelling reading." Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 67:1012 N 15 '42 100w

"An unbiased reader will not be apt to agree with the author in crediting to Gen Morgan military capacity beyond that which he actually demonstrated. On the whole, this book is interesting, entertaining and well worth reading by students of the Civil war period." L. B. Kromer

+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 24 '42 430w

HOLLAND, KENNETH, and HILL, FRANK ERNEST. Youth in the CCC. 263p il $2.25 Am. council on educ.

634.9 U.S. Civilian conservation corps 42-18341

"Since 1933, two and one half million American youths have been enrolled in the CCC, first of the federally supported youth-work programs. What kind of boys were these enrollees? Why did they enroll? What did they learn? What work did they do? What education and training did they receive in camp? What effect did the CCC experience have upon their later life? This book purports to answer these questions, and in answering them pictures the growth of the work-camp principle, the economic and social necessities which brought about establishment of American work camps, the history of the corps itself, and the patterns of authority that evolved." School & Society

"The book is simply and interestingly written and well illustrated. It offers to all educators and citizens with open minds some serious challenges. While based on a rather elaborate piece of research, it was not written for specialists in any of the social sciences." S. A. Queen

+ Ann Am Acad 224:231 N '42 360w

School & Society 56:28 J1 4 '42 60w

"The book is too long, too repetitious, but it is a valuable record of a remarkable industrial experiment showing how the disease of unemployment can best be handled." P. M. Martin

+ Survey G 31:440 O '42 390w

HOLLING, HOLLING CLANCY. Tree in the trail; il. by [the author]. [63p] $2.50 Houghton

(W) 42-25811

The title role is played by a cottonwood tree which began its life about 1610 on the South-western plains. As the years rolled by the tree became in turn a peace tree, a place of truce; a "talking tree" so-called from the messages left on it by travelers; and many times a life saver. In 1834 a bolt of lightning ended its life, but not its career. An ox yoke was made out of its trunk, and in the making of the yoke "ancient history came to light" in the shape of Indian, French, and American ammunition found buried in it. For boys and girls from eight to twelve.

Booklist 39:205 Ja 15 '43

"The care with which this [book] is documented by pictures gives it exceptional usefulness. Besides the large color plates, every important detail in the story appears in small pencil studies on the wide margins of facing pages." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 D 13 '42 400w

Horn BK 19:41 Ja '43 100w

"Highly recommended for all libraries." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 68:83 Ja 15 '43 70w

HOLM, JOHN CECIL. Sunday best; the story of a Philadelphia family; il. by David Hendrickson. 279p $2.50 Farrar

B or 92 42-12120

Life in West Philadelphia during the days when electrical shops were quite "new." The author's father had one of those shops, and the family lived back of it and over it. The story is mainly father's, altho mother was the one who was always responsible for the weekly payroll, which paid the helpers and kept the business going. Mr Holm is an actor-playwright, with Three Men on a Horse, and Banjo Eyes to his credit.

Booklist 38:422 J1 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p12 My 24 '42 430w

"Both father and mother rank high as human beings. Book is full of chuckles and is recommended as entertainment." Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 67:414 My 1 '42 50w

"One of the most engaging of family chronicles, and unusual as well."

+ N Y Times p5 My 10 '42 440w

"This is a lovely book, and I use the belabored and bedeviled adjective advisedly because I can find no other which describes accurately what Mr. Holm has done. . . I don't think the automobile and the movies and war, or anything else, have changed things as much as Mr. Holm and I think; not the essential things. They are worth remembering, and writing about, and coming back to—improved; and fighting for. Once more I say this is a lovely and exciting book and it's not because I was brought up in Philadelphia." Struthers Burt

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 My 23 '42 700w

HOLMAN, CHARLES THOMAS. Getting down to cases. 207p $2 Macmillan
253 Pastoral work. Psychology, Religious 42-8041

The body of this book consists of half-a-dozen case histories of people who had psychological difficulties which were treated by ministers of the gospel. Preceding and following these are general chapters on: the pastor as counselor, significance of the cases studied, techniques of counseling, and the preparation of the pastor for counseling. Index.

Reviewed by T. C. Johnson
Christian Century 59:465 Ap 8 '42 700w

"One wishes more use had been made of traditional religious categories in moral theology. The book should be of great help to those who wish to use the techniques of the case work method and psychological knowledge in work with individuals, and warns of the pitfalls that can be met." R. C. Batchelder
+ Churchman 156:19 My 1 '42 240w

Reviewed by W. R. McNutt
Crozer Q 20:76 Ja '43 600w

"This book is good literature—it reads well, it is carefully done, and it has a good style. The material dealing with the place of counseling and the principles and techniques, while not original, does contain a fine summary of the knowledge in the field. The most unique feature of the book is, of course, the case reports. These are unusually interesting and the author's treatment is very wise." R. A. Burkhardt

+ J Religion 22:334 Jl '42 480w

Reviewed by J. H. Lathrop, D. D.
Survey 78:286 O '42 250w

HOLMAN, GORDON. Commando attack. 258p il $2.50 Putnam [5s Hodder]
940.542 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English. Great Britain. Commandos (W) 42-21329

An account of the organization, training, system of attack used by the British Commandos. The author is an English newspaper man who accompanied the fighting men on an Arctic raid and to St. Nazaire. The two expeditions are described as well as a desert raid which narrowly missed capturing Rommel.

Booklist 39:46 O 15 '42

"The volume is written primarily for a British audience, but has inevitably an appeal to all American readers now studying closely the progress of the war. The writer, Mr. Holman, has apparently leaned backward to try not to glamorize overmuch the tough warriors whose raids on Norwegian islands, on St. Nazaire and General Rommel's headquarters in Libya stand out today as among this war's most brilliant exploits. But the glamor is there." Allen Raymond

+ Books p6 S 20 '42 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '42

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Library J 67:895 O 15 '42 10w

"Mr. Holman, an experienced English naval correspondent, writes in the style typical of the better London newspapers, somewhat slower-paced than our own correspondents produce, but full of meat and sound sense. His book is illustrated by fifteen official photographs of the Commandos, some of them very interesting." F. S. Adams

+ N Y Times p11 S 20 '42 700w

Reviewed by Roger Shaw
Sat R of Lit 25:8 O 5 '42 430w

"This is a most interesting book written by a man who can write and has been on more than one of the famous raids already made by the Commandos. . . . Amusing stories are told of surprise attacks [during military exercises] when senior officers found themselves bundled off as prisoners whether they liked it or not. When transport was required it was the nearest car that went, whether it belonged to an officer who protested that he was not taking any part in the manoeuvres, or to a General or even a royal personage, as happened on one occasion. Altogether a very interesting book, to which when more things can be told Mr. Holman must write a much longer sequel."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p303 Je 20 '42 600w

HOLMAN, HUGH. Death like thunder. 251p $2 Phoenix 42-15694

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p15 Je 7 '42 100w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p18 Je 14 '42 220w

HOLMES, HARRY NICHOLLS. Strategic materials and national strength. 106p il $1.75 Macmillan

338.0973 Commercial products. U.S.—Economic conditions (W) 42-19091

"This is a useful compendium of information, presented in encyclopedic style, concerning a long list of materials that are vital in our war effort and for which shortages have already developed or will soon appear. The items range from aluminum and ammonia, through fats, rubber and sulfur, to vanadium and zinc. For each the essential data are given—domestic and foreign sources, quantities available before and after Pearl Harbor, amounts necessary this year and next, efforts made to meet the demands, prospects for civilian consumption, and the like. Dr. Holmes is Professor of Chemistry in Oberlin College." Scientific Bk Club R

Booklist 39:28 O 1 '42

"The book presents an over-all picture which may clarify the thinking of those who have an opportunity to read its hundred pages."

+ Chem & Met Eng 49:232 S '42 80w
Christian Science Monitor p16 S 1 '42 500w

Reviewed by J. A. Sohon
Library J 67:627 Jl '42 70w

"Seldom has an author succeeded in crowding so much information into so concise and lucid a volume."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:3 Ag '42 150w

HOLMES, JOHN HAYNES. Out of darkness. 151p $1.50 Harper

940.531 World war, 1939—Causes. Reconstruction (1939-) 42-3097

"This book is written on the supposition that the present war, a continuation of the last war, is going to last for a long time. It is an attempt to face without flinching the consequences of so prolonged a struggle, and to discover what may be done to preserve the values of life and society from out the well-nigh universal disaster now impending. It is also an attempt to analyze the causes of this direful conflict, and to define its meaning in the present and for the future." Foreword

Reviewed by A. L. Murray
Churchman 156:19 My 1 '42 250w

"Dr. Holmes argues that our civilization has joined the past ones which died in turmoil. . . . His immediate program for the new Dark Ages is, in effect, 'To the monastery!' His sincerity and courage deserve respect and his analysis attention. But his program is valid only for those who do not care for 'the things of this earth.' He grants that they are few."

New Repub 106:550 Ap 20 '42 100w

HOLMES, WILFRED JAY (ALEC HUDSON, pseud). Open fire! [303p] $2.50 Macmillan (W) 42-15691

"'Alec Hudson' is Lieutenant W. J. Holmes, U.S.N., now on active duty as a submarine officer. This volume contains four stories, three of which have been published separately and have had a wide reading. The four are: 'Battle Stations,' 'Enemy Sighted,' 'Rendezvous' and 'Night Action.'" Christian Century

Booklist 38:429 Jl 1 '42

"Perhaps this is technically fiction, but its substance is an authentic report of the details of life—and death—in a submarine. Of all the war books, none comes closer to the stark realities of the experience of the men who do the fighting."

+ Christian Century 59:731 Je 3 '42 100w

Reviewed by F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p17 Je 21 '42 700w

HOLMES, WILFRED JAY (ALEC HUDSON, pseud). Rendezvous. 94p $1.50 Macmillan

(W) 42-36023

Three stories of submarine life in wartime. The author is an American submarine officer who has had experience in the type of life he portrays.

Booklist 38:189 F 1 '42

"One of the most fascinating aspects of Alec Hudson's narratives of submarine warfare is the manner in which he utilizes our ignorance. We do not understand many of the commands, 'Secure the air,' 'Close Number 2 Kingston,' 'Open B Vent,' or know precisely how they are obeyed, but we feel the tension and the split-second drama as though sealed in the pulsating bowels of this man-made shark." Lisle Bell

+ Books p8 Ja 18 '42 250w

Christian Century 59:22 Ja 7 '42 40w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:896 O 15 '42 10w

New Repub 106:94 Ja 19 '42 40w

"Mr. Hudson, or Lieutenant Holmes, through his previous books and this, bids fair to become the American counterpart of Britain's 'Bartimeus' (Captain Lewis Ricci), to whom is entrusted the job of presenting without trimmings, though fictionally, the details, the spirit and the one hell of a way it is to make a living fighting courageously in the Navy." H. A. Stevens

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 18 '42 650w

"It's all feverishly exciting and of exceptional timeliness, as well as undoubtedly authentic from a technical standpoint, and the reader is initiated into such matters as periscope sights, listening devices, controls and crew morale."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 18 '42 300w

HOLT, ISABELLA (MRS HALDEMAN FINNIE). Aunt Jessie. 292p $2.50 Bobbs

42-5124

Character sketches of an upper middle-class Chicago family, the Kendalls, beginning in 1912. The Kendalls had money and originality; their mother launched lame ducks; the children were left much to their own devices. Then came the divorce, and mother lived in Europe and father in Chicago with the children. After the serious illness of the youngest child Aunt Jessie came to Chicago to take over. The remainder of the story describes Aunt Jessie's attempts to instill her own mid-Victorian standards upon a Bohemian household, and the effect it had upon the lives of the three young Kendalls.

Booklist 38:251 Mr 15 '42

"Miss Holt is an able writer, and she has written a well told, skillfully constructed story. Her treatment of Aunt Jessie, however, is sentimental in the extreme. The story is one of a meddlesome old woman who, as Theo puts it, complacently considered herself an agent of the Almighty. In the telling, Miss Holt has somehow condoned Aunt Jessie's complete domination of three young lives, glossed over Aunt Jessie's rather questionable tactics, and made a virtue of Aunt Jessie's most infuriating traits. The reader remains unconvinced." Barbara Woolcott

+ Books p8 F 22 '42 490w

"[Miss] Holt has drawn [Aunt Jessie's] portrait clearly and well for the most part, but not always. Perhaps it is because the reader so thoroughly accepts her as a real person that it is difficult to credit the behavior assigned her in [some cases]. . . The novel is interesting, a little arbitrary at times in its handling of the different characters, occasionally a little over-written, but sensitive, perceptive and with a clear understanding of many of the graduations through which that world of 1912 has passed to merge into and become this world of 1942." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p22 F 22 '42 700w

"Miss Holt re-creates the period fondly and in detail; it is stuffy, over-ornamented, narrow-minded, and somehow sound. A pleasant bit of Americana."

+ New Yorker 18:70 F 21 '42 70w

"The picture of the household is an excellent one. The three children are very well described and rouse our sympathetic interest. The emotional upheaval caused by divorce on any sensitive child is feelingly set down. More than that, the book is a picture of a period and a place." R. C. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 25:11 Ag 15 '42 400w

HOLTON, EDITH AUSTIN (ELIZABETH ALDEN HEATH, pseud). All sails set. 261p $2 Kinsey

42-10937

A romance of Cape Cod folk. There are two threads of story—one deals with the friendship and slowly developing love between a Cape Cod girl and a young scientist, the other with the secret of the work being done in Gramp's machine shop and why the government—and others—are interested in it.

"A folksy yarn that aims to amuse, regional if not so original." Lisle Bell

Books p16 My 3 '42 80w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p18 My 3 '42 160w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ap 19 '42 100w

HOLZINGER, KARL JOHN, and HARMAN, HARRY HORACE. Factor analysis; a synthesis of factorial methods. 417p $5 Univ. of Chicago press

311.23 Factor analysis 42-3082

"The chief purpose of this volume is to present a general treatment of factor analysis including an objective basis for comparing various forms of solution. To accomplish this a thorough examination has been made of the logical and mathematical foundations underlying the methods of analysis employed. The treatment throughout has been made as rigorous as possible with the hope that factor analysis would emerge as a sound branch of statistical theory rather than as a series of disconnected methods of application." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"This book is not to be recommended to students who do not like mathematics. Those who do, and who have a good working familiarity with elementary analysis and statistical methods, will be able both to appreciate the beauty of a masterly exposition and to acquire facility in the use of the factor techniques." C. E. Kellogg

+ Am J Soc 48:261 S '42 550w

Reviewed by T. L. Kelley

School R 50:537 S '42 1600w

"For most sociologists—even those with several courses in statistics to their credit—reading Holzinger and Harman's Factor Analysis will be slow going. Both the mathematics involved and the departures in problem and procedure from ordinary social statistics will make necessary careful study of chapter by chapter. Moreover, the reader cannot skip about in an eclectic fashion, omitting the harder portions and enjoying the easier, for he will not be able to understand the methods if he deviates very far from a straight reading through." M. J. Hagood

Social Forces 21:118 O '42 280w

HOME, MICHAEL. Attack in the desert [Eng title: The place of little birds]. 312p map $2.50 Morrow [8s 6d Methuen]

(W) 41-28080

Novel based on the war in Libya. The main action is provided by an English

HOME, MICHAEL.—Continued

Intelligence officer, and the young English aviator who flies him across the desert to help the natives and Free French forces in an attack on an Italian post. The romantic past of the Intelligence officer and his connection with the young flier provides one angle of the story. Glossary.

Reviewed by R. E. Danielson

Atlantic Ap '42 100w

Booklist 38:209 F 15 '42

"Major Michael Home is an English officer who knows the life of the African desert. He served in the last war; he is serving in the present. From the familiarity he shows with the world of espionage and from the dedication of his book, it is fair to assume that he is a member of the British Intelligence Service. In his new book, 'Attack in the Desert,' he draws heavily and with excellent results upon his knowledge and experience. . . If his story about the background of his main character, an Englishman fashioned on the model of Colonel Lawrence, were as good as his description of desert life and desert fighting, this would be a rare book indeed. But even with this uneven balance 'Attack in the Desert' makes engrossing reading." Rose Feld

+ — Books p6 Ja 25 '42 650w

"Excellent characterization and development. Recommended." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 67:40 Ja 1 '42 80w

Reviewed by Wilfrid Gibson

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 1 '41 100w

"Major Home has sprung a fine-flavored tale of warmly human interest, zestful and at times profoundly moving. He writes of the desert with the knowledge of one long familiar with its topography and the manners and customs of the bedawi." D. de K.

+ N Y Times p26 F 1 '42 550w

"A lively, well-contrived adventure story. . . Mr. Home gets a couple of new twists out of an old situation and writes a thoroughly entertaining yarn besides."

+ New Yorker 17:61 F 7 '42 80w

"The character of the young English officer is done with considerable sympathy and care, so that a likeable and credible person emerges; the father, perhaps by the very nature of his past, is made to seem rather larger than life-size. Major Home can be congratulated on producing a book which will please many average readers." John Hampson

+ Spec 167:218 Ag 29 '41 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p357 J1 26 '41 450w

HOME, MICHAEL. House of shade. 312p maps $2.50 Morrow [8s 6d Methuen]

42-21689

Adventure story, the scene of which is North Africa. Admiral Courasse, a Frenchman with an aversion to Vichy, is held in "protective custody" by the Nazis, near Tripoli. The only man who can manage his escape is the mysterious Englishman, Brice. When Brice discovers that his aviator son has bailed out of his plane over Tripoli the battle of wits is on. Glossary.

Booklist 39:139 D 15 '42

"Michael Home, besides being a novelist with some creditable books to his record, is a major in military life, and he is evidently qualified for writing of Arab country by knowledge of Moslem ways. A simple glossary is appended to this book to help the reader with the native terms that are scattered briskly through the text. . . I enjoyed this book almost as much for the picture it gives of Mahometan customs and life as I did for the excitement of its well wrought narrative." Milton Hindus

+ Books p12 O 25 '42 600w

"The author builds well. He knows that adventure is doubly effective for being also as mundane and realistic as possible. If it is to escape by proxy we like nothing better than to explore terrain, learn local climate, histories and manners, and be made to feel the contrast between the everyday security of the inhabitants and the wary loneliness of the stranger among them. In this, too, the present adventure is more than satisfactory, and, although a little too light-headed in hints of a long-lost oasis awaiting rediscovery, on the whole it revives some of the glories of 'Greenmantle.'" + Times [London] Lit Sup p401 Ag 15 '42 330w

HOMES, GEOFFREY, pseud. See Mainwaring, D.

HOOPER, ALFRED. Mathematics refresher. Am ed 342p $2.50 Holt

510 Mathematics

(W) 42-21017

"The original (English) edition of this book, entitled A Mathematical Refresher, was written primarily for Royal Air Force candidates. . . The author's object is to enable a person of average intelligence to achieve a clear grasp of the essentials of Arithmetic, Algebra, Geometry and Trigonometry with the minimum expenditure of time and effort." (Pref) Index.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (14) N Y Times (13)

Booklist 39:28 O 1 '42

Library J 67:952 N 1 '42 30w

Wis Lib Bul 38:158 N '42

HOOPER, JOHN. Johnny Jump Up; il. by Regina Bode. [48p] $1.50 Macmillan

(W) 42-10682

Johnny, aged eight, loved horses and knew quite a bit about them because his father kept a livery stable in Castine, Maine. The story describes the time when Johnny drove all the way to Bucksport, alone, and brought back the mail. For six to eight year olds.

Booklist 38:348 My 15 '42

"The story reads as if it were being told in a pleasant voice by some one who really admired both small boys and horses. The sentences are short, the type large."

+ Books p16 My 10 '42 250w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 30 '42 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 J1 '42

"Small boys who love horses will enter into Johnny's prideful acceptance of responsibility and will rejoice in the way he keeps his head when the drawbridge begins to rise under his horses' feet. A human, appealing little story with a genuine Maine flavor, further imparted by the spirited drawings." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:173 My '42 80w

"Very natural and human story for children from six to eight." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 67:476 My 15 '42 60w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:887 O 15 '42 30w

"There is an ingratiating warmth and sincerity about this unpretentious little story with its State of Maine flavor, and Regina Bode's charming, spirited drawings help to suggest the days of buggy and buckboard." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Je 14 '42 260w

New Yorker 18:74 My 23 '42 40w

Wis Lib Bul 38:164 N '42

HOOTON, EARNEST ALBERT. Man's poor relations. 412p il $5 Doubleday

599.8 Primates

42-50504

"Well-known Harvard anthropologist extends study of mankind to the other primates: the almost human chimpanzees, the gorillas, apes, and lemurs. Anatomical and physiological data are given, but greater emphasis is placed upon adaptation to environment and psychological and so-called cultural behaviour of these animals, revealing that their relation to man is 'uncomfortably near.' Conclusion is offered that these poor relations, except possibly the chimp, are no longer evolving progressively." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"In this book Professor Hooton tends to be for the most part on the technical side, although there are many entertaining and amusing passages. Oddly enough the subject of apes and monkeys has served to repress the Hooton humor, which breaks forth far too infrequently to please readers of his previous works. But the book will become a standard reference work in the field." H. M. Parshley
+ Books p4 D 27 '42 750w

"For large libraries." G. O. Kelley
Library J 67:950 N 1 '42 100w

"Hooton is convinced by the results of his own extensive investigations of the criminal and insane classes that drastic eugenical measures are imperatively necessary to save the present species of man from grave deterioration. Whether or not the majority of scientists agree with him on this point, they will welcome the present work as a valuable contribution to the general science of human and pre-human biology." W. K. Gregory
+ N Y Times p9 Ja 31 '42 1150w

Scientific Bk Club R 13:3 D '42 480w

Reviewed by C. B. Moore
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 17 '43 700w

HOOVER, HERBERT CLARK. America's first crusade. 81p $1.25 Scribner

940.314 European war, 1914-1918—Peace.
Reconstruction, 1914— 42-183

"A brief collection of observations, letters, and memoranda relating to the 1919 peace conference. The lesson for us, as Mr. Hoover sees it, is that 'eloquent and lofty ideals' are useless in international relations unless we prepare concrete solutions of the problems involved in advance. First published in the Saturday Evening Post." New Yorker

"It is extraordinary that a man to whom there attaches the responsibility, no less than the honor, of being an ex-President of the United States, should permit the publication at this moment of a pamphlet like this. In 1935, when it was written, it might not have been open to any particular objection; last November, when it first appeared in 'The Saturday Evening Post' (in slightly different form) we were already in the eleventh hour for this kind of thing, but it could still be regarded as allowable propaganda in an issue not yet decided. Republished today, with the United States locked in the death struggle declared upon us by the most savage military power in history, it becomes a piece of irresponsibility not easy to describe." Walter Millis

— Books p2 Ja 18 '42 1050w

"Mr. Hoover never was an electrifying speaker or writer and these memoirs of Versailles are hardly distinguished or illuminating. But his comments on past errors do bring out one worthwhile thing which has considerable bearing on the next peace for which we purport to be fighting. As Mr. Hoover puts it in his own pedestrian style, 'The forces which will surround the peace-makers will be much the same as in 1919. Impoverishment, famine, revolution, hate, nationalism and all the other plagues will sit beside that table again.'... If the phrase 'win the war' has any positive meaning, does not Mr. Hoover by bringing forward this point show himself infinitely more patriotic than the reviewers who deride him for doing so?" E. S. S.

Commonweal 35:441 F 20 '42 210w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:574 Ap '42 100w

"From our only living ex-President we might well expect in this grim hour some words that would help awaken the country to the gravity of its danger, that would appeal to the heroic elements in the national temper, and that would bind us closer to our democratic Allies. We have instead a volume that will make judicious friends of Mr. Hoover grieve. However well-intentioned, in effect it is an appeal to national self-righteousness, suspicion of all other lands, and a defeatist attitude toward the future of European peace." Allan Nevins

N Y Times p9 F 1 '42 1900w

New Yorker 17:68 Ja 24 '42 70w

Wis Lib Bul 38:29 F '42

HOOVER, HERBERT CLARK, and GIBSON, HUGH. Problems of lasting peace. 295p $2 Doubleday

341.6 Peace. World war, 1939—Peace. International cooperation (W) 42-16570

"What Messrs. Hoover and Gibson did was to survey the important peaces in history—not merely the peace treaties nor the peace makings, but the nature of the peace that resulted in each case. This they did from the Pax Romana down through the Treaty of Westphalia and the Congress of Vienna to the Versailles Treaty. . . . The resulting diagnosis is like a treatise on some subject in the world of physics. From their survey Messrs. Hoover and Gibson deduced that alternations of peace and war throughout human history have been due to the interplay of seven dynamic forces. . . . It is the relation of the forces to each other, their interplay, that is prepotent." (Books) Index.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (15)
N Y Times (9) PW (6) RB (1) W (1)

Reviewed by G. L. LaFuze

Am Pol Sci R 36:1173 D '42 300w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Atlantic 170:144 S '42 700w

Booklist 38:435 JI 15 '42

Bookmark 4:5 N '42

"The personal participation of two exceptionally intelligent and humane men in the most ambitious attempts at peace ever made, coupled with the scholarly study of all man's attempts at peace throughout history, give this book a unique value." Mark Sullivan

+ Books p2 Je 21 '42 1450w

Christian Century 59:862 JI 8 '42 200w

"Engaging and timely volume. Ex-President Hoover and U. S. Ambassador Gibson have both had international experience sufficient to justify them in a throw at the sort of peace at which the world should aim—and they have treated the subject with political and spiritual finesse." T. F. Opie

+ Churchman 156:20 S 15 '42 480w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin, Jr.

Commonweal 36:257 JI 3 '42 450w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr

Nation 155:36 JI 11 '42 1100w

"It does not matter how far the reader agrees with this book. It is an honest, courageous and comprehensive contribution to a debate that will determine the future of our own country and the world. What matters is that it be widely read and discussed." A. O'H. McCormick

+ N Y Times p1 Je 21 '42 2000w

Pratt p23 D '42

"Former President Hoover and former Ambassador Gibson . . . start from right fundamentals. . . . But from these right fundamentals the two authors do not proceed far enough, in fact they end in vagueness and half measures. While in the first part of the book they outline past experiences of war and peace—it is to be welcomed that the economic motive is regarded only as one of seven main forces determining history and that psychological factors are given the by far larger scope—in a historical discussion, too sketchy to be of any real help, they turn in the second part towards the future. There the book contains wise remarks, but will on the whole dismiss the reader without any constructive guidance." Hans Kohn

+ Sat R of Lit 25:9 JI 4 '42 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 38:114 JI '42

Reviewed by Carl Becker

Yale R n s 32:158 autumn '42 650w

HOPWOOD, PERCY GEORGE SAMUEL. Out of the blitz; the gates of hell shall not prevail; introd. by Charles S. Macfarland. 190p 11 $2 Revell

940.5342 World war, 1939—Great Britain. World war, 1939—Religious aspects 42-14268

A London minister who lived thru the terrors of the blitzkrieg describes the bombing and cites cases of destroyed churches, institutions, and homes, and its effects upon the people in London and in other parts of England. Index.

Christian Century 59:531 Ap 22 '42 70w

Reviewed by T. F. Opie
Churchman 156:31 Je 15 '42 180w

HORAN, MRS KENNETH (O'DONNELL). I give thee back. 270p $2.50 Dutton 42-1105

At thirty-nine Nora Osborne looked back on her life and wondered why she had made so many mistakes. She had loved one man only, but he was another woman's husband. When he died in Europe, and shortly afterward his wife died in Nora's own small Michigan town, their ten-year-old boy was adopted by Nora and became the center of her life. All her resources were poured out upon the boy who was to follow in his father's footsteps and become a famous doctor. And then the young doctor fell in love with a worthless woman. It remained for a thoroughly understanding friend to take the control from Nora and straighten out her tangled life.

"Mrs. Horan has not been too successful in disguising the transparency of her plot. The characters are thin, and they express themselves—in speech and in action—with a jerky animation that falls short of any illusion of reality. The lesson seems to be that people have to work out their salvation, but the nature of that salvation—in 'I Give Thee Back'—is not very clear." George Conrad
Books p11 F 15 '42 360w

"An odd little novel, this latest and most adroitly mixed offering from the pen of the Chicago literary critic, Kenneth Horan. Without being in the least bookish or pedantic, it is derivative in flavor and appears to owe almost as much to reading as to observation. . . . A dash of Jane Austen and a jigger of Henry James are combined with chopped quotations from Conrad Aiken and the Episcopal hymnal. The whole is blended with some less familiarly trademarked product which can be nothing but Mrs. Horan herself." Margaret Wallace

N Y Times p28 F 15 '42 600w

HORGAN, PAUL. Common heart. 398p $2.50 Harper 42-25235

Psychological study of an Albuquerque doctor, Peter Rush, his neurotic wife, their sturdy small son and his likable friend, and the visitor to the Southwest who nearly brings about a crisis in Peter's family. An overdose of sleeping powder, which the doctor's wife takes at a crucial moment, proves a blessing in disguise, for Peter's wife is once more able to assume her place in the family. The doctor's great love for the Southwest is evidenced thruout the book.

Booklist 39:138 D 15 '42

"'The Common Heart' is easy to read. It will not move the heart too deeply, nor call for too much thought. It will give those who love New Mexico fresh memories and those who do not know it knowledge of a strange country which, if any country can, does command the lives of its people. The story is thickly peopled, but the main characters are definitely in the limelight all the time. This novelist knows how to tell a story, and keeps the close attention of his reader to his characters, be they Western doctors or aged Mexicans filled with their own type of wisdom." E. L. Walton

+ Books p21 N 22 '42 550w

+ Cath World 156:633 F '43 180w

"Mr. Horgan does not blind himself to the evil in the world, but in his latest book goes in primarily for sturdy people. His picture is a quiet one; there is no struggle of social forces, not much of a plot. His story is as simple as it is moving. Few Americans writing today have a greater gift for narrative." Edward Skillin, Jr.

+ Commonweal 37:182 D 4 '42 450w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
New Repub 107:831 D 21 '42 850w

"At this date it is needless to underline Mr. Horgan's great gifts. He is lyrical and earthy with equal ease; his pages are exquisite blendings of man's atavistic memories and his eternal groping toward a higher plane. But he is more the painter than the story teller, after all; more poet than novelist. In 'The Common Heart' he has outlined a series of apparently related crises that should add up to a novel, and don't. For 'The Common Heart' lacks the dramatic underpinning that might have sustained it through its many pages. For all its translucent moods, for all its splendid imagery, it will disappoint more readers than it satisfies. It is a hard thing to say, but in this reviewer's opinion Paul Horgan is still no more than a white hope in our literature. He has everything it takes—except a knockout punch." William DuBois
+ — N Y Times p40 N 22 '42 900w

"Mr. Horgan's writing has both delicacy and strength, and reveals his intense love of the Southwest. He creates the atmosphere of the region with the aid of some absorbing bits of history and geography."

+ New Yorker 18:77 N 14 '42 90w

"Horgan writes with skill, subtlety, and a beguiling simplicity, as always. . . . Where he takes hold of a strong, various character, he puts us to admiration. His work is excellent. . . . In this moving, well-written book, there are strong characters. Paul Horgan has presented them ably. And now that he is a Captain in the U. S. Army, we may confidently expect that he will gain experiences which will encourage him to tackle even tougher problems with even greater success." Stanley Vestal

+ Sat R of Lit 26:21 Ja 2 '43 320w

"The appeal of this novel will be wide—and according to Mr Horgan that seems to be his aim. To quote one of his people—a novelist: ' . . . To sing a song, or to tell a tale, and so somehow tap that universal thing in the response of other people—this is about as close to giving thanks as an artist can ever come; for all great works of art are thanksgivings, in one way or another, for life itself.' This is indicative that he wants to write peacefully and quietly, leaving reforms and strong plots to others." Jessica Potter

+ Springfield Republican p7e N 29 '42 500w

HORNEY, KAREN. Self-analysis. 309p $3 Norton

131.342 Psychoanalysis (W) 42-6940

"Dr. Horney writes that 'a harmonious development, with good relations to self and others,' is the goal of analysis. In her new book she devotes a good deal of space to show how this has been done with the help of the analyst and then goes on to tell how patients, between periods of analysis, and individuals who have not been under much treatment, may at times do self-analysis. She states, however, that 'there is no doubt in my mind that severe neuroses belong in the hands of experts.' She feels that milder cases, cases between periods of work with the analyst, or persons with occasional difficulties, may often profit by periods of self-analysis." (Survey G) Index.

Booklist 38:323 My 1 '42

"In her latest book Dr. Horney carries her rejection of Freud's theories about as far as it can go short of an explicit denial of the unconscious mind; she propounds the belief that by adapting the techniques of regular analysis a neurotic person can effectually psychoanalyze himself. Judging by the criteria available to a layman, it seems to me that Dr. Horney makes but a weak case for her belief." Lionel Trilling

— Nation 155:215 S 12 '42 1750w

"So far as I can see, Dr. Horney's book contains nothing new. Like all of her writings, it is interestingly done and makes good reading. . . I think it unfortunate that a book with this title was published at this time. The world needs social psychology and social psychology needs psychoanalysis. . . Before Dr. Horney started writing semi-popular books to propagandize the sociologists and the other lay public for her particular brand of analysis she did a series of excellent technical psycho-analytic studies of feminine sexuality. I wish somehow she could be influenced to return to this type of work." J. F. Brown

— + New Repub 107:125 Jl 27 '42 850w

"Compared, let us say, with one of Freud's case histories, the striking thing is not so much what is new as what is lacking. Lacking is the insight into the infantile sexuality, especially the oedipus and castration complexes, and into those unconscious things which are the quintessence of Freudian analysis. Although Dr. Horney believes that her difference with Freud is largely a matter of emphasis, if this is true the emphasis is so strong as to change the picture almost unrecognizably. The book is very smoothly written in an exceptionally clear style." B. D. Lewin, M.D.

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:19 Je 13 '42 450w

"Dr. Horney's book contains a great deal of interesting new material, although of necessity it covers some of the ground of her former books." A. L. Brush, M.D.

Survey G 31:299 Je '42 300w

HORRABIN, JAMES FRANCIS. Outline of political geography. 161p maps $1.50 Knopf [4s 6d N.C.L.C.]

330.9 Geography. Political science (W) 42-24590

First American edition of an English work first published in 1923 (?) with the title: Outline of Economic Geography. The author has "revised the earlier chapters, those dealing with world history down to the coming of the railways; but the general plan of these remains unchanged. The latter half of the book has been largely re-written, and various new maps substituted for older ones. . . The later chapters now lay stress on the relative economic resources of the great World Powers, and more on the question of the political organization of the world." (Pref) Index.

"We might all feel a little happier about peace settlement if we could make its participants study carefully this valuable survey."

+ New Statesman & Nation 23:426 Je 27 '42 140w

"This book of 157 pages is decidedly disappointing. . . The book suffers from the fact that it originally was 'An Outline in Economic Geography' and that it still shows those earmarks. . . The book suffers from another angle. It is written by a member of the British Labor Party and shows that constantly. One may have sympathies for that point of view but the treatment becomes very one-sided as only that point of view is stressed." S. Van Valkenburg

— Sat R of Lit 26:8 Ja 2 '43 380w

Time 41:92 Ja 11 '43 440w

HORTON, WALTER MARSHALL. Our eternal contemporary. 180p $2 Harper

232 Jesus Christ (W) 42-51077

"A study of the present-day significance of Jesus." (Subtitle) Contents: Our eternal contemporary; Jesus as leader; then and now; Jesus as savior; then and now; Jesus as victor; then and now; Who then is Jesus that is called Christ? Epilogue for Non-Christians. Appendices. Index.

"This book steers deliberately between being a learned treatise and a sermon. Its weakness is here. The middle course can often be good, is usually convenient but is frequently dangerous." A. H. Behrenberg

+ — Christian Century 60:15 Ja 6 '43 700w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 157:17 Ja 1 '43 350w

HOSTETLER, LAWRENCE A. Walk your way to better dancing; il. with diagrams and reproductions from photographs. 263p $2 Barnes, A.S.

793.3 Dancing (W) 42-5559

After preliminary chapters on the control of the body, and the art of walking, the author of The Art of Social Dancing (Book Review Digest, 1930) explains the latest developments in the art of ballroom dancing. Includes photographs and diagrams.

Booklist 38:270 Ap 1 '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:117 Jl '42

HOUGH, HENRY BEETLE. All things are yours. 340p $2.50 Doubleday

42-21650

The story of the rise to fame of an American opera singer, born and bred in Vermont. Her success took her over all of Europe, but her private life was never completely happy, because she repudiated the man she really loved for the sake of her career.

"There is so much traveling, so many events and characters in the novel that an undercurrent of haste comes to be felt in its structure and style and, while the settings are colorful and well depicted, somehow the book as a whole lacks flavor. But for the sake of its magnificently unromantic descriptions of life behind the scenes at the opera, and for the episodes of Captain Joe's adventures in the stockyards of Chicago and the gold mines of the West it will be enjoyed." Iris Barry

+ — Books p10 S 27 '42 380w

"The book seems better when it is finished than while it is being read. The machinery of the plot is a little stiff, the character drawing lacks shading, but the cumulative effect of a crass, forth-putting era . . . is as effective as might be expected of so careful and thoughtful a student of times as the Marthas Vineyard author of 'Country Editor.'" W. K. R.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 D 5 '42 550w

"'All Things Are Yours' might have been the very pattern of the slickly contrived success story, topped by a froth of romance like the whipped cream on a drug-store sundae. There are moments when the reader is sorely afraid that this is what it is. But Mr. Hough, no matter how close he comes to the formula always turns out to be too good for it. He has a nice sense of irony, which may not come through in the motion-picture version but which gives his novel a surprising and interesting flavor." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p22 S 20 '42 750w

"The juxtaposition of sentiment and cynicism is characteristic of the hugger-mugger plot and of the uncertain attitude of the novelist toward his materials. The prime weakness of the novel, however, is in the characters. Not only are Charlotte and Joe incompletely realized, they are dull as well; and their dullness does not amuse us as does Babbitt's, or horrify us as does that of Lardner's lowbrows—it bores us. . . It is not completely banal, however; one keeps on reading, for the tedious characters are involved in a swift sequence of astonishing and romantic adventures that sweep them from Puritan New England to the Wild West." Charles Rodell

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:17 O 5 '42 430w

HOUGH, LYNN HAROLD. Patterns of the mind. 135p $1.50 Harper

170 Life 42-17194

Five lectures delivered at the Florida School of Religion by the Dean of Drew Theological seminary. His discussion upholds the view that "classical Christianity" is the best basis for living in the world today.

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 59:1005 Ag 19 '42 200w

HOUGH, L. H.—Continued

"This book is a convincing and thought-provoking criticism of what is wrong with the world of thought to which most of us belong." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 156:17 D 1 '42 120w

Reviewed by David Dalrymple

Commonweal 36:500 S 11 '42 250w

Reviewed by J. C. Scammell

Crozer Q 19:336 O '42 250w

"With the subtlety and rapier-like dexterity of style which Dean Hough has made his own, he criticizes certain patterns that have been popular in recent American thinking. . . His quick thrusts score heavily at the expense of our American exaggeration of the techniques of salesmanship, until we try to 'sell' education and even religion." C. W. Gilkey

+ J Religion 23:75 Ja '43 280w

HOUSE, ARTHUR HUMPHRY. Dickens world. 232p $3 (10s 6d) Oxford

823 Dickens, Charles. Social problems in literature A42-1527

"The intention of this book is to give a simple account of Dickens' novels and minor works regarded as documents useful for the understanding of nineteenth century social history in Great Britain. The author deals at length with Dickens' attitude to reform, to the relations between employers and employed, and to what Bagehot called his 'sentimental radicalism.' (Publisher's note) Index.

"The most important contribution to Dickensian scholarship for at least a decade. . . The great advantage of this survey, at once literary and historic, over those of such Marxian interpreters of Dickens as T. A. Jackson, is that it is made without prejudice, and, pleading for nothing in particular, presents its findings in the interests only of enlightenment. In this it so far succeeds as to make it indispensable to students and attractive to readers."

+ Books p17 F 8 '42 240w

"Mr. House has written a most fascinating account of the world as Dickens saw it, never spoiling the novels as novels, yet drawing history out of them; and his analysis of Dickens's own views gives us a most convincing picture of the radical, uncultured Victorian middle classes as reflected in a man of genius." A. J. P. T.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 14 '41 200w

Reviewed by M. D. Zabel

Nation 154:434 Ap 11 '42 1700w

"Modest, just and witty, 'The Dickens World' incites to further reading of Dickens and his background; and as the true function of literary history is not to save the reader's time by sparing him the necessity of reading the original sources himself but to persuade the reader to spend more time in treading for himself the paths which the historian maps out, it can be safely said that we have here an excellent piece of literary history and a book to be recommended without reserve." David Daiches

+ New Repub 106:740 My 25 '42 600w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:347 O 11 '41 1500w

Reviewed by R. A. Scott-James

Spec 167:602 D 26 '41 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p509 O 11 '41 420w

HOUSE, ROBERT BURTON. Miss Sue and the sheriff. 118p $2 Univ. of N.C. press

818

41-23911

Reminiscences of a North Carolina childhood, in which the author's father and mother (Miss Sue and the sheriff) figure prominently. The author is dean of administration in the University of North Carolina.

Books p11 Ja 18 '42 200w

"Delicate fragrance, sturdy pungency and the spicy aroma of humor breathe here. . . One of the book's most amusing chapters has to do with a 'gracious, gentle and charming being—a lady of sterling character, fine intelligence and adventurously imaginative spirit—even though she was nothing but a cow.' It is their vivid individuality which makes these memoirs so delightful."

+ N Y Times p2 Ja 11 '42 550w

"Sociologists will find this book a rich source document on the economic and cultural upheavals that came into the agrarian life of eastern North Carolina in the two decades of which 1900 is the center. It shows in warm human terms the impact of a changing economy on the daily living of a family that was typically southern and thoroughly American."

E. V. Hollis

+ Social Forces 20:411 Mr '42 320w

HOUSMAN, LAURENCE. Gracious Majesty; il. by Ernest H. Shepard. 222p $3 Scribner [8s 6d Cape, J]

822 Victoria, queen of Great Britain—Drama (W) 42-15954

Twelve dramatic episodes based on the life of Queen Victoria, ranging in time from 1837 to 1900.

Booklist 38:382 Je 15 '42

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p15 Je 21 '42 200w

Library J 67:533 Je 1 '42 20w

Reviewed by Kingsley Martin

New Statesman & Nation 22:311 S 27 '41 900w

"Mr. Housman tells us too much: sometimes historical facts and amusing ones at that, but the sense of development, implicit in a viewpoint or mysteriously irrational in a mood, is absent. If it is objected that this sense of vistas is too much to demand in so short a play, we can answer Mr. Housman that the series make in effect one long play and this over-simplification, sometimes amounting to the too-easy smile, is deliberate. That extraordinary little play of genius, Echo de Paris, tends to prove that the author believed Wilde to be subtle and therefore handled him subtly, and that, believing the Queen to be obvious-minded, he used his broadest effects in his portrait of her—a fallacy of taste—destroying some of our pleasure in Gracious Majesty."

Spec 167:292 S 19 '41 170w

"Mr. Housman is too good a dramatist to starve his minor characters, Aberdeen, Carlyle, Disraeli, Bismarck, Wilhelm II, all have plenty to say. But the man who shows up in the freshest gleam is the Prince Consort. He has a sense of humour. . . In granting him that sense of humour and showing him able to laugh at the comical manifestations of the unpopularity which was all the time a load upon his heart, Mr. Housman has put the finishing touch to the rehabilitation of the excellent, misjudged benefactor of his Queen and her country. Another proof of Mr. Housman's dramatic quality is the reader's rarely quiescent desire to hear this dialogue spoken. . . And if the reader longs more to hear than to see these little plays in action, that is because there are thirty drawings (most of them full-page) by Mr. Ernest H. Shepard. It takes more than mere cleverness to bring out, with no touch of caricature or even of exaggeration, all the quality, serious and comic, of persons, clothes, furniture and period in general. It is impossible to look at the Queen sketching in the Highlands without laughing outright; but every drawing in the book is a joy."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p432 S 6 '41 600w

HOWARD, ELIZABETH. Adventure for Alison. 224p $2 Lothrop

(W) 42-24668

"Soon after the defeat at Culloden, a Scottish brother and sister decide to run away from unsympathetic relatives, to seek a Jacobite brother who had fled to America. By chance, they are brought aboard a vessel bound for old Boston and find themselves sold as bond servants, to their unhappy surprise. Coming from a landed family, they knew little of hard work, but Alison manages to get on as maid to a spoiled girl, and Gavin learns his work in a printing office. They are found at last by a friend of their brother, and join him on a wilderness farm." Horn Bk

Booklist 39:186 Ja 1 '43

"Miss Howard knows how to tell a good tale with the varied background of the Highlands the ocean voyage and old Boston. Any girl up to sixteen will delight in it."

+ Cath World 156:377 D '42 140w

"The plot is lively and well sustained." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:429 N '42 110w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:890 O 15 '42 20w

"A well-balanced tale. Much of the indefinable charm and suspense of author's Sabina. Same age appeal. Fine picture of old Boston." Maude Adams

+ Library J 67:1015 N 15 '42 80w

"The book is not so rich in characterization and theme as was 'Sabina,' but the graceful writing carries the reader of the 'teen age along easily, tracing the way in which many a heart-sore refugee from the Old World found a home in the new when it was still young." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p34 N 15 '42 280w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 10 '43 110w

HOWARD, FLORENCE RUTH. View from a window. 341p $2.50 Morrow

(W) 42-15004

Two disillusioned people met in an obscure California valley where they had gone to escape from the world. Janet's career as a concert pianist was ended because of an accident to her hand. With her Janet had her brother's horse, which she cherished because her brother, whom she idolized, had been killed in action. Richard, an ex professor, also escaping from reality, had with him a magnificent racing horse. The two horse-loving people, at odd's with life, were brought together by a crisis precipitated by Richard's horse.

Booklist 38:384 Je 15 '42

"The two steeplechases in which Richard rides first Fitzgerald and the second time, McTavish, have the excitement and tenseness of high moments at the racetrack. Miss Howard also captures the feel of early morning at the stables when there is no sound except the tentative chirping of birds, the crunching of Janet's shoes on the drive, the chill soft air, Mac's head thrust out of the box with his ears pricked forward waiting for his water bucket. Horses, stables, land, stir in Miss Howard a contagious emotion that she transmits with a fine lyrical intensity." Page Cooper

+ Books p8 Je 14 '42 700w

"'View From a Window' is a tense book, a romantic one, full of action and excitement, and one which really initiates the reader into the horseman's special world. Plenty of novelists, I suspect, could describe a steeplechase almost as thrillingly as does Miss Howard in this story, but to communicate the feeling which her characters have for their horses is a very different matter. . . . The love story, though romanticized, is a provocative and appealing one—and while it owes much to its background, is not dwarfed by it." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p6 Je 14 '42 900w

New Yorker 18:71 Je 13 '42 40w

HOWARD, HELEN ADDISON, and MCGRATH, DAN L. War chief Joseph; maps and il. by George D. McGrath. 362p $3.50 Caxton printers

970.2 Joseph, Nez Percé chief, Nez Percés Indians—Wars, 1877 41-15614

Biography of War Chief Joseph, leader of the Nez Perce Indians of the northwest, when they were fighting a losing battle against the white people in the War of 1877, the last important contest between the Indians and the United States army. Bibliography. Index.

"Biographers dealing with Indian materials are faced with a difficult task. To fill gaps in their knowledge of the Nez Perce, the authors used McBeth, Spinden and Teit but the picture they draw of Joseph lacks the shading which could turn the 'noble savage' into a convincing human being. Meeting him for the first time, however, one could not do better than read this treatment." M. W. Smith

+ — Am Anthropol 44:302 Ap '42 180w

Christian Science Monitor p20 O 14 '41 450w

Wis Lib Bul 38:13 Ja '42

HOWARD, HOMER. Mathematics teachers' views on certain issues in the teaching of mathematics. 134p $1.60 Teachers college

510.7 Mathematics—Study and teaching 41-13696

"With the purpose of facilitating mathematical instruction, the author has prepared a list covering twelve of the outstanding issues relating to the teaching of the subject. The attitudes of teachers and students alike to the points in question are presented, summarized and evaluated. A bibliography citing sources of the views expressed is included." N Y New Tech Bks

N Y New Tech Bks 26:58 O '41

School & Society 53:744 Je 7 '41 70w

HOWARD, JOHN TASKER. This modern music; a guide for the bewildered listener. 234p $2.50 Crowell

780 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation (W) 43-2215

Discussion of the "new" music, with special chapters on dissonance, impressionism, atonality, and polytonality. Bibliography. List of recordings. Index.

"The most valuable part of his book, in my opinion, is contained in Chapters III, IV, V and VI, which discuss dissonance, impressionism, atonality and polytonality. The later chapters tend to biography and history. They make excellent reading and they will fill in for most readers certain natural gaps of information. The four chapters mentioned, however, constitute an excellent summary of those musical developments which puzzle the uninitiated, but which to the musician seem inevitable. . . . Mr. Howard is a good teacher. Any reader who likes music at all will be instructed by every page in this book. When he can't accept what he finds there, he will at least be provoked to further thought." John Erskine

+ — Books p12 Ja 10 '43 1250w

"Although Howard organizes his material into appropriate categories . . . he contributes little that is new. This type of book has place in collateral reading for study clubs and college courses but is of little interest to professional musician. Bibliography and list of recordings incomplete." H. E. Bush

+ — Library J 67:950 N 1 '42 110w

"If Mr. Howard's book leads people to listen to the music of our own time, that would be its most useful contribution, for performance and listening in abundance will do more for mutual understanding than any other force." Howard Taubman

+ — N Y Times p28 Ja 31 '43 700w

"'This Modern Music' is made no less valuable to the average reader because many of its other ideas are to be found elsewhere. Mr. Howard, it is evident, prepared himself thoroughly for the task of writing this work by reading all available books on the subject, and in some cases it would seem that he follows very closely the plan which other authors use for presenting certain details." Henry Cowell

+ Sat R of Lit 26:25 Ja 30 '43 1300w

HOWARD, LOWRY SAMUEL. Road ahead; a college orientation and guidance book; ed. and with introd. by Lewis M. Terman. 402p $2 World bk.

371.42 Educational guidance. Students 41-18631

"Prepared for college students and prospective college students as a text in college orientation and guidance. The central purpose of this work is 'to cultivate in the student the will to self-analysis, a readiness to assess objectively and unemotionally his abilities, his disabilities, his motivations and his customary patterns of adjustment.'" (School & Society) Index.

School & Society 54:228 S 20 '41 80w

"To persons who refuse to admit the value of orientation courses for freshmen, this book will prove to be an anathema, not because of the book itself, but because of the purpose for which it is designed. By those individuals who are interested in such courses, the book will undoubtedly be well received. It is so written that the least gifted Freshmen should be able to read it without a great deal of difficulty and the most gifted should not be bored. . . . Although not intended for high-school pupils, this book should also be useful in orientation courses for high-school Juniors and Seniors. In fact, because of the great number of such courses in high school as compared with those in college, it is probable that in the former it will receive its widest acceptance." L. O. Garber

+ School R 50:315 Ap '42 800w

HOWARD, MARY. Far blue horizons. 280p $2 Doubleday [8s 3d Collins]

42-7340

Celia Marden knew she was taking a desperate chance when she agreed to go out to Egypt as Gerald Graham's secretary. Gerald had a beautiful wife and a small daughter; the child Una loved Celia but the beautiful Myra was as wicked as she was lovely and her evil ways complicated Celia's own problems immensely.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p21 Ap 5 '42 100w

"Myra is almost undiluted wickedness, and Celia's virtue comes close to being incredible, but the plot and the background are exciting and vivid and Miss Howard tells her story well." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p22 Mr 22 '42 180w

HOWARD, MARY. Tomorrow's hero. 272p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Collins]

42-17148

Describes the complications which came into the life of Nina Charles, a charming young English dancer, when a naval hero urged her to consider herself engaged to him during a ten days' leave.

"The author piles up the agony with a lavish hand. 'Tomorrow's Hero' is recommended to readers who like to see a girl suffer, knowing all the time that it will not be in vain." Lisle Bell

Books p13 Jl 26 '42 110w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p20 Jl 19 '42 200w

"Light and trivial, romantic in a fashion that one had thought to have gone out with heroines in riding-habits, 'Tomorrow's Hero' is one more of those articles manufactured to suit the craving of some portion of the reading public which must, alas, be very naive in its taste, and very, very anxious to escape." C. C.

Sat R of Lit 25:16 O 5 '42 190w

HOWE, LESLIE. Merchant service to-day. (Pageant of progress ser) 159p il $1.75 (4s 6d) Oxford

387.5 Merchant marine—Great Britain. Shipping—Great Britain 42-12179

"A good perspective on what Britain had to start with and how she was set up to feed her civilians and supply her troops when war came is [here] obtainable. . . . The title is very much out of date, since, except for the final chapter and occasional revisions along the way, the text seems to stand as of 1939. . . . Mr. Howe devotes but three of his twelve chapters to the types, sizes and means of propulsion of ships. Most of the book is devoted to such matters as chartering and administration, insurance, loading and discharging, bunkering and fuel supply at home and halfway across the world, and trade routes and cargoes." N Y Times

"Mr. Howe has done a valuable job. Throughout, his book reads as if he enjoyed writing it. He forfends some criticism by apologizing frequently for his necessarily brief treatment, which is indeed a failing in the book. Then, too, he has such lapses as putting Newport News on the northeast coast of the United States; he tends to be patronizing toward seamen; he can't resist a moralistic dig at Soviet Russia. But these things are minor, heavily outweighed by his merits." C. B. Palmer

+ N Y Times p31 D 13 '42 500w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Grigson

Spec 168:42 Ja 9 '42 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p35 Ja 17 '42 250w

HOWIE, EDITH. Murder at Stone house. 310p $2 Farrar

42-7960

Detective story.

"Feminine fans are supposed to fall for this kind of story in droves. Worth trying, anyway." Will Cuppy

Books p12 Mr 29 '42 200w

"Miss Howie, who is the author of 'Murder for Christmas,' has once more demonstrated a genuine talent for story-telling and mystification." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 29 '42 280w

"Good hunting."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:20 Ap 4 '42 40w

HOWIE, EDITH. Murder's so permanent. 314p $2 Farrar

42-25810

Detective story.

"Don't think that Miss Howie merely wallows in love's young dream. She has a new twist to the subject. This is crime in pleasanter aspects, worth your attention." Will Cuppy

+ Books p28 N 29 '42 250w

"While it is not too difficult to guess the identity of the murderer, the story has conspicuous merits on other counts." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p34 N 29 '42 220w

"Fair enough plot, but written almost entirely in clichés."

+ New Yorker 18:100 N 28 '42 50w

"Capably plotted and rapidly moving—though rather too 'talky'—yarn."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:20 N 28 '42 40w

HOYE, JOHN. Staple cotton fabrics; names, descriptions, finishes, and uses of unbleached, converted, and mill finished fabrics. 241p il $3.50 McGraw

677.21 Cotton manufacture 42-20613

"The material in this book appeared first as a series of articles in the Textile World. It covers staple American fabrics used in the garment-manufacturing and industrial trades. A trade description, illustrations, details of construction as to the type of yarn and weave used, and a list of uses for the cloth accompany each fabric." (J Home Econ) Contains a descriptive list of converted cloths, not basic fabrics. Index.

Booklist 39:96 N 15 '42

"The book is a valuable reference for textile research workers, teachers of textile courses, and others interested in fabric specifications. The author has had many years' experience in textile manufacturing and in teaching textile courses." B. V. Morrison

+ J Home Econ 34:744 D '42 100w

HOYT, MRS AUGUSTA MARIA (DAURER). Toto and I; a gorilla in the family; introd. by Roger Conant. 238p il $2.50 Lippincott

599.82 Gorillas (W) 41-25676

Life story of the young female gorilla, Toto, who was "adopted" by the author when she was an orphaned baby of two months. The story ends when Toto was about nine years old and had been turned over to a circus as a prospective mate for Gargantua.

"Actually, it is hard to accept this story. Mrs. Hoyt tries to explain why she devoted herself to Toto for years, why she lavished such care beyond measure on the gorilla. . . To students of anthropoid apes Toto's life and behavior should be full of interest. To the lay person the one fact of interest is Mrs. Hoyt's admission that her problem child had little or no ability to discipline herself and make herself adopt a role of social conduct. . . Toto was an ape living as a child. It will take some one other than this reviewer to understand this fantastic story." M. C. Hubbard

Books p40 D 7 '41 750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '42

HSIAO, CHUN (T'EN CHUN, pseud). Village in August; introd. by Edgar Snow. 313p $2.50 Smith & Durrell

(W) 42-11707

"A novel of the Chinese Revolutionary Army, written by a Chinese soldier. This book does not have much plot; it is more a series of scenes: an army on the march, fighting, arguing, starving, dying, an army not in the least military but made up of farmers and factory workers and men and women from small towns who are implacably determined to resist and repel the invader." New Yorker

Booklist 38:346 My 15 '42

"In some ways, 'Village in August' is a crude and lusty book, a record of men and women who live close to the elements and always in terms of extremes—great hungers, great appetites, sudden death. And yet it is also a high-minded book, shot through with exalted ideals. It does not glaze over difficulties or errors: the culture of the revolutionaries is inchoate at times; their decisions are often makeshift. . . But they fight slavery and ignorance with all their strength, and most of them know, as few soldiers have known, what they are fighting for." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p4 Ap 12 '42 950w

Cath World 155:382 Je '42 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '42

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse

Manchester Guardian p3 O 16 '42 150w

"There are tenderness and pathos and humor in this book, and intimate Rabelaisian asides; above these shines the unquenchable courage of men and women who remain human even when they know that they must be ruthless in the very name of their essential humanity." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 19 '42 900w

"An impressive piece of work."

+ New Yorker 18:86 Ap 11 '42 90w

"Village in August is a 'people's' book. It was written of the people, for the people, and by one of them and in their language, the common 'pai-hua'. . . Anyone acquainted with China knows it is impossible to capture the richness of colloquial Chinese in a foreign tongue. Still, the translator has done a first-rate job. He has been particularly wise in putting the book completely into the English idiom, piercing that illusion between East and West which makes the one think the other a species apart." Preston Schoyer

+ Pacific Affairs 15:374 S '42 700w

Pratt p12 O '42

"'Village in August' will be an extraordinary contribution to the American literary world because it is not only the first contemporary Chinese novel translated into English, but it is one of the best translations of all Chinese literary works ever introduced to the West." Chen Shih-Hsiang

+ Sat R of Lit 25:13 Ap 11 '42 850w

Reviewed by John Hampson

Spec 169:392 O 23 '42 500w

"Mr. Edgar Snow, who knows the background and characters as well as any white man living, prefaces it with a glowing recommendation. But the original will undoubtedly have a great advantage over the English version in the Chinese vernacular, than which there is no language or dialect more salty, more expressive. In his effort to render its colloquialisms into 'agreeable and literary English' (the words of Mr. Snow) the translator has quenched the vitality so that the essential spirit of the book is tamed and interest in the story hard to maintain."

Times [London] Lit Sup p533 O 31

'42 360w

HU, SHIH, and others. Studies in political science and sociology. See Pennsylvania. University. Bicentennial conference

HUBBARD, LUCIEN. Rivers to the sea; an American story. 313p $2.50 Simon & Schuster (W) 42-11118

Historical novel of Pittsburgh and the early days of steamboating between Pittsburgh and New Orleans. The builder of the steamboat is Captain Nicholas Roosevelt, and his assistant one David Thomas, a young man just out of the Wharton school in Philadelphia. The first trip of the boat, which was a great and exciting occasion, began at Pittsburgh in October 1811, and ended in New Orleans in January, 1812. David's love affair with a pretty young washerwoman reached its climax about the same time.

"'Rivers to the Sea' is a swift-moving, eventful story with its solid roots in American history and its verdant, vigorous branches abloom with the bright flowers of fresh adventure and old romance." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p8 My 3 '42 650w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 13 '42 500w

"Mr. Hubbard is a strictly Class-B storyteller, but he's been reading the right histories."

+ New Repub 106:614 My 4 '42 60w

"This is a movie in words. Action dominates character. Conceived in striking scenes, the book pictorially evokes an exciting and eventful chapter in our history. Mr. Hubbard turns his back on the actual heroine of history. That was Mrs. Nicholas Roosevelt. What she truly did is much more heroic than all of the fictional heroics in this tale." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 26 '42 500w

"A romantic, easy-to-read tale of life on the Ohio and Mississippi."

+ New Yorker 18:78 Ap 25 '42 50w

"This first novel by a veteran Hollywood director unequivocally lives up to its publishers' announcement: it tells a story, it is unashamed and unpretentious, it has a hero and a villain, suspense and climaxes, it is a success story. 'Rivers to the Sea' is in most ways as old-fashioned as cornbread and hominy, plain food with no subtle sauces. There is so much of a tale to unfold and so little time to do it (the novel is not long) that little effort is devoted to such trivia as style and characterization. It is G. A. Henty with a few baggio gestures." R. A. Cordell

Sat R of Lit 25:16 My 2 '42 400w

HUBBARD, MARGARET ANN. Hickory Limb; il. by Dorothy Bayley. 291p $2 Macmillan

42-21071

"The American Revolution is in its later stages as this story for fourteen-year-olds begins; its hero is Colonel John Sevier—Noli-

HUBBARD, M. A.—Continued
chucky Jack—to whom the author has been devoted ever since she met him in a high school history. Its scene is the Great Smokies, in what is now Tennessee." Books

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 S 6 '42 450w
Churchman 156:16 N 15 '42 10w

"Recommended for children eleven to thirteen." Emily Hutson
+ Library J 67:848 O 1 '42 110w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie
Library J 67:891 O 15 '42 10w

"The effect of the story is diffused and weakened between the two major events, but it is certainly never dull. The story makes clear the resolution with which those backwoodsmen fought for home and nation in the Revolution and indicates the ultimate tragedy of the Cherokees, although both themes are interpreted with a clarity which seems to reflect almost as much hindsight on the part of the author as it does the actual temper of the period." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p11 S 27 '42 400w

HUBBELL, JAY BROADUS, ed. Last years of Henry Timrod, 1864-1867. 184p $2.50 Duke Univ. [15s Cambridge]

B or 92 Timrod, Henry 41-16362

A study of a Southern poet which concentrates on the last six years of his life from 1861 to 1867. The book contains letters of Timrod to Paul Hamilton Hayne and letters about Timrod by William Gilmore Simms, John R. Thompson, John Greenleaf Whittier, and others; with four uncollected poems and seven uncollected prose pieces. Drawn chiefly from the Paul Hamilton Hayne collection in the Duke University Library.

"This modest volume makes an indispensable contribution to the full biography of Henry Timrod which still remains to be written. It also furnishes a typical illustration of the value of assembling in university libraries the materials for the history of regional literature." G. F. Whicher

+ Books p27 O 5 '41 650w

Reviewed by H. N. Smith
New Eng Q 15:173 Mr '42 800w

HUBBELL, RICHARD W. 4000 years of television; the story of seeing at a distance. 256p $2.25 Putnam

621.388 Television (W) 42-20886

Outline of the beginnings and development of television, from the earliest discoveries of the principles upon which it is based to the present. Information on professional opportunities in television, and its place in the present war is included. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 39:44 O 15 '42

Reviewed by J. C. Shipman
Library J 67:793 S 15 '42 50w

School & Society 57:84 Ja 16 '43 10w

"The book has an exhilarating vision of the artistic and cultural potentialities in this perhaps the most powerful of distance art mediums."

+ Theatre Arts 26:664 O '42 250w

HUBNER, ROBERT NORMAN. Fabulous people. 307p $2.50 Knopf

(W) 42-14084

Japan in 1939 is the scene of this story. The narrator is an American newspaper man; and among his friends and acquaintances he numbers a White Russian girl who longs to get away from Japan; a Turk with a penchant for easy money, honest or not; a South Sea island princess; an Argentine; an American judge from Missouri; and the Japanese tea-house girl who loved the narrator.

Reviewed by Bradford Smith
Books p6 Je 28 '42 550w

"A watered-down 'Sun Also Rises' set in Tokyo in 1939. The people, a group of Left Bank characters, are not so much fabulous as tedious. The author seems to be as amoral politically as any other way, but gets in some nice comedy about the Japanese spies and Thought Police. The style is gutless and relatively pointless. Hemingway, and the author's tragic love affair with a Japanese girl is ditto."

— New Repub 106:902 Je 29 '42 60w

"Gay and gaga, wild and witty, is the tone of 'The Fabulous People.' Underneath the mocking satire there is a genuine feeling for the Japanese people as distinct from their megalomaniac rulers. On more than one count the book is to be recommended." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p6 Je 14 '42 800w

"Mr. Hubner has involved [the characters] cleverly in various complications, and he has some sharp and interesting observations to make about the Japanese people besides. Time-ly and instructive."

+ New Yorker 18:67 Je 20 '42 90w

"If the story ends rather abruptly, you have, nevertheless, gained an insight into emperor-worship, the brothels of the Yoshiwara, and police inquisitions and espionage, especially the latter. Altogether, 'The Fabulous People' adds up to an entertaining as well as informative book." Linton Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 25:12 J1 25 '42 230w

"The characterization is stiff, the local color dim. This is that book all newspaper men are going to write instead of hanging around in bars. It might have been a better book if the author had hung around in more bars."

— Time 40:80 Ag 17 '42 100w

HUDSON, ALEC, pseud. See Holmes, W. J.

HUDSON, GEOFFREY FRANCIS, and RAJCHMAN, MARTHE. Atlas of Far Eastern politics; with a suppl. for the years 1938-1942 by George E. Taylor; and add. maps by Marthe Rajchman; issued under the auspices of the Int. secretariat, Inst. of Pacific relations. enl ed 207p $2.50 Day

950 East (Far East). Eastern question (Far East) 42-11946

"A 1938 book reissued with a supplementary section that makes it timely. This new section deals with the Sino-Japanese war since 1938, and the effect of the European war on the Far East. Many excellent small maps show geography, resources, and transportation." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 38:371 Je 1 '42

Reviewed by W. C. Johnstone
Pacific Affairs 25:491 D '42 350w
Time 39:90 My 25 '42 20w

HUDSON, WINTHROP STILL. John Ponet (1515?-1556) advocate of limited monarchy [and] A short treatise of politike power, by John Ponet. 2v in 1 246,183p $4.50 Univ. of Chicago press

320.1 Political science. Ponet, John, bp. 42-25398

Study of the life and writings of a member of the group of Cambridge university Protestant scholars who flourished in the days of Henry VIII. When Mary Tudor came to the throne many of them fled to the continent and Ponet never returned, dying in Strassburg at the age of forty. The book includes a facsimile of Ponet's A Shorte Treatise of Politike Power, published in 1556. Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Hudson's thoroughly documented study is a sound piece of historical research which has very direct bearing upon questions of present importance." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 60:51 Ja 13 '43 1050w

"The delightful surprise of the volume is the facsimile of the 1556 edition (the first) of Ponet's work, taking up nearly half of the pages. With all due respect to the value of Hudson's own study, it must be said that this inclusion insures the book a positive permanent value. The fifteen-page bibliography is good, and the indexing is well done. One may make a trivial complaint of the printing: the quoted material is given in almost the same type as the footnotes, so that the reader's moving eye sometimes travels unwittingly into the footnotes. (No serious objection: the footnotes are full of riches). Need we stress the relevance of a study like this in our day of quickened political living and thinking? Dr. Hudson may or may not have made a case for the importance of Ponet's influence. (I am not completely impressed). We cannot refrain, however, from thanking him for the rescue of a deserving work and for the stimulation afforded by this fascinating chapter in the history of ideas." J. W. Brush

+ — Crozer Q 20:73 Ja '43 650w

HUESTON, ETHEL (POWELSON) (MRS E. J. BEST). This one kindness. 302p $2.50 Bobbs (W) 42-15692

Character sketches of a woman whose "divine disposition" brought her nothing but unhappiness, and of her daughter who inherited her mother's disposition, but not her ineptness.

Booklist 38:441 J1 15 '42

"Ethel Hueston is most at home in stories in which the family is the unit, and this is one of her best. 'This One Kindness' is an unusual story. The theme is developed with a light touch, and the author's tolerance of well meant but unintelligent family interference reflects Alexandra's own. Ethel Hueston has written an amusing novel that leaves you thinking." George Conrad

+ Books p14 Je 14 '42 600w

Reviewed by L. M. Field

N Y Times p7 Je 14 '42 400w

HUGHES, DONALD WYNN. Public schools and the future. (Current problems ser) 128p $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d Cambridge]

373.42 Public schools (endowed) [42-16650]

"A conservative but critical estimate of the [English] public school system, in which special stress is laid on the claim that the public schools are the last strongholds of the Christian religion in a pagan age." Spec

School & Society 56:56 J1 11 '42 20w

Reviewed by E. B. Castle

Spec 168:562 Je 12 '42 210w

"It is in no spirit of complacency," says Mr. Hughes, "that I state my belief that in the Public School System [all capitals] we have potentially the best machinery for educating a Christian democracy." An exceedingly simple theme. Quite heroic in its simplicity, its naivety, some would even say. Would that the writing were as simple."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p176 Ap 4 '42 700w

HUGHES, MRS DOROTHY BELLE (FLANAGAN). Fallen sparrow. 307p $2.50 Duell 42-21967

A mystery-adventure story of spies and espionage in Washington and New York with the root of the matter going back to a prison and a prisoner of the Spanish Civil war.

Booklist 39:202 Ja 15 '43

"Any way you look at it, as a superior thriller with international aspects, or as a genuine baffle cannily geared to war time for extra impact, 'The Fallen Sparrow' is the biggest news in its field for months and months. Chilling, eloquent and enigmatic by turns, it is right in there with a claim to top 1942 honors." Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 S 6 '42 500w

"About the fastest moving mystery yarn that has been spun in many a day."

+ Boston Globe p19 S 9 '42 280w

"Beautifully told story of terror by the author of 'The So Blue Marble.' Recommended."

+ New Yorker 18:71 S 19 '42 60w

"'The Fallen Sparrow' is an intricate and very ambitious spy story: too ambitious, perhaps, for success. Both in her hero's complicated background and in the characters of the novel's three beautiful young women the author has reached out toward conflicts and situations that are rather beyond the usual whodunit scheme. But the story's interest lies in the solution of its mystery and the swift succession of its puzzling events; and its price of $2.50 instead of $2 is scarcely justified." Kay Irvin

+ — N Y Times p10 S 13 '42 140w

HUGHES, LANGSTON. Shakespeare in Harlem [and other poems] with drawings by E. McKnight Kauffman. 124p $2.50 Knopf

811

(W) 42-6325

This Negro poet calls this latest book: "A book of light verse. Afro-Americana in the blues mood. Poems syncretized and variegated in the colors of Harlem, Beale Street, West Dallas, and Chicago's South Side. Blues, ballads, and reels to be read aloud, crooned, shouted, recited, and sung. Some with gestures, some not—as you like. None with a far-away voice." Author's note

Booklist 38:271 Ap 1 '42

"The poems built simply upon individual experience are done with so sure a touch and an insight so genuine as to make that experience universal. . . Making these verses memorable, too, is the humor that almost always surmounts near tragedy. It is never read in from the outside, but inherent in the Negro's ability to objectify his own situation, to laugh at himself." Ruth Lechlitner

+ Books p2 My 3 '42 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '42

Nation 155:119 Ag 8 '42 210w

"It ranges from the urban lushness of 'Harlem Sweeties' to 'Mississippi Levee' and the tight-lipped 'Sharecroppers.' Throughout Hughes speaks richly for his race. He has been called the Negro Laureate; he is this and more, he is an authentic American poet." Coleman Rosenberger

+ New Repub 106:577 Ap 27 '42 550w

"Langston Hughes's 'Shakespeare in Harlem' makes a text on which, if one had space, one could talk on the value of having a range in language. Langston Hughes's range is very bounded, and consequently, many of his poems are monotonous. He has strong emotions; he has a form and vocabulary of his own, both familiar to us from the singers of the blues and the spirituals, but neither his imagination nor his intelligence comes anywhere near the strength of his emotions." M. M. Colum

+ — N Y Times p9 Mr 22 '42 400w

"This is a book of light verse and, as such, the only demands that should be made upon it are those of entertainment. It has charm and spontaneity. It expresses temporary nostalgias, passing moods of weariness or gaiety and, occasionally, irony and racial bitterness. . . Much of Shakespeare in Harlem is in popular song style and really calls for music. Mr. Hughes would be an excellent lyricist for a singer such as Ethel Waters. Having already explored the medium, he is the logical poet to write a blues opera. One hopes he will some day try his hand at a libretto." H. R. Hays

+ Poetry 60:223 J1 '42 450w

Pratt p17 O '42

"A new volume by Langston Hughes, with delightful drawings by E. McKnight Kauffman, is a lively event in these troubled times. . . For here is no highbrow verse, no heavy thinking, and nothing low-born either. The careless reader might easily fall into the error of thinking that these delicate notes and rhythms are funny or gay. It is only the skilful surface that is funny or gay; the heart of the matter is tragic. Rarely in our poetry do we find this subtle blending of tragedy and comedy. It is an exquisite art and a difficult one." Alfred Kreyenborg

+ Sat R of Lit 25:9 Ap 25 '42 180w

HUGHES, RUSSELL MERIWETHER (LA MERI, pseud.). Gesture language of the Hindu dance. 100p pl $10 Columbia univ. press

793.3 Dancing—Folk and national dances.
Gesture 42-5558

"The chief barrier to American appreciation of the dance of India has been our ignorance of its language. The Hindu dance is that miracle of dance art, a system of precise gestures transfused into flowing movement and permeated with the very spirit of dance. In her teaching, dance programs and now this book, La Meri has done what so obviously needed doing: to provide a wordbook (in more than 200 photographs) of Hindu dance, the beginnings of a basic grammar and a technical rather than esoteric account of its syntax." Theatre Arts

"The description is brief and the commentary clear—provided the user of the book keeps the glossary open—and the illustrations are excellent and admirably reproduced. . . . Scarcely any one could read the text and examine the illustrations without realizing that the Hindu dance is a profound and sophisticated art, worth all the trouble required to understand its full nobility, yet also rewarding to the less serious student who may lack the ability to penetrate its subtleties and philosophic purpose but can delight his eye in rhythmic beauty of line and pose and flow of movement." W. N. Brown
+ Books p24 Mr 8 '42 490w

Reviewed by George Belswanger
Theatre Arts 26:211 Mr '42 200w

HUGHES, THOMAS HYWEL. Psychology and religious truth. 160p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Allen, G]

201 Psychology, Religious. Religion A42-4797
"These eight lectures by Dr. Hughes on the bearing of modern psychological theory upon the religious consciousness and upon the main doctrines of the Christian faith are composed of three (and part of a fourth) which were actually delivered at Bangor University last year, and of others, of a more specifically theological and Christological character, which were added because the author 'came to realize that Psychology had some light to shed on all the central doctrines of the Christian faith.' The book in its published form reads as a connected whole, betraying no evidence of afterthought." Times [London] Lit Sup

"This is not a book on psychology. The author disclaims at the outset any wholesale acceptance of the findings of psychological investigation as determinative of the credibility of religious truths. The psychologist however will have misgivings at many points with regard to the treatment accorded his science, and the ordinary reader will be somewhat puzzled by the theologian's choice of what is true or false, and important or unimportant, in contemporary psychology." Paul Ramsey
Christian Century 59:1594 D 23 '42 700w

"I read the book with real interest and can recommend it to all people interested in its subject."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 J1 13 '42 130w

"It would be a mistake to take leave of Dr. Hughes's book without emphasizing the fact that it is not so much a critique of philosophy or psychology as a reverent inspection, albeit from a philosophical angle, of the transcendent mysteries of faith; and while its informative value to students may be considerable its general appeal lies in the devotional sphere."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p316 Je 27 '42 750w

HUIE, WILLIAM BRADFORD. Fight for air power. 310p il $2.50 Fischer, L.B.

358.4 Aeronautics, Military. U.S.—Army—Air corps (W) 42-51537

"The story of our military aviation since the last war. The author charges that our long-range offensive air power has been and is being slowed up by Army and Navy ground hogs." New Yorker

Booklist 39:220 F 1 '43

"It seems unfortunate that one-sided contributions like Mr. Huie's should continue to foster bitterness, service jealousy and unmerited popular distrust of our military leadership, when at the fronts these things are more and more being forgotten." Walter Millis
Books p18 Ja 17 '43 1150w

New Yorker 18:59 D 26 '42 70w

HUIE, WILLIAM BRADFORD. Mud on the stars. 341p $2.75 L. B. Fischer pub. corp, 381 4th av, N.Y.

42-17149

Character study of a young Alabaman during the years 1929 to 1942. All his ancestors had been fighters, so Peter Lafavor fought too—race violence, unionism, reaction, the TVA. When America entered the war Peter put aside his transient battles and enlisted—one more Lafavor to fight for his country.

Reviewed by R. M. Gay
Atlantic 170:138 S '42 150w

"Mr. Huie writes with an engaging audacity and there are no dull spots in the book despite its length and the author's passion for constant introspection. 'Mud on the Stars' is an unusually readable book, honest and exciting, an authentic document of groping youth in a changing world and in William Bradford Huie we have another arresting writer from the New South." T. Q. Curtiss
+ Books p8 Je 14 '42 1000w

"Literary evaluation, in this case, seems rather pointless; Mr. Huie is much more interested in what he is saying than how he says it. He is writing a tract for the times; as such, his 'Mud on the Stars' deserves a wide and thoughtful audience." William Abrahams
+ — Boston Globe p17 Je 10 '42 500w

Nation 154:693 Je 13 '42 420w

"'Mud on the Stars' is not a book that you can read in a hurry, and over-emphasis at times blurs the continuity even for a careful reader, but the work as a whole is admirably planned to lead step by logical step to the last paragraph or even the last five words—'the stars are still there.'" John Faulkner
New Repub 107:149 Ag 3 '42 650w

"Somewhere in the writing of this book the author had his plans changed for him by the crash of bombs in the Pacific. It was perhaps because he wanted his novel to include everything, to be as timely as tomorrow's popular song, that Mr. Huie stretched it thin. That is our loss, for the writer who produced those chapters of 'Mud on the Stars' which deal with a Negro paying with his life for a crime nobody committed or those which portray the ruthlessness of a militant labor union at war with a feudal industrial ownership could and should have given us a book equally memorable as a whole." W. J. Gold

+ — N Y Times p6 Je 28 '42 1100w

"The college-boy stuff is poor man's Thomas Wolfe, the sex episodes are standard, but in Peter's successful search for a faith there is a feverish emotional quality that, despite the author's immaturity, has considerable impact." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 18:70 Je 13 '42 160w

"This is a first-class piece of work, one of those sprawling and vigorous books that encompass many things, at once a novel, a sectional history, and an apologia pro vita sua." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 25:13 Je 27 '42 550w

Time 40:84 J1 27 '42 350w

HULL, RICHARD, pseud. See Sampson, R. H.

HULME, EDWARD MASLIN. History and its neighbors. 197p $2 Oxford

907 History—Historiography 42-15454

"Some two-thirds of this little book are devoted to a summary of the art and science of historical writing as practised by good professional historians of the generation now in full maturity. . . The last third of the book reviews the importance for the historian of twenty-nine neighboring studies. These are a miscellaneous lot, ranging over almost all human intellectual discipline, from astronomy through biology to heraldry and sphragistics." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

"Perhaps the least satisfactory portion of the book is that which in the title seems most attractive: the problem of the relations between history and its neighbors. In this section we are given only a series of thumbnail sketches of various sciences, together with some remarks regarding the points at which they have obviously come into contact with historical problems; no thorough investigation of their relations to historiography is attempted." Maurice Mandelbaum

Ann Am Acad 223:263 S '42 200w

"Not as lively nor as complete and detailed as Professor Allan Nevins's 'Gateway to History' of a few years ago, Professor Hulme's book accomplishes a great deal in a small space. It may be heartily recommended to the reader who wants a brief introduction to the standard methods of the guild of professional historians." Crane Brinton

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:5 Je 27 '42 850w

Social Studies 33:288 O '42 20w

HUMBY, SPENCER ROBERT, and JAMES, ERIC JOHN FRANCIS. Science and education. (Current problems ser) 164p $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d Cambridge]

507 Science—Study and teaching [42-20600]

"Emphasizes two points as of fundamental importance: one, the necessity for a fuller and wiser application of scientific knowledge and of the scientific attitude to social questions; the other, the need for a reorganization and reorientation of our education." School & Society

School & Society 56:28 Jl 4 '42 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p203 Ap 18 '42 300w

HUME, DORIS M. This right I claim. 255p $2 Macrae Smith co.

42-14393

After fifteen years of being a successful career woman Joyce Leland met Dr Tucker Raenford again, and realized that she was as much in love with him as she had been at nineteen. The doctor was a widower with three lively children, and when he and Joyce were married the children were Joyce's biggest problem. False friends, a sulking housekeeper, and the memories of a first wife added to her burdens, but just in the nick of time she was saved from the wrong decision.

"A sympathetic study of a woman's valiant acceptance of a situation that would test a saint's patience." Lisle Bell

Books p16 Je 7 '42 200w

"It is a good woman's magazine type of novel." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p20 My 24 '42 220w

Wis Lib Bul 38:120 Jl '42

HUMPHREY, JOHN THOMAS PETER. Inter-American system, a Canadian view; issued under the auspices of the Canadian inst. of int. affairs. 329p $3 Macmillan (Toronto) [Canadian publication]

341.1 American republics. Canada—Relations (general) with Latin America. Latin America—Relations (general) with Canada [42-16943]

"The bulk of Mr. Humphrey's book is devoted to a survey of the entire history of the inter-American system, with two chapters—the first and the last—on the actual and possible relations of Canada to this system. The historical survey is a careful digest of the main conventions and resolutions of previous conferences. . . Apart from occasional references to Canada in the body of the book, Canada's rôle is treated separately in the first and last chapters, both of which contain an interesting analysis of the implications of Canadian membership in the Union." Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by H. G. Skilling

Am Pol Sci R 36:964 O '42 1150w

"The main difference between this book and most other accounts of the subject is, not that this one was written from a Canadian point of view, but that it is an exceptionally good one. . . It is very regrettable that the works cited by the author are listed only in footnotes scattered throughout the volume; if only for the reader's convenience, they should have been brought together in a bibliography at the end of the volume. Defects so easy to remedy should not be permitted to mar so valuable a work as this. It is to be hoped that they will be remedied in the second edition, which we have no doubt the reading public in the United States and Canada will be intelligent enough to require." A. P. Whitaker

+ — Ann Am Acad 224:213 N '42 650w

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 7 '42 500w

"In his examination of the inter-American system, Professor Humphrey offers us a searching analysis of a complicated story which is as useful to citizens of the United States as to his fellow Canadians. The argument is developed with the precision of a lawyer's brief. The critical approach of an outside observer is especially refreshing. The footnotes reveal a wide-reading of both documentary and secondary sources." C. H. Haring

+ Pacific Affairs 25:507 D '42 800w

HUMPHRIES, ROLFE. Out of the jewel; poems. 127p $2.50 Scribner

811

42-4795

"These poems, informed with a strict, truthful beauty, represent the experiences during the past twenty years—in literature and politics, in love and landscape—of a sensitive, vigorous man of our time." Publisher's note

Booklist 38:271 Ap 1 '42

"Humphries's ear for idiom, for vowel-pattern, for rhythm, is sometimes exact, sometimes wholly untrustworthy. In every department, then, his minor poetry is uneven; there are jewels, but there is gravel among them." Kerker Quinn

Books p13 Je 28 '42 600w

"This collection, overdue, of the poems of Rolfe Humphries should be of considerable interest to anyone who is concerned with the achievements rather than with the novelties of contemporary poetry. Mr. Humphries has apparently devoted himself humbly and honestly, if sometimes unadventurously, to the study of the craft of poetry, and even the more undistinguished items in this collection manifest his integrity and show the fruits of his discipline. Further, the real achievements in the volume seem more solid and satisfying than the more pretentious work of some of Mr. Humphries's flashier and better-advertised contemporaries." R. P. Warren

Nation 154:438 Ap 11 '42 1400w

"If we look first at Mr. Humphries' own verse, we find it everywhere extremely competent and always very readable; there is little or nothing that offends, much that entertains; yet it must be admitted, I think, that there is nothing anywhere that 'sticks.'" Conrad Aiken

+ — New Repub 106:836 Je 15 '42 850w

"Every poet, I suppose, writes bad verses for his mother or for some occasion such as a sale of manuscripts for the League of American Writers. Mr. Humphries, to my regret, reprints both, for personal and political reasons. But the greatest part of his work is a learned poetry, out of many languages into an American idiom of determined sensibility." P. M. Jack

+ — N Y Times p9 Mr 15 '42 750w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan

New Yorker 18:62 Mr 7 '42 370w

HUMPHRIES, ROLFE—Continued

"There are indeed good things here, but I must regretfully record my disappointment with the volume as a whole. One of the more memorable pieces is Proteus, or, The Shapes of Conscience, with its vivid physical symbols. Unhappily, Mr. Humphries shows himself to be something of a Proteus in this book, but not as amenable a one as could be wished." Babette Deutsch

— + Poetry 61:393 O '42 480w

"Rolfe Humphries, among the small company of genuine lyric craftsmen in America today, stands near the top. . . Though entirely individual in tone and subject, his work most nearly calls to mind the lyrics of John Peale Bishop and Louise Bogan, artists content with a small canvas, subtle, personal, eschewing the sensational gesture and the platform manner, but at their best capable of definition and music quite beyond the operative range of the Swinburnes and Edna St. Vincent Millays." Selden Rodman

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 Ap 25 '42 470w

Wis Lib Bul 38:65 Ap '42

Reviewed by Louis Untermeyer

Yale R n s 32:368 winter '43 170w

HUNGERFORD, EDWARD BUELL. Shores of darkness. 314p $3 Columbia univ. press [15s Oxford]

809 English poetry—History and criticism.

Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von. Mythology

41-21950

Nine essays in which the author attempts to show "the background from which were derived the mythical structures of Blake's Albion, Keats' Endymion and Titans, Shelley's Prometheus and Adonais, and Goethe's Helena with the intention not of elucidating just what these poets meant by using myths, but of showing that they were at fault to have taken the liberties with their myths that they took." (Poetry) Bibliography. Index.

"Blake emerges from Dr. Hungerford's examination a much more rational poet than he has generally been considered. With the unorthodox classical allusions of Keats' Endymion and Hyperion the author also deals illuminatingly. But in his treatment of Shelley and Goethe he seems to be more concerned to condemn than to clarify. Despite this defect, however, his book is as important as it is fascinating."

+ — Christian Century 59:732 Je 3 '42 330w

"Doubtless Edward B. Hungerford is a Professor of English. The nine disjointed essays that comprise this book read like a set of footnotes on the genetics of obscure myths. It is riveted to the level of academic inconsequence, a level that Professor Hungerford calls 'rational,' but which is really our old friend scientific positivism looking more timid than usual." J. V. Healy

— Poetry 61:403 O '42 800w

HUNT, DAME AGNES GWENDOLINE. This is my life; drawings by Georg T. Hartmann; foreword by Morris Bishop. 237p $2.50 Putnam [6s Blackie & son]

B n 92 (W) 42-24334

Autobiography of an English woman, who, crippled in childhood, grew up to realize her ambition to help other cripples in their struggles with life, physically, mentally and emotionally.

Booklist 39:120 D 1 '42

"In time, somebody will probably write a serious biography of Dame Agnes but it will surely lack the salty flavor of this joyous chronicle." Rose Feld

+ Books p4 N 1 '42 700w

"Her sense of humor bubbles through her book like a gay mountain spring: not only sparkling and pleasurable but definitely invigorating as well. Readers will have a grand time meeting Mother, but Agnes herself will linger in their minds and hearts. The book's hilarious fun is intensified, too, by Georg T. Hartmann's apt drawings. As illustrator he has caught moments of disastrous events with special vividness." K. W.

+ N Y Times p50 N 29 '42 650w

"Memoirs of doctors and nurses have had a tremendous success in recent years. 'This Is My Life' will appeal to the large public which reads such reminiscences eagerly. It will also appeal to anyone who likes a good laugh, and to anyone who is moved and heartened by a story of courage, modestly told." G. R. Mallary

+ Spring'd Republican p7e N 15 '42 300w

HUNT, ERLING MESSER, ed. See America organizes to win the war

HUNT, HOWARD. East of Farewell. 270p $2.50 Knopf

(W) 42-19935

A novel about life on a destroyer on convoy duty in the North Atlantic.

Booklist 39:33 O 1 '42

"Howard Hunt signed up with the Naval Reserves, was commissioned an ensign in May, 1941, and went to sea on a destroyer. . . 'East of Farewell' is a story from his own experience. . . You know that Mr. Hunt, speaking like this through his characters, will be doing more fighting than writing in this man's war. But you have a right to hope that the author, after victory is won, will give us the full benefit of his really exceptional story-telling talent. 'East of Farewell,' meanwhile, is the book to read if you want to know how it feels to convoy a cluster of freighters to England." H. C. Lewis

+ Books p12 S 27 '42 550w

"Definitely a man's book for limited audience; on subject difficult to do justice to. Some interesting details of naval action." H. A. Wooster

Library J 67:739 S 1 '42 70w

"An absorbing novel by a twenty-four-year-old ensign about life on a United States destroyer—a book about this war written by someone who has actually fought in it, and the kind of book that in the last war was not written until the war was over. . . That a realistic novel of this kind can be written and published at the beginning of a war is surely a high compliment to our peculiar much-to-be-cherished brand of American morale."

+ Nation 155:457 O 31 '42 250w

"It is full of excitement and action, has a good feeling for the sea and for the collective psychology of the sailors. Mr. Hunt fails, however, to individualize his characters, who get thrown around so much by the pitch and toss of the ship that it sometimes becomes difficult to tell one from another. It also lacks a strong enough story thread to make a memorable sea yarn. But it is good writing, and good reporting, and gives an accurate picture of the life of our sailors in the war."

+ — New Repub 107:554 O 26 '42 90w

"Mr. Hunt, who is only 23, has been at this game for two years, bucking back and forth across the Atlantic many times. He has taken a page out of his book to make a fine realistic novel, without any doubt the best sea story of the war." Austin Stevens

+ N Y Times p7 O 11 '42 800w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 32:xii winter '43 20w

HUNT, MABEL LEIGH. Have you seen Tom Thumb? il. by Fritz Eichenberg. 260p $2 Stokes

B or 92 Stratton, Charles Sherwood (General Tom Thumb) (W) 42-21795

Biography of Charles Sherwood Stratton, the "American man in miniature," who was known to the world as General Tom Thumb. The book is a clever combination of fact and fiction, and provides a good picture of the times in which Tom Thumb lived—1842 to 1883. For junior and senior high schools.

Booklist 39:74 N 1 '42

"Graceful, kind, deliberately childlike, the age comes back with its strange little favorite. It is as lovable a biography as you can find." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 15 '42 300w

"I enjoyed this book from beginning to end. . . Miss Hunt has given uncommon life to her research." A. E. Moore

+ Horn Bk 18:408 N '42 40w

"This fresh and entertaining biography sparkles with the good humor and gayety of its quaint subject." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:434 N '42 180w

Reviewed by E. A. Groves

Library J 67:958 N 1 '42 100w

"This is a book which the wise grown-up will borrow from the younger members of the family, reading it aloud, perhaps, to share its flavor, enjoying it not only for the innate interest of the subject but for the skill and imagination which have shaped fact with plausible fancy into one of the most delightful biographies of the year." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 N 29 '42 360w

"The memoirs of a real midget; a sprightly, fictionalized biography of General Tom Thumb, whose life reads half like a fairy tale, half like an American success story. Children enjoy anything in miniature, and those from ten through the high-school years should be beguiled by reading of the twenty-five-inch General's trappings and of the caperings all over the globe of this miniature man and his brash showman, P. T. Barnum. Good illustrations and typography." K. S. W.

+ New Yorker 18:113 D 12 '42 70w

"A delightful biography of a colorful character."

+ School & Society 56:224 S 12 '42 10w

HUNT, MABEL LEIGH. Peter Piper's pickled peppers; il. by Katherine Milhous. 62p $1 Stokes

(W) 42-36063

The true story of the destination of all those pickled peppers which Peter Piper picked in the old alphabet rhyme. The story is told with emphasis on words beginning with P, thus carrying out the alliteration of the original rhyme. For children six to nine.

Booklist 38:253 Mr 15 '42

"Though it is nonsense, we can do with a little nonsense now and then, especially now." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 My 24 '42 160w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 31 '42 90w

"It is not a book for children under nine to read by themselves, for the vocabulary is beyond them, but it is good to read aloud and will be helpful for tongue training." Gertrude Andrus

Library J 67:225 Mr 1 '42 60w

"Like its predecessor, 'Billy Button's Butter'd Biscuit,' this [is a] rollicking bit of nonsense. . . The ingenuity with which this P-studded prose is fashioned will provoke many a chuckle as it twists young tongues, and like its small companion volume this one is a pleasure to the eye as well as the ear with its clear type and Katherine Milhous's quaint pictures to add an extra note of drollery." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 15 '42 200w

New Yorker 18:72 My 23 '42 50w

HUNT, RICHARD A. White Mountain holidays. 200p il $2 Falmouth

917.422 White mountains. Mountaineering 41-6954

"Introduced as 'sketches, narratives and anecdotes having to do with the White Mountains of New Hampshire,' this proves to be much more useful as an actual guide to climbers and walkers than its author claims. By describing how he made these ascents, Moosilauke, Chocorua, Passaconaway, Franconia, Lafayette, the region of Lost River Gorge and other heights appear as climbers see them, which means as a prospective climber would like them to be presented. There are twelve full-page photographs, some under snow, and a section of the White Mountain National Forest map is used as endpapers." Books

Books p15 Ap 20 '41 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:59 O '41

HUNT, MRS VIRGINIA LLOYD (FOX). How to live in the tropics. 178p $2 Harcourt

613 Tropics—Diseases and hygiene

(W) 42-19586

A handbook for temperate zone residents who go to travel or live in the tropic zone. Contains chapters on: Preparations; Daily routine of keeping fit; Victuals and drink; Insect enemies; Communicable diseases; Home nursing; Emergency first aid. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 39:10 S '42

"Everything from luggage to latrines, from mental attitude to mosquitoes, from acute nostalgia to relapsing fever, has its place in this handbook for those making a first trip to the tropics. It should be equally valuable for the transient or the newly arrived resident."

+ Books p18 Ag 9 '42 100w

"Not a word about the lure of palms and the magic of tropic nights, but much scientific information and sound sense about how to stay alive and healthy."

+ Christian Century 59:983 Ag 12 '42 70w

Pratt p21 D '42

Springf'd Republican p6 O 13 '42 600w

Wis Lib Bul 38:158 N '42

HUNT, WALTER BERNARD. Indiancraft. 124p il $2.75 Bruce pub.

680 Handicraft. Indians of North America —Art 42-15951

"Some three years ago this writer published Indian and Camp Handicraft, [Book Review Digest, 1938] especially valuable for camp leaders and Boy Scouts. The present finely made volume supplements, but does not duplicate the earlier book. It includes detailed designs of additional articles used by Indians for ornament and equipment. One of the specially helpful features is the inclusion of information about where suitable material for the undertakings may be obtained." Horn Bk

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:343 S '42 70w

"Should prove useful and inspiring to camp counsellors and leaders of Boy and Girl Scouts." Margaret Gray

+ Library J 67:686 Ag '42 100w

Wis Lib Bul 38:136 O '42

HUNTINGTON, EMILY HARRIETT. Doors to jobs. 454p $3.50 Univ. of Calif. [21s Cambridge]

331.1151 Employment agencies. Labor and laboring classes—California 42-36951

"This study of the organization of the labor market in California was undertaken for the purpose of determining in how far there are centers for the exchange of jobs and workers, how effectively these agencies function, and what are the hopes for the future. Although the data are geographically limited to California, and thus the analysis applies specifically to that state, it is believed that with certain variations the general picture of the types of agencies now in existence and of the disorganization of the labor market would be true for most other states. This study was undertaken in 1938." Pref.

"It is unfortunate that this study did not appear until 1942. Such extensive changes have occurred in the Employment Service and in the nation's unemployment relief agencies since 1938, that the study's principal value now is its record of the characteristics of the pre-

HUNTINGTON, E. H.—Continued
war labor market. . . The reviewer commends Doors to Jobs to those who would get a better comprehension of how placement work has developed in a typical American state. The study reveals an important industrial agricultural area groping its way toward an organized labor market which it both wants and does not want." D. D. Leschier

+ — Am Econ R 32:636 S '42 1250w
"An excellent study." C. R. Daugherty
+ Pol Sci Q 57:615 D '42 600w

HUNTINGTON, MRS HARRIET E. Tune up; the instruments of the orchestra and their players; il. with phot. by the author; foreword by Ernest La Prade. [77p] $2 Double-day

781.91 Musical instruments—Juvenile literature (W) 42-36238

Photographs and simple prose show the musical instruments usually found in a school or larger orchestra. Instruments are divided into: percussion instruments; wood and brass instruments; and string instruments.

Booklist 38:386 Je 15 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 Je 14 '42 200w

"Large detailed pictures of real beauty show on each page the instruments, percussion, wood and brass, and string, each in the hands of a young player, holding it in the correct way. The book will certainly attract young musicians and music lovers." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 18:258 J1 '42 100w

"More beautiful than practical." J. L. Sauer
Library J 67:582 Je 15 '42 70w
Wis Lib Bul 38:166 N '42

HURD, EDITH (THACHER) (MRS CLEMENT HURD). The Annie Moran; il. by Clement Hurd. [34p] $1 Lothrop

42-6005

"The Annie Moran was a tug who had seen her best days. The dispatcher gave her only easy jobs to do. . . The worst is when she is tied to a big steamer and pulls so hard she pulls out her own stern bitt. Then all she is allowed to do is to tow sand barges—until a freighter takes fire one foggy night, close by the dock. There are no new tugs around, no Diesel tugs; there is only the Annie Moran just going home. So she pulls till the fireboats get there, and no other boats catch fire and the sailors are saved." Books

"So far as story goes, this is the most ambitious of the Hurd collaborations for little children; it has a real plot. The pictures keep the same particular charm; the tug itself on the end papers is exact as a diagram, and all the scenes are meant for little children who want to know exactly what you are talking about. In this case, it is a tug who does not talk but has a character of her own." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ap 12 '42 350w

"Straightforward text matched by good, factual pictures."

+ New Yorker 18:72 My 23 '42 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 19 '42 90w

HURD, EDITH (THACHER) (MRS CLEMENT HURD). Speedy, the hook and ladder truck; il. by Clement Hurd. [36p] $1.25 Lothrop

42-21061

"The life of a hook and ladder truck in big city fire department. . . Gives in story form the workings of modern, big city fire department in way that will interest, as well as inform, young readers." Library J

Booklist 39:53 O 15 '42

"The pictures are so plain—and so full of bright scarlet—that a little boy follows the action as he listens. There is a place among picture books for one like this, and no personal preference for poetry or folklore should altogether deprive a child in one's charge of some experience with 'machinery' books he needs for his own particular purpose in living." M. L. Becker

+ Books p30 N 15 '42 170w

Reviewed by D. M. MacDonald
Library J 67:847 O 1 '42 60w

HURD, EDITH (THACHER) (MRS CLEMENT HURD). Wreck of the Wild Wave. 247p il $2.50 Oxford

(W) 42-17469

Sea story based on the log of the Wild Wave, an American clipper ship which sailed from San Francisco in 1858, and was wrecked in the South seas. Seven of the ship's company landed on Pitcairn's Island, where they stayed for several months. Told in fiction form for older boys.

Booklist 39:35 O 1 '42

"Strong fare it is, but older boys will follow with interest and suspense this well-told account of a clipper ship, her young Captain and a crew of thirty men, who sailed from San Francisco in 1858." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 22 '42 180w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 18:341 S '42 100w

"Told in first person with engaging style and suspense. Will interest older readers than do Swiss Family Robinson and Robinson Crusoe." Maude Adams

+ Library J 67:848 O 1 '42 60w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie
Library J 67:889 O 15 '42 20w
N Y Times p30 N 22 '42 300w

HURST, FANNIE (MRS J. S. DANIELSON). Lonely parade. 343p $2.50 Harper

42-1190

Story of three successful women who lived together in a New York city house which became known as Twenty-one East. They were Sierra Baldwin, whose private fortune enabled her to help thousands of working girls out of their troubles; Kitty, the ladylike product of shanty Irish parents, who could make money on any deal; and Charlotte Ames, a mountain of a woman, rough of tongue, but a friend to everybody in trouble. The time covered is some thirty years, beginning at the turn of the century.

"Whether or not one likes this picture of one aspect of Bagdad on the subway will depend, in at least some measure, on one's taste for the richness of Miss Hurst's inimitable fare. There is no room for squeamishness in one who would savor the profligate fullness of emotion, the lushness of episode and setting which is characteristic of her stories. For those who do, there is nothing quite like them." Mary Ross

+ Books p2 Ja 11 '42 900w

"Interesting character drawing; skillful writing. The story is lustful with unfounded but repeated suggestion of Lesbianism. Not for the young or perhaps for the average reader." Catharine Van Dyne

Library J 67:40 Ja 1 '42 80w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford
Manchester Guardian p3 O 9 '42 100w

"As a novel of manners—even as a novel of character—'Lonely Parade' is spiced with sharp observation and lively originality. Fannie Hurst cuts a wide swath through the goofier manifestations of cafe society, knocking over fads and foibles with hearty and informed ill will. In the Charlottenburg she has created—or perhaps merely recorded—a character as lovable and genuine as any the whole procession of her novels has to offer. As a problem novel, 'Lonely Parade' simply refuses to hold water—perhaps because the problem is not stated in sufficiently general terms." Margaret Wallace

+ — N Y Times p6 Ja 11 '42 850w

New Yorker 17:60 Ja 10 '42 60w

"Those readers who have come to expect from Fannie Hurst a well-defined and comfortably familiar type of story will need to readjust themselves very sharply. For Miss Hurst reveals, in 'Lonely Parade,' a capacity for social irony that is as solid as it is unexpected, and a capacity also for treating with all of her accustomed thoroughness a group of characters who are essentially barren and unhappy, surely strange faces in her gallery." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 Ja 31 '42 400w

Reviewed by John Hampson
Spec 169:394 O 23 '42 140w

"An extremely unpleasant book in spots. Writing of three brilliant spinsters, who make a decided go of their spinsterhood because of their remarkable talents, Miss Hurst lets us in almost too intimately on their sex urges and longings. Also when the writer describes cancers, maniac women, etc, it is somewhat nauseous. However, she has created three well rounded consistent characters in her three women. . . The novel is full of the sharp quips, the well-turned phrase for which Fannie Hurst is famous. It also runs on in a smooth flowing style, and it reads 'easy,' even if it is much too long."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 11 '42 400w

"Exuberant, flowery, theatrical, rather wordy, Miss Fannie Hurst is never at a loss and never in doubt. She is an almost overpoweringly lush novelist and not to everybody's taste. But few even of those who may find her a little too much of a good thing will deny her the almost supreme virtue of creative gusto—and not of gusto alone. Whatever her excesses of sentiment, Miss Fannie Hurst has a shrewdness and a fund of sympathy, above all where the secret places of the feminine heart are concerned, that enable her to bring off the most dangerous feats of flattery of her sex without batting an eyelid."

Times [London] Lit Sup p497 O 10 '42
450w

HURSTON, ZORA NEALE. Dust tracks on a road; an autobiography. 294p $3 Lippincott
B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Negroes (W) 42-25001

Autobiography of the Negro anthropologist and folk song writer. She was born in Eatonville, Florida, one of the few all Negro towns in the United States. Her father was the preacher, and one of the big men of the town; her mother, from a much better family, was tiny and unconquerable. As a very young girl Miss Hurston began her wanderings—in and out of jobs, and in and out of schools—until she managed to finish her course at Barnard, and begin her life work. Her story is zestful and courageous.

Booklist 39:120 D 1 '42

"Miss Hurston deals very simply with the more serious aspects of Negro life in America—she ignores them. She has done right well by herself in the kind of world she found."

Arna Bontemps
+ Books p3 N 22 '42 950w

"Written with little finish, though this literary crudity may have been chosen deliberately, to heighten effect. Told dramatically, with immense verve and gusto. Will be wanted by all libraries collecting contemporary material on Negro and will be particularly valuable as an addition to meager number of Negro biographies available." Ernestine Rose

+ Library J 67:950 N 1 '42 90w

"Here is a thumping story, though it has none of the horrid earmarks of the Alger-type climb. . . Her story is forthright and without frills. Its emphasis lies on her fighting spirit in the struggle to achieve the education she felt she had to have. The uses to which it was put—good uses too—were the fruit of things that cropped up spontaneously, demanding to be done." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p44 N 29 '42 900w

"Warm, witty, imaginative, and down-to-earth by turns, this is a rich and winning book by one of our new genuine, Grade A folk writers. Seems naïve here and there, but it probably isn't."

+ New Yorker 18:79 N 14 '42 50w

"This book is more a summary than the autobiography it advertises itself as being. It is a delightful one and a wise one, full of humor, color, and good sense. It is told in exactly the right manner, simply and with candor, with a seasoning—not overdone—of the marvelous locutions of the imaginative field nigger. Miss Hurston explains that there are white niggers and black niggers; being a nigger is a matter of character rather than color among the Negroes." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 N 28 '42 950w

HUSS, PIERRE JOHN. For we face. 300p $3 Doubleday

943.085 Germany—Nazi movement. World war, 1939- (W) 42-13431

After eight years of study of the Nazi leaders, the former International news service head in Berlin, relates what went on in Germany from 1934 to 1941. Among other things he discusses Hitler's character, the German position in Italy, the 700-foot mausoleum Hitler plans for himself, and his fear and hatred of Roosevelt and America, the men around Hitler, and his plan to keep his hold on the German people after death.

Booklist 38:366 Je 1 '42

Reviewed by Beach Conger
Books p14 My 31 '42 750w

"Foreign correspondence is one thing and bookwriting another. Fortunately in some cases, but unfortunately in others, almost every correspondent who has come out of Germany has felt an urge to write a book. A few have added to a deeper understanding of Hitler's Reich by doing so, others have not. Pierre J. Huss, former head of Hearst's International News Service in Berlin, who left Germany only a few weeks before Hitler declared war on us last December, belongs in the latter group." Shepard Stone

N Y Times p22 My 24 '42 950w

"A good deal of fresh material, perceptively written."

+ New Yorker 18:71 My 2 '42 70w

Springf'd Republican p8 My 6 '42 800w

HUTCHENS, MRS JANE. Timothy Larkin. 279p $2.50 Doubleday

42-9578

A story of a Missouri family during the last decade or so before the Civil war and the first year of the war itself. Timothy's father left his wife and young sons when Timothy was ten years old, left them to marry another woman and raise another family. Years later the father saves Timothy from making the same mistake, and then again their trails cross and the father saves the son from death as a spy.

Booklist 38:330 My 1 '42

"Jane Hutchens brings Tim's story down to October, 1861, and there are signs that she means to continue it. If she does, it will be good news to her readers. The book, as it stands, has form and a sense of completion in itself, but Tim is a much too spunky character to depart from the imagination just as he faces the most exciting days of the war and the difficult days which followed it." Milton Hindus

+ Books p10 Mr 8 '42 550w

Reviewed by Lena Ruppert

Library J 67:225 Mr 1 '42 50w

"Despite all its adventure and suspense, it is a comfortable sort of story. The people in it are as substantial and rich in character as the soil of the farms they carve out for themselves, and one takes the story's flow as they took their lives, with calm interest." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p16 Mr 15 '42 490w

"The amazing adventures of Timothy Larkin read as though the novelist had gathered her materials from family records, diaries, periodicals, and yarns relayed by word of mouth from one generation to another; for the rambling, picaresque story has the halting, irregular tempo of fact, with its many curious irrelevancies, rather than the smooth, artfully contrived pattern of fiction. The story both gains and loses by such an 'unartistic' method. It gains in verisimilitude, and sometimes even in suspense, for truth is stranger than fiction. It loses, however in sustained power." Richard Cordell

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:18 Mr 14 '42 360w

HUTCHINS, JOHN GREENWOOD BROWN. American maritime industries and public policy, 1789-1914; an economic history. 627p $5 Harvard univ. press [21s Oxford]

387.5 Shipbuilding, Shipping—U.S. Merchant marine—U.S. A41-3915

"[In this book] an ambitious attempt has been made to present the economic history of our shipping and shipbuilding industries and to consider the implications and effects of American navigation policies down to the outbreak of the first World War." Pol Sci Q

Reviewed by Herbert Heaton
Am Hist R 48:358 Ja '43 1050w

"The text is closely documented, carefully organized, and in the main easy to follow. However, there are times when the layman tends to hurry over passages filled with unexplained terms, ranging from locust treenails to hackmatack knees, in quest of the linguistic safety of sections on the navigation laws." William Beard

+ — Am Pol Sci R 35:1194 D '41 250w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:780 Jl '42 10w

Reviewed by H. A. Innis
Geog R 32:504 Jl '42 650w

"This reviewer rather recently had occasion to lament that there was no adequate and satisfactory history of the American merchant marine. . . It may at once be said that the volume before us goes a long way toward filling this gap. It is indispensable for anyone who wishes to study the subject in its historical aspects." C. W. Wright

+ J Pol Econ 50:956 D '42 1100w

"Considered as a whole, this new work is a distinct contribution, both as economic history and as a critique of governmental policy. It will be greeted with enthusiasm by all interested in ships and the sea." P. M. Zeis

+ — Pol Sci Q 57:156 Mr '42 390w

HUTCHINSON, ARTHUR STUART-MENTETH. It happened like this. 320p $2.50 Duell

(W) 42-50911

Two young English boys, left orphaned by a boating accident, are the center of the action. The boys are adopted by an aunt, whom they adore, and her husband, whom they instinctively distrust. During the years of their boyhood they are involved in three serious accidents, but each time are rescued. Their friend Wing, who is responsible for two of the rescues, tells the story.

"To the author, Rose and Oliver and Tony are clear and definite, so, too, are some of the minor characters, especially the judge who couldn't believe that any one would shoot a man in cold blood while he was reading a novel in bed. The children, Oliver and Tony, are lovable and real, and their relationship with the novelist, their Uncle Wing, is one of the most appealing elements of this abundant book." Page Cooper

+ Books p26 D 6 '42 750w

"This three-in-one experiment of Mr. Hutchinson is technically interesting, though his approach is a little awkward, especially in the elephantine attempts at whimsicality of the first chapter. But it is probable that the average reader will find the two lesser stories rather a nuisance, getting far too often in the way of the main tale of the two little nephews and their wicked uncle." L. M. Field

+ — N Y Times p30 D 6 '42 700w

"In spite of the author's considerable efforts to create an atmosphere of suspense, the novel holds no surprises."

New Yorker 18:59 D 26 '42 70w

"The book has undeniable force as a discursive, understated study of the psychology of murder. At the same time the very discursiveness drains away some of the book's strength. The well-bred talkiness of everybody concerned, in long, rhetorical phrases that never came out of anybody's mouth, is sometimes unbearable. So much of this could have been stripped away and tightened up (and so much pathetic sentimentalism cut out) that we finish with the notion that the story is still in Norval's notebook, still to be done in finished form." N. L. Rothman

+ — Sat R of Lit 26:17 Ja 2 '43 360w

"Most of the people in the book are interesting, but there is an unwitting air of superiority about Wing Norval and his continual belittling of his own qualities that becomes irritating, and his role of deus ex machina in the three tales is certainly overworked. However, Mr Hutchinson has decidedly set an individual style of presentation for his novel and attempted to fuse the disassociated acquaintances of a man's life into a common fiction background. He has succeeded on technical grounds, but in doing so has lost the pith of what might have been a very superior novel of the English horror-school." L. S. Munn

+ — Spring'd Republican p7e D 20 '42 420w

HUTCHINSON, WILLIAM THOMAS, ed. Democracy and national unity; contributors, Thomas Reed Powell [and others]. 140p $1 Univ. of Chicago press

973 U.S.—Nationality. Democracy 41-25591

"Six lectures, on the Walgreen foundation, by six scholars of widely different views, on many aspects of the problem of reconciling democratic liberty with efficient national unity." (Christian Century) Contents: Conscience and the Constitution, by T. R. Powell; Politics versus national unity, by H. F. Pringle; The press and national unity, by Herbert Agar; Economic essentials for national unity, by H. G. Moulton; The outlook for labor, by Matthew Woll; The farmer and national unity, by O. E. Baker.

"No political scientist will fail to be interested in the essay by Powell, and the contributions of Moulton and Baker are certainly outstandingly important at the present time. However, the value of the essays is unequal, and political scientists will hardly be impressed with the analysis of 'Politics versus National Unity.'" F. G. Wilson

Am Pol Sci R 36:351 Ap '42 380w

Christian Century 59:187 F 11 '42 100w

Reviewed by H. A. Larrabee
Ethics 52:510 Jl '42 360w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:772 Jl '42 10w

HUTCHISON, BRUCE. Unknown country; Canada and her people. 386p il $3.50 Coward-McCann 917.1 Canada—Description and travel. National characteristics, Canadian

(W) 42-3124

"This book is an attempt to give the stranger a general glimpse of the surface of Canada and something of the substance, the people, the problems, the history, and the future beneath the surface. . . It is written to provide not an academic investigation but what Cartier called the 'ready way to Canada.'" (Foreword) The author is a Canadian journalist. Index. Map on endpapers.

"Informal, chatty, colorful, descriptive book about Canada and its people." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic Jl '42 250w

Booklist 38:232 Mr 1 '42

"Bruce Hutchison diagnoses Canada like a doctor, feels it like a poet and writes of it like a competent journalist. Although he makes no attempt to hide preference for his own adopted Province of British Columbia, he does not indulge in the petulance of that enfant terrible, cut off from the rest of the dominion by the Rockies, which has sometimes threatened to secede. . . There is no dolling up for foreign consumption. Canada's faults are not spared." Joan Dangelzer

+ Books p3 F 15 '42 850w

"Many Canadians are as little acquainted with much of the subject matter of this book as are their American cousins, and these could read the book with profit for in broad outline the picture Mr. Hutchison presents is praiseworthy. Discerning readers of varying shades of opinion will find some causes for disagreement in details. The most notable flaw in the book, however, is the author's refusal to take the CCF seriously. This is the more disappointing because Mr. Hutchison seems to be imbued with the progressive spirit and to be well aware of the ebbing vigor of the older parties. One can only assume that the book was almost wholly composed prior to the British Columbia elections." R. N. Beattie

+ Canadian Forum 22:27 Ap '42 420w

Reviewed by G. V. Ferguson

Canadian Hist R 23:195 Je '42 800w

"Mr. Hutchison, as befits one of Canada's leading journalists, throws away all the guide-books. He leaves dry history to the historians. But the wood, wind, and waters of Canada weave a pattern through his story. And so, too, does the record of the men north of the forty-ninth parallel who have made a nation. And he sees deeply into the actualities of the relations of his country and the United States."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 18 '42 550w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:784 Jl '42 10w

"While too verbose and at times straining for effect the book does set forth clearly the problems and contradictions, the types of characteristics of the country and the people. The chapter on relations with America is especially to be recommended, with its emphasis on the desirability of an accurate rather than an idealized understanding of the historical relations between our countries." Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 67:129 F 1 '42 70w

"The story of Canada's growth makes fascinating reading, and few Canadians are better qualified to tell it than Bruce Hutchison." J. H. Gray

+ Nation 154:376 Mr 28 '42 550w

"In these days when efforts for international cooperation are motivating the Western democracies—when common enemies range the coasts of Canada and the United States, no book could be more timely. And with our great urgency to study and to grasp the national viewpoints of our immediate neighbors, with whom at last we stand shoulder to shoulder in the world crisis, no book could be more revealing. It is written by a distinguished Canadian journalist who is an authority on Canadian affairs, political and economic." M. L. J. Akeley

+ N Y Times p1 F 15 '42 1600w

"The Unknown Country" is an interesting collection of facts and interpretations about Canada and its people. These items, however, touch upon a great variety of topics, and are so disconnected that the uninformed reader is likely to be confused. . . Mr. Hutchison is at his best when reporting on Canadian government and politics. His thumb-nail sketches of Prime Minister Mackenzie King and John W. Diefenbaker—veteran editor of the Winnipeg Free Press—highlight the book's many character studies. In view of the author's great interest in and knowledge of 'The Unknown Country,' it is regrettable that he did not devote to the entire book the care reflected in these few sections." A. R. Elliott

+ Sat R of Lit 25:8 F 14 '42 270w

Reviewed by J. B. Brebner

Survey G 31:434 O '42 290w

HUXLEY, ALDOUS LEONARD. Art of seeing. 273p $2.50 Harper

617.7 Sight. Eye—Accommodation and refraction. Eye—Diseases and defects (W) 42-24692

At the age of sixteen, as a result of illness, the author became afflicted with near-blindness, and tho partially recovering, he was, for many years, dependent on strong glasses for seeing. At last he decided to take the Bates course of re-education in seeing which succeeded so well that he has been able to discard glasses. In this book he examines the background of the Bates methods and discusses in some detail its practical techniques.

Booklist 39:117 D 1 '42

"It is not merely a book for those who are troubled by their eyes but a manual of liberation, a description of undreamed of, by most people, powers of penetration of the world they live in, a challenge to deepened consciousness and vivid imagination." Ernestine Evans

+ Books p31 N 8 '42 400w

"One comes away from 'The Art of Seeing' with the feeling that one has met a man who is willing and able to apply to himself a discipline which would frighten and even dismay most of us easy-going denizens of the twentieth century. It is the best sort of discipline, freely and willingly self-imposed for a good purpose, and I am quite sure that it is unconscious. Be that as it may, there is only one word—a hideously abused word—to describe it, and I mean the old-fashioned participle, edifying." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 37:281 Ja 1 '43 900w

Reviewed by James Thurber

+ New Repub 107:719 N 30 '42 900w

"Other books have recommended Dr. Bates's exercises; but it is the special merit of this one that it attacks its subject in a broad way. From the utilization of memory to the provision of right lighting conditions, and from ways of reading to use of the movies, Mr. Huxley gathers the many features of his subject into the clear terms of his book." K. W.

+ N Y Times p22 N 8 '42 600w

"Simply written and apparently reasonable, if a bit unorthodox."

+ New Yorker 18:83 N 7 '42 80w

HUXLEY, MRS ELSPETH JOSCELINE (GRANT). Atlantic ordeal; the story of Mary Cornish. 102p il $1 Harper [3s 6d Chatto] 940.545 Cornish, Mary. City of Benares (ship) 42-36154

Mary Cornish was one of the escorts appointed to travel with the English children who sailed on the City of Benares in September, 1940. When the ship was torpedoed and sank west of Ireland, Mary Cornish found herself in a lifeboat with six boys and forty men. This short book tells the story of the eight days in the open boat until they were picked up and carried back to Scotland.

Booklist 38:306 Ap 15 '42

"Mary Cornish was too shy to write her own story. But from her vividly remembered details of the experience Elspeth Huxley has set it down with excellent restraint, imagination and sympathy. She brings the whole appalling picture to life. When you have read it you, too, will have had the nightmare experience of being tossed at sea for eight days in a lifeboat. When you have read it, and it is a book born of this war which few should miss, you will have encountered the fundamentals of heroism." Sylvia Brockway

+ Books p4 Ap 19 '42 750w

"It is not a story of the sea, but of the constant and incredible qualities of heroism of the people among us who are nameless until their day comes, and often after it. Incidentally, the cleanest and most effective journalist's account of the war to date."

+ New Repub 106:374 Mr 16 '42 100w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 23:10 Ja 3 '42 70w

"In the pressure of the war's events through a year and a half it is possible that many people here have forgotten the sinking of the City of Benares. No one who reads Elspeth Huxley's narrative is likely ever to forget it again. . . The story is told with a spare, tense clarity and a dramatic comprehensiveness in classic restraint. It is one of the greatest from the war's annals." K. W.

+ N Y Times p2 Mr 8 '42 550w

New Yorker 18:64 Mr 7 '42 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p639 D 20 '41 320w

Wis Lib Bul 38:86 My '42

HYLANDER, CLARENCE JOHN. Out of doors in autumn; il. by the author. 131p $1.50 Macmillan

574 Natural history—Juvenile literature (W) 42-23053

This is the third of a series of books designed to help young people become acquainted with plants and animals as they appear in a particular season of the year. Contents: The last of the flower parade; Birds of prey; Plants begin their travels; Some berries and other fleshy fruits; Plant life prepares for winter; Animal life prepares for winter.

Booklist 39:74 N 1 '42

"As good as others in set and a book that parents and teachers will like to use. Interesting and easy to read; good illustrations and format. Recommended for children ten to twelve." Elizabeth Schmidt

+ Library J 67:955 N 1 '42 70w

HYLANDER, CLARENCE JOHN. Out of doors in spring; il. by the author. 143p $1.50 Macmillan

574 Natural history—Juvenile literature (W) 42-14292

The first in a series of books intended to interest young readers in the out-of-doors the year around. Contains chapters on trees, pond life, amphibians, flowers, mosses and ferns, insects, and birds.

Booklist 38:386 Je 15 '42

"The value of such a book depends not only on the information it gives but in its power to make a young reader use this as starting point for his own observations. This book will do so if a schoolchild has a spoonful of interest in the countryside, and even an older person may find his eyesight improved by it as he walks abroad in spring." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Je 7 '42 200w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 31 '42 30w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 18:262 Jl '42 40w

"Recommended." A. E. Brown

+ Library J 67:582 Je 15 '42 60w

"Mr. Hylander is thoroughly familiar with the outdoor world and writes about it with directness, clarity and a quiet enthusiasm that is contagious. His book will be very useful to those who wish to know more about the life they see around them if they are fortunate enough to live in the country or to spend their week-ends there; even those who must content themselves with what they can observe in parks, aquariums and city gardens will find this a stimulating volume. For boys and girls from 10 on, and their elders." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 My 31 '42 300w

Wis Lib Bul 38:94 Je '42

HYLANDER, CLARENCE JOHN. Out of doors in summer; il. by the author. 142p $1.50 Macmillan

574 Nature study (W) 42-17292

A nature study book for young people. Contents: Leaves and their story; Our furry friends, the mammals; The flower parade at its height; Reptiles: animals in armor; Plants which do not need the sun; Exploring at the seashore; Bird life of oceans and lakes.

Booklist 38:444 Jl 15 '42

"Why is it, one wonders, that so many natural history books written for children contain misleading passages?" R. S. Lemmon

Books p12 Jl 12 '42 200w

"The effect of the book, both words and pictures, is to sharpen the senses and inform the mind on what can be brought home from country walks." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Jl 5 '42 100w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 31 '42 30w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 18:262 Jl '42 40w

"Recommended." Elizabeth Schmidt

+ Library J 67:686 Ag '42 90w

"Readable, authoritative and provocative, this is an excellent item for the summer vacation library." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 Jl 19 '42 280w

Wis Lib Bul 38:116 Jl '42

HYLANDER, CLARENCE JOHN, and HARDING, ROBERT. Introduction to television. 207p il $2 Macmillan

621.388 Television (W) 41-22065

The principles and mechanics of television, the development up to the present time, and its probable future. Simply explained for the layman. Index.

Booklist 38:126 D 15 '41

Bookmark 3:7 Mr '42

"Recommended for high school students, young adults, and the juvenile reference department." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 66:954 N 1 '41 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:30 Ap '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:43 Mr '42

HYMA, ALBERT. Dutch in the Far East: a history of the Dutch commercial and colonial empire. 249p $1.75 Wahr

991 Netherlands—Colonies. Netherlands Indies 42-10392

Collection of essays on the activities of the Dutch in the Far East, especially along the line of commercial expansion. Contents: The secret of the Dutch commercial policy; The beginnings of Dutch sea power in the Far East; The voyage of Henry Hudson and the founding of New Netherland; The Anglo-Dutch struggle for the freedom of the seas; The occupation of the Malay archipelago; The conquest of Formosa and the European trade with Japan; Decline, recovery and further expansion; The United States and the Dutch East Indies. Bibliographical annotations. Index.

"The chapters vary considerably in quality. The chapter on 'The Secret of the Dutch Commercial Policy' is excellent. In it Professor Hyma makes some telling points against the thesis of Max Weber on the relation of Calvinism and capitalism. Other chapters are good primarily as essays in bibliography. The last two fall much below the level of the others, the closing one seeming to be based wholly on tourist bureau and information office material. . . . Despite peculiar lapses which detract from the quality of the work, the earlier essays contain much interesting material and some excellent analysis." Amry Vandenbosch

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:976 O '42 550w

"It is the great advantage of a study like Hyma's that it brings out the perspectives of situations which too many people like to see in an oversimplified form. . . . It is to be wished that Professor Hyma would some time continue his book with an equally thorough investigation of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries." Bartholomew Landheer

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 5 '42 950w

Reviewed by J. O. M. Broek

Pacific Affairs 25:504 D '42 310w

I

I AM SAXON ASHE, AUTHOR OF. Saxon Ashe, secret agent. 294p $2 Alliance bk. [8s 3d Hodder]

42-10428

A second story of Saxon Ashe, secret agent and clown. This time Ashe's exploits are related against a background of the Nazi invasion of Holland.

"Too much space is given to the details of the invasion, told far less colorfully than the newspapers have already told the story. Despite the violent and perilous exploits with which it deals the book makes dull reading." Isaac Anderson

— N Y Times p14 Ap 19 '42 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p521 O 18 '41 40w

ILIN, M., pseud. See Marshak, I. I.

INGERSOLL, RALPH MCALLISTER. Action on all fronts; a personal account of this war [Eng title: Covering all fronts]. 330p il maps $3.50 Harper [12s 6d Lane] 940,548173 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American (W) 42-7269

In the summer of 1941, after Germany had attacked Russia, the editor of the New York paper, PM, arranged a visit to Moscow. En route he saw what was to become the Pacific war front in Hawaii, the Philippines, and Malaysia, and the Chinese front. After his visit to the Russian front he continued his journey around the world by visiting the Caucasian front, the Mediterranean front, the British front, and the Atlantic front.

Booklist 38:306 Ap 15 '42

Reviewed by Beach Conger
Books p16 Ap 12 '42 900w

Boston Globe p17 Ap 8 '42 150w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:777 Jl '42 20w

"Reporting on conditions is objective, and vigorous editorial comments are pertinent; interesting chapters on airplanes and tank warfare. Whether or not one admires Mr. Ingersoll as a journalist, one will find his book a contribution to understanding of issues and events in this war." H. A. von Uff

+ — Library J 67:267 Mr 15 '42 60w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 12 '42 90w

"As a rule Mr. Ingersoll's articles give this reviewer the impression that the editor of PM has just come in out of a great wind. They are breathless communications, often exciting, though sometimes they remind one of week-end sailors crowding into the bar after a squall on the Sound. But this book, though parts have appeared as articles, gave me a pleasant surprise, for it turns out that Mr. Ingersoll reads very much better in book form." Ralph Bates

+ New Repub 106:504 Ap 13 '42 850w

"Mr. Ingersoll's manner—that of playboy and envoy extraordinary—may irritate, but he has more than a nuisance-value. The question is, how much more?" G. W. Stonier

New Statesmen & Nation 24:111 Ag 15 '42 600w

"A readable and vivid review strong on spot reporting, perhaps not so strong on master-minding. Much of the book has been printed in PM."

+ — New Yorker 18:71 Mr 21 '42 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p362 Jl 25 '42 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 38:86 My '42

Reviewed by Michael Karpovich
Yale R n s 31:850 summer '42 250w

INGLIS-JONES, ELISABETH. Loving heart. 320p $2.50 Messner [8s Faber] 42-8277

The night Susan Porter, a widow of forty, missed a bus was the turning point in her life. A young man gave her a lift and in spite of the difference in their ages fell in love with her pretty eyes and her sweet goodness. Against her better judgment Susan finally married her young lover and they lived happily together for four years—until problems arose that death alone could solve.

Booklist 38:330 My 1 '42

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p17 Ap 12 '42 200w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford
Manchester Guardian p3 F 27 '42 100w

Reviewed by A. P. West
New Statesman & Nation 23:309 My 9 '42 50w

"Susie's indiscreet marriage makes on the whole a very happy story, entertaining and wholesome in a warm little world of its own." Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p7 Ap 12 '42 500w

"Miss Inglis-Jones draws the different types of her novel with a skilful pencil; they are full length portraits which have warm and abundant life." Currie Cabot

+ Sat R of Lit 25:9 My 30 '42 230w

Reviewed by John Hampson
Spec 168:266 Mr 13 '42 180w

"The story is pieced together of the smallest matters only and is unlikely to make any reader's heart miss a beat. But it has an engaging ease and naturalness of manner and seems innocent of any sociological solemnity."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p93 F 21 '42 360w

INNES, HAMMOND. Attack alarm. 287p $2.50 Macmillan [8s Collins] (W) 42-3950

The narrator is Barry Hanson, a member of an anti-aircraft battalion, defending an R.A.F. airbase somewhere in southeastern England, in August and September, 1940. Thru Barry's efforts a fifth column plan to assist troop-carrying German planes, destined to land at English airbases is frustrated. The story is a day-by-day account of the lives of men and women fighters in a modern war.

Booklist 38:275 Ap 1 '42

"Here is a war novel which should command the large following it deserves, for it combines the best features of two very popular kinds of story telling. In the first place it contains pages of some of the most convincing and graphic descriptions of air raids, air fighting and bombing, especially of the work of anti-aircraft, yet to come out of the war, and all in human and story terms. . . In the second place, the novel as a tale is a genuine thriller of action and suspense, of plot and intrigue, of spies and fifth columnists—and, as is well known, there were plenty in England in the beginning." David Tilden

+ Books p8 Ap 12 '42 850w

"If you start to read Attack Alarm you cannot put it down until it is finished." R. B. Rankin

+ Library J 67:182 F 15 '42 50w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Library J 67:897 O 15 '42 10w

"'Attack Alarm' is one of the most exciting thrillers in the current crop of war fiction. Its excellence can be ascribed to the fact that the author is himself a veteran anti-aircraft gunner, that he wrote the book as the campaign he describes unfolded. . . Oh, yes, 'Attack Alarm' has a love interest, and a very charming one; but this is primarily a book that will interest men in the services and armchair strategists." Drake de Kay

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 8 '42 470w

"This is fiction, but the description of daily life at the station and the almost terrifyingly graphic picture of a dive-bombing attack on the aerodrome bear the imprint of truth. The author has made good use of the material to his hand."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p523 O 25 '41 120w

INNES, MICHAEL, pseud. See Stewart, J. I. M.

INSTITUTE OF HUMAN RELATIONS, WILLIAMS COLLEGE, WILLIAMSTOWN, MASSACHUSETTS. World we want to live in. See Clinchy, E. R., ed.

INSTITUTO INTERNACIONAL DE LITERATURA IBEROAMERICANA. Outline history of Spanish American literature, prepared by a committee consisting of E. Herman Hespelt, chairman and ed [and others]. 170p maps $1.60 Crofts

860.9 Spanish American literature 41-26596

"This [volume] is the work of a committee appointed at the Ann Arbor Conference on Latin American Studies in the summer of 1939 for the purpose of studying the scope and subject matter of courses on Spanish American literature in the colleges and universities of the United States. . . The volume is essentially a topical outline of the history of Spanish-American literature arranged by periods and genres with references under each topic to the leading handbooks and works of criticism . . . and suggestions as to the works of literature to be read in each period and the available editions of these works." Pref.

Booklist 38:230 Mr 1 '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:28 F '42

IRELAND, TOM. Ireland, past and present; with an introd. by John F. O'Ryan. 1010p il $5 Putnam

941.5 Ireland—History (W) 42-2759

A comprehensive history of Ireland from earliest times to 1941 with many chapters devoted to the period from 1916 to the present including the question of what Ireland should do in the present war. Index.

"With more care in selecting and arranging the material and in composing the narrative, the story of these past ten years might have been made interesting and valuable. In its present form it can hardly be regarded as of any special significance." D. J. McDougall

Am Hist R 48:110 O '42 380w

Booklist 38:344 My 15 '42

Reviewed by Joseph Driscoll

Books p16 F 22 '42 800w

Cath World 156:250 N '42 230w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 1 '42 150w

Pratt p13 D '42

"Mr. Tom Ireland has gathered his materials with the assistance of library experts in Dublin, and his encyclopedic survey of Irish problems and politics, past and present, may help to rekindle pro-Irish sentiment at Washington. This in turn might influence a fortunate post-war adjustment of the one serious difference that until now has stood in the way of Anglo-Irish harmony. Those who might otherwise be baffled by Mr. Ireland's seeming lack of orderly method will discover that his chapters may be read separately, without regard to sequence. For purposes of reference, also, the volume is supplied with an excellent analytical index." Albert Shaw

Sat R of Lit 25:13 F 28 '42 700w

IRISH, WILLIAM, pseud. See Woolrich, C.

IRVIN, GEORGE ELLIS. Aircraft instruments. 506p il $5 McGraw

629.135 Aeronautical instruments 41-15551

"This book represents the results of an effort to include in a single volume all the material required for a complete up-to-date course in modern aircraft instruments. It has been written especially for use as a textbook for instrument courses in technical high schools and aircraft schools, for aircraft operators, aircraft manufacturers, and the thousands of technical and nontechnical persons who desire to gain a full knowledge of the purpose, fundamental principles of design and operation, installation, maintenance, and repair of the many instruments now in use in modern aircraft. . . A chapter on meteorology has been included the better to acquaint the reader with the science of the air." (Pref) Contains altitude-pressure tables. Index.

Booklist 38:47 O 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:52 O '41

IRVINE, HARRY. Actor's art and job; with forewords by Dorothy Stickney and Howard Lindsay; prefaced and prompted by Alice White. 251p $2.50 Dutton

792 Acting 42-7553

Suggestions and advice directed chiefly to the student of acting or the beginner in the professional field. The author is a well known American actor who has had considerable experience in teaching the art. Partial contents: What must you have to be an actor? How can you achieve growth? The actor and Shakespeare; Modern methods; The actor and the director; The actor and sex; How to get a job? Etiquettes of the theatre; A note on make-up; Teaching; Acting for nothing; Self-expression at last. Index.

"A book of real value," W. P. Eaton

+ Books p15 Je 21 '42 130w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '42

Theatre Arts 26:417 Je '42 150w

IRVING, FREDERICK CARPENTER. Safe deliverance. (Life-in-America ser) 308p $3 Houghton

B or 92 Obstetrics. Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Boston lying-in hospital 42-24745

These reminiscences of a Boston doctor (born and raised in the Adirondacks) combine autobiography, an informal history of obstetrics, and a history of the Boston Lying-In Hospital, in which institution the author is Chief of Staff.

"The style is simple, chatty, informal, and full of very human and often amusing anecdotes. The opening chapters are concerned with the early life of the author and his developing interest in medicine. The medical student's first introduction to the problems of caring for a patient by delivering a woman in her home in a slum of Boston is splendid. Parts of the book, particularly the descriptions of typical obstetrical tragedies of the last century, are dramatic and moving." C. C. Lund

+ Atlantic 170:172 D '42 180w

"'Safe Deliverance' brings in an exceedingly readable fashion glimpses of medical history which will interest lay readers and doubtless broaden the horizons of even many members of the medical profession; nor need any but the most squeamish fear that medical particulars will obscure their enjoyment of the author's dry wit and broad interest in humanity. By implication, the book reflects the satisfactions of a full and busy life, though except for the first chapters there is little of autobiography. Its informality, objectivity and humor, as well as the subject matter, make it a welcome addition to a growing list of books which eminent practitioners have written about a profession in which nearly every one is interested." Mary Ross

+ Books p12 N 29 '42 1250w

Reviewed by D. G. Wayman

Boston Globe p21 N 18 '42 460w

Commonweal 37:187 D 4 '42 140w

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:3 N '42 360w

"Risky it is to nominate any book for best-seller lists, but Dr Irving's intensely human and interesting book—which, nevertheless, seems to a layman to have kept well within the limits of professional ethics—possesses an almost sure claim to popularity. In addition, his style is peculiarly effective in its occasional pointed comments on such matters as ignoring medical advice, or, on the other hand, accepting the suggestions of the untrained or unqualified."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e N 29 '42 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 38:182 D '42

IRWIN, MARGARET E. F. (MRS J. R. MON-SELL). Gay Galliard; the love story of Mary, queen of Scots, 543p $3 Harcourt [10s 6d Chatto]

Mary Stuart, queen of Scots—Fiction. Bothwell, James Hepburn, 4th earl of—Fiction (W) 42-4714

Historical novel based on the love of Mary, queen of Scots, and the dashing Earl of Bothwell, here called the Gay Galliard. His first meeting with Mary, while she was still "the little queen" of France, is the preliminary of this long and checkered story of the love of a queen for a ruthless but gallant gentleman, who stopped at nothing to reach the woman he loved.

Booklist 38:251 Mr 15 '42

Bookmark 3:16 My '42

"This delightfully readable romance of Margaret Irwin's is, really, the story rather of Bothwell than of Mary herself. . . . As the pattern of her tale unfolds in all its glamour of bloodshed, treachery, passion, wild rides by night and heartbreak, there steals through it the unmistakable savor of a past which was once so terribly alive; seldom does one experience as keenly as here the momentary sensation of seeing and feeling into a long-ago yesterday. The experience is a true tribute to the author's skill, sincerity and good writing." Iris Barry

+ Books p5 F 15 '42 480w

"Miss Irwin's extraordinary competence in the writing of historical fiction has been exhibited in novels dealing with the seventeenth century. Here she pictures one of the most fascinating characters of the sixteenth. It is a persuasive portrait. She is quite frankly the partisan of her heroine. The soundness of her technique as a writer of fiction is apparent in the clarity of her painting of the historical background and in the vitality that she gives to all the subsidiary characters."

+ Christian Century 59:432 Ap 1 '42 130w
Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '42

Reviewed by Theodore Maynard
Commonweal 35:419 F 13 '42 850w

"This love story of Mary, Queen of Scots, and Lord Bothwell is one of the best of the historical novels that have been written recently. So vividly told that it might have happened last year." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 67:131 F 1 '42 50w

"The Gay Galliard will increase Miss Irwin's reputation as historical novelist. It has exquisite vignettes, little pictures that glow like stained glass, and longer passages of rapid action or of description." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 12 '41 240w

"In The Gay Galliard: The Love Story of Mary Queen of Scots Miss Margaret Irwin presents a full-blown excellently documented historical romance that moves with speed and cumulative suspense to its proper climax." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p4 F 15 '42 1000w

New Yorker 17:70 F 14 '42 90w

Reviewed by John Hampson

Spec 167:584 D 19 '41 260w

"Of this great historical romance Miss Irwin has made no story of a Macbeth and his lady, but rather an interpretation of a virile, dominating Launcelot and his Guinevere. To an oft-told and familiar tale, Margaret Irwin has imparted a sense of daring adventure and high romance. The strengths and weaknesses of her two principal characters and their supporters are so ably pictured, that in retrospect it is easy to understand that the future of the world hinged on the outcome of Carberry Hill." L. S. Munn

+ Springfield Republican p7e F 15 '42 650w

"The Gay Galliard is accomplished work, as was to be expected, into which has evidently gone much historical reading. And it is also fluent, graceful, picturesque and very readable work, with the romantic appeal that is inseparable from almost any book about Mary Stuart and that is more than ordinarily secure in Miss Irwin's hands. Her means of heightening that romantic appeal beyond the limits of the consensus of historians' opinion may seem suspect, but the deft and practised flow of narrative is such that doubt in the matter is for the time being laid aside."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p629 D 13 '41 950w

Wis Lib Bul 38:47 Mr '42

IRWIN, WILLIAM HENRY. Making of a reporter, 440p $3.75 Putnam

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 42-25254

Autobiography of a well-known American journalist from his college days at Leland Stanford down to the end of the trip he made with Mr Hoover around South America in 1928.

"The book is alive with anecdotes and incidents, told with gusto and the love of life, but the remarkable men Irwin met at every turn of the road do not wholly come alive. . . . Will Irwin is a lovable man believing in his friends, and in spite of indignation against the wicked, a natural lover of mankind. It is an honorable trait in him to stick fast to his friend Mr. Hoover, through the very thick and the extremely thin, to have a kindly word even for President Harding, to damn the sin and love the sinner. He has lived a good life, a mad life, a successful life, and the record of it is a captivating peep-show of an age that is past." Ellery Sedgwick

+ Atlantic 171:136 Ja '43 700w

Booklist 39:183 Ja 1 '43

"This book has high merit as the record of an outstanding journalistic career, and of the times through which Will Irwin moved. And yet it has grave defects. There are not only gaps and incomplete appraisals but the writing is diffuse, windy and often downright trite." Stanley Walker

+ Books p6 N 15 '42 1750w

Reviewed by James Van Zant

Churchman 156:19 D 15 '42 210w

"Will Irwin probably couldn't have written a dull autobiography if he had tried. The making of a reporter in this case included the development of a seeing eye, a discriminating mind and a lucid style. A Stanford graduate reviewing his book, and wishing to be cleared of a possible suspicion of favorable prejudice, can only suggest that the volume might have been shortened somewhat without loss to its main themes if some of the anecdotes in the earlier sections had been omitted—and perhaps a few elsewhere. But they are good anecdotes." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p6 N 22 '42 1150w

"Fluent, lively reading, and a sensible view of many of the high points in American journalism from the nineties and Herbert Hoover."

+ New Yorker 18:99 N 28 '42 70w

"It goes without saying that this volume is delightfully written. Indeed it is Will Irwin at his best, and that means a very great deal. It is modest, unassuming, full of humor, and contains that sane judgment of men, women, and affairs which made him for so long one of the most valued and distinguished of our popular journalists." O. G. Villard

+ Sat R of Lit 25:11 N 14 '42 1150w

ISASI, MIRIM, and DENNY, MRS MELCENA BURNS. White stars of freedom; il. by Kurt Wiese. 308p $2.50 Whitman, A.

42-23978

Story of a Basque shepherd boy, living in that liberty-loving country before the Spanish Civil war. It describes the life and customs of the country, and closes with Narbik becoming an American citizen.

Booklist 39:205 Ja 15 '43

"May be useful in large collections. Reads like autobiography. Shot through with sincere passion for liberty, but it is too eager, too glowing, too obviously geared to theme of Americanization to be altogether convincing." J. L. Sauer

+ Library J 67:1070 D 1 '42 90w

ISASI, MIRIM—Continued

"The warmth of earth and sun, of animals and growing things and of human affection permeates a story which re-creates the life of a little-known people who have loved liberty through all their long history." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p47 N 15 '42 320w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 24 '43
220w

ISWOLSKY, HELENE. Light before dusk; a Russian Catholic in France, 1923-1941. (Golden measure bks) 253p $2.50 Longmans

B or 92 France—Religion, Roman Catholics in France 42-36202

Helen Iswolsky is the daughter of a former Russian ambassador to France. She served as a Red Cross nurse in Paris during the first World war and has made Paris her home for many years. In 1923 she became a Roman Catholic and has been active in French Catholic movements since then. Her book tells the story of her work in France between the two wars ending with chapters on the fall of France, the Petain regime, and the outlook for the future. Index.

"An earnest and moving document."

+ Christian Century 59:530 Ap 22 '42
130w

"'Light Before Dusk' is a book to be treasured and read by all who are aware of the tremendous importance of our times and who wish to see at least a portion of our problems solved on a true Christian basis, a true humanism." Maurice Lavanoux

+ Commonweal 36:116 My 22 '42 420w

"This broadminded yet firm-spirited and often beautiful book is of pertinent interest which is by no means confined to the author's particular co-religionists. And as it follows dissension and trouble and war and disaster in France it takes its place as a document in current history."

+ N Y Times p9 Je 14 '42 600w

IUGOV, ARON. Russia's economic front for war and peace; an appraisal of the three five-year plans; tr. from the original Russian ms. by N. I. and M. Stone. 279p $3 Harper

330.947 Russia—Economic conditions, Russia—Economic policy (W) 42-12980

The author of Economic Trends in Soviet Russia (Book Review Digest, 1930) analyzes the changes which have taken place in the U.S.S.R. during the last quarter of a century. The book is concerned mainly with the three five-year plans, and with the adaptation of an agricultural economy to industrialization. The book was "conceived before the extension of the World war to Russia." Index.

"In spite of a large number of books, pamphlets and articles on various aspects of the Russian development which have appeared since the outbreak of the Russian-German war, there has been no serious publication dealing with the economic problems of the Soviet Union. This gap has now been filled in a very satisfactory fashion by the appearance of the excellent study by Dr. Yugow." P. A. Baran

+ Am Econ R 32:366 Je '42 850w

Reviewed by Karl Scholz

Ann Am Acad 223:212 S '42 500w

"Here is something unusual, if not unknown under the sun: a book on Soviet Russia that is not written in the tone either of uncritical eulogy or of bitter detraction. As a result, and because Mr. Yugow, a Russian by birth, is a trained and careful economist, one gets a picture of Soviet industry and agriculture and transportation and living conditions that approximates much closer to the probabilities of the 'Russian enigma' than the customary polemical effort, whether pro or con." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic My '42 250w

Booklist 38:379 Je 15 '42

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:733 Jl '42 50w

"Recommended." M. A. Gray

+ Library J 67:268 Mr 15 '42 80w

"Mr. Yugow's book is important not so much because of its intrinsic merit as because it fills a conspicuous void in our information about Russia. The reviewer knows of no other place where the average person may so quickly and conveniently obtain the basic facts regarding Soviet economic development, together with information that will enable him to appraise these facts intelligently." M. S. Stewart

+ Nation 154:715 Je 20 '42 700w

Reviewed by John Scott

New Repub 107:236 Ag 24 '42 750w

New Yorker 18:67 Ap 4 '42 80w

Time 39:95 Je 8 '42 350w

Reviewed by Michael Karpovich

Yale R n s 31:851 summer '42 140w

J

JACKS, LAWRENCE PEARSALL. Confession of an octogenarian. 280p il $3.50 Macmillan [15s Allen, G.]

B or 92

[A42-4503]

"Dr. Jacks traces frankly and simply his progress from the grimly religious atmosphere of his childhood to a distrust of all denominationalism and the belief that hope lies in 'the education of the whole man,' to whom religion will be as essential as life itself. His account of this spiritual pilgrimage is enlivened by penetrating descriptions of people and scenes that remind us how little of the remote mystic there is about him." Manchester Guardian

Booklist 39:70 N 1 '42

"L.P. Jacks is widely and favorably known as philosopher and theologian, as author of books on religion and education, as editor of the Hibbert Journal, and as principal of Manchester College at Oxford. His autobiography tells about all these interests and activities, but much more. It is a very modest autobiography. He does not make himself the hero of his story. Perhaps for this very reason it is delightful to have a more intimate acquaintance with him than was possible through his more serious writings." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 59:1005 Ag 19 '42
260w

"The book glows with color from start to finish. Rarely has a writer told more clearly, or more amusingly, how he became what he became." F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 156:18 O 1 '42 360w

Reviewed by C. E. M. Joad

Hibbert J 40:390 Jl '42 2850w

Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 1 '42 250w

"This book, wise, mellow, humorous, understanding, a book with a taste as distinct as that of a Ribstone pippin, is no formal autobiography. There is too little, for my taste, about the author; his early chapters on his ancestry, sturdy English middle-class, show a gift for portrait painting which I wish he had exercised more generously in his accounts of later years. Here is a book which I would have liked more had it been ten times its length; but the reader must be grateful for the rare quality of the wine Dr. Jacks has here decanted." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 S 26 '42 650w

"This is a book written with the most candid of pens. It is so frankly intimate, and goes down so honestly to ultimate things, that its effect on a reader who has read every line can only be expressed in the words of Oliver Twist 'Please, Sir, I want some more.'" Ernest Barker

+ Spec 163:605 Je 26 '42 850w

"An inner serenity seems to irradiate this book, of which the playful coruscations of his wit are a significant if a slight index, and the outward circumstances of his life have been happy, as men judge of happiness. The antinomy is one which readers must resolve as they will, bearing in mind that it was Kant who thought that there would have to be a defect at the core of all existence if it could be shown that a soul such as that of Spinoza could not be regarded in some significant sense as assured of felicity. One can only bid farewell to a moving and vital narrative with gratitude to the writer and with the mildest expression of regret that Tennyson should be quoted in a form which ruins his scansion and that a singular form of 'penetration' should appear which has no warrant in Latin usage."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p297 Je 13 '42
1200w

JACKSON, ARNOLD STEVENS. The answer is . . . your nerves; with a chapter by Edwin O. Kennedy; il. by Evelyn Lipman. 197p $2 Kilgore ptg. co, 117 E. Mifflin st, Madison, Wis.

616.84 Nervous system—Diseases. Mental hygiene 42-20430

Illustrating his comments with many case histories, the author discusses the causes, symptoms and possible cures of nervous disorders.

Booklist 39:97 N 15 '42
Wis Lib Bul 38:157 N '42

JACKSON, DONALD DEAN. Archer Pilgrim. 275p $2.50 Dodd

42-14391

When Archer Pilgrim was nine years old, back in the early '20s, he decided he would be a farmer. His parents, a farmer and a farmer's wife, said all they could to discourage him, later his best friend urged Arch to follow him to engineering college, and Marian, who did not want to live in the country, used her influence. Arch spent a miserable year in college, and half-a-dozen years as a mechanic in a small-town garage, but finally he was able to go back to the farm and his chosen way of life.

Reviewed by Page Cooper
Books p22 My 10 '42 450w

"The author has little to add to an already familiar theme, but he writes with simplicity, and he does nicely with the scenes of his hero's childhood."

Nation 154:664 Je 6 '42 150w

"The author loves the soil and writes well about it, but it doesn't add up to much and you hardly care one way or another about the people."

New Repub 107:30 Jl 6 '42 90w

"Don Jackson is a student at Iowa State College. . . His story of an Iowa farm boy is a piece of work that many writers of twice his years and experience might not be ashamed to own. It is told with great simplicity, in a natural and unobtrusive style which may have been hard writing but makes very easy reading. It is not particularly ambitious, and perhaps not particularly important, but it does what it sets out to do with entire success. It seems perfectly genuine and unforced and—what is more remarkable in the case of so young a writer—unimitative." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 My 24 '42 800w

JACKSON, KATHRYN, and JACKSON, BYRON. Rabbit who had four lucky feet. [17p] il $1 Simon & Schuster

42-24670

Contrary to the usual procedure in such matters, this story tells how Toby, the rabbit, received Peter, the little boy, as a birthday present. That was all right with both Toby and Peter but the other rabbits pointed out that it meant they had no place to live. And that predicament was overcome when Peter discovered that Toby's lucky feet could make six wishes come true.

"This belongs with toy-books whose effects are produced by folding, but it stands out among them not only by reason of a longer, better-told story, but by the unusual beauty of the little scene thus built up." M. L. Becker

+ Books p32 N 15 '42 150w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 37:117 N 20 '42 40w

"A very simple, entertaining little tale. It has the added advantage of being one of those books that children can 'do things with.'"
+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 29 '42 110w

JACKSON, LINDA. Petey; il. by Dorothy Buck. 57p $1.50 Harcourt

42-22145

Pictures in sepia and brief descriptive text show what happened to a lively baby named Petey on the day when he took his first step. Children five to eight.

"Little girls who like nothing better than to push a neighbor's perambulator will take to this at first sight, and if it should get into the hands of older persons who wonder whether a baby's worth the trouble, that might be an idea too. For Petey is such a real baby his charm is convincing." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 O 18 '42 330w

Churchman 156:15 N 15 '42 20w

Reviewed by D. M. MacDonald
Library J 67:741 S 1 '42 50w

JACKSON, SIDNEY LOUIS. America's struggle for free schools; social tension and education in New England and New York, 1827-42. 276p $3.50; pa $3 Am. council on public affairs

370.974 Education—New England. Education—New York (state). Public schools—U.S. U.S.—Social conditions 42-12925

"In seeking proof of his tentative thesis that 'ideas follow interests,' Dr Jackson has with prodigious labor examined the great body of books, magazines and pamphlets of the period and area which bear directly or indirectly on the role of education in democracy. He has sifted out the ideas of the intellectual leadership, both those of the majority who supported the status quo and those of the minority of reformers. The tactics and ideas of the educators are analyzed in relation to the varying demands of other groups." Springf'd Republican

"Stimulating to all careful students of social problems and provocative of their admiration and gratitude is any work such as Dr. Jackson's monograph, which bears the marks of painstaking and sincere research in some highly significant field sufficiently delimited in time and space to permit exhaustive treatment." F. H. Swift

+ Am Hist R 48:378 Ja '43 850w

Reviewed by R. C. Angell
Am J Soc 48:279 S '42 160w

Reviewed by M. D. Irish
Am Pol Sci R 36:376 Ap '42 190w

"It is to be hoped that this valuable pioneer study will lead to others; the need for them is great." Thomas Woody

+ Ann Am Acad 221:239 My '42 600w

"The author has shown a proper awareness of the limitations inherent in the materials selected and, more important, in the methodology employed. The care with which terms, for example, 'intellectual leadership,' have been defined for the purposes of this study is to be commended. The author's bias, which colors the entire work, is honest. The study is fully documented; the extensiveness of the Bibliography is evidence of the thoroughness with which the problem was attacked." H. G. Richey

+ El School J 43:187 N '42 1000w

School & Society 55:56 Ja 10 '42 50w
Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 17 '42 1000w

JACOBS, FRANCES E. Out of a handkerchief; il. by Marion Downer. 63p $1 Lothrop

793.9 Amusements 42-11672

"How to make animals, flowers, birds, people, and other objects by tying knots in a handkerchief. Simple, clear directions and dia-

JACOBS, F. E.—Continued
grams. Useful for kindergarten work, the classroom, or an entertainment program." Library J

"The author of 'Finger Plays and Action Rhymes' has produced another lifesaver for people called upon to amuse, at a moment's notice, one or more restless or even frightened little children." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 J1 12 '42 200w
Reviewed by Emily Hutson
Library J 67:534 Je 1 '42 40w

JACOBS, MORRIS BORIS. War gases; their identification and decontamination. 180p il $3 Interscience

623.452 Gases, Asphyxiating and poisonous.
Decontamination (from gases, chemicals, etc.) 42-18274

"Among the aims of this book are those of presenting under one cover the most recent information from the literature on all the various aspects of identification and decontamination of chemical warfare gases, and of summarizing this information in a form that will be most useful to gas identification officers, decontamination squads, health officers, as well as to war gas chemists. . . . Numerous tables serve to crystallize the information and to make the data more valuable for quick reference." Chem & Met Eng

"The book is well printed in legible type and should be very useful to anyone who has had some chemical education and has to deal with chemical warfare agents as an air warden, gas-identification officer or a decontamination officer. War gas chemists will find it a convenient manual for their work."
A. C. Fieldner

+ Am Chem Soc J 64:2519 O '42 390w

"This book fills a need in the chemical warfare field and should be useful to all non-medical gas officers (state gas consultants and senior gas officers) concerned with civilian defense." D. D. Rutstein

+ Am J Pub Health 32:1177 O '42 230w
Booklist 39:195 Ja 15 '43

"The subject matter has been well organized and sub-divided by the liberal use of cross-page and marginal headings. In addition, the author has included numerous general as well as specific literature references. These show that he has done a thorough job of covering the best American, British and German sources, including the little known government publications of this country and of Great Britain."

+ Chem & Met Eng 49:171 Ag '42 300w

Reviewed by Waldemar Kaempffert
N Y Times p35 N 22 '42 120w

JACQUES, pseud. French soldier speaks; tr. by Helen Waddell. 138p $1.25 Macmillan
[4s 6d Constable]

940.5344 World war, 1939—France. France—
Politics and government. National characteristics, French [41-20337]

A French soldier who escaped to England after Dunkirk and was in a hospital when France fell, writes this confession of affection for his country, and states his reasons for believing that "France will rise again."

Christian Century 59:808 Je 24 '42 100w

"Jacques, the author, is said to be 'an ordinary French soldier.' To those acquainted with a Frenchman's ability to dissect his own thoughts, the statement is easy of belief; for Jacques, at the same time that he is alive to his thinking processes, displays a Frenchman's tolerance toward and advocacy of individualism." I. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 J1 11 '42
360w

New Repub 107:150 Ag 3 '42 40w

"The soldier's discourse has the fervor of a rhapsody; for though the clear French mind works out its reasons all along the way, these, together with hopes and prayers and vows and dreams are swept on in a stream of prose simple and terse and yet allied to poetry.

Touches of humor are not lacking, with bits of finesse in his description of English character—which he came to understand and fondly to admire." E. K. Rand

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 8 '42 500w

"This little apologia is moving, significant and timely. It will enable many Englishmen and women, puzzled, pained but not yet embittered by the withdrawal of France from the conflict and distressed and bewildered by the subsequent course of Vichy policy, to understand something of the confusion, disillusion and sense of betrayal that led so many French soldiers to surrender to mere passivity."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p303 Je 21 '41
180w

JAGENDORF, MORITZ ADOLF, comp.
Twenty-five non-royalty plays for children.
317p $2.50 Greenberg

812.08 Children's plays (W) 42-22429

Collection of plays for actors from seven to seventeen. The subjects are varied: historical; fairy plays; plays about kings; Hallowe'en; camps; radio broadcasting; Abraham Lincoln,
etc.

"The plays are uneven in quality but will be useful with children of elementary and junior high school age because of the simplicity of production."

Booklist 39:124 D 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 Ja 17 '43 80w

"Unfortunately this is a field in which average literary output is not particularly high.
Adequate."

Library J 67:1013 N 15 '42 30w

JAKOB, MAX, and HAWKINS, GEORGE AN-DREW. Elements of heat transfer and insulation. 169p il $2.50 Wiley

536.2 Heat—Transmission 42-13522

"A textbook on heat transmission which treats conduction, convection, and radiation separately and in their combinations. Adapted for average undergraduate engineering students." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 38:421 J1 1 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:40 J1 '42

JAMES, ARTHUR WILSON. State becomes a social worker; an administrative interpretation. 368p $3 Garrett

360.9755 Charities—Virginia. Virginia. Department of public welfare 42-2163

Papers on the workings of the public welfare organization of Virginia. Partial contents:
The public welfare function of government;
From charities and corrections to public welfare; The state department of public welfare;
The county and city welfare departments;
Services of the department of public welfare;
The state as social parent; Poor relief reform; Penal reform; Mental hygiene; Socialization of criminal procedure; Public assistance—Emergency relief; Social security. Index.

"The volume jumps from the general to the particular and back again in a manner frequently disconcerting. Although students of public welfare organizations and/or of specific public welfare programs will find much of value in the book, much of it is too intermingled with purely local problems and situations to be the real 'administrative interpretation' which it attempts to be." J. P. C. Carey

+ — Am Pol Sci R 36:964 O '42 260w

"Although the author's original purpose in writing this book is somewhat clouded, his attempt is not lacking in value. In this regard it is the reviewer's opinion that the subjective development of many of these programs is not clear. Further, some of the documents (especially speeches) seem comparatively inconsequential and do not deserve the consideration given them. However, the perfection of this type of approach will finally enable students of public welfare both to perceive and to analyze the interplay of personality, programs, and politics involved in this great field of human endeavor." G. K. Brown

+ — Ann Am Acad 222:221 Jl '42 360w

JAMES, GLENN, and JAMES, ROBERT CLARKE, eds. Mathematics dictionary. 259,22p il $3 Digest press, Van Nuys, Calif.
510.3 Mathematics—Dictionaries (W) 42-9664

"Giving the meaning of the basic mathematical words and phrases, including an exhaustive covering of all terms from Arithmetic through the Calculus and the technical terms commonly used in the applications of these subjects." Subtitle

Booklist 38:343 My 15 '42
Library J 67:1067 D 1 '42 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 27:26 Ap '42
Pratt p16 D '42

JAMES, HENRY. Representative selections; with introd, bibl, and notes by Lyon N. Richardson. (American writers ser) 490p $1.25 Am. bk.

818 James, Henry—Bibliography 41-19830
"This latest volume in the American Writers Series follows the pattern made familiar by its predecessors in presenting representative selections from James's criticism and fiction, accompanied by an extensive historical and critical introduction and an admirable bibliography." New Eng Q

"It is difficult when, by the limitations of space, one's choice is restricted to short stories to convey a just idea of James's peculiar gifts, but Mr. Richardson has succeeded here better than might have been expected; and his selection of critical essays (in particular 'The Art of Fiction') could hardly be improved." Conrad Wright, Jr.
+ New Eng Q 15:572 S '42 110w

"Contains all the casual reader needs to know about America's great cosmopolitan, together with all the necessary scholarly apparatus to make a detailed study easy for those who have a deeper interest." E. L. Tinker
+ N Y Times p18 Ja 11 '42 1400w

JAMES, MARQUIS. Biography of a business. 431p il $4 Bobbs

368 Insurance company of North America (W) 42-25688

History of the Insurance company of North America, founded in Philadelphia in 1792. Originally maritime underwriters, the company has expanded to include most other types of insurance with the exception of life insurance. Index.

Booklist 39:178 Ja 1 '43

"Marquis James, as is well known, has many and substantial talents as a biographer; here he has used his skills of analysis and narration to unite the history of a great American business organization. He and his sponsors are to be commended for the successful outcome of their venture. For they have demonstrated that business history can be as excitingly told and made as socially significant as the traditional exercises in politics and diplomacy. . . Mr. James's study is a solid, as well as a fascinating contribution to the country's business and social history." L. M. Hacker
+ Books p6 Ja 17 '43 1000w

Reviewed by William Miller
New Repub 108:29 Ja 4 '43 850w

"Mr. James's hundred-and-fifty-year narrative contains plenty of human figures, but there is no dominant family succession. So he had to deal with the essence of the corporation itself—artificial, soulless, deathless, impersonal, and meaningless except as it sucks in meaning from the work it does in the community. Out of these materials he has made a significant book." Palmer Harman

+ Sat R of Lit 25:18 D 26 '42 1000w

JAMES, NEILL. Petticoat vagabond in Ainu land and up and down eastern Asia. 318p il $3 Scribner

915.24 Ainous. Asia, Eastern—Description and travel (W) 42-7545

Account of a trip made in 1940 and 1941 thru Japan, Korea, Manchukuo and Japanese-occupied China. Much of the author's time and interest were engaged in her visit to Hokkaido, most northern of the Japanese islands and home of the Ainu. Index.

Booklist 38:328 My 1 '42

"'Petticoat Vagabond in Ainu Land' is one of those light-hearted, amusing books which only an intrepid globe-trotter who really enjoys travel can write, difficulties only adding excitement to the journey. Miss James never feels sorry for herself and makes no fuss about living in whatever style the situation requires." Nym Wales
+ Books p12 Ap 12 '42 850w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '42

"No one can accuse the author of slighting the byways. Miss James has a sense of humor and supreme confidence in her own ability to do what she wants to do." F. G. Wells
Sat R of Lit 25:17 Mr 21 '42 500w

Wis Lib Bul 38:66 Ap '42

JAMES, PRESTON EVERETT. Latin America. 908p il maps lib ed $6 Lothrop; students' ed $4.50 Odyssey

918 Latin America 42-8489

A comprehensive treatise on the geography and economic resources of the lands of the western hemisphere lying south of the Rio Grande. The author, who is professor of geography in the University of Michigan, is serving as Chief of the Latin-American section in the Office of Coordinator of Information, in Washington, D.C. Index.

Reviewed by Alfred Manes

Am Econ R 32:879 D '42 1050w

Reviewed by M. J. Proudfoot

Am J Soc 48:529 Ja '43 650w

"While the general reader as well as the specialist can use it with profit, and may even read it with pleasure, Professor James has not made many concessions to readers of any kind. He tosses technical terms about with complete abandon, and the cross references in the text to the bibliography at the end of the book and to the 144 maps scattered through its pages require of the attentive reader a constant leaping back and forth through this ponderous volume. . . On the whole, the shortcomings of the book are far outweighed by its merits. In this reviewer's opinion, it is an invaluable aid to the study of the historical development as well as the contemporary political, social, and economic scene in the region that it describes, and no teacher or mature student of any of these subjects should be without it." A. P. Whitaker
+ — Ann Am Acad 223:232 S '42 850w

Booklist 38:307 Ap 15 '42

Bookmark 3:12 My '42

"Among the book's critics will be some who believe that he did not give the Catholic Church enough credit for its efforts in building up Latin America, and at least as many who fume because he didn't condemn the Church sufficiently for its misdeeds. So it will go along the line in questions of interpretation. The book, however, is strong enough to weather criticism. It is a competent descriptive work which is at all times decently tentative. Mr. James doesn't do our thinking for us, but he gives us a thousand pages crammed with material that we'll be thinking about in the coming years to an ever-increasing extent. He poses plenty of problems, but he doesn't try to solve any. That is as it should be, since he is no impertinent journalist. If he could solve the problems he would be running the hemisphere instead of writing books." E. P. Hansen

JAMES, P. E.—Continued—
+ Books p2 My 10 '42 1600w

"Dr. James's work is, in the opinion of this reviewer, the best that has yet appeared in its field and will probably long be consulted as a standard. . . That there is here and there a passage now out of date is, of course, not the author's fault. Written before the Conference of Rio de Janeiro the lines on the Peru-Ecuador boundary are no longer applicable; and the Germans, the Italians and the Japanese are now in a position somewhat different from that which they enjoyed before the Latin American Governments awoke fully to what some of them were really up to. But those are points which a competent professor can readily correct or modify, while the book on the whole is a model of what such a treatment should be." Edwin Ryan

+ Cath World 155:755 S '42 800w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:785 J1 '42 90w

Reviewed by R. S. Platt

Geog R 32:517 J1 '42 1150w

"New-style scholarship, and attractively written, too."

+ New Yorker 18:80 Mr 28 '42 70w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring

Sat R of Lit 25:17 Ap 4 '42 360w

"This is a book which does credit to American scholarship and research." E. C. Lindeman

+ Survey G 31:429 O '42 130w

"Though this is scarcely a book for those who want to learn all about Latin America in a hurry, it is an invaluable storehouse of information for the serious student. It is a book to be read in detail, for the author brands as unsound any generalizations about Latin America or Latin Americans, which might provide a common thread of understanding. He even denies it the elements of a common culture, and in his hands Latin America becomes only a geographical expression. Barring a few 'picture books' by professional photographers, the book is enriched by probably the best collection of illustrations ever to appear in a work on lands to the south of us. But, if it made no other contribution to our knowledge of Latin America, the 144 maps, nearly all of them original, would give it a unique place in the descriptive literature of the hemisphere." W. L. Schurz

+ Yale R n s 31:826 summer '42 1150w

JAMES, WILL. The American cowboy [il. by the author]. 273p $2.50 Scribner

(W) 42-7197

The history of the American cowboy in fiction form, illustrated with drawings in black and white by the author-artist.

Booklist 38:346 My 15 '42

"Will James can draw fine pictures, write a moving tale and toss a deft rope. He always knows what he is about, and, although it must be admitted that sometimes his material turns out to be pretty thin, it is real enough. The Will James art is always, or nearly always, somewhat superior to the prose. That is true in this case." Stanley Walker

+ Books p6 Mr 22 '42 1100w

"Will James knows his cowboys, his cows, his horses, and his riding country as well as any one now alive, and probably there is no artist anywhere around who can draw these subjects as well as he can. So it is appropriate that he should add one more book . . . to the twenty-one or so he has already published. In fact, from this reviewer's point of view he can add as many more books as he likes, provided that he keeps on drawing the pictures for them." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 15 '42 800w

Wis Lib Bul 38:87 My '42

JAMES, WILLIAM. As William James said: extracts from the published writings; sel. and ed. by Elizabeth Perkins Aldrich; with il. from original drawings by [the author]. 242p $2.75 Vanguard

191.9 Philosophy, American 42-15429

A collection of William James' most colorful sayings, gathered from his psychological and philosophical works, and from his letters. They are classified and arranged under topics. Illustrated with a number of hitherto unpublished drawings from his notebooks. Index of excerpts.

"This is a volume for occasional reading, a bedside book of intense interest as revealing the conclusions of a brilliant mentality regarding the subjects which most concern humanity." A. F. G.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 8 '42 1000w

"This is a book which we have long needed." + Churchman 156:17 Ag 1 '42 100w

"A varied and entertaining collection of sayings. . . The volume is made still more valuable by the addition of a dozen hitherto unpublished drawings by James himself. In these pages, and with slight effort, the general reader can get a truer notion of the man and his thought than can be found in the professionals' handbooks. The variety and depth of his perceptions, the fineness of his moral and aesthetic fiber, the subtlety of his mind, and the elasticity of his prose will, it is hoped, blot out the fantastic but common image of an inartistic but powerful Yankee thinker, a philosophical P. T. Barnum, who might have come to some good if he had been born outside America and received 'proper training.'" Jacques Barzun

+ Nation 155:36 J1 11 '42 180w

"Only one who is familiar with the immense volume of James's writings and their uniformly high quality can appreciate the skill and restraint, as well as the labor, which the preparation of this volume required. All of the famous things which James said are here, together with many more things which deserve to be famous. The book is timely not only because this is the centennial of James's birth, but because this is a time in which to be reminded that 'life . . . must back its ideal visions with the sterner stuff of manly virtue.' Whoever would have his Americanism and his humanity rekindled should keep this book near at hand." R. B. Perry

+ New Eng Q 15:561 S '42 550w

"'As William James Said' is worthy of any library shelf and should have a place on every one." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p30 N 8 '42 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 38:132 O '42

JAMESON, STORM (MRS GUY CHAPMAN). The fort. 136p $1.75 Macmillan [6s Cassell]

41-19311

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

Cath World 154:635 F '42 130w

"Miss Storm Jameson's new volume is hardly a novel in the ordinary sense; rather is it a hybrid, something between a short story and a play. Although Miss Jameson brings to its execution all the sympathetic understanding of her warmhearted nature and the skill of an accomplished writer, 'The Fort' lacks somehow the compelling intensity which is essential to complete artistic conviction." Wilfrid Gibson

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 16 '42 120w

"The interplay of national philosophies and idiosyncrasies of character is handled with a nice touch; the dialogue is infused with candour and eloquence; but as the book proceeds, the argument loses momentum, and a halfhearted traffic with the ghosts of Last Time eviscerates the conclusion." Desmond Hawkins

+ New Statesman & Nation 23:61 Ja 24 '42 180w

"The Fort has many virtues; it is both short and stimulating. . . [It] offers many ideas worthy of our consideration and respect. One hopes that it will be widely read and discussed, for it is by far the most interesting novel about the present conflict that this reviewer has read." John Hampson

+ Spec 168:66 Ja 16 '42 550w

"It is a strongly felt and telling piece of work. Miss Jameson is inclined to spill sympathy with too little discrimination—she has a word of tenderness for both psychopathic German and the French Fascist intellectual—but this springs from the sense of the futility of war that has evidently always haunted her, and from resistance, it may be, to the facile consolations of pacifism."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p17 Ja 10 '42 1100w

JAMESON, STORM (MRS GUY CHAPMAN),
ed. London calling. 322p $2.50 Harper 820.8 English literature—Collections
(W) 42-25162

A collection of articles, short stories, poems, and essays, written expressly for this book by outstanding English authors. The proceeds of the sale of the book are to be donated to the U.S.O. The contributors include Rebecca West, Walter De La Mare, Noel Streatfeild, J. B. Priestley, Harold J. Laski, John Masefield, Frank Swinnerton, Phyllis Bottome, E. M. Delafeld, G. M. Trevelyan, T. S. Eliot, Dorothy L. Sayers, Rose Macaulay.

Booklist 39:180 Ja 1 '43

"There is something for every kind of reader here. . . The contents being what they are and the intention being what it is and the profits destined for USO, 'London Calling' seems destined to become a well-liked Christmas gift." Iris Barry
+ Books p42 N 15 '42 750w

JAMESON, STORM (MRS GUY CHAPMAN).
Then we shall hear singing; a fantasy in C major. 263p $2.50 Macmillan
(W) 42-22992

A fantasy on the post-war consequences of a defeat by Germany. In a smaller European country, five years after the end of the war, a scientist proceeds to operate on a whole people, removing the higher functions of the brain without injuring the body. The result is at first cooperation with the conqueror; then as the effect of the experiment wears off memory returns, and with it the reawakening of human dignity.

"This simple narrative, flowing as quietly as a small brook, speaks in its serene fashion of a most horrible thing—the civil murder of a whole nation. . . The author herself calls this story a fantasy. It has a singular smell of probability for all and it has, too, a remarkable power to make one hate as passionately as the writer does—these intolerable Germans and all like them who must forever prove to themselves that they are greater than other people." Iris Barry
+ Books p10 O 25 '42 650w

"With clarity, courage, and good characterization, author expresses tragedy and bitterness of the defeated nation." Dorothy Reading
+ Library J 67:682 Ag '42 70w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford
Manchester Guardian p3 N 6 '42 100w
Nation 155:457 O 31 '42 320w

"Miss Jameson's new book is a powerful, somewhat confused allegory of Fascist conquest. . . The book is good and, in spots, beautifully written, but some may think prostrate Slovakia not a subject for mysticism."

+ New Repub 107:554 O 26 '42 120w

"There is no novelty of vision here, and invention sadly fails to compensate for the lack of it." Philip Toynbee
New Statesman & Nation 24:359 N 28 '42 150w

"Certainly, it is different from the other war novels. Just as certainly it is, in its soundness and sensitiveness, its reach of understanding, its consummate artistry whether as allegory or human story, one that takes its place among the best." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p6 O 4 '42 1350w

"Miss Jameson writes competently and sometimes movingly in this affirmation of faith in the indestructibility of culture, but her thesis is not convincing and, although she is plenty mystical, she fails to create the right mood for her mysticism."

+ New Yorker 18:66 O 3 '42 120w

"The idea of this fantasy on Czechoslovakia is excellent. . . This promising idea, however, is not carried out satisfactorily. Whether Miss Jameson takes too much trouble to write nostalgic dialogues in which the villagers remember their happier past, or whether her mysticism is not sufficiently strong to make her solution plausible, is difficult to decide. Quite often she is a prisoner of her own poetic images." R. R. Plant

+ Sat R of Lit 25:36 O 24 '42 550w

"In 1937 a brilliant novel with a similar theme, Swastika Night, was published by Murray Costantine, in which the disappearance of memory was made plausible by a wholesale destruction of the past and its monuments. Miss Jameson writes with less imagination. There is something pseudo, not only about her scientist, but about his work, and we remain unconvinced. Memory governs more than he is willing to allow. How many of us could perform the simple menial task of lighting a fire without its guidance?" John Hampson
Spec 168:486 N 20 '42 260w

Times [London] Lit Sup p533 O 31 '42 1100w

JANDY, EDWARD C. Charles Horton Cooley, his life and his social theory; with an introd. by Willard Waller. 319p $3 Dryden

B or 92 Cooley, Charles Horton 42-22102

A life and critical analysis of the works of an American sociologist, born 1864, died 1929. The author has based his study on Cooley's files, correspondence, library, and a "journal" kept during forty-six years. Bibliography. Index.

"An interpretive life of Cooley which those interested in his work will find very illuminating." F. N. House

Am Soc R 7:883 D '42 320w

"Comprehensive, sympathetic, and penetrating analysis." J. O. Hertzler

+ Ann Am Acad 225:261 Ja '43 500w

JANE'S All the world's aircraft, 1941; comp. and ed. by Leonard Bridgman. (v31) 558p $19 Macmillan [63s Low]

629.13 Airplanes, Aeronautics, Military (10-8268)

"Jane's 'Aircraft,' like its elder and more famous brother, 'Jane's Fighting Ships,' is published this year for the first time in the United States. . . In the opening 'historical' sections there is a good brief summary of Britain's air war in 1941, but for the other countries there was either little to record or else the facts were unavailable. The civil aviation sections are naturally shrunken; but the main body of the volume, listing, so far as it can be done, all principal types of each manufacturer in every country, is a great parade of the weapons of the new war. For each there is a photograph and the usual technical catalogue of characteristics and performance; for many of the more important, three-view outline drawings are included." Books

Reviewed by Walter Millis
Books p5 S 13 '42 350w

Boston Globe p21 O 14 '42 270w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison
Nation 155:352 O 10 '42 360w

Times [London] Lit Sup p363 J1 25 '42 330w

JANE'S Fighting ships, 1941; ed. by Francis E. McMurtrie. 529p il $19 Macmillan [63s Low]

359 Warships (7-25192)

"Since 1897, 'Jane's Fighting Ships,' a British institution, has recorded, year by year, the astonishing development of the navies of four great powers—the British and the German, and also the United States' and Japanese navies—together with the ups and downs of all lesser navies. The book undertakes to list and describe every fighting ship in the world; in almost every case it shows a photograph of the ship or of the class to which she belongs; identification silhouettes are also given. . . This year the North American edition of Jane's is published by Macmillan, though the printing was done in England and the book is identical with the British edition." Sat R of Lit

"The first issue in the United States of the famous 'Jane,' the annual encyclopedia of the navies of the world, the indispensable reference, recognition and picture book for naval men and naval students, is an event not without its symbolic interest, as well as a great convenience for those who used to have to wait so long for the volume to arrive from England." Walter Millis

+ Books p4 Ag 9 '42 400w

"The compilation of this book has entailed an enormous amount of work and the editor is to be congratulated on having been able to maintain the high standard set in previous editions." F. L. O.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ag 13 '42 850w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison
Nation 155:352 O 10 '42 600w

New Repub 107:262 Ag 31 '42 60w

"For all its authority, the latest volume of Jane's reveals few secrets. The book is the soul of discretion. . . Besides all that, Jane's remains as indelibly British as the Illustrated London News or Punch (the London Charivari). Yet the main peculiarity of the 1941 Jane's, as a record of navies, remains its one-sided presentation of ships. Of course it couldn't present anything else. It is a record of ships and ships are still the fundamental units of sea-going navies."

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:12 Ag 1 '42 1200w

JANIS, SIDNEY. They taught themselves; American primitive painters of the 20th century; foreword by Alfred H. Barr, jr. 236p il $3.50 Dial press

759.1 Painters, American. Painting, American 42-36065

Studies of thirty Americans, self-taught, non-professional painters of the twentieth century, from Joseph Pickett to Horace Pippin. Fifty paintings are reproduced, and portraits of some of the artists. "For long years Mr. Janis has been father confessor to painters lacking formal art education. He bought their works when they needed money. He preached perseverance to those who had become Saint Sebastians to the arrows of ridicule. He patted their backs and listened to their troubles. To sixteen of the thirty in his book he brought first public recognition, exhibition in the Museum of Modern Art. Many of them he 'discovered.'" (Books)

Booklist 38:229 Mr 1 '42

"The heart can be a moving penman. Sidney Janis writes from the heart a new book on American primitive painters of the twentieth century. . . When he writes of their works his sympathy adds keenness to his penetrating eyes. His analyses have a kind of gentle X-ray technique. He sees beneath the surface and he likes what he sees. His reverence does not exclude wit. His pithy summaries can be hilarious. The whole is a vivid exciting account to which is added the grace of freshness. No one else has attempted to write so fully of men and women who wanted to paint so much they taught themselves how." Marie McSwigan

+ Books p2 F 15 '42 650w

Reviewed by M. D. Zabel
Nation 154:260 F 28 '42 300w

"A book as fresh and exciting as the lives, and works, of the artists represented. At the same time it is instructive, in the scrupulous way of a piece of scientific research. And finally it is valuable documentation, for each artist tells his own story, describes the way he works, and elaborates on what he considers art to be." Anita Brenner

+ N Y Times p8 Mr 8 '42 950w

New Yorker 18:60 F 28 '42 40w

JANOWSKY, OSCAR ISAIAH, ed. The American Jew; a composite portrait. 322p $2.50 Harper

296 Jews in the U.S. 42-23786

A symposium on the cultural and economic life of the Jews in this country. Contents: Historical background, by O. I. Janowsky; Judaism and the synagogue, by D. de S. Pool; Jewish education—achievements and needs, by I. B. Berkson; The cultural scene: literary expression, by Marie Syrkin; Hebrew in Jewish culture, by A. S. Halkin; Structure of the Jewish community, by A. G. Duker; Economic trends, by Nathan Reich; Anti-Semitism, by J. J. Weinstein; Current philosophies of Jewish life, by Milton Steinberg; Zionism in American Jewish life, by Sulamith Schwartz; Conclusion, by O. I. Janowsky; Evaluation of the portrait of American Jewish living: The Jewish community and the outside world, by G. N. Shuster; The national being and the Jewish community, by H. M. Kallen. Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 39:131 D 15 '42

"The whole book is enlightening. It should be read for an understanding of our Jewish neighbors." W. C. Kernan

+ Churchman 157:17 Ja 1 '43 300w

Reviewed by J. N. Moody

Commonweal 37:304 Ja 8 '43 600w

"Here is a 'composite portrait,' which, unlike most symposiums, has unity and drive. Though concerned primarily with 'Jewish living in America' and only incidentally with Jewish-Gentile relations, this analysis and evaluation deserves to be read widely by non-Jews as well as by Jews." J. G. McDonald

+ N Y Times p42 N 29 '42 1500w

Social Studies 34:48 Ja '43 30w

"Oscar I. Janowsky, who edited the volume, has juggled the material judiciously and presented it so the reader can maintain a continuity of thought with minimum effort."

+ Spring'd Republican p8 N 25 '42

600w

"An altogether excellent symposium." E. R. Clinchy

+ Survey G 32:58 F '43 650w

JAQUES, MRS FLORENCE (PAGE). Birds across the sky; il. by Francis Lee Jaques. 240p $2.50 Harper

598.2 Birds 42-19882

Altho she acknowledges that she is "not a born ornithologist," the author married one, and her narrative is of her attempts to learn bird names and ways on her field trips with her husband. She includes many anecdotes of famous bird lovers she has met. Illustrated by her husband, who is staff artist at the American museum of natural history.

Booklist 39:28 O 1 '42

Bookmark 4:6 N '42

"'Birds Across the Sky' was not written by Cornelia Otis Skinner, nor by E. B. White, nor by George Jean Nathan. It is not a burlesque. It was written by a woman who all her life has loved the out of doors, and who, under the guidance of her artist-naturalist husband, has discovered that birds mean a good deal to her. . . The descriptive parts will delight any one who has an eye for color, for they are especially well done. Those who have worked in a museum will chuckle at the anecdotes about explorers and scientists. . . Mrs. Jaques does not often reveal the serious side of her nature, but when she does she proves herself capable of deep understanding and direct writing. . . . Lastly, a word about the illustrations. They are superb." G. M. Sutton

+ Books p8 S 6 '42 900w

"With distinction and delicacy of perception Mrs. Jacques conveys the moods of the many places they have visited, the seasons and the endlessly varying individualities of the birds. Her prose, alive and aware, has a poetic quality. She writes with humor and a note of deeper significance born of an increasing sense of the unity of all life and, in these troubled days, a support gained from the strength and radiance of nature." Anita Moffett

+ N Y Times p24 Ag 30 '42 900w

Wis Lib Bul 38:133 O '42

JARDIM, LUIS. Armadillo and the monkey; il. by [the author] tr. by Maria Cimino. [46p] $1.50 Coward-McCann

42-13738

A Brazilian folktale about the armadillo down on his luck, who got a job with Dr Monkey. When the monkey refused to pay the armadillo took his revenge. Illustrated by the author in red, black, and white pictures.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 My 17 '42 250w

"The Brazilian artist and author who tells the story is well known for his work in both fields, in South America. This, so excellently translated by Miss Cimino has won a success on radio programs, but the pictures with their fun and originality double its gayety." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:171 My '42 70w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:882 O 15 '42 40w

New Yorker 18:72 My 23 '42 30w

JARRELL, RANDALL. Blood for a stranger. 82p $2 Harcourt

811

42-22251

"A first volume of poems by a young writer who has distinguished himself as a witty and uncompromising critic of poetry." New Yorker

Reviewed by Elizabeth Drew

Atlantic 170:146 N '42 180w

"Altogether 'it's bad music; but it's what we hear.' Whether the 'bad music' of despair and negation, however honestly and brilliantly set down, constitutes major composition in poetry is debatable. Certainly Mr. Jarrell has as much warmth and understanding and greater technical skill than most of his contemporaries who cry out against the evils of this day." Ruth Lechlitner

Books p22 N 29 '42 900w

Reviewed by P. B. Rice

Nation 156:176 Ja 30 '43 650w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 107:718 N 30 '42 1400w

"In the case of Randall Jarrell's 'Blood for a Stranger' there is shown not only sensitivity and talent but that power of working at his art which is one of the signs of a real poet. But whether he becomes a real poet or not depends on what he does for the next ten years or so. He is only 28, this is his first book, and Virginia Woolf's advice in her 'Letter to a Young Poet' not to publish before 30 might have been valuable in his case. Let us summarize his qualities: he has great promise, he has a good sense of form, he has emotional power, he has music, and, unlike many young contemporaries, he is not long-winded. Like other modernist poets, he often gives us cerebral reactions rather than emotional expression, and he is not free of affectation as 'A Picture in the Paper' shows." M. M. Colum

+ N Y Times p8 N 1 '42 320w

"Many signs of real power and originality are discernible although the Auden wrappings are fairly heavy."

+ New Yorker 18:91 O 1 '42 50w

"'Blood for a Stranger' is a first book by a youthful Southerner who was born to be metaphysical, or was trained to become metaphysical by his immediate forbears, Ransom, Tate, and Warren. His muse is the muse of a brave defeatist determined to see the worm in advance of all things and the graveyard in all events. . . . The resultant self-torment tends to cheat the reader of all enjoyment if that defenseless fellow is asked to join still another funeral and to march with the doleful to the tune of the same old dirge. . . . Your true reader, however, is a more impersonal fellow who turns to books, not for panaceas, but for a new adventure in the art of living through poetry. Such a reader will find occasional rewards in Jarrell's melancholy company and hope for still more in the next volume." Alfred Kreymsborg

Sat R of Lit 25:17 O 10 '42 180w

"Jarrell's style is more personal than original. His manner is still tentative—he expresses unhappiness rather than tragedy—and his eventual goal is uncertain. But he seems to be going his own way (with a hurried nod to Auden), and is already well upon it." L. U.

+ Sat R of Lit 25:11 D 19 '42 450w

JAYNES, CLARE, pseud. of JANE MAYER and CLARA SPIEGEL. Instruct my sorrows. 383p $2.50 Random house

42-36092

When Paul Drummond died he left his widow plenty of money, two young sons, and a mounting fear of loneliness and widowhood. How Jessica lived thru her first year alone and found peace and happiness in the end is told in this story of upper middle class suburban life.

Booklist 38:251 Mr 15 '42

"Written with competence but without distinction, 'Instruct My Sorrows' is calculated to hold the attention of every woman and, I should think, most men, from start to finish. It would seem to be difficult for an author, or in this case a pair of authors, to be glib and penetrating at the same time; yet 'Instruct My Sorrows' is exactly that." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p6 Mr 1 '42 650w

"There are various ways of getting as many words as possible into a book. A novelist might let his characters say 'yes' and 'no' as often as they would in real life. He might discuss what they are having for dinner and what clothes they are wearing. 'Instruct my Sorrows' very conscientiously does all this and nothing much else. It is stuffed with sophisticated sentimentality, small talk, telephone calls and inept love scenes." Marianne Hauser

— N Y Times p25 Mr 8 '42 210w

Reviewed by Bess Jones

Sat R of Lit 25:17 Mr 14 '42 600w

JEFFERS, ROBINSON. Be angry at the sun. 156p $2.50 Random house

811

(W) 41-51990

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"In this his ninth major volume Mr. Jeffers has written what will in all probability stand as the strongest and most profound verses to come out of this war. With extraordinary sensibility to poetic tragedy and with the paradoxical strength of a passionate disinterestedness, he allows the monstrous decay and violence of these times to speak themselves out, and refuses to have any part in them except to 'christen each poem, in dutiful hope of burning off at least the top layer of the time's uncleanness.'" Benjamin Miller

+ Christian Century 59:729 Je 3 '42 850w

"Jeffers's poetry turns out to be better upon reacquaintance than the reviewer remembers it to have been. And the reviewer is not one to overrate this sort of poetry. But it stays more or less the same, without amplification or development. . . . The new narrative poem, Mara, is as bad as ever, if not worse—probably worse. How Jeffers won his reputation on the basis of his narratives I cannot see: they contain some of the worse respectable poetry in English, and couch a humanity too narrow ever to be taken very seriously in poetry or out of it. Elsewhere, in the verse play included in this book and in the short poems, this narrowness does less harm, lacking the space in which to make itself felt." Clement Greenberg

JEFFERS, ROBINSON—Continued

— + Nation 154:289 Mr 7 '42 650w

"That poetry is neither a private monologue nor public speech, and that it is generally 'the worse for being timely,' is Jeffers' contention in the Note with which he prefaces his latest book, apologizing for the unusual number of timely pieces that have found their way into it. The most striking of these (which nevertheless bears out his conviction that the poet should not meddle with matters of current import) is the dramatic poem, 'The Bowl of Blood' . . . In the main, however, Jeffers sticks to his old themes and his familiar style. The volume opens with a narrative in verse that he might have written any time these past twenty years, and the title poem, which brings the book to a close, reiterates the poet's aloofness from man's recurrent follies and crimes, his dedication to the cold lonely passion for truth, however bleak. As he intimated in his prefatory Note, it is the few timeless lyrics that are the most notable, and one can but hope that current evils will not continue to obstruct the larger vision which his singular power evokes." Babette Deutsch

New Repub 106:402 Mr 23 '42 1000w

"The chief difference between 'Be Angry at the Sun' and all the previous volumes is that history has caught up at last with Robinson Jeffers. We come nearer and nearer to utter catastrophe, perhaps to the end of Yeats's Platonic year, and some of Jeffers's violence pales beside today's fact. He speaks more frequently and more openly than before of living men and places; of Hitler often. . . There are few hawks in this book, fewer vivid invented people, more living figures, more doom, and, in varying degrees of poetic power, the same themes announced years ago." John Holmes

+ N Y Times p18 F 22 '42 1250w

Pratt p17 O '42

"The most remarkable work in this book is 'The Bowl of Blood' . . . It is a tense, taut piece of work, packed with imaginative understanding and a rare quality of vision. In it, as in so many of these poems, Jeffers's profound pity for humanity is nobly, sternly expressed. I must not leave this book without calling attention to the tender, pitiful poems in it. They have a dignity and a grave beauty he has never exceeded. . . The long narrative poem 'Mara' has much of his old skill as a story-teller—here he has no rival except John Masefield—but it has not quite the force or the pace he can give to a story; and there is uncertainty as well as subtlety in his handling of the 'deceived and jealous man.' The whole book will confirm any intelligent reader that here is one of the few major poets now writing in English, a man who has his narrownesses and his obliquities but who is fit to sit down, as Yeats desired to sit, with 'Landor and John Donne,' for he has clung, as they, obstinately to his creed." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 25:8 Ap 25 '42 850w

JEFFERSON, HOWARD BONAR. Experience and the Christian faith. 230p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

201 Christianity—Philosophy 42-4879

"It is the author's contention that 'we can transcend the opposition between experimentalism and tradition' and make them work together. 'Natural knowledge is particularly concerned with those features which lend themselves to prediction and control.' Yet this implies two steps of faith: 'The realistic postulate that there is an objective reality which forms the basis of our experimental knowledge,' to which we can justly attribute 'the divine characteristics of trustworthiness and loveliness.' There is no reason why the revelation of God in Christ and in the church should suffer from the spirit of modernism." (Christian Century) Index.

"It is not every day that so thorough a piece of work gets into print. This is a particularly constructive book for the man in the pastorate. He will speak and teach with more accuracy about science and philosophy, and with more circumspection and conviction about revelation. And if he catches the modesty and spirit of this book, he will be all the more true to the kindred points of heaven and home." J. M. Versteeg

+ Christian Century 59:321 Mr 11 '42 410w

"While all readers will not agree with some of the conclusions, the author has a wide knowledge of contemporary theology, and shows his debt in particular to Prof. O. C. Macintosh. This is a significant contribution to modern theology." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 156:16 F 15 '42 200w

"The author is careful to call for distinction between the historic Jesus and 'God incarnate, . . . the Christ of Christian faith.' Similarly he distinguishes between the churches as seen from the 'modern,' 'nominalistic,' 'individualistic,' 'sect-type' perspective, according to which the holiness of the church depends upon 'the distinctively Christian quality of life exemplified by the members,' and on the other hand the characteristically mediaeval 'realistic,' conception of the 'ideal Church universal' as 'divine' and possessing a holiness which transcends the human limitations of its membership; moreover, here again he seems to depreciate the historic actuality in favor of the idealization of religious faith. But, we would ask, if the religious faith of the individual stands in need of an objective norm and objective support, how is this need to be met by a 'divine,' 'eternal Christ,' assurance of whose reality is dependent upon the Christian faith itself? . . . It may seem ungracious in the reviewer to have dealt in so one-sidedly critical a way as, up to this point, I have done with what is a well-written, closely reasoned, highly stimulating, and provocative discussion of religious and philosophical problems of both current interest and abiding importance. There is no 'padding,' and there is not a dull page in the book. It is to be recommended either for supplementary reading for classes in the philosophy of religion or for orientation of ministers in the bearing of present-day philosophical thinking upon fundamental features of the Christian faith and experience." D. C. Macintosh

+ — Crozer Q 19:143 Ap '42 1300w

Reviewed by G. F. Thomas

J Religion 23:59 Ja '43 1850w

JEFFERSON, THOMAS. Jefferson himself; the personal narrative of a many-sided American; ed. by Bernard Mayo. 384p il $4 Houghton B or 92 42-50339

Selections from the mass of Jefferson's own writings, arranged to show the various facets of his interests and characteristics. His education, Jefferson the architect, the farmer, the father, statesman, philosopher, and writer, all are portrayed. The editor is professor of history at the University of Virginia. Index.

Booklist 39:222 F 1 '43

"Dr. Mayo has distilled into a few hundred pages the essence of more than twenty volumes, and the effect is powerful, indeed. But is it any the less true for being concentrated? Jefferson said these things; and if they were scattered widely over eighty-three years and many thousands of pages, they are none the less his thought. The book is the mightiest of texts upon the theory of our political institutions, but it is more, much more. It is also a treatise upon the good life so lucid and so steadfast that it ought to come as a godsend to men of these chaotic times." G. W. Johnson

+ Books p3 D 20 '42 1600w

"No mere compilation performed in a perfunctory manner, but a portrait skillfully executed by an artist. . . A successful work with clear introductory notes that can be enthusiastically added to all libraries." M. P. McKay

+ Library J 67:1012 N 15 '42 100w

Reviewed by Jacques Barzun
Nation 156:135 Ja 23 '43 330w

"Altogether the present volume contains over 700 separate documents, carefully selected and skillfully integrated by Bernard Mayo through interpretative summaries introducing each of the sixteen chapters. The happy result is not only a life-size, detailed picture of Jefferson, but also an over-all view of his world, told in his own vivid words. . . This is the kind of fare on which a reader may feast with ever-increasing appetite." N. G. Goodman
+ N Y Times p5 D 13 '42 1700w

New Yorker 18:60 D 26 '42 30w

Reviewed by C. D. Kean
Spring'd Republican p8 Ja 14 '43 650w
Time 41:84 F 1 '43 800w

JENKINS, WILLIAM FITZGERALD. Man who feared. 255p $2 Gateway
Detective story.

"Lurid is the word for this thriller of financial wickedness, multiple murder and love in moderation, but a sane detective holds the violent material together better than you might expect." Will Cuppy

+ Books p24 D 13 '42 150w

"Although this is a highly improbable story, it has moments when it almost succeeds in being convincing." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p16 N 8 '42 160w

JENNINGS, JOHN EDWARD. Gentleman ranker. 565p $2.75 Reynal

(W) 42-20097

Historical novel dealing with the first part of the French and Indian war. The gentleman ranker is Stephen Trent, a young man about London, suddenly thrown on his own resources by a combination of events. He lost heavily at cards, his father died, his uncle disowned him, and he offended General Braddock. Subsequently he found himself in Virginia, a soldier in the ranks. Sobered by his misfortunes and befriended by an Irish recruiting sergeant and two women of widely differing backgrounds, 'Gentleman Trent' became a very different fellow from the selfish braggart who left London.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (10)
B & T (1) N Y Times (10) RB (1)

Reviewed by Wilson Follett
Atlantic 170:142 O '42 250w
Booklist 39:48 O 15 '42

"Mr. Jennings has written a pageant of Colonial Virginia, and while there is some entertainment in its pages, the force and meaning which could give his novel life and significance are noticeably missing." A. B. Tourtellot

+ Books p10 S 27 '42 450w

"Gentleman Ranker," the third published novel of John Jennings, is a book to get excited about. The distinction and craftsmanship of his writings are things to value and applaud while one revels in the superb entertainment of his story telling. . . The telling of this story in the first person lends it veracity. The beautifully balanced structure, its inevitably right pace, the energy and finish of the writing are factors of its high quality. This is a substantial and satisfying novel and a corking good story to boot." J. W. Riley

+ Boston Globe p19 S 9 '42 750w

"The novel seems divided in its aim. One aim is to revivify in all its details the story of Braddock's campaign. That is well achieved. . . The other aim, to make the story gusty, highly colored, and fervid, is also attained, but in so far as it involves the renaissance of Stephen Trent, it falls just short of plausibility." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 D 26 '42 650w

"Recommended for adult readers." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 67:682 Ag '42 70w
New Repub 107:554 O 26 '42 50w

"There is plenty of research here, but it is never obviously evident to the detriment of the action. A costume piece it is, but a costume piece with warm flesh inside the costume." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 30 '42 850w

"While there is not as much action as we have come to expect in our historical novels—only one battle, one massacre, one escape from the Indians, etc.—the plot moves along in a lively enough narrative style, pleasantly unencumbered by forced local color. The real interest of the book, though, is in the author's clear presentation of a complicated and not too familiar bit of our Colonial history."

+ New Yorker 18:58 S 5 '42 90w

"The publishers mildly describe this chronicle as exuberant. It demands a stronger, a more strenuous, a gaudier adjective. It is what an obscure eighteenth century diarist called obsterpious (sic). It never pauses in its rush; there are no calms between explosions. Such pace might exhaust many a creative talent, but Mr. Jennings never flags. He can top each exploit with another still more redoubtable." C. D. Abbott

+ Sat R of Lit p7 S 5 '42 400w
Wis Lib Bul 38:163 N '42

JENNINGS, LESLIE NELSON. Mill talk and other poems. 72p $2 Fine editions

811

42-17252

"The first collected edition of a poet who is already familiar to readers through many contributions to periodicals. Perhaps the most obvious characteristics of his poetry is its quietness. Mr. Jennings does not 'surprise by a fine excess,' nor does he, like so many of his contemporaries, startle the reader by any experimental forms of expression." Books

"Mr. Jennings is a traditionalist, preferring the sonnet to any other metrical pattern and bringing to it an aristocratic and discriminating taste which gives it a real distinction. Character sketches, descriptions of nature and finely moulded moments of emotional, intellectual and spiritual experience are his themes. His mood in general is reflective and contemplative, and he can evoke it in a mingling of the unexpected and the simple which is very effective." Elizabeth Drew

+ Books p3 O 25 '42 480w

"This is mature and thoughtful verse with a gratifying combination of craftsmanship, ideas and feeling."

+ Christian Century 59:809 Je 24 '42 60w

"One looks in vain for depth or outstanding originality. The nature poems are the usual thing; the religious poems are not strengthened by authentic emotion; the personalized verses find their inspiration in the common themes of death and decay. Admitting this, one may go on to enjoy the facility and smoothness of the lines, usually arranged in formal patterns, and oftenest in sonnet form. Mr. Jennings writes with great ease." E. J. Cronin

+ Poetry 61:516 D '42 180w

JENSEN, LLOYD BRYAN. Microbiology of meats. 252p il $4 Garrard

589.958 Meat—Bacteriology

42-22093

"This monograph is based on many years of experience in applied bacteriology, the most recent of which have been spent as Chief Bacteriologist of one of America's largest meat-packing concerns in Chicago, Swift and Company. . . The monograph starts with Introduction and History followed by discussions of such subjects as nitrate curing, gaseous fermentation of meat products, green discoloration, action of microorganisms on fats, ham souring, microbiology of fresh meats, sausage, bacon, and other meat specialties." Am J Pub Health

JENSEN, L. B.—Continued

"The book is well documented with references to the literature. It should be in the libraries of all food technologists and especially of all those who work for meat preservation concerns. It is also a fine example of the art of book making." F. W. Tanner

+ Am J Pub Health 33:89 Ja '43 250w

Reviewed by J. A. Lorr

J Home Econ 34:743 D '42 150w

JERVIS, MRS VERA MURDOCK STUART
(JANE ENGLAND, pseud). Flowering harvest [Eng title: Flowering veld]. 272p $2 Arcadia [8s 6d Hurst]

42-17985

"A romance about a young English girl surrounded by ominous sights, sounds and people. Gillian was no coward, but she was not resourceful. The rich woman who had brought her out [to Rhodesia] as companion and secretary almost literally threw her to wild animals when she suspected the defection of one of her own admirers. Two or three friends took her in charge and got her another place, all with the best motives, but with results involving Gillian in further slander, real drudgery and finally murder." N Y Times

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p15 S 14 '41 100w

"The horror in this story is not greatly stressed, but the mystery is baffling and its explanation humanly possible." Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p24 O 5 '41 160w

"Miss Jane England's style is strengthening. Her girls are losing their excessive good looks and becoming real people. Her men are acquiring varying and far more definite characteristics, and the strange African atmosphere, as difficult to describe as it is impossible to paint, gradually assumes an all-important role in her newest book, 'The Flowering Veld.' One cannot, unfortunately, say the same for the psychology in this book. Miss England has the art of conveying atmosphere and one still awaits better things from her than the stereotyped love story."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p497 S 28 '40 200w

JOHNS, BESSIE W., comp. See Franklin, B.
Poor Richard comes to life

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. Eight points of post-war world reorganization. (Reference shelf) 126p 90c Wilson, H.W.

940.531 World war, 1939—Peace. Atlantic declaration, Aug 14, 1941. Reconstruction (1939-) (W) 42-11036

"Continuing the discussion introduced in an earlier 'Reference Shelf' volume entitled International Federation of Democracies, the present book analyzes and elaborates the program forecast in the Atlantic Charter and presents an organized body of expert opinion from various points of view, with an extensive bibliography." Christian Century

Christian Century 59:563 Ap 29 '42 50w

Wis Lib Bul 38:96 Je '42

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. Federal price control. (Reference shelf) 266p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

338.5 Prices. World war, 1939—Economic aspects, U.S.—Economic policy (W) 42-4389

"A volume in the Reference Shelf series presenting a general discussion of the subjects of price control and inflation, with the arguments pro and con. Timely material for debaters and general readers. Bibliography." Wis Lib Bul

Christian Century 59:251 F 25 '42 20w

Pratt p9 D '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:42 Mr '42

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. Plans for a post-war world. (Reference shelf) 238p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

940.53144 Reconstruction (1939-) (W) 42-23575

Contains excerpts from speeches and articles dealing with post-war problems. Partial contents: The price of free world victory, by H. A. Wallace; Religious groups and the post-war world, by Louis Minsky; Comparison of three programs for peace in the post-war reconstruction; [British] labor party's plan to win the peace; Job for American higher education, by J. S. Huxley; Should there be a long armistice? by O. G. Villard; World federation, by Norman Thomas. Bibliography.

Christian Century 59:1359 N '42 20w

Reviewed by Alvin Adey

Current Hist 3:454 Ja '43 130w

Wis Lib Bul 38:185 D '42

JOHNSON, CARL GUNNARD. Metallurgy. rev ed 262p il $2.50 Am. tech. soc.

669 Metallurgy 42-12907

Revised edition of a textbook first published in 1938 (Book Review Digest, 1938). "Revision was carried out with the object of improving the presentation and including additional material. Information has been added on bearing alloys, aluminum alloys, copper and copper alloys, alloy steels, cast iron, and heat treatments." (Pref. to the revised ed) Index.

Booklist 38:429 Jl 1 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:41 Jl '42

Pratt p11 D '42

JOHNSON, DOROTHY M. Beulah Bunny tells all. 277p $2.50 Morrow

42-21086

Miss Bunny taught history and English in the Okanasket, Washington, high school, and having no children of her own to worry about, she found herself wondering about how the youngsters whom she taught would turn out. In this volume of more or less connected sketches she tells about some of them and what they did in the years after school.

"Beulah Bunny, school teacher by accident, gambler by intention, is one of the most lovably ruthless meddlers-in-other-people's affairs that you will find between covers. Perhaps you have met her in 'The Saturday Evening Post.'" Page Cooper

+ Books p10 S 27 '42 700w

"One of the best stories has to do with her adventures as Madam Zaza, the fortune teller. The story of the Indian girl who helped the white man is a good one, too. In fact, they are all easy reading, humorous and understanding." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p32 S 27 '42 280w

JOHNSON, DOUGLAS WILSON. Origin of the Carolina bays. 341p il $4.50 Columbia univ. press

551.49 Marshes. Physical geography—South Carolina 42-25048

"Since aerial photographs became abundantly available as a basis for geological studies and as material for illustrations in the popular press, the curious oval depressions of the Carolina coast, locally known as 'bays,' have attracted much attention both among scientists and laymen. The theory that the bays resulted from the bombardment of our planet by a great shower of meteorites [was] proposed by Melton and Schrieffer in 1933. . . . Professor Douglas Johnson, of Columbia University, presents . . . the matured conclusions of one of America's best-qualified geomorphologists concerning the entire problem. . . . He concludes that the bays are of complex origin, the result, not of meteoric impact but of the activity of ground water and wind combined with and influenced by the presence of small lakes." (Scientific Bk Club R) Index.

School & Society 56:392 O 24 '42 20w

"This report is a model of scientific writing and a perfect example of the use of the scientific method of thought."

+ Scientific BK Club R 13:2 N '42 210w

JOHNSON, EDITH L. Log cabin children; il. by Marion Downer. 191p $2 Lothrop 42-13423

"Story of pioneer life on the shores of Lake Michigan during War of 1812, in which a family is saved by friendly Indians." Library J

"There is nothing unusual about it except a certain flavor that suggests it might have been a true episode handed down in some diary. Readers of nine and ten frequently show a liking for such easy, homely, and slow-moving frontier stories. . . For large libraries or those interested in the particular locality." J. L. Sauer

Library J 67:534 Je 1 '42 70w

Wis Lib Bul 38:139 O '42

JOHNSON, MARGARET SWEET, and JOHNSON, MRS HELEN (LOSSING). Runaway puppy; il. by [the authors]. 88p $1.75 Harcourt

(W) 42-6281

Heather, a West Highland terrier, ran away from his comfortable home because he did not like his mistress' Siamese cat, and his dignity was offended at having to wear rubbers and a raincoat. For children six to nine.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 Mr 22 '42 170w

"Good reading for children six to nine. The pictures of the little dog, one on every page, are full of fun and life." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 67:226 Mr 1 '42 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 15 '42 70w

JOHNSON, MARGARET SWEET, and JOHNSON, MRS HELEN (LOSSING). Stablemates; the story of Dick and Daisy; il. by [the authors]. 104p $1.75 Harcourt

(W) 42-21763

Story of two colts born on a Virginia estate, where they were trained as hunters. Due to an accident they were separated, and each mourned for the other, until a fortunate circumstance brought them together again for good. For readers nine to twelve.

"A sound, sympathetic horse story. For children needing practice in reading, its type is easy on their eyes." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 S 6 '42 300w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 37:118 N 20 '42 30w

"Short, appealing story with interesting descriptions of how hunters are trained and how a hunt is conducted." M. N. Miller

+ Library J 67:741 S 1 '42 60w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:884 O 15 '42 20w

"The story has a fine sincerity and is written with an appreciation and understanding of horses that will appeal strongly not only to readers from 8 to 12 but to older horse lovers. The simple, direct style and large type make this an excellent book to put into the hands of the less able readers. The description of the training of a hunter is interesting and authentic, and the drawings have the charm and lively quality we are accustomed to find in the work of these two artists." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 3 '43 200w

JOHNSON, MARION (MRS MARION ROLFE [JOHNSON] DEITRICK). Johnny Mouse of Corregidor; il. by Henry de Wolfe. 134p $1.50 Bobbs

42-22576

True story of a little wild mouse which the author captured and tamed when she was a little girl living in Manila, where her soldier father was stationed. For readers of six to eight.

"One of the best mouse-stories I have read—and there are some mighty good mouse stories for seven years and younger—this true tale does not hitch itself to the headlines, as you might think from the title, by taking place at the present time. . . Glimpses of Cavite, Corregidor and the high jungles of Bataan are real in the story, which gives a clear idea of army life as it seems to a child." M. L. Becker

+ Books p24 N 15 '42 300w

Cath World 156:376 D '42 90w

JOHNSON, MARTHA, pseud. See Lansing, E. H.

JOHNSON, MELVIN MAYNARD, and HAVEN, CHARLES TOWER. Automatic arms. 344p il $4.50 Morrow

623.4225 Firearms, Automatic 42-36006

History of the development of automatic weapons, giving detailed information on their mechanics, on how to keep them clean, and on how to use them. Appendixes contain descriptive charts, lists of ammunition, statistical data, and working drawings. Index.

Booklist 38:185 F 1 '42

"Because of its highly technical nature, lucid though it is and interlarded with practical observations, 'Automatic Arms' is hardly for the layman but rather for the specialist, student, Army personnel or inventor who will find it a veritable encyclopedia. The section entitled Factors Affecting Design will prove invaluable to designers and manufacturers; that dealing with Malfunctions and Stoppages should be pored over by every soldier to whom an automatic gun is assigned, and those covering Combat notes, Fire Effect and Automatics in the Squad should be prescribed reading for Army officers. The entire volume reads as if it could have been issued by the Army Ordnance Association as a voluminous, complete and noteworthy textbook on the most valuable offensive and defensive weapon in modern warfare." P. J. Searles

+ Books p13 F 1 '42 550w

Pratt p21 My '42

JOHNSON, MELVIN MAYNARD, and HAVEN, CHARLES TOWER. For permanent victory; the case for an American arsenal of peace. 246p il $2.50 Morrow

623.4 U.S.—Army—Ordnance and ordnance stores. International law and relations. Disarmament 42-24601

In the opinion of the authors, a quick review of American history would show that the United States has consistently in times of peace neglected to prepare for war, that our army and navy have been treated with indifference or contempt, our weapons have been allowed to become obsolete. Their plea is for a continuation of military strength in future peace times.

Booklist 39:116 D 1 '42

"Only through eternal vigilance can peace be preserved. That is the doctrine of two thoughtful writers." P. J. Searles

+ Books p22 N 8 '42 750w

"Capt Johnson and Mr Haven, who have written before on more technical military subjects, do an unusually convincing job with their discussion of the American people's attitude in every major conflict in which this country has been involved and their appeal to the people to make certain that it does not happen again is a most urgent one."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 21 '42 550w

JOHNSON, OSA HELEN (LEIGHTY) (MRS CLARK HALLAM GETTS). Snowball; adventures of a young gorilla; il. by Arthur August Jansson. 52p $1.50 Random house

Gorillas—Legends and stories 42-25586

Story of a baby gorilla which the Johnsons found in the Belgian Congo and adopted. Snowball had the idea that little children were very much like himself, and were only white apes, but the Johnsons were his first loves.

JOHNSON, O. H. L.—Continued

The story tells of his mischievous behavior up to the time when he went to live in the Central Park zoo.

"It is unfortunate that sentence structure is often awkward, and that book contains several typographical errors. Snowball's experiences and antics while living with the Johnsons are entertaining and amusing. If one overlooks the mentioned deficiencies, book can be recommended." Claire Nolte

+ — Library J 67:1069 D 1 '42 80w
Wis Lib Bul 38:188 D '42

JOHNSON, RALPH PAINE. The steam locomotive. 502p il $3.50 Simmons-Boardman 621.131 Locomotives 42-23569

The "theory, operation, and economics" of the steam locomotive, written by the chief engineer of the Baldwin locomotive works. Comparisons with Diesel locomotives are included. For master mechanics and engineers. Index.

Booklist 39:179 Ja 1 '43
Library J 67:953 N 1 '42 30w

JOHNSON, SIDDIE JOE. New town in Texas; il. by Margaret Ayer. 301p $2.25 Longmans
(W) 42-21563

Abigail, who came to Texas in a covered wagon, often bewailed the fact that she was "born too late" for the days of Alamo or the Civil war. But she did watch the growth of a new town, she saw cattle drives, Indians, and bountiful harvests. And when she saw the first train come thru she felt that at last she was helping to make history. For girls of nine to eleven.

Booklist 39:53 O 15 '42
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 D 27 '42 450w
Christian Century 59:1360 N 4 '42 10w
"Freshly written story of family life in pioneer community which would be usable where more pioneer material is needed for girls from nine to eleven." E. W. Turpin
+ Library J 67:911 O 15 '42 70w

JOHNSON, THOMAS HERBERT, ed. Men of tomorrow; nine leaders discuss the problems of American youth; with prefatory notes; intro. by Allan V. Heely. 247p $2 Putnam 901 Civilization (W) 42-22089

Nine lectures given to the student body of the Lawrenceville school during 1941 and 1942. Contents: Germany and America, 1492-1942, by S. E. Morison; Statecraft under a written constitution, by R. H. Jackson; America's responsibility in world history, by Herbert Agar; The role of prophetic religion in the world crisis, by Reinhold Niebuhr; Education in war time in a democracy, by J. P. Baxter; Literature and the arts, by John Erskine; Science and youth, by E. A. Hooton; A free press in war time, by Arthur Krock; Manners and civilization, by P. S. Buck.

Booklist 39:96 N 15 '42
"This book records an interesting experiment which panned out well. Enough of its history to satisfy is related in Mr. Heely's beguiling notes." G. N. Shuster
+ Books p22 N 1 '42 650w

"Recommended for public libraries and senior high schools." E. S. Brown
+ Library J 67:793 S 15 '42 110w

"It would not be true to say that these lectures were oversimplified for their original audiences, that they were 'written down.' The concepts are there, and the doctrines. But it is true that the medium for which they were designed is reflected. Prose for speaking is not prose for reading, in such matters as these. Mr. Agar's is a particular example, yet Mr. Johnson's prefatory note says it was particularly powerful as an address. Recognizing this, however, this collection of lectures carries a good freight of weighable words, clear expressions of deeply felt convictions by nine people of note." C. B. Palmer

+ — N Y Times p26 O 18 '42 750w

JOHNSON, W. BOLINGBROKE, pseud. See Bishop, M. G.

JOHNSON, WILLIAM HARDING, and NEW-KIRK, LOUIS VEST. Graphic arts. 160p il $2.50; school ed pa $1.32 Macmillan

655.3 Printing, Practical. Engraving. Book-binding. Paper making and trade. Photography (W) 42-9311
"Covers printing, linoleum and woodcuts, lithography, silk screen printing, bookmaking, papermaking and photography. Intended for school instruction, but its excellent photographic illustrations and explicit directions give it a wider usefulness." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

Booklist 38:436 Jl 15 '42
School & Society 55:196 F 14 '42 30w
Wis Lib Bul 38:117 Jl '42

JOHNSON, WILLIAM HARDING, and NEW-KIRK, LOUIS VEST. Metal crafts. 152p il $2.50; school ed pa $1.20 Macmillan 671 Metal work

"Based on extensive study of industry courses in progressive school systems, containing 146 pictures—photographs, small directional diagrams and full-page diagrams—this introductory course describes the principles of using tools and employing skills, of mastering procedures of bench metalwork, shaping iron and steel, metal spinning and foundry work, such as may be done with the equipment of a modern technical school." Books

Booklist 39:195 Ja 15 '43
Books p25 S 13 '42 60w
School & Society 55:680 Je 13 '42 50w
Wis Lib Bul 38:159 N '42

JOHNSTON, GEORGE HENRY. Action at sea: the saga of the Sydney [Eng title: Lioness of the seas]. 185p il $2.75 Houghton [10s 6d Gollancz]

940.545 World war, 1939—Naval operations. Sydney (cruiser) (W) 42-36113

A "biography of a fighting ship," H.M.A.S. Sydney II. Except for an epilogue the book was written and in the hands of the printer before the announcement of the loss of the Sydney in December, 1941. "This is not an official record. . . It is almost entirely written from the stories of the men of the Sydney, from the stories they heard from men in other ships, and from various other eye-witness reports. It is the story of seven months of naval war in the Mediterranean—from June, 1940, to January, 1941—and of the part played by H.M.A.S. Sydney in that campaign. But, because team work is so essential to the success of any naval operation, the story of the Sydney is also the story of many other ships." (Intro)

Booklist 38:272 Ap 1 '42
Bookmark 3:10 My '42

"An eminently readable and trustworthy account . . . a book for which lovers of fighting ships will be grateful." J. M. Minifie
+ Books p12 F 22 '42 360w

"This is one of the best popular books about the war at sea that we have had." A. W. J.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 29 '41 220w

"The 'biography of a fighting ship,' a story which is thrilling, straightforward and never grandiloquent—which is, in short, just what the story of a ship should be."
+ N Y Times p20 Mr 22 '42 500w

"Crisp and graphic, though the necessary wartime excisions make it slightly spotty."
+ New Yorker 18:70 F 21 '42 40w

"'Action at Sea' is about as good a war book as a book written during the war can be. It sticks well to the point, does not indulge in too much fulmination about the unpleasant characteristics and action of the enemy, contains practically no fine writing and wide sweeping general statements, but has a great deal of new information." Fletcher Pratt
+ Sat R of Lit 25:13 F 28 '42 200w

"This is everybody's book. Mr. Johnston is an accomplished writer, modest, vivid, and efficient. His account of the sad business of Oran could not be bettered. Taranto is brilliantly described, but the best thing in the book is the story of the decoying, pursuit, and sinking of the 'Bartolomeo Colleoni.' This is first rate. . . . There are a number of good photographs, and the book is well produced." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec 167:288 S 19 '41 290w

Spring'd Republican p7e F 15 '42 300w
Times [London] Lit Sup p343 J1 19 '41 100Jw

Wis Lib Bul 38:86 My '42

JOHNSTON, SAMUEL PAUL. Flying squadrons. 234p il $3.50 Duell

353.4 Aeronautics, Military (W) 42-15757

This "graphic history of the U. S. army air forces" is in three parts: part one: Flying squadrons, their mission and make-up; part two, their background and history; and part three, (more than half the book) pictures.

Booklist 38:420 J1 1 '42

"Here seem to be all the makings of another dull and meaningless book slapped together for the aviation market, mostly juvenile. And yet, the total effect of Johnston's books is stirring and absorbing." Wolfgang Lange-wiesche

+ Books p18 Je 21 '42 550w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:894 O 15 '42 10w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:36 J1 '42

JOHNSTON, STANLEY. Queen of the flat-tops; the U.S.S. Lexington and the Coral Sea battle. 270p il maps $3 Dutton

940.545 Lexington (airplane carrier). Coral sea, Battle of, 1942 (W) 42-23183

The complete story of the aircraft carrier Lexington, from her beginnings to the dramatic end in the battle of the Coral sea. The author, a reporter and trained naval and aerial engineer, was aboard the Lexington on her last cruise. Official U.S. navy photographs, and drawings by Gary Sheahan. Maps on end papers.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (12)
N Y Times (5) RB (2)

Reviewed by William McFee

Atlantic 170:152 D '42 270w

Booklist 39:99 N 15 '42

"It is a fine piece of reporting. Far more, it furnishes a comprehensive review and analysis of the vexed question of carrier versus battleship and of the whole problem of carriers under air attack and gives for the layman an understanding view of the vast and complicated organization of an aircraft carrier in battle action. It is all here, in terms of vivid narration and stark reality." Lincoln Colcord

+ Books p1 O 18 '42 1800w

"This is easily one of the most coherent and illuminating battle stories that the war has yet produced." H. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 N 9 '42 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '42

"A thrilling book." Lena Ruppert

+ Library J 67:843 O 1 '42 110w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:895 O 15 '42 10w

"The value of Mr. Johnston's book lies in his fascinating details about the new warfare he watched. . . [It] offers something no other correspondent has been able to write—a tale of war pioneers in action." Marcus Duffield

+ Nation 155:485 N 7 '42 550w

"Mr. Johnston is not another W. L. White. His book is pedestrian writing, but nevertheless fascinating because of the nature of his material. No one after reading it can doubt that our naval planes as a whole are very good indeed; that our naval pilots and other personnel are as fine fighting men as the world has ever seen; and that their morale is exceedingly high. The details of life on the Lexington will interest all landlubbers, from the fact that sailors eat in cafeterias at any time they please during a two-hour period of service for each meal, down to the news that during an air engagement, all the ship's people not engaged elsewhere crowd into one room and listen to the battle on the radio, as the fliers talk to each other or to the carrier." E. B.

+ New Repub 107:585 N 2 '42 600w

"In addition to seeing clearly and writing well, Mr. Johnston brings to modern naval warfare the training of an engineer. He does not indulge in melodramatic flights. He keeps his feet on deck. Any one who has leafed through as many as a dozen books attempting to describe action in the present war must have discovered that the most heroic and adventurous deeds are not always exciting to read about. The secret of making them exciting is not to stand outside and admire. It is to get inside and share the tension of the men doing the deeds and the release when the deed is done. It is reasonable to say that Mr. Johnston has done this." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p1 O 18 '42 1500w

"The author turns in one of the best battle stories so far, a fine job of observation and plain writing."

+ New Yorker 18:90 O 17 '42 90w

"Their adventures are duly recorded with humor and good sense. With the beginning of the great Japanese movement that came to an end in the series of actions called the Battle of Coral Sea the pace of the book speeds up. The humor and good sense gives place to a feeling of urgency and desperate endeavor. Unfortunately it also gives place to an obscurity which is not the author's fault, but all too clearly the work of the censors in Washington. . . . The emotional side, the personal picture, down to the loss of the old ship and the deaths of so many of the members of King Neptune's court, has never been better presented on any occasion. But as an account of the action much of the book has already been rendered obsolete by the navy's habit of withholding permission to publish from one writer and giving it to another a couple of weeks later. Thus Johnston is forced to refer to Carrier II; while the book was still in proof the navy let us know this was the Yorktown. But even with these unavoidable defects the book remains about the best personal narrative that has come out of this war and a good companion piece to 'They Were Expendable.'" Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 25:18 O 24 '42 450w

Wis Lib Bul 38:185 D '42

JOINT COMMITTEE OF THE AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION, NATIONAL EDUCATION ASSOCIATION AND NATIONAL COUNCIL OF TEACHERS OF ENGLISH. Basic book collection for high schools. 193p pa $2 A.L.A.

016 School libraries (high school). Bibliography—Best books (W) 42-36155

"An annotated list of 1500 titles. . . Includes 300 fiction titles, 150 biographies and books on new topics such as consumer education and national defense. Arrangement by classification number as in Standard Catalog for High School Libraries. Library of Congress and Wilson card numbers and simple classification are given. Same format as Horton's Buying List of Books for Small Libraries." Booklist

Booklist 38:301 Ap 15 '42

Pratt p7 O '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:82 My '42

JOLAS, EUGENE, ed. and tr. Vertical; a year-book for romantic-mystic ascensions. 201p il $2.75; ltd autog ed on rag pa $4.50 Gotham bk. mart, 51 W. 47th st, N.Y.

808.81 Poetry—Collections

"'Vertical' is described by Eugene Jolas as a 'Yearbook for Romantic-mystic Ascensions.' The idea of Verticalism appeared in Mr. Jolas's famous magazine Transition in 1932, with many manifestoes and the other signs of a 'movement.' [In this anthology] Raymond Larsen is included as a Catholic poet. Kay Boyle is there as the recorder and poet of flight, so is Apollinaire in his 'Icarian Poem.' Hugo, Novalis, Kleist, Blake, and many other writers of mystic experience are included." N Y Times

"What we need at this time is neither surrealist hysteria nor transcendental verbalizing, but sharpened senses, a more alert and sensitive consciousness, a surer wisdom. Some of the poets and sages whom Mr. Jolas quotes at the end of his book can teach us more in a couplet or a parable than the whole 'College de Sociologie' and all the Verticalists taken together. Mr. Jolas, seeking 'the marvelous of the skies' should remember one myth that is not exactly verticalist: the story of the giant Antaeus, who renewed his strength by contact with the earth. The superb dawn-cloud floating before Mr. Jolas's megalomaniacal eyes is very like a camel—or is it a whale?—but much more like a toasted marshmallow, a bloated thing, sweet and sticky, and spongy inside." Babette Deutsch

— Books p14 Mr 15 '42 480w

Reviewed by George Barker
Nation 154:170 F 7 '42 700w

"It seems to me that Mr. Jolas is entirely insensitive to the ordinary use of the English language. . . . Born of French and German parents, Mr. Jolas writes English as if he were translating from either, with a dictionary. His notion of style seems to be a poetic Esperanto. His notion of emotion seems to be a neo-romantic theosophy. What he is doing actually is to get everything into his dragnet of literature. He has been the most generous editor; he has printed many pages of great work that would not have been published except for him. He deserves the gratitude of many writers. But the 'Vertical' anthology is, to me, a confusing summary of our life." P. M. Jack

— + N Y Times p9 Mr 15 '42 440w

Reviewed by E. S. Forgotson
Poetry 61:397 O '42 600w

JONES, FRANKLIN DAY, ed. Engineering encyclopaedia. 2v 732;733-1431p il $8 Industrial press

620.3 Engineering—Dictionaries 41-12806

"A condensed encyclopaedia and mechanical dictionary for engineers, mechanics, technical schools, industrial plants, and public libraries, giving the most essential facts about 4500 important engineering subjects." Subtitle

Management R 30:354 S '41 20w
N Y New Tech Bks 26:54 O '41

JONES, IDWAL. Vineyard. 279p $2.50 Duell 42-24772

A story of vineyards and wine making in California from the opening of the century to the coming of Prohibition.

Booklist 39:121 D 1 '42

"'The Vineyard' is undoubtedly a regional novel, because it is about a region which could as easily be Burgundy or the Rhone as Napa Valley, but it is a rare one because it makes the people who live in that region not only alive in themselves but a true part of the soil they live on. . . . It is in a completely simple and real way a long song, and it is as heartening as wine to read." M. F. K. Fisher

+ Books p5 N 15 '42 1050w

"'The Vineyard' is a fine, interesting and stimulating story." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p7 N 1 '42 950w

JONES, INIGO, pseud. Albatross murders. 256p $2 Arcadia 42-2907

Detective story.

"This might do in an emergency, if you don't mind goodness." Will Cuppy
Books p10 D 21 '41 120w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p14 F 1 '42 180w

JONES, LEALON N., ed. Eve's stepchildren [a coll. of folk Americana]. 310p il $3.50 Caxton printers

917.3 U.S.—Social life and customs. U.S.—Social conditions 42-5913

"A book of American folkways. . . . Unlike the volumes in the Rivers of America and American Folkways series, it is not a study of a particular basin or region by one author; it is made up of some twenty-eight essays by various hands. The geographical distribution is wide. There are accounts of the transient hop pickers in the State of Washington, the descendants of the French in the Mississippi Valley, the Scandinavian farmers in Minnesota and the Hungarian farmers in Wisconsin, the Hutterites of the sunny Jim River country of South Dakota, the derelict driftwood of Chicago's 'bumhemia.'" (Christian Science Monitor) Index.

Booklist 38:424 J1 1 '42

Reviewed by Arna Bontemps
Books p8 Ag 2 '42 550w

"Like heaven in our infancy, folkways lie about us everywhere. We encounter them everywhere every day. Those who have encountered them in this book have observed and recorded well. Every essay is eminently worth reading, and most of them are very well written indeed." H. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 Ap 2 '42 360w

"The collection ranges from amateurish to good. So-so photographs."

+ — New Yorker 18:80 Mr 14 '42 50w
Wis Lib Bul 38:86 My '42

JONES, LESLIE ALLEN. Eli Terry, clock-maker of Connecticut; il. by Robert Doremus. 276p $2 Farrar

Terry, Eli—Juvenile literature (W) 42-18720

Fictionized biography of Eli Terry, the Connecticut farm boy who became one of the first and best-known clockmakers in America. For boys in grades seven to nine. Bibliography.

Booklist 39:35 O 1 '42

"Excellent book written in an absorbing style. Gives many details of early clockmaking in this country and fine picture of everyday life just after the Revolution." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 67:796 S 15 '42 70w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:891 O 15 '42 20w

New Yorker 18:113 D 12 '42 50w

Wis Lib Bul 38:191 D '42

JONES, LOUIS CLARK. Clubs of the Georgian rakes. 259p il $2.75 Columbia univ. press

367 Clubs. England—Social life and customs. England—Moral conditions 42-20252

"Eighteenth-century England was the great age of the tavern and the coffee house. Within the walls of these establishments were formed the many clubs of Georgian England. It is not surprising to learn that among these clubs there were some more convivial and less innocent than the rest. Mr. Jones has spent a decade investigating the more notorious of these groups. He has read contemporary records, visited some of the scenes of their activities and has recorded the fruits of his labors in this slim volume." (N Y Times) Bibliographies. Index.

"This is as lively and entertaining a monograph as was ever suggested by the director of a seminar or ever published by a sedate university press. So lively, indeed, is the subject that the author finds it necessary in many of his pages to skate gingerly over the very thin ice of gross improprieties. He manages, however, to steer a middle course between scholarly frankness and reticent good taste." S. C. Chew
+ Books p14 N 1 '42 450w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 59:885 Jl 15 '42 900w

"The student of the eighteenth century will welcome a scholarly addition to the literature, with its carefully sifted fact and valuable bibliography. The layman reading these genial pages will discover why the eighteenth century can be so fascinating to study." Thomas Lask
+ N Y Times p32 O 25 '42 800w

JONES, PERCY KYNRYN. Man shall know.
257p $2 Dorrance
230 Christianity 42-17887

"Convinced that scientists and religious leaders have made a sad mess of matters, the author undertakes to clear away their contrasting but almost equally obnoxious systems and make a fresh start with a true understanding of the nature of man and of the religion of Jesus." Christian Century

"However much truth one may find in this book... one need not look here for intellectual humility."

Christian Century 59:959 Ag 5 '42 160w

"Was it William James who said our ignorance is abysmal, our knowledge infinitesimal? Anyway, the author of this book, a priest of the church, has not added anything to knowledge in spite of his ambitious title. His course of training for orders certainly did not stabilize his thinking; for while he expresses some clever ideas as to man's relation to God, they are chaotic and disconnected. The best chapters are the last two, on Meekness and Fear. They would indicate he had got his stride as he approached the end of his task." A. L. B-C.
— + Churchman 156:31 N 1 '42 90w

JONES, TOM BARD. Short history of ancient civilization. 378p il maps $2.25 Harper 901 Civilization, Ancient 41-11310

"A . . . history of the ancient world by a professor at the University of Minnesota, who states, that, while all of the factual information necessary for a beginning college course has been included, emphasis has been placed on causes rather than on events." Wis Lib Bul

"A very helpful handbook on ancient civilization, which should find a ready place in any classroom or study. The little volume has been well edited. The few errors that appear from a casual reading are misprints easily corrected in a later edition." H. E. Robbins

+ Am Hist R 47:925 Jl '42 210w
Wis Lib Bul 38:29 F '42

JONES, VICTOR. Metropolitan government. 364p maps $4 Univ. of Chicago press 352 Municipal government. Local government 42-12520

It is the author's belief that present day metropolitan areas need the services of integrated government. "He has traversed the field and has assembled and analyzed the basic considerations affecting the problem. He has discussed the underlying factors of confusion—technical, social, economic, and political—in different cities. He has analyzed the various inventions and implements of government that have been proposed or tried as solutions of the problem. He has traced the cobweb of legal considerations involved. He has arrayed the arguments about urban integration, pro and con, in general and in specific instances." (Pref) List of bibliographies. Table of cases. Index.

"A compact, reliable summary. . . More fully than any other book up to date it deals with the political difficulties that arise when metropolitan integration is attempted. On the whole it is a good book, albeit one that would have been improved by more careful revision and some candid outside criticism." William Anderson

+ — Am J Soc 48:276 S '42 500w

"The book is well written and is profusely annotated. Although in no way original in its main conclusions, it is a very effective restatement of the problem, and should be widely read. For having sponsored this work, Professor Merriam and the Social Science Research Committee of the University of Chicago deserve the gratitude of all persons interested in the progress of municipal government." Paul Studenski

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:961 O '42 800w

"An exceedingly interesting and scholarly summary." Paul Blanshard

+ Ann Am Acad 222:219 Jl '42 500w

"This volume is of great importance for students of law and government. . . A few minor inaccuracies have been noted, but altogether, the author has done his work with the thoroughness and dispassionateness characteristic of the best technique in research, and with a realization that sound organization of a community for effective government is of vital concern in the democratic process." Murray Seasongood

+ Harvard Law R 56:661 Ja '43 1600w

JORDAN, EDWARD CONRAD, and others. Fundamentals of radio; editor, W. L. Everitt. 400p il $5; to schools $3.75 Prentice-Hall 621.384 Radio. Electric circuits (W) 42-17756

"The purpose of this volume is to present the basic material of radio required for all types of radio work, both civil and military. The authors have covered each topic in such a way as to make clear the functioning of a complete radio system, and they have also laid the foundation for a more advanced study of the subject." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 39:4 S '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:43 Jl '42

Pratt p21 D '42

JORDAN, ELIZABETH GARVER. Young John takes over. 306p $2.50 Appleton-Century
(W) 42-11119

When John Campbell the Fourth lost his father he discovered that he had inherited not only his father's law practice and his well-known fine ethics, but his enemies as well. The story is of young John's attempts to rid his city of corrupt politics, altho he had fallen in love with the leading grafter's daughter.

"The pattern of the story is a bit obvious, and the development of the love story not as subtle as this author has managed in some of her novels." Lisle Bell

Books p16 Ap 26 '42 230w

"A reader looking for well-mannered entertainment far from the subject of the war should find 'Johnny Takes Over' fills the bill satisfactorily." B. S.

+ N Y Times p23 Je 7 '42 380w

Wis Lib Bul 38:97 Je '42

JORDAN, HENRY P., ed. Problems of post-war reconstruction; foreword by Stephen Duggan. 292p $3.25; pa $2.75 Am. council on public affairs

940.53144 Reconstruction (1939-) 42-10894

Collection of lectures given at New York University. In them "Oscar Falmes makes a well-reasoned plea for the continuance of small states in the future. More academically, Hans Aufrecht writes of the European minorities problem. The usual things are said on Latin American trade, Pan-Americanism, and hemisphere defense. Economic problems are examined by Lois MacDonald, George S. Hirschland, Richard Schueller, and Harvey Pinney.

JORDAN, H. P.—Continued

The volume concludes with an amusing chapter in which Charles Hodges examines the probable causes of World War III." Ann Am Acad

"Within the limits set, the task has been competently, and in spots brilliantly, done." R. A. Norem

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:1174 D '42 600w

Reviewed by H. W. Briggs

Ann Am Acad 223:223 S '42 120w

"You will get from the thirteen papers no blueprint for a brave new world, but you will get a deal of hard-headed analysis of specific problems which somebody will have to tackle soon. The contributors are six specialists in their several fields. No consensus is to be expected—or even desired—in such a book, but the contributors seem to be as one in urging that reconstruction must place a limit on national sovereignty and that the United States will have to assume responsibility for leadership if the post-war world is to be a place in which any of us will want to live."

+ Books p38 N 15 '42 150w

Reviewed by Harold Strauss

Nation 155:356 O 10 '42 650w

Reviewed by Irwin Edman

New Repub 107:504 O 19 '42 600w

Reviewed by Phillips Bradley

Survey G 32:27 Ja '43 140w

JORDAN, MILDRED A. (MRS J. LEE BAUSER). Apple in the attic; a Pennsylvania legend. 200p $2 Knopf

(W) 42-20095

Novel of the Pennsylvania Dutch Country. It is the story of Jacob, whose violent temper was directed mainly against his meek little wife, Emma. Because Emma forgot to bring two dollars worth of schnitz to the Reading market Jacob vowed never to speak to her again. And he never did.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (3) N Y Times (7) RB (1)

"As its subtitle tells us, this book has the quality of a folk-tale or myth. It is not to be recommended to those who like their fiction sophisticated, swift and exciting. It is simple, direct, almost 'innocent,' one might say, on the surface, but its roots are in reality and in the changeless and dateless truths of human nature and of the soil." Elizabeth Drew

+ Atlantic 170:150 O '42 150w

Booklist 39:33 O 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p10 S 13 '42 700w

"Although characters are slightly overdrawn, the customs of the people are interestingly woven into plot, making it very readable. Recommended." Katherine Shorey

+ Library J 67:739 S 1 '42 70w

"'Apple in the Attic' is a beautifully done little story. Its style is as simple and direct as a Christmas legend. There is some direct Pennsylvania Dutch dialect, and dialect of any kind puts a great many people off, including this reviewer. But Miss Jordan uses it sparingly and to good effect. There are humor and lightsomeness and good cheer in the tale to counterbalance its pathos. The whole is a simple, innocent, natural story that will appeal to the warmth in many people—not a large or important book, but possessed of a savory human quality that passes the bounds of its provincial setting." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p6 S 13 '42 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 38:138 O '42

JORDAN, MRS NINA (RALSTON). American dolls in uniform; il. by the author. 238p $2 Harcourt

649.55 Dolls

(W) 42-19722

Describes the making of fifteen dolls, every one of them boy-dolls, and each one in some important part of this country's service. The materials are all easily procured, most of them being made of articles found in any household. Contents: Soldier; Sailor; Airman;

Cowboy; Trapper; Fireman; Policeman; Farmer; Deep sea fisherman; Lumberjack; Railroad engineer; Mailman; Clown; Balloon man; Street cleaner. Other ideas. For children nine and older.

Booklist 39:16 S '42

"The text is spirited and indirectly tells about the work the character is doing. Methods of making clothes and accessories are ingenious, and it seems as if scarcely a bit of junk around the house could not be made to represent something in miniature, from a tobacco sack for a sailor's seabag to a trapper's cap based on half a walnut shell covered with trimmed-off bits of any fur you can find. This salvage element adds to the book's time-likeness." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ag 16 '42 230w

"With the holidays ahead, and weather for indoor fun in the offing, here's a book full of suggestions." F. B. Sloane

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 22 '42 180w

Churchman 156:16 N 15 '42 20w

"Handicraft teachers will welcome to their bookshelves." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 67:686 Ag '42 70w

Wis Lib Bul 38:189 D '42

JORDAN, PHILIP DILLON, and KESSLER, LILLIAN, comps. Songs of yesterday; a song anthology of American life. 392p il $3 Doubleday

784 Songs, American (W) 42-36007

Anthology of American nineteenth century songs, including words and music. They are old-time favorites of the stage, the bar-room, the logging camp, and pioneer trail. The compilers have attempted to keep the historical flavor by reprinting many of the songs from old plates. Bibliography.

Reviewed by Ernest Horn

Am Hist R 47:893 Jl '42 490w

Booklist 38:186 F 1 '42

"This is recommended for clubs, including The Players and Sons of Methodist Ministers (particularly the section O God She Cried in Accents Wild) and all those who follow the stricture of Jonathan Edwards that 'Those therefore who neglect to learn to sing live in sin.'" R. F. Crandell

Books p8 Ja 18 '42 750w

Wis Lib Bul 38:44 Mr '42

JORDAN, WILBUR KITCHENER. Men of substance. 283p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

942.06 Parker, Henry, Robinson, Henry. Great Britain—History—Puritan revolution. 1642-1660 42-23576

"A study of the thought of two [seventeenth century] English revolutionaries, Henry Parker and Henry Robinson." (Subtitle) Mr Jordan is associate professor of history, the University of Chicago, and the author of the four-volume work, The Development of Religious Toleration in England. Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Jordan has excerpted and expanded the description of these two liberals from his larger Development of Religious Toleration in England. His commentary is often too expansive, repetitious, and consequently tedious. Nevertheless he succeeds in making these two minds impressive and in giving their theories of commercial aristocracy an important place in the history of political and economic philosophy." H. W. S.

+ J Philos 39:667 N 19 '42 150w

Springf'd Republican p6 N 23 '42 900w

JOSEPHSON, MATTHEW. Victor Hugo; a realistic biography of the great romantic. 514p $3.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Hugo, Victor Marie, comte

(W) 42-36348

Full length, comprehensive biography of the great French writer of the nineteenth century.

The author covers in detail Hugo's personal life, his work as poet and novelist, and his political career. Index.

"Mr. Josephson is clear and satisfying—also, for the ordinary non-specialist reader, near enough to final—on aspects that used to be either hopelessly enigmatic or almost blank; for example, the history of Hugo's parents, including especially the son's peculiar and really important relations with each, and the baffling riddle of Madame Hugo's involvement with the incredible Sainte-Beuve." Wilson Follett

+ Atlantic 170:162 D '42 300w

Booklist 39:70 N 1 '42

"This book is likely to become a popular biography; it comes within measurable distance of being the standard compendium of Hugolian lore. Mr. Josephson knows his Hugo, and the literature about Hugo, adequately. He has many slips; but who has not? Unfortunately, there is another aspect of his book that is a grievous disappointment. Hugo was mingled with the whole life of his century and particularly with the epoch of the Second Empire; and Mr. Josephson, who has consulted many an out-of-the-way book, has loftily disdained to glance at a primer of French history. The result is deplorable." Albert Guerard

+ Books p2 O 25 '42 1500w

"Mr. Josephson possesses a fine gift for vivid narrative; and Hugo's career offers many opportunities for the display of that gift. The oft-told story of the first night of 'Hernani' at the Comédie Française is told again here with much verve. Even better is the narrative of the events leading up to Napoleon III's coup d'état in December, 1851—the event which sent Hugo into his long exile. Comparable to his narrative gift is Mr. Josephson's talent for characterization, in which there is evident a great deal of insight." S. C. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 2 '43 700w

Reviewed by A. M. Colt

Library J 67:844 O 1 '42 80w

"On the whole Mr. Josephson's work can be called, in the best and worst sense of the word, a popular book. It will appeal to the large public through its superficiality and its entertaining liveliness. It is commendably impartial and fair. A most regrettable ignorance of essential historical facts, however, makes it fall below the standard previously set by Mr. Josephson in his study of Zola." Georges Lemaitre

+ Nation 155:584 N 28 '42 1000w

"Mr. Josephson's sane and substantial book is regulated by what students of Hugo need most, a sense of proportion. To add that it is a worthy sequel to his life of Zola is to say a good deal." Harry Levin

+ New Repub 107:552 O 26 '42 900w

"For the first time in English Mr. Matthew Josephson has provided us with a comprehensive, well-balanced account of the gigantic and all-embracing life of the most powerful writer that modern France has produced. Some may cavil at Hugo's style, at his godlike assumptions, at his manifest ego, or his so-called opportunism, but few will dare assert that he lacked force and power and was the most influential of all French writers during his lifetime. Mr. Josephson presents all this with disciplined reasoning." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p3 O 18 '42 1500w

"This is a powerful and entertaining biography, on the whole, though Mr. Josephson leaves us with a good many conundrums unanswered. Perhaps that couldn't be helped. The task was gargantuan." Vincent McHugh

+ New Yorker 18:83 O 17 '42 800w

"Matthew Josephson's book is well informed, well written, well constructed, and very fair. Here and there, one finds strange mistakes. For instance, the writer who explained to Hugo the mysteries of the Cabala was not André Weill, but the well-known Alexandre Weill (Page 264). Madame de Chateaubriand did not ask Victor Hugo to buy 'a book of chocolates,' which sounds unintelligible, but 'a pound of chocolates,' the French word livre meaning both pound and book. (Page 75). However these are minor flaws and, on the whole, the book is excellent." Andre Maurois

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 O 24 '42 700w

"Matthew Josephson has succeeded in presenting an unbiased picture of Victor Hugo and, in addition he has written a highly readable book." H. L.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 1 '42 460w
Time 40:104 O 19 '42 1350w

JOUGHIN, GEORGE LOUIS. Basic reference forms. 94p 80c Crofts

029 Reports—Preparation. Bibliography. Documentation 41-11881

"A guide to established practice in bibliography, quotations, footnotes, and thesis format." (Subtitle) "The purpose of this book is to present to the writer of undergraduate term papers and to the beginning research student a set of basic reference forms for use in documentation." (Pref) Bibliography.

School & Society 54:16 Jl 5 '41 30w

"Mr Joughin deals lucidly and compactly with the mechanical details of bibliography, quotations, footnotes and thesis format, assembling information which often must be tracked down in books on general thesis writing and composition, and in printers' manuals. Although the work is primarily concerned with the needs of workers in the modern humanities, a chapter is included on specialized reference forms used in some of the more important scientific and technological subjects. Sample thesis pages and a carefully chosen bibliography are appended."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 30 '42 140w

JUDGE, ARTHUR WILLIAM. Aircraft engines. 2v 380;446p il v 1 $5.50; v2 $9 Van Nostrand [v 1 16s; v2 30s Chapman]

629.13 Airplane engines 41-10801

The first of these two volumes on aircraft engines presents "the principles and results of relevant research work upon internal combustion engines for the benefit of those entering or already engaged in aircraft engineering work." The second volume is devoted to the descriptive side and to design and theoretical conditions not considered in the first volume. Bibliography. Index.

"The volume can be recommended not only to students but also to engineers generally who are interested in improvement of aircraft engine performance." A. T. J. K.

+ Nature 147:158 F 8 '41 650w (Review of v 1)

"Generally the second volume maintains the high standard of the first volume, and is a very useful and up-to-date contribution to the study of aircraft engines." A. T. J. K.

+ Nature 148:37 Jl 12 '41 850w (Review of v 2)

N Y New Tech Bks 26:37 Jl '41 (Review of v 1)

N Y New Tech Bks 27:3 Ja '42 (Review of v 2)

Pratt p11 My '42

JUDKINS, HENRY FOREST. Principles of dairying; testing and manufactures; 3d ed. rev. by Merrill J. Mack. 315p il $3 Wiley

637 Dairying 41-11951

"There is no statement of the amount of revision of this textbook. It follows the plan of the earlier editions and limits its field to milk production and milk products, with no attempt to treat the whole subject of dairy cattle and care." (Booklist) Index.

"The book as a whole can be said to be intended for students or others entering into dairying or the manufacture of dairy products. Although not specifically a work prepared for public health workers or those concerned with the sanitary supervision of milk and milk products, these workers may find it useful to have at hand the descriptions and discussions of the many processes and of the machines used in making milk products which this book contains." Sol Pincus

+ Am J Pub Health 32:425 Ap '42 180w

Booklist 38:56 O 15 '41

JUDSON, CLARA (INGRAM) (MRS. J. M. JUDSON). People who work near our house; pictures by Keith Ward. 48p $1 Rand McNally

42-9901

Stories for children of the primary grades, about the bus conductor, the barber, street cleaner, elevator man, policeman, and others who would be met on a trip to the city.

"The usefulness of helping a child toward reading by a child's eye view of characters that stand out in his own world, need not be pointed out to one who remembers his own childhood. The work these people do now may be other than a middle-aged man watched when he was small, but he will recognize, in the spirit in which Mrs. Judson presents them, the spirit in which he watched and found their work attractive." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 J1 26 '42 270w

"Cardboard cover, but good value for the money. Recommended." J. E. Wooster

+ Library J 67:415 My 1 '42 80w

JUDSON, CLARA (INGRAM) (MRS. J. M. JUDSON). Soldier doctor; the story of William Gorgas; with il. by Robert Doremus. 151p $1.60 Scribner

B or 92 Gorgas, William Crawford—Juvenile literature (W) 42-19974

"Biography of William Gorgas, the army doctor whose vision, determination, and faithfulness in his fight against yellow fever made possible the building of the Panama Canal." Booklist

Booklist 39:53 O 15 '42

"Biography for young folks, always on the lookout for dramatic careers, has already found material around the Panama Canal and used it for the teens. Mrs. Judson, who has special talent for interesting younger readers in the lives of workers for the common good, exercises it here for the benefit of ten-year-olds in a series of dramatic anecdotes making a memorable record. . . This is a technique adapted to catch and hold the attention of such children as are sometimes considered too young for biographies of adults." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 O 11 '42 350w

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus

Library J 67:848 O 1 '42 70w

New Yorker 18:113 D 12 '42 60w

Wis Lib Bul 38:189 D '42

JUDSON, CLARA (INGRAM) (MRS. J. M. JUDSON). They came from Sweden; il. by Edward C. Caswell. 214p $2 Houghton

(W) 42-21304

The Larssons came from Sweden in 1856 and settled first in Wisconsin. Later they moved to a Minnesota homestead. This story for grades five to eight describes their daily lives in the new homeland.

Booklist 39:35 O 1 '42

"If the series of which this is the opening volume does as well by other nationalities, it will be necessary to have it all in school libraries and homes of Americans of foreign stock." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ja 10 '43 450w

"This generous story of Swedish immigrants has fun and adventure and revealing pictures." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:338 S '42 140w

"Overburdened with incident and crowded with characters, book fails to bring out graphically either Swedish or American national characteristics and does not leave any vivid impression of background or of character. . . Do not recommend." H. Y. Long

— Library J 67:1016 N 15 '42 130w

"Pleasant story of kindly, sturdy folk whose ability to endure physical hardships and discomforts makes us conscious of our dependence on many conveniences of modern civilization.

Reviewer was a bit disappointed that native customs were not given greater prominence." Claire Nolte

+ — Library J 67:1016 N 15 '42 130w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 10 '43 140w

Wis Lib Bul 38:164 N '42

JUNE, LARRY. Photographer's rule book. 90p il $1.25 Macmillan

770 Photography

(W) 41-27448

Advice for amateur photographers, demonstrating how a small box camera or a simple adjustable will be all one needs for making pictures of the family, and even to satisfy a desire to make angle shots. Includes composition and content. Index.

Booklist 38:206 F 15 '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '42

Spring'd Republican p7e F 8 '42 240w

Wis Lib Bul 38:44 Mr '42

JUSTUS, MAY. Dixie decides; il. by Aldren A. Watson. 295p $2 Random house

(W) 42-20990

Dixie, a Tennessee mountain girl, decided that she wanted an education, and was willing to make the sacrifices her decision entailed. The life of these Southern mountains is vividly portrayed, as well as the characters of Dixie, her father, mother, and grandmother, her younger brother, and the girls Dixie met at school. For older girls.

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Atlantic 170:419 D '42 90w

"The most ambitious of May Justus' books. . . The older girls, for whom the book is written, will find in Dixie the best type of a strong, generous people, weighed down by superstition and lack of opportunity." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:341 S '42 100w

"An exceptionally fine story for girls in their teens. Recommended." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 67:848 O 1 '42 80w

"This is an unassuming novel, but sound and sweet as a russet apple in its portrayal of a girl reaching for and finding a more gracious way of life. Miss Justus does not romanticize the mountain people, but she does know their instinctive kindness and generosity, their proud sense of honor as well as their stubbornness and suspicion of change." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 10 '43 360w

JUSTUS, MAY. Nancy of Apple Tree Hill; il. by Lucia Patton. 257p $2 Whitman, A.

42-22579

Nancy and Dan, the oldest of the six motherless Turner children, came to their father's old house in Tennessee to make a home for the younger children while their father was in a western hospital. The story is of their brave attempts to make a living, send for their younger brothers and sister, and pay off the mortgage. For teen age readers.

"Eleven and twelve-year-olds will find it readable, with much less emphasis on background of the Smokies and customs of the mountaineers than in majority of author's books." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 67:958 N 1 '42 80w

Spring'd Republican p7e N 22 '42 140w

JUSTUS, MAY. Step Along and Jerry Jake; il. by Christine Chisholm. 64p $1.50 Whitman, A.

42-18154

Jerry Jake is a little Tennessee mountain boy; Step Along is the peddler whose gay, painted cart plays a part in the story. Jerry helped Step Along when he was in trouble, and in return Jerry Jake realized his ambition to visit the outside world he called Far Beyond.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 J1 26 '42 250w

"Wholesome, unpretentious story . . . with nice atmosphere and satisfactory characterization. Of interest primarily to nine and ten-year-old boys and useful also for slow readers somewhat older, though Christine Chisholm's illustrations picture Jerry as much younger than going on eleven as he is supposed to be." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 67:686 Ag '42 80w

K

K., S. Agent in Italy. 331p $3 Doubleday
945.09 Italy—Fascist movement. World war, 1939—Italy. Germans in Italy. Spies
(W) 42-10673

The anonymous author of this book claims to be a German who for several years followed a practice of getting his friends and others out of concentration camps. Finally he was thrown out of Germany and went to Italy where he had business connections. In Italy he joined an anti-Fascist underground. Eventually Italy, too, became inhospitable and he is now in the United States. This book tells the story of his adventures and depicts the life of the Italians under war conditions—and Hitler tyranny.

Reviewed by George De Santillana
Atlantic J1 '42 300w

Booklist 38:365 Je 1 '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '42

"When he speaks of things outside the city of Rome or of facts of an earlier date, the author piles error upon error, as does any foreigner who deals with Italian affairs on the basis of his immediate observations alone, without knowing present day Italy widely or the Italy of yesterday at all. But S. K.'s errors should not obscure the fact that during the years of his residence in Rome he gathered with diligence and intelligence a great deal of first-hand and reliable information on rising prices, on the deterioration of the standard of living, and on the infiltration of German agents into all branches of the Italian economic, military, and administrative structure." Gaetano Salvemini

— + Nation 154:716 Je 20 '42 550w

"Candor is the last quality one expects from a secret agent. But there are so many baffling twists in S. K.'s narrative that a double ration of salt should be taken before reading it. . . I have no right to impugn S. K.'s authenticity. I merely feel that he is either omitting a part of his story or that his skill as a writer is unequal to the task of convincing readers of his complete honesty. This made clear, I should add that S. K.'s revelations about the condition of the Italians, the technique of the German invasion of Italy, and the personalities involved in the underground movement there are all of extraordinary interest, though each reader must set himself up as his own judge of their truth." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 18:83 Ap 11 '42 800w

"The book is of first importance to students of current grand strategy. I compliment the ghost writer or translator, whichever he be, on his readable, lucid style." W. A. Roberts

+ Books p12 My 3 '42 650w

Time 39:98 Ap 13 '42 1650w

KABERLEIN, JOSEPH J. Air conditioning metal layout. 308p $3.75 Bruce pub.

671 Sheet metal work. Building fittings
41-28362

"A textbook and working guide with practical and shortened methods for laying out and forming the patterns used in air conditioning, heating, and ventilating; mathematical formulas applied to sheet-metal work." Subtitle

Booklist 38:303 Ap 15 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:20 Ap '42

KAESE, HAROLD. Famous American athletes of today. See Famous American athletes of today

KAGEY, RUDOLF (KURT STEEL, pseud). The impostor. 316p $2 Harcourt

42-17987

James Morgan, executive and speed expert, was appointed director and co-ordinator of the entire United States warplane production after Pearl Harbor. Almost at once something happened, and the novel is one long course of spies, intrigue, Nazi sabotage, and violent action, with imitators imitating each other, up to the grand finale.

Booklist 39:103 N 15 '42

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p11 Ag 2 '42 200w

Christian Century 59:960 Ag 5 '42 40w

"One of the best thrillers of the season by a New York University professor who is an old hand at mystery stories. It will be particularly appreciated by those who are stirred by single-handed struggles against overwhelming odds."

+ Commonweal 36:332 J1 24 '42 70w

"It is all extremely incredible and very exciting, but one misses Hank Hyer. He should have been there to give the story the tang and the zip that it needs." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p15 J1 26 '42 200w

"Good—in its class."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 Ag 1 '42 30w

KAHLER, WOOD. Giant dwarf. 311p $2.50
Liveright

42-25512

A satirical novel of the wilder aspects of New York life. The narrator, a novelist, tells the story of his own love for the Russian Tamara, and along with this he follows the hectic career of the Texas born Nick Dunfield, who married a wealthy woman and became a playboy. Nick in a last bid for notoriety, comes to his life's ending high up on a ledge above New York's curious crowds.

"In the fluent pursuit of ideas that flourished two decades ago in Greenwich Village speak-easies, Mr. Kahler's story suffers a jigsaw puzzle dispersion. The hero, a moody novelist with a beautiful wife, once wrote in the snow with his walking stick, 'I am an uprooted tree.' Perhaps he should have said 'sapling.' . . . As a novelist, and so perhaps as a spokesman for Wood Kahler, Grandon rails against Henry James for finding America so barren and against Hemingway for finding Europe so fertile. It would be ungracious to bring 'Giant Dwarf' into that discussion." Lisle Bell

Books p14 O 4 '42 400w

"Naturally, a great deal of skill is required to make an extravaganza of this kind sound authentic, and Mr. Kahler has this skill; and he has the necessary humor, too. The author has a way, however, of going off on tangents."

John Cournos

+ — N Y Times p18 S 27 '42 750w

KAHN, ELY JACQUES. Army life; with a foreword by E. F. Harding. 154p $1.75
Simon & Schuster

355.1 U.S.—Army—Military life

(W) 42-25713

"A detailed and literate account of one man's experiences in the Army from the time he was inducted until his transport sailed for a foreign front. Private Kahn was formerly a member of the staff of this magazine and most of the chapters in his book made their first appearance here." New Yorker

Booklist 39:178 Ja 1 '43

"The 'Army Life' is neither lofty nor impudent. It is genuine and quietly inspiring." Lisle Bell

+ Books p4 N 22 '42 800w

Commonweal 37:123 N 20 '42 70w

KAHN, E. J.—Continued

"Private Kahn is an intelligent observer, a writer by profession, and he records what he has seen and heard and done in smoothly flowing prose of admirable clarity."

+ N Y Times p14 N 29 '42 400w

New Yorker 18:99 N 21 '42 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 20 '42 180w

KAIGHN, RAYMOND P. How to retire and like it; introd. by Arthur E. Bestor. 170p $1.75 Assn. press

179 Retirement (from work) (W) 43-51001

"The author, who was engaged in personnel work with the Y.M.C.A. for many years, describes himself on the title page by the one word 'retired.'... He has helpful things to say about finances, health, occupations, and the avoidance of those attitudes and characteristics which may make old age a burden to one's self and a nuisance to others. The most important thing is the injunction to prepare for retirement in advance by assuring something to retire on and some activities and interests to retire to." Christian Century

Booklist 39:217 F 1 '43

Christian Century 59:1322 O 28 '42 90w

"The literature in this field is not extensive; almost nothing exists that is of value to the layman. So such a book as this, written by one who is himself retired, is a practical guide where those interested may find a wealth of suggestions which will aid greatly in smoothing the way into the unknown, and often feared, future." H. W. Cross

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 22 '42 650w

"Mr. Kaighn has done a good, workmanlike job. The only trouble with his little book is that it takes the joy out of retirement and makes it a 'project' to be analyzed, planned, and executed systematically and soberly, all kneeling. No doubt he is right, but he makes it seem pretty grim." Gertrude Springer

+ — Survey 79:31 Ja '43 290w

KALAB, THERESA. Watching for Winkie; pictures by [the author]. [47p] $1.75 Longmans

(W) 42-21972

Based on an incident in the present war, this is the story of a small boy, Tommy, who helped in the work with carrier pigeons, as his contribution to "keep 'em flying." Tommy's pet was a pigeon named Winkie, and it was due to Winkie's courage and Tommy's knowledge that four members of a bomber crew were saved. Grades three to five.

Booklist 39:53 O 15 '42

"A moving story for any one, but a boy who has kept pigeons appreciates it most. He knows it is possible for a pigeon to bring news through 100 miles of war." M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 S 20 '42 280w

"Winkie is one of the season's star books."

+ Cath World 156:375 D '42 90w

Christian Century 59:1360 N '42 10w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 37:118 N 20 '42 20w

Horn Bk 19:36 Ja '43 60w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:885 O 15 '42 60w

"[A] story that will be popular with children from six to ten. Picture book make-up may lessen its use with eight to ten-year-olds who will be most interested in story. Attractive and durable, practical for library use. Style is not outstanding, but story, based on true incident, meets present-day need." Marian Herr

+ — Library J 67:955 N 1 '42 130w

N Y Times p36 N 15 '42 180w

KALIJARVI, THORSTEN, and others. Modern world politics; maps by Clifford H. Macfadden. 843p $5; text ed $3.75 Crowell

341 World politics. International law and relations 42-23456

"An important addition to those books designed to help students clarify their thinking on world politics and thus contribute to the winning of the war, and, thereafter, to the advancement of the great hopes of mankind for peace." (Social Studies) Index.

"This textbook has a claim to distinction in the character and the profusion of footnotes which greatly facilitate the handling of a common teaching problem—ready reference to standard authorities and texts. Likewise, chapter bibliographies are good, and the large number of maps of many varieties adds materially to the value of the volume. The chapter on power politics is a splendid opener, although some will take exception to the assertion that 'to expect states at their present stage of development to accept any international code as binding upon them is wishful thinking.'" W. L. Godshall

+ — Ann Am Acad 225:233 Ja '43 450w

Social Studies 34:47 Ja '43 40w

"Many instructors will find the use of journalistic instead of 'learned' material advantageous. Although the book as a whole may appear to many a failure, if cautiously used it can improve the teaching of international relations if the term and the subject matter are taken in the narrow sense of current events, instead of lasting principles for which we fight." Karl Loewenstein

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 19 '43 1200w

KALLENBACH, JOSEPH ERNEST. Federal coöperation with the states under the commerce clause. 428p $4 Univ. of Mich.

385 Interstate commerce. State governments—Federal relations 42-36833

"The author traces the commerce clause doctrines known as the 'conditionally-exclusive' theory, the 'concurrent powers' theory, the 'exclusive power' theory and the 'local concurrent powers' theory, with their corollaries and implications. Several chapters are devoted to the intriguing problem of the 'divestment' of an article's interstate character and the potentialities inherent in the formula of the Wilson Act. The chapter on the Webb Kenyon Act contains perhaps the best discussion in the volume. The problems involved in the federal regulations of commerce for the protection of the 'sending' and the 'destination' states are also discussed, as well as the federal 'adoption' of state laws relating to commerce." (Pol Sci Q) Bibliography. Table of cases. Index.

"Students in this field will readily concur in the views of two eminent scholars quoted by the author in his preface. One concludes that the conflicting and contradictory doctrines found in the Supreme Court cases bearing on this part of the Constitution leave one in 'utter confusion,' while the other writes that 'if all the opinions, monographs, treatises, and articles which have been written concerning the commerce clause of the Constitution were laid end to end, they would reach from confusion to futility.' The author of this volume has done as much as one man can do to dispel this confusion." W. B. Graves

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:757 Ag '42 1000w

"On the whole, the book is a substantial addition to the literature of constitutional commentary. The reviewer's only major complaint is that the political science in the book is submerged in a welter of court cases." G. C. S. Benson

+ — Ann Am Acad 224:217 N '42 340w

Reviewed by T. R. Powell

Harvard Law R 56:507 N '42 950w

"A well-organized and highly readable treatise... The work is well documented and scholarly throughout. As a teacher of public law for two decades, this reviewer unhesitatingly recommends the volume as required reading, and as a supplement to the 'case system' in constitutional law, in what is, and no doubt will be, one of the most fertile fields in our constitutional development." F. R. Black

+ Pol Sci Q 57:471 S '42 260w

Reviewed by Phillips Bradley

Survey G 32:26 Ja '43 140w

"An exceedingly full, and occasionally repetitious, rehearsal of pros and cons of the sort with which Constitutional debate has abounded. The rehearsal is so full in fact that it is unlikely that it will have to be repeated again for a long, long time. It is because it is so satisfactory in this way that one regrets that it is marred by minor misstatements, by bits of naïveté, by occasional dogmatic statements where guesses would be more in order, and by a too frequent willingness to carry water on both shoulders. Most of all, one regrets Mr. Kallenbach's apparent incapacity or unwillingness to assess the merits and demerits of the new way of freedom for the states in terms other than doctrinal—an incapacity or unwillingness which makes it look as though the law can properly be a judge in its own cause." T. R. Witmer

+ — Yale Law J 51:1416 Je '42 800w

KALP, EARL S. In the service with Uncle Sam. (North central assn. of colleges and secondary schools. Com. on experimental units. Unit studies in Am. problems) 71p il maps pa 60c Ginn

355 U.S.—Army. U.S.—Navy. U.S.—Defenses 42-20591

"Aims to contribute to the improvement of instruction in secondary schools, giving major attention to the preservation and improvement of democracy." School & Society

School & Society 56:88 Jl 25 '42 20w

Social Studies 33:336 N '42 30w

KALP, EARL S., and MORGAN, ROBERT M. Defense of the western hemisphere. (North central assn. of colleges and secondary schools. Com. on experimental units. Unit studies in Am. problems) 66p il maps pa 60c Ginn

355 U.S.—Defenses 42-4212

"Aims to give the high-school pupil a clear picture of the defense problem, including threats from abroad and from within our country, and methods used to meet these threats." School & Society

School & Society 54:628 D 27 '41 40w

Social Studies 33:144 Mr '42 20w

KAMMER, EDWARD JOSEPH. Socio-economic survey of the marshdwellers of four southeastern Louisiana parishes. 180p pa $2 Catholic univ. of Am.

309.1763 Louisiana—Social conditions. Louisiana—Economic conditions. Social surveys A41-4284

"Along the southeastern Gulf coast of Louisiana are vast stretches of marshland—covered by a thick vegetation, traversed by winding meandering bayous, and dotted by numerous small bodies of water—which the marshdwellers call prairie tremblant. This book, based on a field study of 500 random sample white families and other interviews during four months of 1940, is a good descriptive survey of the life and labor of the marshdwellers of Jefferson, Lafourche, Plaquemine, and St. Bernard Parishes (counties)... Beginning with a historical sketch of the four parishes, Kammer then devotes one chapter each to the family, religion, education, recreation, and social change. A description of the economic factors together with a chapter on health conditions completes the study." Am Soc R

"It remains a little too much the survey. The reader does not get an integrated, descriptive analysis of the social structure of any community. The chapter on religion, for instance, turns out, in fact, to be a commentary on the difficulty of establishing in these 'parishes'—really counties—the usual Catholic parochial institutions. The chapter on education is a similar commentary on the slow progress of the school. The author might have done better to have analyzed the actual religious and educational activity of the people in terms of their own life and the operating social units, as an anthropologist would have done. In this perspective the difficulties of church and school would be even more clearly understood. Perhaps the author, with this interesting and informative survey done, will be able to return to the field to do a more systematic analysis of some smaller part of marsh society." E. C. Hughes

+ — Am J Soc 47:789 Mr '42 230w

Reviewed by V. J. Parenton

Am Soc R 7:132 F '42 320w

KANDEL, ABEN. Stones begin to dance. 192p $2 Duell

42-21072

Under the Williamsburg Bridge was a pushcart market, where the poor peddlars of New York's East Side sold to their poorer neighbors. They were refugees of all nations, and from all classes, but they worked and lived together in peace and harmony, presided over by Mr Marco, an elderly Rumanian, whose wit and philosophy sustained them all. But the City Fathers together with a large realty company took over the market and tore down the tenements, and the refugees scattered to other homes.

Booklist 39:33 O 1 '42

"Aben Kandel wields a sharp, satirical pen, but the ultimate meaning of his fable is not always clear. He lacks the intellectual simplicity which is essential in an allegorical story. But even in the most sophisticated reader, this novel will give rise to more than one lump in the throat." Milton Hindus

+ — Books p4 Ag 30 '42 650w

"Unquestionably a book on the side of democracy. Also a good example of the Hollywood political theory that a few words from an eccentric character can solve most social problems."

— Nation 155:245 S 19 '42 180w

"A tender little book, extremely well written, about a New York City saint named Mr. Marco. . . . If there is an allegorical meaning, it is that if men of good will refuse to fight back against the forces of evil, everything will turn out all right. Even Robert Nathan fans, for whom this book seems to have been written, might not be able to stomach that much whimsy."

+ — New Repub 107:390 S 28 '42 110w

"To make good as exciting as evil is the task of the novelist who chooses the theme of goodness. In 'The Stones Begin to Dance' Aben Kandel has tried it and turned the trick handsomely. His Mr. Marco is not merely a good man; he is convincing as a good man. It all comes down to the simple fact that he is actively, not merely passively, good. And the saving grace of humor does the rest. Goodness and humor make an admirable combination in a character." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 30 '42 650w

"The author seems never quite to make up his mind whether he is embarked on a fable or straight fiction. There is some quiet humor, but too often the effects are strained and the book's central figure, the grand old man of the pushcart market, is a shade less heart-warming than he is obviously meant to appear."

New Yorker 18:58 Ag 29 '42 90w

"'The Stones Begin to Dance' is a short and beautifully, too beautifully, written fable, very slight in materials, very slight in emotions, padded with pretensions. . . . The tone is slick and insincere. The people are 'characters.'" N. L. R.

Sat R of Lit 25:7 Ag 29 '42 270w

Time 40:104 S 14 '42 130w

KANE, HENRY BUGBEE. Tale of the promethea moth. (Wild world tales) [48p] il $1.50
Knopf
595.78 Moths. Photographic books
(W) 42-7213

Simply told story of the life cycle of the promethea moth, illustrated with photographs. For grades three to seven.

Booklist 38:334 My 1 '42

"I do not see how the life cycle of this winged visitor to a child's world could be more truthfully or beautifully presented to such children, and to city boys and girls less fortunate, than by this simple text and large, outdoor photographs so delicately reproduced." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 My 3 '42 200w

"This is an accurate as well as an engaging book for boys and girls, eight and up." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 29 '42
140w

"The expert photographic work which has caught and recorded each stage in the development of this great moth reaches as high a point of perfection in the third of the Wide World Tales as in the preceding volumes. Besides being detailed from a scientific standpoint, the pictures are very beautiful in their composition, light and shade. Mr. Kane's dramatic description of a moth's life cycle admirably supports the pictures, and should open the eyes of nature lovers, young and old." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:174 My '42 70w

"Well and clearly written." A. E. Brown

+ Library J 67:476 My 15 '42 50w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:392 O 15 '42 10w

+ New Yorker 18:78 My 23 '42 50w

Wis Lib Bul 38:166 N '42

KANTOR, MACKINLAY. Angeworms on toast; il. by Kurt Wiese. [32p] $1.50 Coward-McCann

42-22998

Picture story book about a mischievous small boy, whose daily complaint was for angeworms on toast. After his family had stood all of these requests they could, they humored him. It had the desired effect.

Cath World 156:372 D '42 50w

"Picture book for children from four to eight. Recommended." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 67:847 O 1 '42 70w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:883 O 15 '42 30w

"Text and pictures go hand in hand to make the fun." K. S. W.

+ New Yorker 18:106 D 12 '42 50w

KANTOR, MACKINLAY. Gentle Annie. 249p $2 Coward-McCann

(W) 42-36263

A detective story laid in the "wild West" of Oklahoma in the early 1900s.

Booklist 38:441 J1 15 '42

"Although he tosses in all the basic materials—stranded heroine, chivalrous outlaws, crooked sheriff, mystery ranch and frontier feuding—MacKinnlay Kantor has not written a prefabricated Western novel. Nor has he turned out a parody on the type—a Cherokee-strip tease. What he has done is to reshuffle the old deck, and play the game in a new way. It is an ingenious story, with enough romance and gunplay and rough justice crowded into one week to satisfy the reader's appetite for at least three." Lisle Bell

+ Books p8 Je 28 '42 350w

"A combination of riotous mischief and blundering tragedy that plays lightly upon the unending question of right and wrong. Perhaps at one point a cat is let out of the bag for too obvious a purpose, and once or twice the romance gets too silky, but that is only for a moment. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has good material for the picture they are making."

Boston Globe p19 Ag 12 '42 250w

"Want to read a Western? If you do, this is a first-rate one, with no pretensions to be anything but what it is."

+ Nation 155:18 J1 4 '42 90w

"Kantor has done a first rate job within a conventional formula with which he takes, it seems to me, certain engaging liberties. I only hope it is time out for the author of 'Long Remember' and of a favorite of mine some years ago, 'The Jaybird.' This is just a passing tale, but passingly well done." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p7 Je 28 '42 800w

"Since Mr. Kantor is a better novelist than most writers of Westerns, this is a better Western. Real people in it, a situation that is interesting as well as complicated, and a made-to-order part for Gary Cooper."

+ New Yorker 18:61 Je 27 '42 60w

Reviewed by W. R. Benét

Sat R of Lit 25:6 J1 11 '42 500w

KAPSTEIN, ISRAEL JAMES. Something of a hero. 596p $2.75 Knopf [10s 6d Hamilton, H]

(W) 41-5877

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"It is certainly a notable book. . . A large range of characters is developed, all of them well realised, and the narrative never falters. And it is through them alone that the author enters his very pungent criticism on American society and business methods. It is an immensely long novel but well worth reading." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 27 '42 80w

"Mr. Kapstein's book deals with the collapse of these idées reçues in the bitter years after 1929. . . There have been few novels published in England dealing so brilliantly with a social crisis, and none that could do so much to explain the issues in the last ten years of American politics and the very nature of America to the English reader. One cannot overpraise it from this point of view. The book also has the very considerable virtue of being a thoroughly readable novel with an interesting story about interesting people; the time-killing reader can slide along over the issues and have a smooth and untroubled passage. Something of a Hero is a first novel and considered as such is an astonishing achievement." Anthony West

+ New Statesman & Nation 23:211 Mr 28 '42 550w

"Mr. Kapstein is a social critic, but he does not forget that people are individuals before they are citizens. The good, the bad, the lukewarm, all have their part in his whole. Mr. Kapstein believes in humanity; his novel, while not faultless, is a remarkably intelligent interpretation, and is warmly commended to everyone interested in American Life and Letters." John Hampson

+ Spec 168:358 Ap 10 '42 300w

"It is a rich, powerful and passionately felt novel, a little raw at moments, a little naive, but sustained by an unflinching conviction of American destiny."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p125 Mr 14 '42 1150w

KARDINER, ABRAM. Traumatic neuroses of war; sponsored by the Com. on problems of neurotic behavior, Division of anthropology and psychology, Nat. research council. (Paul B. Hoeber bk) 258p $3.50 Harper

616.8 Neuroses, Traumatic 41-8861

"This treatise is based upon experiences resulting from the first World War. The author has had close contact with the problems of war neuroses drawing from his experience and study as a specialist in one of the United States veterans' hospitals." Social Forces

Reviewed by Kimball Young

Am Soc R 7:454 Je '42 320w

Reviewed by E. R. Groves

Social Forces 20:505 My '42 60w

KARLOVA, IRINA. Dreadful hollow. 283p $2
Vanguard [8s 6d Hurst]

42-20989

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p20 S 20 '42 150w

"This story is, of course, utterly fantastic, but it is well written and not unoriginal—an entertaining variation on the vampire theme."

K. I.
+ — N Y Times p16 S 27 '42 240w

"See title."
Sat R of Lit 25:14 S 5 '42 40w

KARST, GEORG M., pseud. The beasts of the earth; tr. by Emil Lengyel. 185p il $2 Albert Unger pub. co, 55 W 42d st, N.Y.

940.547243 Concentration camps. Dachau, Germany 42-14554

"A former Austrian Catholic official who was sent to the Dachau concentration camp after the Nazis took over in Austria describes what he saw of life and death among the prisoners and S.S. Guards." New Yorker

"Karst's story does not make very cheerful reading. It is a concise, realistic book, sadly truthful throughout. We recommend it especially to those who like to think that Nazism might have been all right if it had only 'stayed at home.'" Marianne Hauser

+ Books p16 Ap 12 '42 500w

Reviewed by Betsy Hutchison
Nation 155:135 Ag 15 '42 210w

"Has a clear, objective intensity that may remind you of Arthur Koestler's 'Spanish Testament.' Simple, short, and graphic."

+ New Yorker 18:76 Ap 18 '42 70w

Times [London] Lit Sup p350 J1 18 '42 550w

KATONA, GEORGE. War without inflation; the psychological approach to problems of war economy. 213p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

332.414 Inflation (finance). World war, 1939 —Economic aspects 42-25552

"The problem of inflation confronting the United States studied from the standpoint of the psychologist." It is a study of the nature and causes of inflation, and the part in controlling it by price fixing and rationing, by taxation and saving. The author states that two dangers must be faced: first, the economic situation itself—the shrinking of supplies and the larger amount of money in circulation; and the wrong attitude of facing the problem, due to lack of understanding. Bibliographical note. Index.

"The entire discussion is intelligent and enlightening and, on the whole, encouraging—that is, it is encouraging if one can believe that the government, the agencies for the dissemination of news and the general public are intelligent enough to follow the rather simple course that is necessary to beat inflation on the major front—that is, the psychological front."

+ Christian Century 59:1562 D 16 '42 260w

Reviewed by Gordon Poteat
Crozer Q 20:86 Ja '43 100w

"An admirably clear and reasoned discussion. . . . Contrary to common practice, the public are treated, not as guinea pigs in a laboratory, but as presumptive readers and intelligent co-operators. Of value to government administrators and publicists as well as to ultimate consumer. Highly recommended for all libraries." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 67:1012 N 15 '42 110w

"'War Without Inflation' is fast reading. In this regard, Katona practices his own doctrine. It should be a 'must' for every Government official who has to frame a rule or meet a civilian. And it should be a 'handbook for understanding' for us too." S. F. Porter

+ Sat R of Lit 25:19 D 26 '42 900w

"Altogether this is an interesting thesis, though not entirely new, presented at a time when the subject is of utmost moment. And although a technical psychologist, Mr Katona's economic knowledge is not inconsiderable. Often the supporting evidence has in it material of more than ordinary value, as, for instance, when he discusses taxation as a means of closing the inflationary gap." H. W. Cross

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 13 '42 1050w

KATZ, MITCHELL D.; LEE, HERBERT C., and LEVY, EDWIN LOUIS. Our fighting ships. 101p il $2 Harper

359 U.S.—Navy. Warships (W) 42-13723

Photograph and brief description for one vessel in each class in the United States navy and coast guard, with list of others in each class. Map on end papers shows navy yards and bases. Bibliography. Index of ships.

Booklist 38:380 Je 15 '42

Bookmark 4:3 N '42

"Altogether a handy and informative reference book."

+ Books p12 Ag 9 '42 180w

"As a reference book it should prove helpful to the lay reader in supplementing newspaper accounts of naval action wherein headlines often over-simplify losses inflicted or sustained by referring to all units involved as 'warships.' The relative fighting potentialities of each naval type may be gauged by the order in which they are listed. Particularly reassuring is the section devoted to ships authorized and building." H. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p24 Je 5 '42 390w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:894 O 15 '42 10w

Wis Lib Bul 38:115 J1 '42

KAUFMAN, GEORGE S., and HART, MOSS. Six plays. 586p $2.75 Random house

812 (W) 42-22425

Contents: Once in a Lifetime; Merrily we Roll Along; You Can't Take it With You; The American Way; The Man who Came to Dinner; George Washington Slept Here.

Booklist 39:46 O 15 '42

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books p16 S 20 '42 130w

Reviewed by C. W. Durgin
Boston Globe p19 S 23 '42 160w
Library J 67:1013 N 15 '42 50w

"To read or reread these plays in cold print is to guess that the place they have blasted out for themselves in American drama will prove more than ordinarily durable. It is not merely that they are theatre wise and that they 'bustle and flare with the kind of comedy that is peculiarly American'. Beneath the wise-cracking, the topicality, the concessions to first-nighters there is real stuff: satire, the humor of foibles, divinely mad fantasmagoria, and even a lurking fondness for each very human fool." George Boismonger

+ Theatre Arts 26:664 O '42 650w

KAVERIN, VENIAMIN ALEKSANDROVICH. Two captains; tr. from the Russian by E. Leda Swan. 442p $2.75 Modern age

42-10425

"A longish romance by a popular Soviet author, in which an unsuccessful expedition to the Arctic at the turn of the century is dramatically contrasted with a similar adventure-some expedition of the present day. The story is that of the captain of the second expedition to the North, who is enamored of the first captain's daughter and avenges his death." Nation

"Kaverin may have some political thesis in this book. He may be trying to contrast the conditions of Czarist days with those prevailing under the Soviets. If so, his purpose is always secondary. His primary object is to tell a good story and he doesn't for a moment forget it." Milton Hindus

Books p10 Mr 22 '42 650w

Commonweal 36:187 Je 12 '42 60w

KAVERIN, V. A.—Continued

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:895 O 15 '42 20w

"Written more in the manner of an American best-seller than of a Soviet propaganda piece, the story has a colorful, fast-moving plot, depending at times upon startling coincidences but full of lively pictures of the effervescent Russian spirit."

Nation 154:441 Ap 11 '42 130w

"On the level of plot the book is active, simple and almost suitable for the juvenile trade, but then 'Moby Dick' is a story of a guy who chases a whale and 'Gulliver's Travels' is the story of a guy who encounters giants and midgits. What makes this book a keen and first-rate job are the honesty and simplicity of the psychological portraiture, and the fine sense of the background of Soviet life that Kaverin gives: the daily routine of living and studying and working in a new and growing society. The book is, moreover, beautifully translated." S. E. Hyman

+ New Repub 106:468 Ap 6 '42 240w

Reviewed by John Cournos

N Y Times p7 Ap 5 '42 1000w

"The chief characteristic of Mr. Kaverin's new novel is sheer exuberance, a boisterous good nature that romps headlong through the pages. . . Of course this effervescence has its drawback. Kaverin literally dances upon the surface of his tale. Nothing is examined or probed, we hardly stop to become acquainted with the characters, and the story strings out and multiplies details until we are hard put to it to follow. . . The lack of focus or emphasis anywhere in the book keeps it from having the unity it needs. Without Sanya as a recognizable constant it would have no form at all, and even Sanya cannot hold it together, being himself so volatile and unreflective a character. For this we are compensated with an atmosphere of wonderful lightness and flow, with gayety unforced and always entertaining. There is news of Russia here, of its mental climate, beyond what we can glean from among the embattled news columns." R. L. Nathan

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:12 Ap 4 '42 410w

390w
+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ap 19 '42KAYE-SMITH, SHEILA (MRS PENROSE FRY). Secret son [Eng title: Hidden son]. 300p $2.50 Harper [8s Cassell]

(W) 42-3951

Tale of Sussex, England, just previous to the second World war. The kindly, but distinctly old-fashioned country squire is compelled to sell large sections of his estate, which has been in the family for generations. The newly rich villager buys the land to turn it into small housing estates, and trouble is brewing. The squire's modern niece and the son of the village Midas with their cynical romance are among the chief characters.

Booklist 33:234 Mr 1 '42

Bookmark 3:17 Mr '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 Ja 25 '42 800w

Reviewed by N. E. Monroe

Cath World 154:755 Mr '42 450w

"Viewed in retrospect the picture is unhappy, but the narrative is so competently unfolded that the book is genuinely entertaining." E. S. S.

+ — Commonweal 35:349 Ja 23 '42 260w

"Surely not one of the author's best books. I do not recommend it unless the author's books are in great demand." E. F. Kelly

Library J 67:40 Ja 1 '42 30w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse

Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 9 '42 100w

"'The Secret Son' can stand on its own feet as a novel instinct with life, brimful of wisdom and sound to the core. It is that not so strange anomaly, a happy book in a world of turmoil, happy because poised, rooted, deeply assured." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 25 '42 750w

"Capably done and serious, with a good background."

+ New Yorker 17:67 Ja 24 '42 90w

"The story is light and entertaining." M. D.
+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 25 '42
600w

"This latest novel by Miss Sheila Kaye-Smith is of an unexpectedly rambling and artificially complicated character. . . The story does not shed improbability as it progresses. We are introduced to villagers of the Durbeyfield type, blithely unaware of their Norman blood, and are given some simplified Sussex dialect. Of what the admirer of earlier books by Miss Kaye-Smith might hope to find there is little trace."

Times [London] Lit Sup p17 Ja 10 '42
400w

Wis Lib Bul 38:47 Mr '42

KAZIN, ALFRED. On native grounds; an interpretation of modern American prose literature. 541p $3.75 Reynal

810.9 American literature—History and criticism. Authors, American

(W) 42-24811

"This first book by a young New York critic is a full-length, brilliantly sustained history of the relation between American prose writers and our developing society in the years between 1890 and the present." (New Yorker) The three sections of the book are: The search for reality (1890-1917); The great liberation (1918-1929); The literature of crisis (1930-1940). Index.

Booklist 39:180 Ja 1 '43

"Now and then the publication of a book is not only a literary but a moral event. Not every week brings to public attention the first book, in every sense a major one, of a critic in almost every respect first rate. Mr. Kazin's work in scattered reviews and essays in Books and elsewhere has long been familiar. Any one lighting even on a short notice of a minor work under his signature must have been impressed as I was the very first time I ever read his prose by the distinction of his substance and style. Here was—and is—a writer patently learned and luminous, a critic of high moral seriousness and cool fastidious discernment. . . I do not think I exaggerate when I say that this book by Alfred Kazin is the signal of a new force in American criticism, equally impressive for its artistic sensibility, its rooted erudition and its moral drive. Its power lies not least in its persuasiveness, the engaging triumph of supple sensitive writing." Irwin Edman

+ Books pl N 1 '42 1850w

Reviewed by Margaret Meagher

Cath World 156:627 F '43 700w

"Mr. Kazin's survey of the American literary scene is by far the widest and most luminous anybody has yet made." J. K. Paulding

+ Commonweal 37:179 D 4 '42 850w

"Alfred Kazin's study of the American prose literature of this century is an admirable book. . . Mr. Kazin has no political partisanship to defend, no simple moralism to recommend. He writes with spirit, though an essentially good manner is too often spoiled by too much of itself; his scholarship is notable for range and painstakingness; his taste is mature and discriminating. It is a good book and a saddening book. Some of its saddening quality is, I feel, unnecessary, but most of it is inescapable. Mr. Kazin believes, and he is right, that the common estimate of our literature has been too lenient, that we still judge our recent literary past with the pleased surprise that we have any books at all. And when it is judged, as Mr. Kazin judges it, by standards more than local, our literature of the last forty years seems far from adequate—seems, indeed, almost to have failed." Lionel Trilling

+ Nation 155:483 N 7 '42 1300w

"[It] is part of Mr. Kazin's method, to say one thing affirmatively and unsay it in the next breath. It is part of the general American criticism, where there is so much difference of opinion, where even the title 'On Native Grounds' is suspect by—say—Louis Adamic, an American whose native grounds are elsewhere and yet can write what he does in no other place. It is characteristic, too, that Mr. Kazin should add the name of Henry Miller to the tradition of Wolfe and Faulkner. It is, I think, a critical error, since Mr. Miller's writing has done nothing to justify the inclusion here save by advertisement. . . There is a certain independence in this criticism. If it were more so, if its opinions were as resolute as its knowledge is sound, Mr. Kazin's book would take its place as a junior and modern Parrington. In point of fact, no one has covered as completely and penetratingly the literature of our time." P. M. Jack

+ — N Y Times p8 N 22 '42 900w

"Not many startling insights or drastic revaluations here, but the author's fresh, even-handed balance and feeling for the over-all effect make this one of the most readable and satisfying cultural studies we've had in a long time."

+ New Yorker 18:82 O 31 '42 90w

"By and large Mr. Kazin has done a better job than anybody else. . . He has omitted the drama and poetry, so that in the opinion of some he has omitted consulting two of the most sensitive barometers of our spiritual life, but there is no use asking for a different sort of book. He is sensitive, sympathetic, and informed. . . There are, to be sure, weaknesses. The last decade is too close for perspective, and I do not here comprehend the proportioning of his space. His discussion of Marxian criticism is out of all relation to his own estimate of its importance; and he is betrayed here and there into unwonted repetitiousness. . . Nevertheless no one, I think, has been more deft in setting the social scene for the appearance of literature in the successive stages of literary development; and no one has more economically marshalled his writers upon that stage. Equally admirable is the flexibility of temperament which enables Mr. Kazin to enter sympathetically into the inner life of so many writers so diverse. One has pleasure in the intelligence of his judgments, even if one occasionally wishes to disclaim them." H. M. Jones

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:5 O 31 '42 1900w

KEELER, HARRY STEPHEN. Bottle with the green wax seal. 319p $2.50 Dutton

42-5125

Mystery story.

"We are drawn to the unescapable conclusion that Mr. Keeler writes his peculiar novels merely to satisfy his own undisciplined urge for creative joy. And yet we must admit that the fantastic plot is ingenious, the climaxes of adventure really adventurous, and the extravagant style probably fascinating to the Keeler addicts; certainly it is unique," Kay Irvin

N Y Times p20 M 8 '42 260w

Sat R of Lit 25:22 Mr 7 '42 30w

KEELER, KATHERINE SOUTHWICK. Children's zoo. [40p] col il $1 Nelson

42-3782

Story of the Smiley family's visit to the Children's zoo in New York's zoological garden in the Bronx.

Booklist 38:311 Ap 15 '42

"A good souvenir of New York's Zoo, it is also a pleasant picture book for six or so." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Jl 19 '42 230w

KEFAUVER, GRAYSON NEIKIRK, and HAND, HAROLD CURTIS. Appraising guidance in secondary schools. 260p il $3.50 Macmillan

371.42 Personnel service in education. Education, Secondary 41-18166

"Two projects involving efforts at appraisal are reported in this volume. The first involves a survey of certain characteristics of students on the junior-high-school, senior-high-school and junior-college levels, derived from the measurement of a sampling of pupils in 19 schools in 12 cities, and deals with items which represent the concern of programs of guidance. The second consists of a three-year follow-up study of students entering the seventh grade of the junior high school and utilizing the guidance service cooperatively developed by the teachers, guidance specialists and administrators in the participating schools and the directors of the study." School & Society

School & Society 54:284 O 4 '41 50w

"The general treatment of objectives, methods of evaluation, and observations are commendable. The book is a stimulating contribution to the literature in guidance. No one immediately concerned with the problems of personnel work in the secondary schools could read this publication without assuming a more enlightened attitude toward these problems." Robert Woellner

+ School R 50:231 Mr '42 750w

KELIHER, ALICE VIRGINIA, ed. Air workers today [by the] Picture fact associates. (Picture fact bks) 56p il $1 Harper

629.13 Aeronautics—Juvenile literature

(W) 42-23191

"Completely revised edition of Air Workers (Book Review Digest, 1939), with much new material about air workers in the military field. Many photographs. Junior and senior high school." Booklist

Booklist 39:109 N 15 '42

"Recommended for all libraries as a most timely and usable item. For readers from sixth grade up." A. L. Shea

+ Library J 67:1070 D 1 '42 50w

KELIHER, ALICE VIRGINIA, ed. Doctors at work [by the] Picture fact associates. (Picture fact bks) 56p il $1; school ed 80c Harper

610 Medicine—Juvenile literature (W) 42-82

Contents: Doctors in the past; Doctors at work today; Preparation for a doctor's career. Copiously illustrated. The books in this series are intended for ages ten and over, but can also be used by adults.

Booklist 38:194 F 1 '42

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 18:113 Mr '42 20w

"Clearly and simply written, graphically illustrated with many photographs, carefully documented, and reasonably priced. . . Excellent vocational guidance material." Dorothea Dawson

+ Library J 67:132 F 1 '42 40w

Wis Lib Bul 38:71 Ap '42

KELIHER, ALICE VIRGINIA, ed. Machinists at work [by the] Picture fact associates. (Picture fact bks) 56p il $1; school ed 80c Harper

621.9 Machine shop practice—Juvenile literature (W) 41-28358

Explains the work of the machinist by means of text, photographs, and charts. Contents: History of machine work; Machinists at work; Training for machine work.

Booklist 38:194 F 1 '42

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 18:113 Mr '42 20w

Reviewed by Dorothea Dawson

Library J 67:132 F 1 '42 40w

Wis Lib Bul 38:71 Ap '42

KELIHER, ALICE VIRGINIA, ed. Retail sales workers [by the] Picture fact associates. (Picture fact bks) 56p il $1; school ed 80c Harper

658.87 Salesmen and salesmanship—Juvenile literature. Retail trade—Juvenile literature (W) 41-25607

Similar to others in this series. This book, by means of text and photographs, presents briefly the history, some interesting facts, and vocational information about retail selling.

Booklist 38:194 F 1 '42

KELIHER, A. V.—Continued

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 18:113 Mr '42 20w

Reviewed by Dorothea Dawson

Library J 67:132 F 1 '42 40w

Wis Lib Bul 38:71 Ap '42

KELLAND, CLARENCE BUDINGTON. Sugar-foot. 307p $2.50 Harper

42-24977

A tale of early days in Arizona, with, as hero, a young ex-soldier of the Confederate army, gone West to escape carpetbagger Reconstruction at home and to find new land in the West.

Booklist 39:122 D 1 '42

"In these yarns of the raw and untamed frontier, Kelland uses the standard mixture of heroism, villainy, bad Indians and picturesque outlaws, but he gives the narratives an adult interest beyond the gunplay and gambling. By creating characters with a vision of the future, and a sense of their role in transforming the arid plains and untitled valleys into a homeland where men will some day live in peace and prosper, Mr. Kelland adds meaning to his melodrama." Lisle Bell

+ Books p24 O 4 '42 450w

"Stirring romance of our last frontier—the gold-mining town of the late Sixties and early Seventies." Drake DeKay

+ N Y Times p24 O 18 '42 460w

KELLER, ADOLF. Christian Europe today. 310p $3 Harper

274 Europe—Religion. Church and state. World war, 1939—Religious aspects 42-20873

Comprehensive survey of the state of religion in Europe today—in Bolshevik Russia and Nazi Germany, and in the occupied and conquered countries. The author is a pioneer in the ecumenical movement and director of the European Central bureau for relief. Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Keller's book is a product of ecumenical statesmanship. Both the perspectives of the author and the evidence which he gathers, prove that despite the tragic divisions of church there is a reality in its world-wide fellowship. The book will undoubtedly serve to strengthen the bonds of this fellowship." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Books p21 O 18 '42 800w

"No one else could have written as good a book as this about the religious situation in Europe today. Dr. Keller himself could have written a better one if he had (a) organized more systematically the immense fund of information in his possession, (b) supported his generalizations with more specific and documentable data, and (c) reserved for another volume at least the greater part of the theological interpretations and the prophetic conjectures which, valuable as they are when coming from such a mind as his, inevitably crowd out much important factual material and divert attention from verifiable history to highly controversial matters of opinion about it." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 59:1028 Ag 26 '42 1100w

Christian Science Monitor p11 O 3 '42 1150w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 156:20 S 15 '42 550w

"No matter what books one has read, religious or secular, every thoughtful Christian should read this book. It will check hasty generalizations, will open perspectives of both horror and hope, and above all will strengthen the conviction that the present world revolution is more truly a spiritual struggle than a military warfare, than an economic breakdown, or even than racial hatreds. Wars, economics, and racial attitudes root in the fundamental values of a society. Daily bread, as Keller points out, is a problem of faith." E. S. Brightman

+ Crozer Q 19:333 O '42 950w

Wis Lib Bul 38:161 N '42

KELLER, ALBERT GALLOWAY. Net impressions. 349p $3.75 Yale univ. press

304 Social problems

A42-4762

"Professor Keller has just retired after teaching forty-two years at Yale, where he was a colleague of William Graham Sumner, with whom he was co-author of a four-volume Science of Society. In the present work . . . he presents in informal essays his resultant opinions, or 'net impressions,' on a number of important themes such as: science and superstition; the 'adjustment idea'; plans and planning . . . sex differences . . . marriage . . . limitation of offspring . . . the outlook of religion . . . and many others." (Christian Century) Index.

"The essays are pungent and racy. Keller pulls no punches, likes to take the unpopular side of an argument or to deflate a popular idol, and has a style that sparkles. About religion and many other topics he writes with a 'slant' as marked and as damaging as that which he attributes to Veblen's view of a leisure class."

+ Christian Century 59:1394 N 11 '42 260w

"Although provocative and interesting, without documentation or 'learned apparatus,' book is too weighty for wide popular reading. Will need to be introduced to readers, as title reveals nothing of book's content." J. S. Cleavenger

+ Library J 67:908 O 15 '42 80w

KELLER, CHARLES ROY. Second great awakening in Connecticut. 275p $3 Yale univ. press

277.46 Connecticut—Religious history

A42-2152

After the Revolution there came a period of religious indifference in the United States, but during the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries a period of religious revival occurred. At the time Connecticut was "probably the most active reform center in the country." The first three chapters of this book deal with this religious awakening, and are based largely on extracts from extant works. The remaining chapters contain facts and figures relative to the several missionary, reform and benevolent societies of the period. Bibliographical notes. Index.

Reviewed by S. E. Mead

Christian Century 59:958 Ag 5 '42 420w

Reviewed by C. H. Brewer

+ Churchman 156:14 My 15 '42 240w

KELLEY, MRS CAMILLE (MCGEE). Friend in court. 266p $3 Dodd

364 Juvenile courts. Juvenile delinquency 42-14166

The story of an achievement in youth reclamation in the juvenile court at Memphis. Judge Kelley has found in her work with juvenile delinquents that the "poorest real home in the shabbiest community, presided over by a loving mother and father, is better than the best 'state home' on earth." She illustrates her philosophy with human interest stories of many of the boys and girls who have appeared before her.

Booklist 38:420 J1 1 '42

"This is a warm, human document, full of compassion for the nearly a quarter-million youngsters who each year pass through our juvenile courts." S. G. Kling

+ Books p17 Je 7 '42 280w

"Intrinsically idealistic in tone, the book has a hard core of pragmatic common sense. Judge Kelley's approach to youth is imaginative, often intuitive; some of the devices she hits upon to solve human problems would utterly mystify any masculine law-giver and leave him guessing as to results. But hers has been a fruitful work, and this is a wise and friendly book. Lengthy perhaps, and suffering in spots from wordiness and preciousness. But fine in the grain; and sound." Margaret Davis

+ Cath World 155:632 Ag '42 400w

"In drawing her conclusions as to how the treatment of young offenders can be improved, Judge Kelley has avoided preachiness. Into her book she has put much of the same charity, loving understanding and spiritual vision that have made her work in Memphis outstanding." M. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 My 9 '42 450w

"The principles which Judge Kelley expounds are not new. But we never cease to gain hope and sound knowledge from learning them in individual stories, as in her sensible and inspiring book."

+ N Y Times p4 My 3 '42 550w

KELLEY, FRANCIS BEVERLY. Circus holiday; in which Stephen and Patricia see the circus from the inside out; photographed by Loomis Dean. 55p $1.50 Harper

791.3 Circus 42-13362

Two children, whose father is both the author of this book and the radio publicity man of Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey's circus, spend a summer vacation learning the ins and outs of the circus. They investigate everything from trapeze artists and midgets, to performing animals and the commissary department, and the story of their summer is supported by photographs.

"The fascination of circus routine, the precisely timed evolutions of the Big Top, the trapeze artists' life-saving technique of locking wrists go on around the delighted visitors all summer as the great show keeps the rule it goes by: 'Load the show; keep it moving.' " M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ag 9 '42 380w

"Excellent photographs help this true story along. Recommended for a wide range of ages. Supplements other circus material." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 67:583 Je 15 '42 50w
Wis Lib Bul 38:141 O '42

KELLEY, MAURICE WILLYLE. This great argument. 269p il $5 Princeton univ. press [22s 6d Oxford]

821 Milton, John 41-25819

"A study of Milton's 'De doctrina christiana' as a gloss upon 'Paradise lost.'" Subtitle

"This is a scholarly work of first-rate importance, a model of its kind in every way. It seems to me to have finally settled a long and sometimes rather disingenuous controversy." Theodore Maynard

+ Cath World 155:506 Jl '42 450w

"One feels that Kelley rides his thesis too hard. His insistence that Paradise Lost be always interpreted in the exact sense of Christian Doctrine not only leads him into a serious misinterpretation of Taylor's Milton's Use of Du Bartas, but also ignores a basic principle of Milton criticism. . . The total effect of such overemphasis is to dilute a study whose general method and direction are admirable. For it is undeniable that the device of using Christian Doctrine as a gloss upon Paradise Lost achieves major triumphs in refuting Sewall, Saurat, and Tillyard. Of the several who have tried, no student of Milton has more effectively disposed of Saurat's insistence on Cabalistic influence in Paradise Lost or of Tillyard's thesis of its fundamental pessimism than has Kelley." Arnold Williams

+ — Mod Philol 40:103 Ag '42 900w

KELLOR, FRANCES ALICE. Arbitration in action; a code for civil, commercial and industrial arbitrations. 412p $3.50 Harper

347.4 Arbitration and award. Arbitration. Industrial 41-23598

"Intended as a very explicit guide to arbitration procedure. 'It undertakes to set forth principles and standards of law and practice and a way of proceeding under them.' A summary of the statutes governing arbitration, by states; the text of the U.S. Arbitration act, and other documentary matter is given in appendices. An important work for libraries in industrial centers." (Wis Lib Bul) Table of cases. Index.

Booklist 38:204 F 15 '42

Reviewed by P. G. Phillips
Harvard Law R 55:1417 Je '42 2400w
Management R 31:110 Mr '42 50w

Reviewed by W. J. Dunn
Springf'd Republican p10 D 18 '41 460w

Wis Lib Bul 38:27 F '42

KELLS, LYMAN MORSE; KERN, WILLIS FREDERICK, and BLAND, JAMES R. Spherical trigonometry with naval and military applications. 163p il $1.50; with tables $2.40 McGraw

514.6 Trigonometry, Spherical 42-15967

"This is a revision of the spherical trigonometry section of the author's Plane and Spherical Trigonometry (1940) giving the more important applications of trigonometry and logarithms to navigation and related subjects. The author's Five-place Logarithmic and Trigonometric Tables, published in 1935, is bound with it." Booklist

Booklist 39:142 D 15 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:41 Jl '42

KELLY, HARRY C. Textbook in electricity and magnetism. 356p il $3.75 Wiley

537 Electricity. Magnetism 41-18477

"This textbook on electricity and magnetism is intended to cover the field lying between those books that are either too elementary or too advanced for the usual undergraduate courses in science and engineering. The development proceeds from the fundamental concepts of mechanics and heat, with which the student is familiar, to the explanation of electrical and magnetic phenomena and attempts to make clear the introduction of necessary new assumptions, the reasons for their introduction, and the correlation of electricity with other branches of science. . . The method of development is a logical rather than an historical one, but more than the usual amount of history is introduced to familiarize the student with the atmosphere in which the concepts were developed." (Pref) Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 26:54 O '41

"Numerous historical allusions scattered through the text, quotations as chapter headings, and a smooth style make this book pleasant reading. Each chapter is broken up into short articles, the topic of which is printed in bold faced type. Articles are unnumbered, but equations are numbered from the beginning of each chapter, this number being preceded by the chapter number. The index is adequate. The criticisms of theory we have made would apply equally well to many books of this type now in widespread use." W. R. Smythe

+ R of Scientific Instruments 13:176 Ap '42 1050w

KELSEN, HANS. Law and peace in international relations. 181p $2 Harvard univ. press

341 International law and relations. Peace. International cooperation A 42-1722

"In his Oliver Wendell Holmes Lectures, delivered at the Harvard Law School in 1941, Professor Hans Kelsen concludes that possibly the fatal defect of the League of Nations lay in 'the fact that the authors of the Covenant placed at the center of this international organization not the Permanent Court of International Justice, but . . . the Council of the League.' The solution he recommends as most likely 'to maintain peace within the international community' in the future is 'the submission of all disputes among member states without exception to the compulsory jurisdiction of an international court.'" Ann Am Acad

KELSEN, HANS—Continued

"Both the distinguished author and the theme of this volume, containing the first of the lectures recently established in memory of the late Mr. Justice Holmes, suggest the cataclysm that today shakes the world. One of that large band of Continental scholars who have been exiled from their native lands, whether because of race or outstanding intelligence or both, by dictatorships that fear the light, and, seeking asylum under the Statue of Liberty, are significantly contributing to the development of science in this country, Hans Kelsen is the acknowledged leader of the most distinctive school of juristic thought that Europe has developed in recent years." H. E. Yntema

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:967 O '42 1000w

Reviewed by H. W. Briggs

Ann Am Acad 223:220 S '42 500w

Reviewed by P. E. Corbett

Harvard Law R 56:154 S '42 1000w

"The result constitutes one of the most original contributions to the burning question of the causes underlying the failure of the League of Nations to preserve international peace and the future replacement of its faulty machinery." Joachim von Elbe

Yale Law J 51:1227 My '42 1050w

KELSEY, VERA. Brazil in capitals. 326p il $3.50 Harper

913.1 Brazil—Description and travel. Cities and towns—Brazil (W) 42-36008

Arranging her material around twenty-eight leading cities of Brazil the author writes of their history, architecture, markets, industries and present day life. Each city is made a prototype of the life in its surrounding country. "For Brazil's provincial capitals are not secondary towns, as is ordinarily the case in this country, but 'by custom are the industrial and commercial, cultural and artistic, religious and social, educational, scientific, military capitals also.' And not for one moment can Rio de Janeiro be accepted as representative of all Brazil." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:188 F 1 '42

Bookmark 3:13 Mr '42

"The visitor to Brazil will find 'Brazil in Capitals' an informative companion, concisely factual and free from that tedious detail of the overstuffed guide book which leaves the bored reader in a 'so-what?' frame of mind. For Miss Kelsey provides no more than any intelligent reader can pleasantly absorb." Blair Niles

+ Books p8 Ja 18 '42 450w

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 155:121 Ap '42 230w

"Miss Kelsey's new book, reworking her knowledge and experience and utilizing a lot that didn't fit in the earlier work [Seven Keys to Brazil, Book Review Digest, 1940] although not really as good for the home reader as the earlier one, is excellent. 'Brazil in Capitals' is arranged and written as an intelligent guide for someone who is going there or is unusually interested in the country." Philip Burnham

+ Commonweal 35:348 Ja 23 '42 490w

Reviewed by Julia Sabine

Library J 66:902 O 15 '41 110w

"To those who wish to make 'arm-chair' explorations of Brazil the reading may be well recommended."

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 25 '42 650w

"A valuable informal guidebook."

+ New Yorker 17:60 Ja 10 '42 60w

Wis Lib Bul 38:29 F '42

KELSEY, VERA. Maria Rosa; everyday fun and carnival frolic with children in Brazil; il. by Candido Portinari. $2 Doubleday

(W) 42-15426

Picture-story book about a little Brazilian girl who wanted quite desperately to attend the great carnival in Rio de Janeiro, how her family tried to take her mind off the idea, and what finally happened. Illustrated by Brazil's leading artist.

Booklist 38:430 Jl 1 '42

"No better way could be found of showing special pleasures Rio offers to children: the parade crowns other entertainments. Its fantastic quality, expressed in cloudblike colors and grotesque shapes rather like Marie Laurencin crossing the Line, makes everything appear as in a dream world: this, while giving the work artistic unity and a strange beauty, greatly increases the sense of unfamiliarity. I do not know how much our children will learn about Brazil from these impressions in color, beautifully reproduced by offset lithography; perhaps our little people and theirs will meet in the world of dream common to imaginative children, especially as the brief story appeals to a child anywhere."

+ Books p16 My 10 '42 430w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 28 '42 140w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 37:119 N 20 '42 20w

"The South American atmosphere of this large and decorative book bears the stamp of a welcome authenticity." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:254 Jl '42 100w

"Charming picture story of children in Brazil. Candido Portinari's colorful illustrations are very gay and fanciful. They look as though children had drawn them, which may or may not be an attraction to children. . . . Recommended for children through fifth grade." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 67:583 Je 15 '42 50w

"The story . . . is full of the excitement and gaiety of Brazil in carnival time and it is very childlike." R. A. Hill

+ Library J 67:881 O 15 '42 80w

"The story catches the essence of all carnivals, and in its details it gives us, too, festive glimpses of Brazil as its children see it. Candido Portinari, a Brazilian artist, matches the carnival spirit in his colorful illustrations." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Je 28 '42 180w

"Portinari's big pictures are, of course, distinguished of their kind, half of them being in luscious and melting color. That young North Americans can make much out of their impressionistic semi-naïve, semi-sophisticated technique seems dubious to this reviewer."

New Yorker 18:72 My 23 '42 90w

KEMMERER, EDWIN WALTER. A B C of inflation; with particular reference to present-day conditions in the United States. (Whittlesey house publication) 174p $1.75 McGraw

338.5 Inflation (finance). Prices. U.S.—Economic policy (W) 42-23478

In this book a well known writer on finance, professor of international finance at Princeton, presents answers to such questions as: What is inflation? What forces threaten serious inflation today? How does inflation affect wages? How does inflation affect bondholders and stockholders? Is compulsory saving a desirable method of checking inflation? What are the price control methods now in force and how are they succeeding? etc.

"Persons of conservative economic views will find Professor Kemmerer a realist. He warns us solemnly that there will be serious inflation during and still more after the war unless the government shows more political courage. The most recent developments suggest that Professor Kemmerer is a true prophet." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic 170:162 D '42 80w

Booklist 39:193 Ja 15 '43

Reviewed by Emerson Hynes

Commonweal 37:380 Ja 29 '43 490w

"Some of the discussion is already out of date. There remains a lucid, easy exposition of the nature and causes of inflation, illuminated by some account of past experiences but sticking closely to our present problem. In this section, which comprises the major part of the book, Dr. Kemmerer is, as usual, the complete master of his material. . . . From the standpoint of this reviewer Dr. Kemmerer's discussion of the means of controlling inflation is a good deal less satisfactory than his description of the problem itself." E. V. Bell

+ — N Y Times p2 N 8 '42 550w

KENDALL, WILLMOORE. John Locke and the doctrine of majority-rule. 141p $2; pa $1.50 Univ. of Ill.

320.1 Locke, John. Democracy 41-52730

"The present monograph is the first of a series intended to contribute to political literature a history of the speculation that has surrounded the question of the role of the majority in the life of the state. This volume must be considered, then, not only as a work in itself, but also as the beginning of a number of studies intended to carry the doctrine of majority rule from the time of Locke through the thought of contemporary political philosophy. . . 'Majority rule' is universal, equal suffrage operating through an adequate machinery for popular consultation. . . The series begins with John Locke since Kendall sees in him the first political writer who recognized the full implications of the term." Social Forces

"This is a highly important, perhaps a revolutionary, book. . . What no one can challenge is the admirable scholarship, the profound learning, the meticulous respect for the text, which the author has shown. Even if subsequent investigation and discussion should lead to some modification of the conclusions, the book is bound to remain a landmark in the study of Locke's political philosophy." Eugene Forsey

+ Am J Soc 48:136 J1 '42 600w

"Of his reexamination of Locke, it is fair to say that, though it rests on close reasoning and shows considerable skill in argumentation, as well as close acquaintance with Locke's text, it is, nevertheless, neither a complete nor an entirely fair assessment of Locke's position. . . Lastly it must be stated that, though connections between different parts of Locke's theory may be clear in Mr. Kendall's mind, he does not always make those connections clear to others. This is partly the result of poor writing: each chapter seems to stand alone; and in each chapter the sheer joy of close analysis and detailed criticism unfortunately leads to the obscuring even of the theme of that particular section. . . Yet, with all this said, the work was worth undertaking, and students of Locke and of majority-rule democracy alike will find it necessary to take the author's findings into account. It is moreover, to be hoped that Mr. Kendall will continue, as he proposes, his examination of the major contributors to the doctrine of majority-rule." T. I. Cook

+ — Am Pol Sci R 35:1165 D '41 1600w

J Philos 39:695 D 3 '42 900w

"As the first of a series the literary construction of the monograph is open to two suggestions. While formal studies in political philosophy will always have a limited appeal, the subject of majority rule is so important to the political society of the United States that Kendall should reach as large an audience as possible. This would involve a simplification of language and sentence structure in the succeeding volumes. Also in keeping with this goal would be the substitution in the text of translated for original quotations from non-English sources. The author has made a good start on a bold venture; there should be as little as possible in the way of excess baggage." J. L. Godfrey

+ Social Forces 20:417 Mr '42 320w

KENNEDY, MRS BESS (DAVISON). Lady and the lions. (Whittlesey house publication) 221p il $2.50 McGraw

799.27744 Hunting—U.S. Trapping. Pumas (W) 42-23342

The author married a young Texas ranchman who in bad times took a job hunting coyotes and mountain lions for the United States government. After her husband had taught her what he knew about trapping and hunting Bess Kennedy got a similar job for herself—and made good at it. This book is an account of their home life, their travels, and their adventures.

Booklist 39:134 D 15 '42

"The Lady and the Lions' shows what a girl can do when she sets her mind—and her traps—to it. It is also a lively and unconventional bit of autobiography."

+ Books p49 N 15 '42 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '42

"Courage here in plenty and a new field in literature. Recommended generally but especially for young people." L. M. Kinloch

+ Library J 67:844 O 1 '42 70w

KENNEDY, RAYMOND. The ageless Indies. 208p maps $2 Day

919.1 East Indies

42-17780

An introduction to the Dutch East Indies, "its geography and climate, its population, its history, the appearance and customs of the people, white colonial life and government, and the economic and political importance of the islands now and in the future." The author is a sociologist and anthropologist who lived for several years in the Indies, and is now assistant professor of sociology at Yale. Index.

"Professor Kennedy's book is written in popular style, but it is for the most part accurate and scientific. As a sociologist and anthropologist with several years' residence in the Indies, he was exceptionally well qualified for the task he undertook." Amry Vandenbosch

+ Am J Soc 48:528 Ja '43 360w

Reviewed by L. A. Mills

Ann Am Acad 224:209 N '42 360w

Booklist 39:30 O 1 '42

"Condensing a dozen doctoral theses into a few pages, Mr. Kennedy imparts facts and knowledge subtly and painlessly. Whether discoursing on rice cultivation, domesticated animals, architecture, body mutilation, weapons, ceremonial dances and plays, genealogy or cannibalism, he brings to the reader the results of close, careful, sympathetic study. With all his scholarly attainment there is a complete lack of pedantry, a refreshingly intimate informality." P. J. Searles

+ Books p8 Ag 9 '42 700w

"A notably excellent book which is not too condensed for occasional lively picturesqueness, and not too exclusively factual for the expression of farseeing and important reflection at the end."

+ N Y Times p24 Ag 23 '42 750w

"Simple, deft writing; substantial and entertaining, too."

+ New Yorker 18:59 J1 18 '42 110w

Reviewed by E. A. Clark

Pacific Affairs 25:505 D '42 650w

"We are particularly fortunate in having this book, for its author, from his knowledge of the Dutch language, has had access to sources not available in English. . . There is not a dull page here. The book is factual, of course, but the elements of the story are cleverly integrated into an engrossing whole."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:2 Ag '42 420w

Wis Lib Bul 38:136 O '42

Reviewed by Rupert Emerson

Yale R n s 32:202 autumn '42 850w

KENNEDY, STETSON. Palmetto country (American folkways ser) 340p $3 Duell

917.59 Florida. Georgia. Alabama

(W) 42-36426

A picture of life in the "deepest South," Florida and the southern portions of Georgia and Alabama. Index.

Booklist 39:199 Ja 15 '43

"Palmetto Country' is a very good book, but I don't believe it's accurate to call it a true—meaning complete—picture of the Deep South. There is a lot more to this region than gets into the book, and not all of it is oppression and malnutrition. I like 'Palmetto Country'—for me there isn't a dull moment in it—and ex-

KENNEDY, STETSON—Continued
 cepting the above criticism I recommend it."
 Vereen Bell

+ — Books p2 Ja 17 '43 600w

Library J 67:1013 N 15 '42 30w

"The chief adverse criticism that may be made of 'Palmetto Country' is that the title is not a strong enough backbone to give the whole work unity. There is no continuous thread with which to stitch the varied parts together. The reader's mind has to leap too great distances between sections which are not connected by transitional material. On the good side of the ledger, and that contains by far the greater part of this accounting, lies the indubitable fact that Mr. Kennedy has written a fascinating account, gleaming with unknown and intriguing bits of information, a valued study based on solid research, a forceful argument animated by an alert and justice-loving mind." Carl Carmer

+ — N Y Times p4 D 27 '42 650w

KENNERLY, BYRON. Eagles roar! as told to Graham Berry; with an introd. by Charles Sweeny. 271p il $3 Harper

940.544942 Great Britain. Royal air force. Eagle squadron. World war, 1939—Aerial operations (W) 42-14853

Personal narrative of a young American aviator's experiences as a member of the Eagle squadron (American volunteers) of the Royal Air Force.

Booklist 39:8 S '42

"Graham Berry has done a tactful and extremely able job of retelling, based apparently largely on letters which Kennerly wrote home from England and aided, one would guess, by some flying experience of his own. So well has the retelling been done that on a first reading, the 'as-told-to' byline having been missed, the book seemed altogether in character and there were only a few spots where one might have suspected some editorial hand arranging things for effect." Wolfgang Langewiesche

+ Books p4 Je 28 '42 550w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:895 O 15 '42 10w

"There is a matter-of-factness about his story that, while it contributes to its realism, keeps the thrill content somewhat below that of similar recent books. This, however, is merely a comparison, for many of the incidents are full of color even when they parallel those described by other fighter-pilot authors. That the best of these are told of some one else is an indication of Mr. Kennerly's reticence about his own exploits."

+ N Y Times p24 Je 7 '42 600w

KENNINGTON, ERIC. Drawing the R.A.F.: a book of portraits; introduced by Sir Ronald Storrs. 143p $3 (12s 6d) Oxford

940.544942 Great Britain. Royal air force. Aviators 42-25906

Reproductions of about fifty drawings of members of the R.A.F., four of them in color. For most of those included short biographical sketches are given. There is an introductory essay about the artist.

"It is a collection to be treasured." J. B. + Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 28 '42 250w

"These Kennington pastels are much more mannered than the pencil portraits of Sir William Rothenstein in a recently published companion volume of portraits of British fliers. There is no questioning the strength and sincerity of the Kennington drawings, however, for, as Mr. Storrs says, Kennington's 'four-square individual style is particularly adapted to the portrayal of a service of team-individualist types.'" R. J. C.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 5 '43 650w

"The word 'hypnotic' serves aptly to sum up a peculiar 'staring' quality—similar to that in 'The Crowning with Thorns,' by Jerome Bosch—which is characteristic of all Mr. Kennington's work. In a large composition it might be regarded as a defect, as over-riding the formal effect of the whole which is the lasting appeal of a work of art, but in the individual portrait, particularly the portrait related to the heightened conditions of a moment in time, it has its advantages. Certainly nobody will complain because these portraits of flying men . . . are emphatic and incisive."

Times [London] Lit Sup p387 Ag 8 '42 500w

KENT, MRS LOUISE (ANDREWS). Mrs Appleyard's kitchen. 319p $2.50 Houghton 641.5 Cookery (W) 42-24242

An informally written cookbook which takes the reader from soup to cheese and back again with a stopover to consider menus for various occasions, including 'ladies' luncheons' and mountain climbers' picnics. Index.

Booklist 39:133 D 15 '42

"There are enough recipes in Mrs. Appleyard's book to feed the family, at formal dinner and summer picnic, around the year. The directions are clear and definite. It is a practical and useful book. But it is also a funny book. It is full of wit and domestic wisdom and touches of sentiment and poetry. You can sit down and read it like a familiar essay, or better yet like a letter from Louise Andrews Kent. Her husband is a lucky man." W. P. Eaton

+ Books p8 D 13 '42 700w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 27 '42 200w

Wis Lib Bul 38:183 D '42

KENT, MICHAEL. Mass of Brother Michel. (Science and culture ser) 307p il $2.50 Bruce pub.

42-7961

"In some respects, 'The Mass of Brother Michel' bears the stamp of the Middle Ages rather than the Renaissance and the time of the Huguenot troubles in southern France, its actual setting. . . The heart of the story is the spiritual growth of Michel, who mounts from a blithe enough worldliness through pain, disappointment, aspiration and heroism to the mystical priesthood of his consuming desire." Commonweal

"This book tells the beautiful and moving story of a young seigneur in sixteenth century France. . . In it Michael Kent catches the very essence of the religious life, its fervor and gaiety and interior peace. He presents it not as something negative, and escape from worldly misfortune, but as a positive surrender to divine love and the source of a happiness such as one rarely experiences in the world." N. E. Monroe

+ Cath World 155:250 My '42 450w

Reviewed by O. B. White

Commonweal 36:64 My 8 '42 380w

KENT, SHERMAN. Writing history. 136p $1 Crofts

808 History—Historiography. Reports—Preparation 41-27173

Manual on the nature of historical study and investigation, for teachers and college students. Contents: Why history; Finding the perfect topic; Elements of research; Organizing material; Writing; An abbreviated manual of style and usage; Bibliographical note; Making an index; Index.

Reviewed by A. B. White

Am Hist R 47:823 J1 '42 350w

"Though addressed to the undergraduate in college, Writing History may well prove the most stimulating volume which the high school teacher of history and social studies can include in his professional reading. . . Professor Kent's manual should be helpful, not only in a general sense, but also in many specific ways, to the teacher who honestly believes that no child is too young to begin to learn by doing." A. E. Bestor, jr.

+ Social Educ 6:233 My '42 650w

Social Studies 33:96 F '42 30w

KENT, WILLIAM H. B. Tenderfoot. 223p $2
Macmillan

Western story.

42-18664

Booklist 39:12 S '42

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p13 Ag 9 '42 100w

KENT, WILLIAM WINTHROP. Rare hooked rugs, and others, both antique and modern, from coöperative sources; critique by Hazel Boyer Braun. 227p il $3.50 Pond-Ekberg co, State & Andrew sts, Springfield, Mass.

745 Rugs

41-52069

"As in the author's The Hooked Rug [Book Review Digest, 1930] the beauty and great variety of designs shown in excellent plates are an outstanding feature of the book. Rugs which are either valuable or unusual in design are included; the subject of old and new designs is treated more specifically than in the former book. Includes reproductions, the future of hooked rug design, and care of rugs." Booklist

Booklist 38:174 Ja 15 '42

"The beauty of this monograph is worthy of its subject."

+ Books p16 Mr 22 '42 150w

"The last word on hooked rugs, spoken in authoritative manner." F. T. Howe

+ Spring'd Republican pfe D 28 '41 290w

KENYON, THEDA. Pendulum. 476p $2.75
Messner

42-9897

Three generations of American women are described in this story, which extends in time from the close of the last century to the present, and includes three wars. The pendulum swings from Margaret Pendleton, a belle of the nineties living in the family home on Madison avenue, to Margie, also of Pendleton blood, at the threshold of the present World war.

"Theda Kenyon's novel has many characters, a plot of considerable intricacy, a theme of perennial interest and it is expertly written. It touches on three wars, but basically it is a narrative of three generations of women—and three generations of women should enjoy it." Lisle Bell

+ Books p16 My 3 '42 350w

"The novel is very rich in its illustrations of a changing world, its implications and comments. It has its flaws, of course. . . But on the whole this is an interesting, intensely American novel." L. M. Field

+ — N Y Times p21 Ap 19 '42 650w

KEPLER, THOMAS SAMUEL, comp. Contemporary religious thought; an anthology. 423p $3.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

230.082 Religious literature—Collections

41-25071

"The selections in this anthology are arranged under six headings which represent subjects of primary importance in the field of the philosophy of religion. . . Under each heading appear articles which present different religious viewpoints or diverse approaches to the subject; and particular voice is given to the various schools of deism, theism, and humanism. In the appendix is a bibliography suggesting further contemporary readings upon each of the six subjects, also a biographical index giving brief information about each writer and a sentence appraisal of his religious position." Pref.

+ Christian Century 58:1545 D 10 '41 260w

"The selections are not all of the same value, and many significant writers are omitted. The chapters give a good cross-section of contemporary liberal theology, with just enough conservatism to give spice, and a touch of mysticism. To guard against too easy acceptance of theism, there are some chapters by leading humanists. The book is not hard reading, and it provides a small library for those who do not have the originals." R. C. Miller

Churchman 156:17 Mr 1 '42 120w

KERES, PAUL. Best games of chess, 1931-1940; sel. and annot. by Fred Reinfeld. 224p il $3 McKay [10s 6d Bell, G]

794.1 Chess

42-7900

Seventy-seven games of chess, as played by the young Estonian who is a challenger for the world's chess championship. Contains a short sketch of Keres' life, and annotations on each game. Diagrams. Indexes of openings and players.

Reviewed by Julian Hammersley

Spec 168:210 F 27 '42 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p59 Ja 31 '42 120w

KERNAN, WILLIAM FERGUS. Defense will not win the war. 193p $1.50 Little 940.53 World war, 1939-. Strategy

(W) 42-36083

A lieutenant colonel in the United States army discusses the present war situation. He points out that since the myth of our invulnerability was broken at Pearl Harbor, it is up to us to use other than defensive tactics in the future. His arguments are that sea power is no longer decisive without land power to back it; defensive land power is doomed; and that we must take the offensive somewhere in Europe—preferably Italy.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: ALA (1)
Books (9) PW (6) RB (2) W (1)

Booklist 38:226 Mr 1 '42

"The story of this book is in its title. The drama of the book is in Colonel Kernan's brilliant use of history, contemporary events and invective. It is a long time since a dashing and imaginative theme has been defended with such verve." Herbert Agar

+ Books p3 Mr 8 '42 800w

"Far be it from anyone but a highly trained professional to venture even a guess as to the wisdom of Colonel Kernan's recommendation; but he has written a timely and readable book which will without question be widely circulated and will provide much fireside discussion."

+ Cath World 155:125 Ap '42 200w

"Doubtless British and American staff officers can shoot more than one hole in his thesis. Even the civilian will have questions about some of his assumptions. . . Yet this little book throws very effective technical knowledge and lively reasoning behind the popular instinct which says, Attack." D. M. R.

Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 10 '42 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '42

"This little book is worth reading for its slashing style, its many apt illustrations from history and, most of all, for its effectiveness in sharpening civilian appreciation of the grand strategy of what is more truly a world war than any that has yet preceded it." Alvin Adey

+ Current Hist 2:141 Ap '42 270w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:775 J1 '42 150w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates

Nation 154:549 My 9 '42 1000w

"This book is a credit to the United States Army and a disgrace to the United States. It took courage on the part of Lieutenant-Colonel Kernan and his immediate superiors to challenge the fatuous policy of waiting and dodging and bluffing and retreating that has brought the American people to the desperate state in which they find themselves today. . . This is a book which every intelligent American should read." Lewis Mumford

+ New Repub 106:373 Mr 16 '42 1150w

KERNAN, W. F.—Continued

"The present reviewer feels that the merits of Colonel Kernan's volume have been greatly over-rated. If it seems presumptuous for a layman to criticize a professional soldier's proposed strategy, one can offer in this case three excuses: (1) Many of the author's proposals involve not merely military strategy in the technical sense but political, economic and common-sense considerations in which he can claim no special authority. (2) So far as the sea and air arm are concerned, he is apparently himself an amateur. (3) Finally, the present reviewer could probably rally (as Colonel Kernan would wryly admit) much more 'expert' Army and high official opinion in support of his main criticisms than the colonel could for his main proposals." Henry Hazlitt

N Y Times p3 Mr 15 '42 1300w

"Since I am without competence in military matters, all I can do is record my impression that Colonel Kernan's book makes more sense in its hundred and ninety-three vigorous pages than have most of the ponderous tomes of what are known as the experts. . . If the Colonel's arguments are generally confirmed by authorities, this would seem a first-rate book to place in every private's knapsack and every bluejacket's duffelbag and on every congressman's desk. At any rate, no thoughtful citizen should avert his eyes from what 'Defense Will Not Win the War' has to say." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:60 Mr 7 '42 400w

"It is rather a pity that the writers of such provocative and evocative books on military subjects as this cannot ever seem to combine between one set of covers a fundamental correctness of theory with a fundamental adherence to fact. . . For example, in his peroration Col. Kernan pleads brilliantly for the invasion of Italy as a sure step toward winning the war with the Axis. . . If Col. Kernan's program of invasion is carried out to only the extent of three months we would have to find something like 6,000,000 tons of ships, or more than Britain and the United States together have been able to build since the beginning of the war. Suggestions like this are simply barking at the moon." Fletcher Pratt

Sat R of Lit 25:14 Mr 14 '42 550w

Reviewed by Alan Rock

Spec 168:426 My 1 '42 600w

"This outspoken, hard-hitting call to action has apparently attracted considerable attention in America, to which it was primarily addressed. The more the pity, then, that so many of its facts are inaccurate. It is not merely that the British conduct of this war and the last is presented in an unfavourable and sometimes sinister light: the wonder is that a colonel of the American Army now on active service, who seeks to apply the lessons of military history to the present crisis, could go so far wrong over matters of current knowledge. . . But his book has the great merit of provoking thought."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p195 Ap 18 '42 650w

Reviewed by F. S. Dunn

Yale R n s 31:812 summer '42 180w

KERNER, ROBERT JOSEPH. Urge to the sea; the course of Russian history; the role of rivers, portages, ostroms, monasteries, and furs. 212p il maps $2.50 Univ. of Calif.

947 Russia—History

42-36949

"Professor Kerner's volume deals with Russia's territorial expansion throughout centuries, and in particular with the part played in the process by the country's rivers and portages. As the author himself indicates, the importance of the factors discussed in his study has been emphasized in the works of several Russian historians, and yet no systematic treatment of the subject has been available. This Professor Kerner attempts to supply in what he calls a 'brief preliminary exposition,' but-tressing his main contentions by abundant geographical data and liberal extracts from the sources." (Yale R) Index.

Reviewed by J. D. Clarkson

Am Hist R 48:62 O '42 600w

Reviewed by S. R. Tompkins

Ann Am Acad 223:213 S '42 500w

Booklist 38:423 Jl 1 '42

Reviewed by Michael Karpovich

Yale R n s 31:849 summer '42 280w

KERR, SOPHIE (MRS UNDERWOOD). Michael's girl. 302p $2.50 Farrar

(W) 42-3952

Michael Rodó was Spanish plus Irish, and a gentleman, altho he had little or no education. When he and his little daughter Letty appeared at the country estate of Phil Bryant, Michael was looking for a job as gardener. Thruout the years that followed Michael became a tower of strength to Elin Bryant and when Phil crashed in the depression of 1929, Michael and his Letty, with their simple goodness were Elin's prop and mainstay.

Booklist 38:347 My 15 '42

"'Michael's Girl' has its appeal as the study of a picturesque character, but its analysis of an unhappy marriage is not quite lifelike. Perhaps the story would seem more real if the reader's patience with Elin's husband didn't fall so far short of hers." Lisle Bell

+ — Books p22 Mr 8 '42 150w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p24 Mr 8 '42 320w

KEY, FRANCIS SCOTT. Star spangled banner; pictured by Ingri and Edgar Parin d'Aulaire. unp $2 Doubleday

784.71 (W) 42-51228

"A beautiful book illustrating 'The Star Spangled Banner.' The d'Aulaires have interpreted the words with a charming set of lithographs. Theirs is the way a child itself might visualize the song while singing it—naive and gentle and a bit dim as to meaning." Sat R of Lit

"Children will share with their parents—as they will the best of this year's books—the most beautiful, touching, ennobling picture book of those by which the d'Aulaires have enriched childhood." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 N 15 '42 280w

"There are some remarkable achievements in the lithography of the pictures which have a hazy background of symbolism behind the drawing. A realistic picture of Lincoln, who 'preserved us a nation,' is one of the most striking pages. This picture book for young children should deepen their feeling for America." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:424 N '42 110w

"An unusual picture book . . . giving a very interesting interpretation to passages which have been just words to many grown people as well as children. Ambitious as the task was the feeling of the whole is very childlike. Some of the pictures are more successful than others, but all show imagination and deep patriotism." R. A. Hill

+ Library J 67:882 O 15 '42 60w

"Unfortunately, complete accompaniment is omitted, making it necessary to look elsewhere for the music. Timely book." E. G. Mullan

Library J 68:38 Ja 1 '43 50w

New Yorker 18:114 D 12 '42 80w

Reviewed by Marjorie Flack

+ Sat R of Lit 25:25 N 14 '42 50w

"Patriotic without being mawkish. Most timely picture book of 1942."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:60 D 5 '42 30w

KEY, VALDIMER ORLANDO. Politics, parties and pressure groups. 814p $3.75 Crowell

320.973 Politics, Practical. Political parties —U.S. Lobbying

42-11732

"The introductory chapter on 'Politics,' and the first part of the volume on 'The Contenders for Power,' are properly founded on the assumption that an adequate understanding of politics cannot be gained by attention to political parties alone. These early chapters deal with a succession of important 'clusters of interests' operative in the American political scene. Severally, they advance, with illustration, the analysis of a series of 'characteristics or features of political behavior.' The second and third parts of the volume, 'The Party System' and 'The Electorate and Electoral Methods,' present the usual material concerning parties and elections. Two unusual inclusions are the chapters on 'Electoral Behavior' and 'Straw Polls.' These serve well to introduce students to some of the quantitative and precision work which has been developing in the field. The final part of the volume, 'Diverse Political Techniques,' introduces some consideration of matters fundamental to the political order, such as 'The Role of Force,' 'Pecuniary Sanctions,' and 'Education as Politics.'" (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

"Designed as a college textbook, this volume effectively combines the standard, traditional material of the subject with realistic and precise analyses which some of the profession may consider 'novel.' Instructors bound by traditional thinking will have more difficulty with these unorthodox spots than will their students. The manual should prove a most stimulating teaching aid." H. C. Beyle

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:761 Ag '42 800w

"With the publication of this volume, Professor Key has joined that competent band of textbook writers in the field of party politics who have considerably lightened the task of student and teacher. . . This very readable and thoughtful volume is eloquent testimony to the importance and ever growing interest of the field of American politics." Belle Zeller

+ Ann Am Acad 223:237 S '42 700w

KEYES, MRS FRANCES PARKINSON (WHEELER). Crescent carnival. 807p il $3 Messner

(W) 42-24673

Long historical novel, chronicling three generations of two New Orleans families. There are the Breckenridges—Andy, Breck, and Drew, father, son, and grandson, and their beautiful plantation Splendida, which eventually succumbs to the devastation of the Mississippi. There are also three generations of Leniors—Estelle, belle of the carnival in the nineties; Marie Céleste, who lost the Breckenridge she loved and found solace in a convent; and Stella, carnival queen in 1940. Around these characters are woven fifty years of New Orleans history.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (8) N Y Times (9) RB (2)

Booklist 39:201 Ja 15 '43

"The intricacies of the plot are smoothly handled, and the leading figures of the story are delineated at full length under the author's sympathetic unhurried pen. For readers who enjoy following the intricacies of municipal politics, 'Crescent Carnival' is truly a storehouse of lively data, from the days when lotteries were quite as fascinating a part of New Orleans life as the antics of Huey Long became in a later era. Fashions in gambling changed with the times, but the gambling instinct—as Mrs. Keyes shows—is in the very texture of the city's life." George Conrad

+ Books p21 N 22 '42 470w

"There's local color enough for three novels. Written with a nice instinct for the colorful detail and fortified by the years of research, 'Crescent Carnival' succeeds in being an interesting story of family progress. Pick a nice long week-end for this one. You'll need the time, but it's worth it." Elizabeth Watts

+ Boston Globe p21 N 11 '42 300w

"The book is written with brilliance and verve and in observation of manners, vividness and density of detail, and sustained narrative ability is a marked success, in spite of the cumbersome apparatus of old diaries, newspapers, and letters the author has carried along with her. . . For a mature reader, who likes to settle down with the past and watch it unroll gradually, the book will be a treat. It is unfortunate that a lack of due reticence makes it unfit for general circulation." N. E. Monroe

+ Cath World 156:501 Ja '43 320w

"The 'romances' are detailed with unpleasant explicitness in the current best-seller mode, with the tedious love-making of a movie scenario, and the mawkish sentimentality of the more lurid Victorian novel. It is hard to be 'kind' to the manifest absurdities of the book. . . These trivial, futile, frustrated lives take on a glow of vitality and warmth from their background—New Orleans with its environs." Lucile Harrington

+ Commonweal 37:232 Ja 1 '43 550w

"In this lavish novel of Louisiana, Frances Parkinson Keyes has veritably outdone herself. None of her dozen earlier romances, long and brilliantly descriptive though many of them were, reached much more than half the prodigious length of 'Crescent Carnival.' Certainly none, not even 'Fielding's Folly,' was wrought in such full and rich and vividly photographic detail. . . For all its occasionally cumbersome detail—the author is fond of putting in newspaper clippings and floor plans in their tedious entirety—the story moves with swiftness. Its frank emotionalism and romanticism, no less than its wealth of social and domestic and architectural lore, should guarantee it an enormous following among women readers." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 N 8 '42 950w

KHUN DE PROROK, BYRON. Dead men do tell tales [foreword by Raymond C. Schindler]. 328p il $2.75 Creative age

916.3 Ethiopia

42-8455

The author is an archeologist and explorer. This book is an informal record of some of his experiences and observations in North Africa, particularly the country between the Blue Nile and the Red Sea.

"Slavery, riches, beauty, cruelty—Count de Prorok's Ethiopia is a compound of adventure, history, facts and legend, important reading on the fabulous land." M. C. Hubbard

+ Books p27 O 4 '42 550w

"The reader will probably find most exciting those accounts of the religious orgies and mysteries witnessed by Count Prorok in the deep interior of the jungle country. This is swift and lively reading for anyone who wishes to travel far through time and space."

+ Boston Globe p17 Ap 8 '42 150w

Reviewed by J. F. Thorning

Cath World 155:632 Ag '42 360w

Christian Century 59:498 Ap 15 '42 230w

New Repub 106:550 Ap 20 '42 50w

"'Dead Men Do Tell Tales' is an entertaining travel book. . . The writing is not without extravagance, but it flows along smoothly."

N Y Times p8 Jl 12 '42 300w

KIDDER, MRS MARY BIGELOW (BARBOUR). No limits but the sky; the journal of an archaeologist's wife in Peru. 233p il $3 Harvard univ. press

918.5 Peru—Description and travel

A 42-2159

"Mary Kidder is the wife of an archeologist and this book is her diary written on two archeological expeditions which she and her husband, Alfred Kidder II, made into Peru and Bolivia in 1937 and 1939. Although Mrs. Kidder herself has an enviable background in American archeology, her journal is not concerned with scientific matters but rather with the things that happen to archeologists along their journeys." Sat R of Lit

"The journal runs gayly and unaffectedly from one happy incident to another. There are anxieties and dangers, but the torrent of native tears which almost drowned the departing Kidders in a sea of sorrow testified to the happiness of the experience. 'Feliz viaje, Señora!' the workers cried. It was indeed a happy journey." Ellery Sedgwick

KIDDER, M. B. B.—Continued
+ Atlantic J1 '42 200w

Booklist 38:424 J1 1 '42

"Mrs. Kidder's volume will naturally be read by archeologists, but it should have attraction for all those who enjoy accounts of travel of any sort. Its most lasting value may lie in its revelation of a manner of living that may baffle any woman foolhardy enough to marry a man whose profession leads him off the highways away from the cities." C. C. Albritton, Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 25:40 My 16 '42 360w

KIERAN, JOHN, comp. Poems I remember. 565p $3 Doubleday

821.08 English poetry—Collections. American poetry—Collections (W) 42-50233

An anthology of "favorites" from English and American authors from Bacon to Kipling (no living writers are included) arranged chronologically. No index.

"If any reader wonders or questions, Mr. Kieran has an answer: 'this is not a gathering of memorable verse, but of remembered verse. . . Some things have been included under public pressure, some things excluded through private prejudice, and doubtless many fine things omitted through impenetrable ignorance.'"

+ Books p38 N 22 '42 380w

"'Poems I Remember' is a compilation to be perused with nostalgic pleasure. It is a work to be kept at one's bedside, or near one's favorite easy chair." A. M. Jakeman

+ Springfd Republican p6 N 30 '42 280w
Wis Lib Bul 38:183 D '42

KIEWIET, CORNELIUS WILLEM DE. See De Kiewiet, C. W.

KILPATRICK, WILLIAM HEARD. Selfhood and civilization; a study of the self-other process. 243p $1.50 Macmillan

152.72 Individuality. Social psychology. Culture. Civilization 41-12345

"As implied both in the title and the subtitle, this work is concerned with the idea that man is a 'self-other' compound. 'The aim is to exhibit the essential self-other nature of selfhood and to show how civilization has grown out of such a compounded selfhood and must in turn continue so to grow in order to develop and express their selfhood yet more fully.' Anyone familiar with the writings of George H. Mead will immediately feel at home in reading this series of essays." Am Soc R

"The book is interesting and suggestive." Marten Ten Hoor

+ Am J Psychol 55:296 Ap '42 600w

"Kilpatrick is at his best in his analyses of the problems of freedom, individuality, and security, treated at the end of the book." S. H. Britt

+ Am Soc R 7:457 Je '42 200w

School & Society 54:16 J1 5 '41 20w

KING, MARY WENTWORTH. Flood tide and stars. 249p $2 Mill

42-50075

Story of a happy family living in Boston, and the tragedy which came into their lives because of a secret too well kept. Part of the action takes place on Cape Cod, where a clever group of spies work on the sympathies of Jean Holbrook and her crippled great aunt. The time is the present.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p11 D 27 '42 180w

"It will be most appreciated by readers who like rapid-fire conversation, enjoy seeing a well born heroine fall into dire difficulties through no fault of her own and rise triumphantly out of them, and are not too particular about literary style."

Christian Century 59:1562 D 16 '42 50w

KING, RUFUS. Design in evil. 304p $2 Doubleday

42-14998

Detective story.

"'Design in Evil' is one of the agreeable events of the season, just the thing to get your intellects unhung in a thoroughly pleasing manner. A recommended item." Will Cuppy

+ Books p15 Je 7 '42 300w

"'Design in Evil' is, in our opinion, the best thing that Rufus King has ever written." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p23 Je 7 '42 220w

"Mr. King at his best."

+ New Yorker 18:72 Je 13 '42 60w

"Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:19 Je 13 '42 30w

"A tempest-tossed thriller with interesting psychological overtones."

+ Time 40:88 J1 6 '42 40w

KING, WILLIAM LYON MACKENZIE. Canada at Britain's side. 332p $3 Macmillan

971 World war, 1939—Canada. Canada—Politics and government A42-1308

"Canada's war effort, and it is truly a magnificent effort, is set forth eloquently in these pages which constitute a collection of significant speeches and statements delivered since the outbreak of war by the Right Honorable William Lyon Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada. . . Since 1919 Mr. King has been leader of the Liberal party of Canada. He was Prime Minister of Canada, with one brief interruption, from 1921 to 1930, and he has been Prime Minister continuously since 1935, having been re-elected for another five-year term in 1940. . . In some detail Mr. King outlines what the Canadian Air Force, Army and Navy are contributing to the allied cause. To this reader, however, Mr. King is most interesting for his preoccupation with Anglo-American affairs." Books

Reviewed by Joseph Driscoll

Books p10 Ja 18 '42 440w

Canadian Forum 21:253 N '41 270w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:784 J1 '42 10w

KING, WILLIAM PETER. Motives for Christian living. 188p $1.50 Harper

171.1 Christian ethics 42-19853

In part one, author sets forth the ethical ideals of Christianity as drawn mainly from Jesus and Paul. In part two he has tried to suggest the "motivating factors that will impart moral strength to lives that are hard beset by strong and subtle temptations. It is profitless to possess a knowledge of Christian standards unless we are earnestly striving to measure up to those standards." (Foreword) Bibliography.

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes

Books p24 O 25 '42 300w

"Here is a book that is easy reading, sparkling with illustrations, but digging deep into the soul of man and showing him his own imperfections and God's answer to his cry for cleansing." R. P. Marshall

+ Christian Century 59:1221 O 7 '42 800w

"The book is well worth reading, if for no other reason than to gain the inspiration of old religious truths expressed in a unique and original way. A seasoned Christian though, might be irritated by the obviousness of some observations. It is an improvement on Dr. King's last two books, Right and Wrong and Adventism. He should read up on economics; in one place he confuses capital with Capitalism. If he would systematize his thoughts and sandpaper them down, he might produce a near religious classic." A. L. Byron-Curtiss

+ Churchman 156:20 S 15 '42 200w

"While it is not expected that every reader will agree entirely with the conclusions of the writer, all will acknowledge that he has made a real contribution toward the important end he had in view. The book is outstanding for its readability, good sense, and practical helpfulness." Rittenhouse Neisser
+ Crozer Q 20:78 Ja '43 450w

KING-HALL, STEPHEN. Total victory. 306p
$2 Harcourt [7s 6d Faber]

940.53 World war, 1939—Peace 42-36114

"An English publicist argues that political warfare can furnish nearly half the strength necessary to defeat the Nazis if it carries within it the seeds of a planned democratic peace acceptable to the German people." New Yorker

"King-Hall has written a book whose entertaining qualities are sure to appeal to the modern school of Utopian thought, but the study is certainly weak in the ideas which so charmingly avoid the implications of international realities. In short, it is a confusing picture of a confused period which, at its best, is admittedly none too good." J. S. Roucek
— + Ann Am Acad 222:199 J1 '42 700w

Booklist 38:272 Ap 1 '42

Reviewed by J. F. Minife
Books p25 Ap 5 '42 550w
Boston Globe p15 My 20 '42 200w
Christian Century 59:562 Ap 29 '42 200w
Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 7 '42 470w

Reviewed by T. F. Opie
Churchman 156:19 My 1 '42 240w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '42
Current Hist 3:451 Ja '43 360w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:771 J1 '42 40w

"Commander King-Hall could not write a dull book if he tried. He describes this one as an agenda for discussion with annotations, and if the present reviewer, taking him at his word, stresses points of difference rather than of agreement, it is because space will not permit of doing both. Nevertheless, the book remains a valuable and provocative contribution to a vital subject and deserves to be both studied carefully and thought about." Clive Garsia
+ New Statesman & Nation 22:214 Ag 30 '41 1100w

"The charm of it all is a kind of disarmament. Who can have the heart to criticize the pontifical pronouncement that winning the war means winning the peace, that blockade is merely a nuisance to the Nazis and that there is 'no evidence of the enemy running short of planes'? We are reminded that the epithets awarded to Hitler repeat history. Similar compliments were paid to an 'execrable rebel traitor and assassin' called Napoleon. 'K.-H.' is quite in earnest. No leader of opinion has ever been more convinced of his leadership than he. But he is confronted by the prophet's perpetual dilemma. He has a message to deliver but how is he to win people's attention?" P. W. Wilson
N Y Times p3 Mr 15 '42 750w

"Persuasively written."
+ New Yorker 18:64 Mr 7 '42 40w

"The case for persistent and intelligent anti-Nazi propaganda is, of course, unanswerable, but I find it hard to share Commander King-Hall's confidence in the particular modus operandi he expounds. Others, however, may be more readily convinced, and I hope they will read the book and form their own opinions. Incidentally, in the interests of propaganda as well as of accuracy, it is unwise to assert that 'in 1899 Great Britain declared war upon two small republics in South Africa.' She did not. There were plenty of faults on both sides, but it was the Boers who delivered an ultimatum and fired the first shots." H. W. H.
Spec 167:160 Ag 15 '41 650w

Reviewed by D. C. Coyle
Survey G 31:332 J1 '42 290w

"The sincerity and ingenuity with which Commander King-Hall expounds these views will impress every reader. The book is intended as a popular one, and does not disdain such methods of presentation as the attempt to define the relative value of the weapons at our disposal in mathematical units adding up to ten as the number required for total victory. . . The effect of the book is perhaps a little spoiled by superficialities and by a good deal of casualness in arrangement. But the argument as a whole is a serious one and deserves to be studied by those in charge of our policy. Commander King-Hall does not take the easy line of throwing stones at the Ministry of Information. He recognizes that its efforts are bound to be half-hearted and ineffective in the absence of any central directives."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p414 Ag 30 '41 700w

KINGSLEY, JOHN DONALD, and PETE-GORSKY, DAVID W. Strategy for democracy. 342p $3 Longmans

321.041 International cooperation. Economic policy. Reconstruction (1939-) 42-7153

Presents a program for American postwar world reconstruction, partly based on papers presented last June at the Antioch conference on progressive action and postwar reconstruction. Among the problems considered are the military organization of the postwar world; minorities; economic planning; intellectual progress; and foreign policies. Some contributors are: Pierre Cot, Max Werner, Albert Guérard, Oscar Janowsky, and Mordecai Ezekiel.

Reviewed by Read Bain
Am Econ R 32:594 S '42 1500w

Reviewed by Melchior Palyi
Am J Soc 48:133 J1 '42 390w

Reviewed by R. F. Harvey
Ann Am Acad 222:192 J1 '42 550w
Booklist 38:302 Ap 15 '42

Reviewed by R. H. Rovere
Books p12 My 17 '42 460w

Reviewed by C. B. MacPherson
Canadian Forum 22:156 Ag '42 500w

Reviewed by Honor Croome
Christian Science Monitor p11 My 9 '42 600w
Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '42

"The authors of the present volume have succeeded in presenting not only an informative and stimulating analysis of America's part in the world-wide revolution in the midst of which we now find ourselves, but, equally valuable, a program of action for all who would make democracy fulfil the promise inherent in the idea for which that word is the symbol and battle-cry." Alvin Adey
+ Current Hist 2:221 My '42 430w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:771 J1 '42 40w

"This book might well serve as a starting point for further reading on this important subject. Recommended." R. D. Minnich
+ Library J 67:223 Mr 1 '42 60w

"The book is the first real attempt in America to state the goals of democracy in both domestic and foreign terms, and it contains so much that is good that it seems ungenerous to be critical. Nevertheless, honesty compels the recognition of some obvious defects. Sometimes a confusion of counsel is offered by the various contributors, a weakness which symposiums seldom avoid. . . Some of the authors fail to define their program with sufficient precision. Pierre Cot's chapter on international organization is the most obvious example of this weakness. . . But this mistake is not as serious as the idea that it is only necessary to 'enlist . . . the support of agrarian elements' for a radical movement, the purposes of which are defined by labor, hoping rather lamely meanwhile that the farmers will forego their 'individualistic traditions.'" Reinhold Niebuhr
+ — Nation 154:428 Ap 11 '42 1150w

"It is essential to think of society as in process of change. In reviewing the book 'Grand Strategy' [The New Republic, December 22] I pointed out that there can be no efficient waging of war unless we view our war effort as a reconstructive process in itself. For those who share this belief, here, in 'Strategy for Democracy,' is a timely and very necessary book... The reviewer detects obscurities and even contradictions in the authors' thought, and he notes that the urbanity sometimes becomes academic, yet these objections are quite put down by the book's merits." Ralph Gates

KINGSLEY, J. D.—Continued
+ New Repub 106:433 Mr 30 '42 1250w

New Yorker 18:79 Mr 14 '42 60w

"Of all the books attempting to blueprint the future of democracy this study by two youthful teachers associated with Antioch College belongs among the most provocative and inclusive. Although it was written before America's entry into the war, a postscript after Pearl Harbor correctly states that the war has changed nothing of its significance. Indeed, it has added to it, for it demonstrates the enormous tasks and the even greater obstacles involved in the triumph of the democratic principle internationally and at home." R. N. Baldwin

+ Sat R of Lit 25:22 Ap 11 '42 800w

KIPHUTH, ROBERT JOHN HERMAN. How to be fit; foreword by John Kieran. 131p il $2 Yale univ. press

796.41 Exercise A42-5034

Clearly described and pictured exercises designed to free the body for use, tone up the muscles, perfect posture, and counteract stiff joints. The author is director of the gymnasium, and associate professor of physical education at Yale university.

"Here is a good book—short, clear, beautifully illustrated and full of interesting, graded exercises." C. C. Lund

+ Atlantic 170:168 D '42 110w

Booklist 39:133 D 15 '42

Books p29 D 13 '42 300w

Christian Century 60:81 Ja 20 '43 190w

"The entire conditioning program is complete and well balanced and this little volume makes a truly excellent investment for the average person who cannot afford or use costly gymnasium equipment." C. B. Moore

+ Springfield Republican p7e D 13 '42 190w

"I think Bob Kiphuth has made a magnificent contribution to those who will read his book and follow his advice. . . 'How To Be Fit' will take you by the hand and lead you to the road that all of us should follow." Grantland Rice

+ Yale R n s 32:374 winter '43 450w

KIPLINGER, WILLARD MONROE. Washington is like that. 522p $3.50 Harper

917.53 Washington, D.C.—Social life and customs. U.S.—Politics and government (W) 42-36235

"We needed a comprehensive book on Washington, and plainly Mr. Kiplinger was the man to write it. Since 1916 he has been a Washington reporter; since 1923 he has owned and edited the most successful of the Washington news letters for business men. He knows the town and its people; he knows how things get done there; he knows what questions are being asked by the people back home. Do you want a government job? Mr. Kiplinger tells you where to apply. Do you want to get a bill through Congress? Mr. Kiplinger tells you how to be an effective lobbyist. Do you want to know how the government plans ahead, or how congressmen spend their salaries, or how people make a success in Washington society? Mr. Kiplinger has answers to all these questions, besides a hundred amusing stories to prove that Washington is really like that." New Repub

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (24) B & T (1) N Y Times (16) PW (8) RB (3) W (1)

Booklist 38:367 Je 1 '42

"This is one of the most comprehensive books ever written about the nation's capital and the people there who are running the war. It is a democratic, chatty, inclusive sort of book, and its cast of characters runs the gamut from President Roosevelt to Nick the Greek who peddles peanuts outside the White House. Offhand it is difficult to think of a book which packs more information on the who, what, where, when and why of Washington, D.C. Any one who is eligible to serve in the armed forces, or to pay taxes, or to vote for (or against) a Congressman, should find this profitable reading. Some of the office holders sketched herein won't like it a bit if they are thin-skinned." Joseph Driscoll

+ Books p5 My 31 '42 1550w

Reviewed by William Abrahams

Boston Globe p19 My 27 '42 500w

"Mr. Kiplinger undertook to do a straight reporting job; and this he has done well. He does not take sides. Neither does he dodge disagreeable subjects. He simply explains in words that anyone can understand what has been going on and why. The result is doubtless the best book on Washington to have appeared in two decades or more." Neil MacNeil + Commonwealth 36:208 Je 19 '42 550w

Reviewed by J. S. Gurley

Current Hist 3:259 N '42 470w

"Actual work of reference rather than book for consecutive reading. Frankly journalistic." F. L. D. Goodrich

Library J 67:413 My 1 '42 80w

Reviewed by Robert Bendiner

Nation 155:16 Jl 4 '42 550w

"Mr. Kiplinger's book contains more information about the national capital and the national government than any other single volume in existence—even the Writers' Project guide to Washington, the Congressional Directory or the United States Government Manual. I have three complaints against it. . . As a reader, I feel that instead of writing a real book about Washington, with a story, an argument or a logical plan, he has put together a Washington encyclopedia, a collection of forty-seven chapters that might as well have been separate magazine articles. . . As a citizen, I feel that Mr. Kiplinger has a political bias that he tries to hide from his audience and sometimes hides from himself. . . Finally as a sometime Washingtonian, I feel that Mr. Kiplinger gives a very subdued and incomplete picture of the city in wartime." Malcolm Cowley

+ — New Repub 106:769 Je 1 '42 1150w

"Here is an admirable, entertaining, important and useful book. Rare among books on public affairs today—some of which appear turned out in greater haste than journalism—this is carefully prepared and thoroughly done." S. T. Williamson

+ N Y Times p1 My 31 '42 1100w

"Mr. Kiplinger has put in everything, and as a result his book is formless and in part rather trivial. At times, as in the chapter on women in Washington, we get little more than lists of names, including many obvious nonentities. Another minor failing is Mr. Kiplinger's whole-sale tolerance; he cannot find it in his heart to say a nasty thing about any of the hundreds of people he mentions, many of whom are fools, some of whom are knaves. But these are small matters." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 18:64 My 30 '42 550w

Pratt p21 D '42

"On the whole, it is the best guide book to the business of government in the United States yet written. It may not be quite the book to end books about Washington, but, addressed to the right persons, it can do a swell job of stopping a lot of nonsense." Duncan Aikman
+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 Je 6 '42 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 38:96 Je '42

KIRALFY, ALEXANDER. Victory in the Pacific; how we must defeat Japan; with maps and diagrams by the author. 283p $2.75 Day 940.542 World war, 1939—Pacific ocean. Japan—Defenses. Strategy (W) 42-36232

A detailed analysis of Japan's war strategy and a consideration of the ways in which the United Nations can win victory over her.

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Atlantic JI '42 250w

Booklist 38:366 Je 1 '42

Bookmark 4:11 N '42

"Because this book has so much that is suggestive, so much to stimulate the imagination which must labor to the full in the conception of any efficient military campaign, our strategists may well consult it, even though they are critical of it. In the meanwhile it is admirable fare for the less august among us." R. F. Armnecht

+ Books p14 Je 14 '42 1250w

Reviewed by H. W. Harris
Boston Globe p19 My 6 '42 10w

Christian Science Monitor p20 My 14 '42 500w

"'Victory in the Pacific' is an excellent combination of encyclopedic erudition and forceful, realistic thinking. Mr. Kiralfy's analysis of the underlying reasons for Japan's yet unbroken chain of conquests is the most exhaustive and convincing that has appeared so far, and is no less convincing or closely reasoned for having been written in the few weeks since Pearl Harbor." Gilbert Cant

+ Nation 154:520 My 2 '42 700w

Reviewed by G. E. Taylor
New Repub 106:738 My 25 '42 260w

"The author's insistence that we must uproot the smug theories of our past and outsmart our enemies is on eminently sound ground. But his own concepts of strategy and tactics are by no means similarly sound; he has very little concept of logistical problems; he puts too little emphasis upon the importance of air power; his style is somewhat difficult and his geographical and strategical similes unusual and needlessly involved. Despite these faults 'Victory in the Pacific' represents original thought and stimulates it—and very few books can claim such a distinction." Hanson Baldwin

+ — N Y Times p14 Ag 16 '42 370w

"Following close upon the heels of Seversky's exciting—and possibly epochal—'Victory through Air Power' comes Alexander Kiralfy's 'Victory in the Pacific,' by all odds the most detailed and masterly account we have yet had of the nature of Japanese strategy and the means we must take to overcome it. Kiralfy and Seversky are the two American military writers who must be read. To this layman, at least, they seem to be the only ones whose vision is large enough to match the Hitlerian perspectives." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:69 My 2 '42 430w

Time 39:86 My 25 '42 1400w

"To this reviewer, who can speak only as a civilian, Kiralfy appears to be on the right track but has not sufficiently explored the possibilities of a combination of American air power with Russian and Chinese land forces." H. S. Quigley

Yale R n s 31:859 summer '42 210w

KIRBY, MRS ETHYN (WILLIAMS), George Keith, 1638-1716. (Am. hist. assn. Albert J. Beveridge memorial fund. Publication) 177p $3 Appleton-Century

B or 92 Keith, George. Friends, Society of 42-3559

The subject of this biography joined the Quakers in early life and for many years worked with them. He traveled to America partly in behalf of the new faith but later turned against them and became a leader of an independent body of Christian Quakers. After his return to England he was connected with the Anglican S.F.C.K. and finally became an Anglican vicar. Bibliography. Index.

"The searcher after facts about the life of George Keith has hitherto been pretty much limited to encyclopedic articles and allusions to him in histories of Quakerism. Dr. Kirby's book is welcome as the first study of Keith composed on a scale sufficient to give a detailed narrative of his life and an analysis of his numerous writings. It is a scholarly volume, carefully edited and equipped with index and elaborate bibliographies." T. K. Brown, Jr.

Am Hist R 48:295 Ja '43 450w

"The years of Keith's most notable activities lay in a period which seems to have marked a breathing spell in American life, an in-between period in which the principles of the English revolution were germinating for fruition in the Revolution of 1776. . . Mrs. Kirby's book is a contribution to the history of those years in America. Learned in the 'varieties of religious experience' by which the post-Reformation world has been possessed, fair, and with a sympathetic understanding of Keith's conflict of purpose and emotion she has produced a compact and well written book which is at once a source of knowledge of the times and an admirable commentary upon them." L. C. Wroth

+ Books p14 JI 26 '42 650w

Christian Century 59:386 Mr 25 '42 260w

Reviewed by E. C. Chorley

Churchman 156:19 My 1 '42 150w

"A sound and judicious guide to a fascinating career. In two respects, however, it leaves one wishing it were something more. In the first place, the important 'separation' of 1690-1695 is treated as if it took place in a vacuum. Keith's part in it is clearly traced, but the other actors are dim, and the outlines of the struggle are not filled in with the graphic details which might have been gathered from other contemporary sources. And in the second place, the book fails to produce a vivid or memorable impression of the contentious, beligerent censorious personality Keith was. This would have required a biographer with some of the novelist's gifts. Dr Kirby has the gifts of the careful historical investigator, and one is grateful for what she has done with them." F. B. Tolles

+ — New Eng Q 15:376 Je '42 750w

KIRK, BETTY. Covering the Mexican front; the battle of Europe versus America. 367p il $3 Univ. of Okla. press

972.08 Mexico—Politics and government. Mexico—Foreign relations 42-25473

"Betty Kirk has spent the last six years in Mexico, 'covering the Mexican front' for 'The Christian Science Monitor,' the London 'Times' and other papers, and this is her retrospective report." Books

Booklist 39:137 D 15 '42

"This is a book on Mexico which, whatever its mistakes, is free from the monotonous routine ones of so many observers of the past decade. It is a lively job of reporting, fresh and original, outspoken in its viewpoints, alive with the sense of discovery which comes from including first rate dispatches in the language in which they were originally written, informed by a feeling for the well-being of the common man, excited about good neighborliness and Pan-Americanism." B. D. Wolfe

+ — Books p6 N 29 '42 1800w

"Miss Kirk did an excellent bit of reporting and a superb job of promoting international understanding. She has produced for us a chapter in contemporary history. The future may produce some change in perspective on these early developments in the good-neighbor policy and on the forces which worked against its achievement. However, no one who has an interest in our Latin American affairs can deny that Miss Kirk's brilliantly polished mirror has given a clear picture of the forces at work on the contemporary scene in Mexico." G. C. Vaillant

+ New Repub 107:865 D 23 '42 950w

"It is apparent that even in its major outline the book is extremely weak in its grasp of political generalization, while its interpretative language, is often flamboyantly incomprehensible. Nevertheless, for those who can take the facts and let the language slide there is much to recommend. Miss Kirk is a conscientious and active, though dazzled, reporter. She has much information about the gamut of subversives, for which she gives chapter and verse, with names and addresses. Her sections on the ins and outs of the oil controversy are eye-openers." Anita Brenner

N Y Times p9 N 22 '42 1450w

KIRK, BETTY—Continued

"Whether Miss Kirk has written 'the best analysis and truest picture of Mexico of this decade,' as ex-Ambassador Josephus Daniels states in his foreword to the book, I do not know, but certainly it is the most vivid book of its kind since J. H. Plenn's 'Mexico Marches.' It is a fighting book from cover to cover."

Carleton Beals

+ Sat R of Lit 26:18 Ja 9 '43 1100w

"An excellent book." Karl Loewenstein

+ Springfd Republican p7e Ja 10 '43 1100w

KIRK, GRAYSON LOUIS, and STEBBINS, RICHARD POATE, eds. War and national policy; a syllabus; with a foreword by Lindsay Rogers [and others]. 131p $1 Farrar

355 War, Military art and science. War—
Economic aspects 42-4922

"In their syllabus, Grayson L. Kirk and Richard P. Stebbins have provided teachers and students with a useful outline for the study of the foremost problem of modern politics and, on the whole, a helpful guide to the best literature bearing upon the subject. Some will wish that the section on 'National Organization for Total War' might have been expanded, even at the expense of the section on 'Military Organization, Technique, and Policy;' but, all in all, readers will find the volume fairly proportioned." Am Pol Sci R

Am Hist R 48:168 O '42 70w

Reviewed by J. A. Vieg

Am Pol Sci R 36:596 Je '42 80w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:778 Jl '42 10w

KIRKBRIDE, RONALD DE LEVINGTON. Broken melody. 328p $2.50 Coward-McCann

42-24437

Story of a young American composer and his struggles to keep alive and make a success of his music. The scene of the story is Los Angeles.

"Simon's loves and failures, his joy in music, his impressions of the world and discovery of its hardships, are too colorless to be convincing. And Mr. Kirkbridge has played with too many themes—some too wide and complex—for so slight a book." Pearl Kazin

Books p12 O 18 '42 500w

"A sincere feeling for music gives the novel whatever form it has, which is not enough to compensate for the inept handling of plot and the wooden dialogue. The portrayal of a boarding house full of waifs, whom the author obviously finds humorous and pathetic, is more a credit to his sympathy for such human jetsam than to his ability to portray it convincingly."

— + New Yorker 18:83 O 24 '42 90w

KIRKLAND, WINIFRED MARGARETTA.

Man of the hour. 171p $1.75 Macmillan

232.9 Jesus Christ—Biography 42-22601

"Small and intimate book about Jesus Christ, relating him closely to his associates and the life of his time." Library J

Booklist 39:131 D 15 '42

"Miss Kirkland's primary purpose is edification. But her book successfully escapes the commonplace of mere conventional appreciation." J. H. Holmes

Books p18 N 1 '42 180w

"Something less and something more than a life of Jesus—a fresh and vivid presentation of aspects of the life and incidents of the ministry, in terms which give a sense of contemporaneous reality without departing from the material furnished by the text of the Gospels and the known facts about the land and the people."

+ Christian Century 59:1223 O 7 '42 50w

"Miss Kirkland has written a stirring book, alive with beauty and the sense of human destiny. Jesus and his friends and enemies are not cardboard silhouettes on which platitudes are written. They are moved by the incentives that move or should move us." A. A. Hunter

+ Christian Century 59:1493 D 2 '42 650w

"The book is exceedingly well written, forceable and convincing." W. F. T.

+ Churchman 156:17 D 1 '42 90w

Reviewed by Catherine Van Dyne

Library J 67:794 S 15 '42 100w

KISCH, GUIDO. Sachsenspiegel and Bible; researches in the influence of the Bible on mediaeval German law with special emphasis on the source history of the Sachsenspiegel (ca. 1224) the oldest and most famous German lawbook of the middle ages. 198p il $4; pa $3.25 Univ. of Notre Dame

347.09 Law—Germany. Sachsenspiegel

"The Sachsenspiegel is a very important monument in the history of the German language and of German law. It was written about 1221 by one Eike von Repgow, presumably a layman, certainly a man of knightly rank. A Spiegel, or mirror, is not a collection of statutes but a treatise on law, like Blackstone. Our author considers Eike 'the greatest German jurist of the Middle Ages.' A vast literature of scholarly research in German has accumulated around his work, but it is little known to readers of English. Dr. Kisch, formerly a professor in several German universities, here supports the thesis that Eike had a 'profound knowledge' of the Bible and that the influence of the Bible was very potent both on the legal system which he expounds and on the phraseology in which he expounds it." Christian Century

"Certainly this Sachsenspiegel ranks with the great lawbooks of the ages and must receive greater consideration from American and English scholars than it has been accorded in the past. Professor Kisch now makes this possible and, writing in English, gives an introduction to such study in a book not only remarkable for the systematic methods of investigation he has followed but distinguished for the firm grasp with which he has taken hold of the many problems involved in such research, the skill with which these have been attacked, and the convincing ways in which many have been definitely solved. From cover to cover the little volume testifies to the years of study and thought that have gone into its making, and each page reflects that familiarity with the sources and critical literature that alone inspires complete confidence and respect." G. C. Boyce

+ Am Hist R 47:831 Jl '42 400w

Christian Century 59:497 Ap 15 '42 260w

KITSON, HARRY DEXTER, and LINGENFELTER, MARY REBECCA. Vocations for boys. 332p $2.50 Harcourt

371.425 Profession, Choice of, Occupations (W) 42-12257

"A companion volume to the authors' Vocations for Girls (Book Review Digest, 1939). The book aims particularly to show the importance of and advantages to the skilled craftsman in modern economic life, and to examine certain often neglected jobs in trades, business, and professional fields. The information regarding qualifications, opportunities, and wage scales for the various jobs is superficial and sketchy but may lead readers to further investigation." (Booklist) Reading lists, Index.

Booklist 38:348 My 15 '42

"It is a large book, but even at that nothing can be treated at length or in great detail, for so much is treated. The high value of the volume is in just this: it is a preliminary survey, for the use of boys still in school but looking ahead. For their use is also offered a group of reading-lists including vocational fiction. It seems to me practically indispensable to a well-equipped school or public library." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 My 3 '42 300w

"Will be widely useful for adolescents and adults," Dorothea Dawson

+ Library J 67:477 My 15 '42 50w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p8 Je 21 '42 100w

"The readability of the book and the suggestions included in the reading list commend the volume for use in high-school years—the time when boys should begin to explore the world of occupations." D. M. Mackenzie

+ School R 51:58 Ja '43 850w

KLEE, PAUL. Paul Klee; paintings, water-colors, 1913-1939; ed. by Karl Nierendorf; introd. by James Johnson Sweeney. 35p 65pl pa $6 Oxford

759.9 Paintings

42-2983

"Klee, who died in 1940, was a Swiss, born in 1879 of a German father and a French mother. . . He studied art, affiliated himself with the more adventurous experimentalists in Germany ('Die Blaue Rider'), taught at the Bauhaus, and, after many vicissitudes, was at last recognized as one of the most sensitive color-composers of our time." (Commonweal) This volume contains an essay by Mr Sweeney, biographical remarks by Karl Nierendorf, and sixty-five full page plates representing all periods of the artist's production.

"This monograph should remain an indispensable work on an artist who was as worthy as this tribute to him." Jerome Mellquist

+ Commonweal 36:42 My 1 '42 350w

Reviewed by M. D. Zabel

Nation 155:455 O 31 '42 480w

Reviewed by Jerome Mellquist

New Repub 106:405 Mr 23 '42 70w

Reviewed by E. A. Jewell

N Y Times p21 My 10 '42 400w

Pratt p4 O '42

KLEIN, WALTER CONRAD. Johann Conrad Beissel, mystic and martinet, 1690-1768 [foreword by Richard H. Shryock]. (Pennsylvania lives) 218p $2.25 Univ. of Pa. press

B or 92 Beissel, Johann Conrad, Ephrata community 42-5171

Biography of the founder of Seventh Day Baptist monastic order at Ephrata, Pennsylvania. Bibliographical note. Index.

Reviewed by A. P. James

Am Hist R 48:363 Ja '43 150w

"A careful study of a hitherto little-understood figure." W. W. Sweet

+ J Religion 22:453 O '42 180w

Social Studies 33:142 Mr '42 10w

"Dr. Klein has done an excellent work. As a contribution to a better understanding of the religious, and indeed of the general social life of colonial Pennsylvania the book has real value. Readers, from the casually interested to the recognized specialist, will find much useful and correct information, from which a better understanding of at least a minority of the German Sectarians may follow. The literary style is good, and the make-up of the book is pleasing." Robert Fortenbaugh

+ Social Studies 33:282 O '42 330w

"Although Mr Klein is plainly a master of his field, and traces origins of Beissel's views in other theologies of that day and earlier times, he cannot in a brief informal tale make entirely clear all the points at issue. The principal conclusion impressed upon this reviewer's mind was that Beissel himself never had any systematic set of religious thoughts. As for the other problems mentioned, it must be said that, despite the author's delightful style, there are too many unexplained allusions—particularly to individuals important in religious history—to allow the nonspecialist a good grip on the material." S. L. Jackson

+ — Spring'd Republican p8 F 11 '42 800w

KLINGBERG, FRANK JOSEPH. An appraisal of the Negro in colonial South Carolina; a study in Americanization. 180p $2 Associated pubs.

325.26 Negroes—South Carolina. South Carolina—History. Slavery in the U.S. 42-3735

"[A] comprehensive study of Americanization as it evolved among the Negroes of South Carolina in the colonial period. For his basic material the author has turned to the reports and letters of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, missionaries' copies of which are in the Library of Congress. He demonstrates that the missionaries were the major factor in the education and Christianization of the Negroes." Churchman

"There has not been a more scholarly or more thoroughly documented study of any limited part of the race problem in American history."

+ Christian Century 59:219 F 18 '42 90w

"Professor Klingberg has made a strikingly original contribution to a complex subject." E. C. Chorley

+ Churchman 156:19 My 1 '42 150w

KLOEFFLER, ROYCE GERALD. Principles of electronics. 175p il $2.50 Wiley

537.53 Electronics

42-50374

Textbook designed for sophomore students in electrical engineering. Author is professor of electrical engineering at Kansas State college. Index.

Booklist 39:220 F 1 '43

"Naturally, this is not as popularly written as 'Super-Electricity.' If it were it would hardly serve its purpose. But it has sufficient simplicity to enable a general reader with some background in general physics, who is willing to do a little digging, to get from it a good general knowledge. He will have some idea of the fundamental theory and of the operation of the principal types of electronic devices—not only the tubes of his home radio but such things as power rectifiers as well." James Stokley

+ Books p10 D 27 '42 150w

Library J 67:1067 D 1 '42 10w

KNAPLUND, PAUL. British empire, 1815-1939. 850p maps $4 Harper

325.342 Great Britain—Colonies. Imperial federation 41-20773

Short survey of the growth and development of the British empire from the Napoleonic wars to the outbreak of the World war, in 1939. Intended as a textbook, it treats all phases of the British colonial policy in the years covered. The author is an authority on English history and spent many years in study and research as groundwork for this study. Bibliography. Index.

"Professor Knaplund's British Empire, 1815-1939, whose appearance has been eagerly awaited, is a notable addition to Harper's Historical series. Well written, the product of deep and precise scholarship applied with discrimination and ease, it has many invaluable features. The accounts of the development and condition of Great Britain in successive periods are not only models of selection and brevity in themselves but are an essential accompaniment to the narrative of the growth of the empire. The description of the colonial office and colonial government after 1815 could hardly be bettered. . . . Yet the book falls between two stools. It is too long to give, apart from the excellent general introduction, any concise view of the empire as a whole; yet, though replete with facts, it is too short to give details such as more specialized works can vouchsafe. . . . How teachable the book will prove to be is open to question." C. L. Mowat

+ — Am Hist R 47:598 Ap '42 600w

"Should become a popular textbook. It presents a broader outlook than most books of this category, and such defects as it has are inherent in books of its class. Not only is there a new fact on every page; every sentence is a statement as hard as granite. There are so many solid facts to put down that wasting words on reflections, judgments, and broad conclusions seems almost criminal. And that is unfortunate; for the result is that such books bear an uncanny resemblance to a mail-order-house catalogue. Professor Knaplund has striven to overcome at least some of the more glaring defects of the usual run-of-the-mill textbook. . . . The style, while not marked by flashes of brilliance, is clear, and the book is eminently readable." Albert Viton

KNAPLUND, PAUL—Continued

+ — Ann Am Acad 220:235 Mr '42 380w
Booklist 38:204 F 15 '42

"This volume will serve as an unusually fine textbook for the student of recent British imperial history. But it will also be instructive and interesting reading for the layman who is concerned with the saga of one of the most remarkable political organisms in the history of modern times." A. L. Sachar

+ Books p20 Je 14 '42 600w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:580 Ap '42 10w

Reviewed by W.-K. Hancock
Manchester Guardian p3 N 11 '42 230w

Reviewed by W. P. Hall
Pol Sci Q 57:306 Je '42 390w

"This is by far the most comprehensive history of the British Empire in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries to be found in any textbook. It may be that it is too comprehensive for the average college student who approaches the subject without any previous knowledge of it, and it is for college students primarily that the series in which this volume appears is designed. . . . The style is sober and sometimes rather pedestrian, seldom enlivened by such writing as Professor Knaplund is capable of. One reader at least found himself wishing for more of the sort of thing that the author gives in his brilliant appraisal of Lord Curzon's work in India." R. L. Schuyler

+ — Social Educ 6:282 O '42 400w

"The book is full of information of value to the advanced student; yet its clear, logical arrangement makes it readily comprehensible to the uninformed. . . . Professor Knaplund has produced a volume that every American interested in world affairs ought to read—and will surely enjoy." George Woodbridge

+ Survey G 31:432 O '42 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p604 D 12 '42 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 38:64 Ap '42

KNAPP-FISHER, HUBERT CLINTON. Man and his creatures; with 44 il. by Joan Harrison. 236p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Routledge]

636 Domestic animals. Hunting
(W) 42-8655

A survey of the relationships existing between mankind and certain common animals. Part one deals with the domestication of the dog, the horse, the elephant and the cat; part two with animals in sports, hunting, racing and in the circus; part three with animals in legend and folk-lore; and part four with animals in war. Index.

Reviewed by J. E. Stromdahl
Library J 67:631 J1 '42 60w

"To class this as a children's book is a great deprivation to their elders."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p206 Ap 26 '41 180w

KNAPPEN, MARSHALL MASON. Constitutional and legal history of England. 607p il maps $3.25 Harcourt

342.42 Great Britain—Constitutional history. Law—Great Britain 42-8549

"A concise textbook designed especially to be used in college courses in English constitutional history for pre-legal students. . . . The material is first divided into six broad periods—the Anglo-Saxon, the Middle Ages, and so on. Each period is introduced with a general account of political, economic, and cultural history. Then follows for each period a systematic treatment of the machinery of government and the legal system. The latter is subdivided into the organization and jurisdiction of courts, procedure and the legal profession, and substantive law." Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by R. K. Richardson
Am Hist R 48:321 Ja '43 450w

"The student who works his way conscientiously through this volume will get a broad understanding of English history, with the emphasis upon the governmental and legal aspects. The material is necessarily much compressed. In spite of this, Professor Knappen manages to tell the story in an interesting style with a good deal of embellishment in the way of personal anecdotes and quotations from contemporary literature. College students are going to say that it is 'good reading,' but some of them will think that the author underestimates their powers of comprehension by sometimes explaining the obvious." J. R. Starr

+ — Am Pol Sci R 36:377 Ap '42 260w
Harvard Law R 56:167 S '42 270w

KNIGHT, BRIGID, pseud. See Sinclair, K. H. N-W.

KNIGHT, CLIFFORD. Affair of the splintered heart. 261p $2 Dodd

42-22618

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p22 O 18 '42 100w

"As one might expect, considering the scene and the time, this turns out to be a spy story, and the murders are the least important phase of it, except in so far as they lead to the unmasking of the spy. Mr. Knight tells the story with his accustomed skill." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p16 O 4 '42 250w

"Good."
Sat R of Lit 25:20 S 26 '42 30w

KNIGHT, EDGAR WALLACE. Progress and educational perspective. 148p $1.50 Macmillan 301 Progress. Education—U.S. Education—Aims and objectives 42-9073

"In this, the 14th volume of the Kappa Delta Pi Lecture series, Dr. Knight examines in panoramic summary the conceptions and practices of progress that are associated with modern civilization. Luminous with illustrations drawn from statements by educational leaders, sociological surveys and popular trends, he challenges the claims of educators and laymen that schooling has always effected social progress. Toward educational theory that confuses change with progress and that identifies improved external with educational growth he is bitingly critical." School & Society

"Of interest to all Americans who have a sincere interest in effective education, this essay is a stirring message to professional educators, who, the author is convinced, have succumbed to the popular belief that change means progress and that educational theory and practice must be in 'the mode of fashion.'"

+ School & Society 55:252 F 28 '42 130w

"Knight's stimulating thoughts provide a basis for some broad considerations which should prove helpful for any whose day-to-day literary diet may have been somewhat over-seasoned with growth curves and coefficients of correlation. Certainly the author's timely warnings deserve thoughtful consideration on the part of any educator who feels he has important contributions to make in post-war educational planning. The whole essay is open to criticism because of its labored wordiness." P. C. Reinert, S.J.

+ — School R 51:56 Ja '43 750w
Reviewed by E. B. Wesley
Social Educ 6:288 O '42 250w

KNIGHT, ERIC (RICHARD HALLAS, pseud). Sam Small flies again; the amazing adventures of the flying Yorkshireman. 285p il $2.50 Harper

(W) 42-5832

Ten stories about the adventures—amusing and sometimes frank—of this Yorkshire edition of Paul Bunyan, who has appeared in other books by this author.

Booklist 38:309 Ap 15 '42

Bookmark 3:16 My '42

"It's certainly clear now that 'The Flying Yorkshireman' was no accident, that Eric Knight has a rich deep vein of high fancy and sustained humor. It isn't just style but good story-stuff." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p3 Mr 15 '42 950w

New Repub 106:550 Ap 20 '42 70w

"This is the kind of fine, pawky humor which has its own laws and which cannot be characterized very readily. The best I can do is simply to state flatly that this is an immensely funny book, carrying the tall-tale tradition to new heights." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 22 '42 700w

New Yorker 18:64 Mr 7 '42 30w

Reviewed by R. E. Roberts

Sat R of Lit 25:16 Mr 28 '42 450w

"The stories in this unpretentious book have that rare quality of truly democratic fiction: like stories by Mark Twain and Kipling and Dickens, they read even better aloud than silently, and are for almost any reader, of almost any age. Though Eric Knight invented them, they seem like genuine English folk tales. Their further virtues are rich characterizations; equal ease with fantasy and realism; dialect which is never phony, always funny."

+ Time 39:94 Mr 16 '42 500w

Wis Lib Bul 38:120 J1 '42

"Altogether Sam Small is one of the best of the season's novels, recommended to many different readers." Robert Littell

+ Yale R n s 31:x summer '42 160w

KNIGHT, GEORGE WILSON. Starlit dome; studies in the poetry of vision. 322p $4.50 (16s) Oxford

821.09 English poetry—History and criticism A42-3452

"The book contains four studies in the 'poetry of vision' and is complementary to 'The Burning Oracle,' which dealt with the 'poetry of action.' Professor Knight's aim is to show what his poets—here, Wordsworth, Coleridge, Shelley and Keats—are writing about, and he arrives at his object by way of a minute examination of the poetic symbols used by them." Spec

"In rare moments Mr. Knight is really successful; but more frequently he enmeshes the reader in a complexity of rhapsodic pseudo-mythical obfuscation." Samuel Chew

+ Books p20 N 29 '42 430w

"I found the essay on Wordsworth the most stimulating and that on Keats the most sensitive in touch. The analysis of 'The Prelude' is masterly. . . The 'Immortality' ode, too, is wonderfully illumined." Darrell Hewth

+ Spec 168:308 Mr 27 '42 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p6 Ja 3 '42 2800w

KNIGHT, JOHN ALDEN. Modern fly casting. 79p il $2.75 Scribner

799.12 Fly casting 42-12482

A specialized study of fly casting "introducing the free wrist grip and the high back cast." Illustrated with photographs.

Booklist 38:382 Je 15 '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:95 Je '42

KNIGHT, KATHLEEN MOORE. Bells for the dead. 300p $2 Doubleday

42-25579

Detective story.

Booklist 39:202 Ja 15 '43

"Miss Knight handles a was-she-pushed plot with neatness and despatch." Will Cuppy

Books p46 N 15 '42 200w

"In this novel Kathleen Moore Knight surpasses her earlier excellent writing in the mystery field." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 N 22 '42 280w

"Fair."

Sat R of Lit 25:18 N 14 '42 40w

KNIGHT, KATHLEEN MOORE. Terror by twilight. 294p $2 Doubleday

(W) 42-17151

Detective story.

Booklist 39:12 S '42

"Miss Knight's story gathers speed and substance with every chapter, winding up with fireworks that will make your brain reel, no fooling." Will Cuppy

+ Books p12 J1 19 '42 230w

"B plus."

+ Boston Globe p17 Ag 5 '42 30w

"It is a very dreadful plot, and it makes this Crime Club selection the most interesting of the Margot Blair stories. That a similar explanation adorns one of the greatest of all mystery novels takes away nothing from this book's originality." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p18 J1 12 '42 280w

"Pleasant enough, but on the conventional side."

+ New Yorker 18:60 J1 18 '42 70w

KNOWLAND, JOSEPH RUSSELL. California, a landmark history; story of the preservation and marking of early day shrines. 245p il $3.50 Tribune press, Tribune bldg, Oakland, Calif.

979.4 California—History. California—Historic houses, etc. 42-5610

"The author of this book is a California newspaper publisher and has long interested himself in the establishment of landmarks, monuments, etc., to commemorate important events in California's history. The volume is an unpretentious narrative account of the placing of many such markers, and includes brief notes on the historical background in most cases, together with more than 100 photographic illustrations." Books

Booklist 38:307 Ap 15 '42

Books p14 Ap 12 '42 150w

KNOWLTON, HUGH. Air transportation in the United States; its growth as a business. 72p $1.25 Univ. of Chicago press

387.7 Aeronautics, Commercial 42-3587

It is the purpose of this small book "to analyze the basic civil function performed by air transportation in this country and the underlying economic factors in the growth of American air lines." p 1

Reviewed by P. T. David

Am Econ R 32:400 Je '42 80w

"This book follows a pattern of clear and concise analysis, enlivened with realistic data, all within the compass of a limited number of pages." K. T. Healy

+ Ann Am Acad 221:223 My '42 320w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:20 Ap '42

KNOX, JOHN, ed. Religion and the present crisis. 165p $1.50 Univ. of Chicago press

261 U.S.—Church history. World war, 1939 —Religious aspects 42-10793

Symposium of lectures given at the University of Chicago under the Walgreen foundation. They are studies of the meaning of the present crisis for the churches of America. Contents:

KNOX, JOHN—Continued

Christianity refinding itself, by E. C. Colwell; Building a better democracy, by E. E. Aubrey; Re-examining pacifism, by John Knox; Maintaining fellowship across lines of conflict, by C. T. Holman; Achieving personal stability, by H. N. Wieman; Anticipating the post-war mind, by C. W. Gilkey; Preparing for durable peace, by J. T. McNeill; Educating for a new world-order, by W. C. Bower; Redeeming culture through crisis, by Wilhelm Pauck. Index.

"As one reads these beautifully composed discourses, one can feel the quiet chapel atmosphere in which they were given to highly intellectual audiences. I have read no abler discussions of the war and of the peace after the war from the standpoint of all the deeper implications of these themes," J. H. Holmes
+ Books p10 Je 21 '42 130w

"The nine lectures in this volume . . . furnish an important study in the causes of our chaos. These studies are not restful, nor are they meant to give us pleasant dreams. They must be read critically rather than swallowed whole. The thoughtful reader will put many question marks in the margin, but he will also underscore countless passages which will challenge him to deeper thinking than he has done for many a day," J. S. Watson
+ Christian Century 59:838 Jl 1 '42 450w

Reviewed by A. L. Murray
Churchman 156:17 Je 1 '42 240w

"Unusually interesting and exceedingly timely little volume," H. C. Newell
+ Crozer Q 19:241 Jl '42 600w

"The book is so well edited that it has great value not only as a record of the thought of its authors but also as a comprehensive introduction to the subject its title suggests," J. C. Bennett
+ J Religion 22:319 Jl '42 900w

KOENIGSBERG, MOSES. King news; an autobiography. 511p $3.50 Stokes

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 41-28101

Autobiography of an American journalist who has followed a reporter's career from the 1880's when he was still a boy in San Antonio, Texas, to the presidency of the International News Service, Universal service, and King Features Syndicate in the 1920's. Index.

Am Hist R 48:420 Ja '43 70w

"M. Koenigsberg is now getting along toward seventy years of age, and may have lost a little of the zip that for many years made him one of the most exciting, two-fisted, hell-for-leather newspaper men that ever graced the American journalistic scene. Be that as it may, he has retained enough of his old fire and his genius for attack to turn out a highly readable book. . . M. Koenigsberg's writing is uneven, in spots genuinely moving, with admirable clarity and feeling, but in others somewhat pompous and stilted. But he's got a document here, all right," Stanley Walker
+ Books p18 D 14 '41 750w

"All through the foundation years of his career young Koenigsberg was building up his conscientious 'newspaper man's code,' and he was always ready to fight for 'freedom of the news' at the drop of the hat. His story is written with enormous gusto and is packed with lively incident,"
+ N Y Times p20 Mr 22 '42 500w

KOEPKE, CHARLES AUGUSTUS. Plant production control. 509p il $4 Wiley

658.5 Factory management 41-28087

"This book deals with the maximum production of goods with the minimum confusion and expense. . . This volume has grown from a series of notes used in teaching and is based on experience while working as a member of the regular industrial engineering staff in a number of plants and on a varied consulting practice in industrial centers." (Pref) Each function is treated separately and related to the whole. Chapter bibliographies. Index.

Booklist 38:227 Mr 1 '42

"Within the material boundaries established, the author has achieved his purpose admirably. He offers a wealth of descriptive detail on the functions essential to the control of production, and yet lends depth and scope to the over-all understanding of production control as a single function. Plant executives and students of management will find this a stimulating, helpful volume. . . Three serious weaknesses must be mentioned in appraising the book: (1) The approach to the subject through a superficial historical analysis . . . is almost unforgivable. . . (2) The treatment of organization is superficial and scattered through the analysis of functions. . . (3) This is not a philosophical book or a very profound one." R. P. Brecht
+ Management R 31:106 Mr '42 700w

KOESTLER, ARTHUR. Dialogue with death; tr. by Trevor and Phyllis Blewitt. 215p $2 Macmillan

946.08 Spain—History—Civil war, 1936-1939 (W)

This book contains portions of the author's Spanish Testament published in England in 1938. It tells the story of his experiences during three months spent in Spanish prisons during the Spanish Civil war.

Reviewed by Wilson Follett
Atlantic 170:136 S '42 230w
Booklist 39:8 S '42

"Koestler's brief three months' participation in the agony of the Spanish people will give Americans—still slightly in the mood of spectators—an insight into the mind of Fascism. . . This reviewer when a correspondent in Spain was told by men around Franco that they meant to purify Spain by liquidating one-third of the male population. Today Franco holds in prison 300,000 Spaniards and each night the firing squads still come down the corridors. Mr. Koestler's five-year old book is timeless, and as urgent as a dive bomber," J. T. Whitaker
+ Books p5 Jl 19 '42 1250w

"Two immediate compulsions present themselves to the reader of Arthur Koestler's book, 'Dialogue With Death.' The first is to pay tribute to Koestler as one of the major writers appearing out of world conflict. He possesses a unity of spirit and talent rarely met, for he is both analyst and philosopher, reporter and artist, adventurer and thinker. He is an extraordinary man, profound, compassionate, erudite, and witty withal. The other compulsion is to sound off about the Spanish Civil War." Dorothy Hillyer
+ Boston Globe p17 Jl 15 '42 1850w

"In substance the book is no doubt accurate, although quite obviously the author fills in details at times from his imagination rather than his memory. There can be no question that many an injustice was committed by defenders of the Nationalist cause. But it is also true that they suffered from wanton cruelty much more than their opponents. Even assuming that Mr. Koestler's story contains no false statement, therefore, it still remains a piece of propaganda," Joseph McSorley
+ Cath World 156:120 O '42 430w

Christian Century 59:1154 S 23 '42 260w

Reviewed by A. S. Ryan
Commonweal 36:353 Jl 31 '42 550w

Reviewed by Thelma Brackett
Library J 67:581 Je 15 '42 80w

"'Dialogue with Death' has the characteristics of Koestler's mature writing: the gift for straightforward narrative, the taste for introspection, the observations on human nature—often full of wisdom—the interest in moral issues, which leads him to pass severe judgments on himself, and finally the air of complete candor with which he tells his own story." Malcolm Cowley
+ New Repub 107:89 Jl 20 '42 150w

"The book as a whole is not overwhelming. But there are a dozen portraits of prison characters and a score of luminous observations that one comes upon suddenly which foreshadow the quality of Koestler's later books." Harold Strauss

N Y Times p4 J1 5 '42 1000w

"This is not the conventional story of prison horrors. . . It is a personal rather than a mass record of suffering. It is, in effect, a self-analysis by an extraordinary psychologist who happened to be placed in a situation few human beings ever encounter. There are passages here . . . that are worthy of Dostoevski and full of cool, bitter insight." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:53 J1 4 '42 450w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates

Sat R of Lit 25:7 J1 18 '42 2800w

Time 39:74 Je 29 '42 1550w

KOHN, HANS. World order in historical perspective. 352p $3 Harvard univ. press

909 World politics. Democracy. Nationalism and nationality. Imperialism. Civilization A42-2013

This volume brings to a conclusion the author's series of which the other volumes are Force or Reason, Revolutions and Dictatorships, Not by Arms Alone. "In this book there are really four essays which might be read entirely apart. The first is 'Democracy the Way of Man'. . . The second and third essays deal with 'Nationalism as a Way of Society' and 'Empire as a Way of Mankind'. . . The last section, 'Crisis, the Way of Civilization,' covers a good half of the book. Here is an analysis of our present world revolution which is not entirely new but is enormously astute." (Christian Century)

"The author is neither pessimistic nor optimistic. He presents the contemporary dilemma and points out that things which have seemed visionary in the past are now accomplished facts. It is possible for this to be true of 'world order.' It is for man to decide. Dr. Kohn's chapter on nationalism is a brilliant analysis of the problem, and his entire book is a challenge for us to face the future with determination and unity." G. B. Noble

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:774 Ag '42 500w

"The book is challenging and altogether worthy of thoughtful reading." C. A. Riches

+ Ann Am Acad 223:227 S '42 500w

Booklist 38:423 J1 1 '42

Reviewed by L. M. Hacker

Books p19 S 13 '42 1050w

"Here is another book on the world problem, but it is most definitely not 'just another book' by someone who likes to talk and write but does not bother to study or understand. Although a few very minor technical suggestions could possibly be made about the form of the structure, the author has taken a definite stand and proceeds to prove his point." Adolph Behrenberg

+ Christian Century 59:839 J1 1 '42 900w

"In the unending flow of books dealing with the dangers and opportunities of our tragic time, it is a rare experience to come across a volume in which are combined into an illuminating synthesis the qualities of literary grace, historical scholarship, psychological insight, courageous political realism and inflexible moral resolve." F. L. Schuman

+ New Repub 107:387 S 28 '42 800w

Reviewed by Crane Brinton

Sat R of Lit 25:21 O 10 '42 460w

"Hans Kohn has produced a significant work. The slogan should be, 'One on Every Bookshelf.' This in spite of the fact that there is, it is hoped little which is new to social studies people. Although it is unnecessarily metaphysical in places and suffers, at times, from a somewhat pedantic complexity in sentence structure, it is a work which those concerned with the fate of the nation can ill afford to pass up." J. A. Blakemore

+ Social Educ 6:282 O '42 850w

Social Studies 33:286 O '42 30w

Reviewed by Phillips Bradley

Survey G 32:26 Ja '43 130w

KOHT, HALVDAN. Norway, neutral and invaded. 253p il $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Hutchinson]

940.53481 World war, 1939—Norway. World war, 1939—Diplomatic history. Norway—Politics and government 41-23342

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

Reviewed by Karen Larsen

Am Hist R 47:866 J1 '42 700w

Reviewed by C. A. Berdahl

Am Pol Sci R 36:176 F '42 600w

"This book tells us, simply and as dispassionately as possible, why and how Norway began her fight, how she has been carrying it on, and why she is still fighting. It belongs in every war library." Einar Haugen

+ Ann Am Acad 220:227 Mr '42 600w

"This volume is a real contribution to the history of our time." R. G. Woolbert

+ Foreign Affairs 20:572 Ap '42 40w

KOKOMOOR, FRANKLIN WESLEY. Mathematics in human affairs. 754p $5.35; to schools $4 Prentice-Hall

510 Mathematics 42-17819

"The text starts with the simplest concepts and ends in the calculus. The general plan of each chapter is to present a discussion of the topic at hand, then give a few of its historical connections, descriptive material about it for orientation purposes, numerous illustrations of how it enters into the work of the world, and a development of methods of solution. Then follows a study guide containing suggestions, questions, and problems; and a set of fifty multiple-choice exercises. . . In order to keep the book as simple and easy to read as possible, all footnotes and other documentation are omitted." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 39:117 D 1 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:41 J1 '42

KOLODIN, IRVING. Guide to recorded music. 495p $3 Doubleday

789.9 Phonograph records. Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation (W) 41-52071

Lists and evaluates various recordings of the works of 184 composers. Arrangement is by composer, with key to the quality of performance, mechanical factor, and fairness of price. Index of performance, but not of titles.

Booklist 38:174 Ja 15 '42

"Kolodin's evaluations conform most closely to general accepted tastes and on that basis his judgments are usually dependable. The average record buyer at least will certainly find them safe and sound, if seldom exciting, and in reference use he may not be unduly conscious of their occasional obscurities or their more frequent lapses into regrettably journalistic phraseology." R. D. Darrell

+ Books p8 Ja 4 '42 480w

"Much of the time Mr. Kolodin manages to be witty as well as useful from which I infer that he had an assistant for changing all those needles. We hear about the conductor who was there 'merely to give the signal for starting,' the modern composer who has produced 'a witless, charming work,' the performer who was 'given poor support by the engineers.' Mr. Kolodin can be more violent, but hardly ever when he passes judgment on the music itself, for he does this very rarely. His book therefore does not compete with Haggin's or Hall's, and it fills out the grand outline of Darrell's." Jacques Barzun

+ Nation 154:120 Ja 31 '42 900w

"If one needs a comprehensive survey, conducted with normal good taste, this is a useful book. Because of the brevity of the entries and their sensible alphabetical arrangement, this is a much better work than the other current offering of comparable type, Hall's 'The Record Book.'"

+ New Repub 106:310 Mr 2 '42 190w

KOLTHOFF, IZAAK MAURITS, and LAITINEN, HERBERT A. pH and electro titrations; the colorimetric and potentiometric determination of pH; potentiometry, conductometry, and voltammetry (polarography); outline of electrometric titrations. 2d rev and enl ed 190p $3 Wiley

541.37 Hydrogen ion concentration. Electrochemical analysis. Volumetric analysis 41-16575

"This is the second and revised edition of the book which was published by the senior author in 1931. The three parts which were included in the first edition,—(1) 'Acid-Base Indicators and the Colorimetric Determination of pH'; (2) 'The Potentiometric Determination of pH. Potentiometric Titrations'; (3) 'Conductometric Titrations',—have been thoroughly revised. In addition, a fourth part under the heading of 'Voltammetry (Polarography), and Amperometric Titrations' has been added." (J Phys Chem) Indexes.

"This book is suitable for use in an advanced course in analytical chemistry. The theory and practical directions are well presented. The revision has been well done." H. H. Willard

+ Am Chem Soc J 64:1016 Ap '42 300w
Chem & Met Eng 49:163 Ja '42 130w

"As in the first edition, the theory is given in very condensed form and for additional information the student must consult the references to general textbooks of physical chemistry and monographs on specific subjects. It would undoubtedly simplify matters for students if the authors of books and articles on these special subjects would adopt a standard nomenclature. Also, the reviewer believes that the name 'hydronium' is better for the H_3O^+ ion than 'hydroxonium.' The book is well written and will undoubtedly enjoy the well-deserved popularity of the first edition." M. L. Nichols

+ J Phys Chem 46:336 F '42 250w

KOLTHOFF, IZAAK MAURITS, and LINGANE, JAMES JOSEPH. Polarography: polarographic analysis and voltammetry, amperometric titrations [with appendix]. 510p il $6; also separate app 75c Interscience

545.8 Polarograph and polarography 41-12366

"Aims to fill the need for a book covering the correlations between theoretical principles and practical applications of polarographic analysis. It attempts to present a complete and critical account of the present status of polarographic analysis with the dropping mercury electrode . . . and then it deals with those theoretical principles that are essential to the rational practical applications of the method." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by V. W. Meloche

Chem & Eng N 19:942 Ag 25 '41 400w

"This is the first book in English on polarography and it deserves a warm welcome from all who work or intend to work with the polarographic method. After the publication of about seven hundred polarographic papers, mostly in foreign-language periodicals, this book fills a very real need. The reviewer is convinced that it will serve as the standard and reference work for further technical and scientific research in the field." Gerald Reed

+ J Phys Chem 46:339 F '42 500w
N Y New Tech Bks 27:11 Ja '42

KOMROFF, MANUEL. All in our day; thirty stories. 355p $2.50 Harper

42-22719

"A collection of thirty stories, which the author has arranged in three groups: 'Tales of War,' 'Tales of Peace,' and 'Strange Tales.' Many of the war stories are records of man's inhumanity to man, of an almost unbearable brutality." New Yorker

Booklist 39:184 Ja 1 '43

"The section of Strange Tales is probably the weakest of all. A special kind of skill is necessary to keep the supernatural from seeming just plain silly. Not even a tested storyteller, who commands other forms of the art, can always succeed in this. . . . 'The Grace of Lambs' is the best of the stories in this section and does catch the spirit of Oriental mysticism. No one can doubt that Mr. Komroff is a storyteller. In spite of faults and failures observed here and there, he manages to keep our interest, and that, after all is the mark of the true storyteller." Milton Hindus

+ Books p12 O 4 '42 800w

Reviewed by N. E. Monroe
Cath World 156:246 N '42 200w

"To at least one reader, Mr. Komroff's stories are sometimes more mysterious than clear; but they are always interesting and gusty with a sense of life, even when they are fumbling among the stars." William Du Bois

+ N Y Times p6 O 4 '42 750w

"Mr. Komroff is a good storyteller but not a subtle one, and some of these tales induce less horror than nausea. Whether he is telling of war or peace or the bizarre, however, he is not dull."

+ New Yorker 18:66 O 3 '42 90w

"The appearance of this volume is heartening, for it reveals that the plight of the short story—several years' steady decline both qualitatively and quantitatively—is merely serious, not hopeless. Also, this anthology is suitable tribute to a writer who has stuck to his last for a quarter of a century. Finally, it places in at least some degree of permanence a few of the topnotch short narratives produced in recent years. For Mr. Komroff is a gifted teller of tales." Harry Shaw

+ Sat R of Lit 25:11 O 10 '42 700w

KOMROFF, MANUEL. In the years of Our Lord. 311p $2.50 Harper

Jesus Christ—Fiction (W) 42-10310

Novel based on the life and times of Jesus of Nazareth.

Booklist 38:368 Je 1 '42

"The last chapter in the book, is a little masterpiece. Beautifully conceived and perfectly written, it is the stuff of which memorable pamphlets are sometimes made." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p6 Ap 5 '42 1450w

"If all art is at basis an attempt to represent the divine, then a story which describes the life of Christ and His companions ought to be very great indeed. This is the task Komroff set himself in his latest book, but the results are only moderately successful. The narrative is managed with skill and veracity, and the barren, stony background of Palestine emerges sharply from the novel, but there is too much elaboration for the simple, sublime grandeur of the story."

+ Cath World 155:253 My '42 230w

"If one is willing, and able, to consider this simply as a novel, and to assume that any real or fancied resemblance to actual historical characters and events is purely coincidental, it is a magnificent piece of work. Unfortunately, that is just what one can never do when the scene is so definitely set 'in the years of Our Lord,' and when the author is at pains to explain the process by which he collected his historical material." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 59:497 Ap 15 '42 650w
Christian Science Monitor p11 My 29 '42 650w

"Well written. Recommended for general public library collections and for young people." H. A. Carpenter

+ Library J 67:319 Ap 1 '42 50w

"Mr. Komroff's novel is [not] perfect. It reveals roughnesses, lapses in prose, evidences here and there of hurry, perhaps a little too much emphasis on one thing and not enough on another. For all that, it carries conviction, and comes nearest to anything I know of being in the spirit of what men have justly called the most beautiful story in the world." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 5 '42 1550w

"Mr. Komroff is a capable writer and approaches his difficult subject with all proper respect, but his book becomes the more moving the closer it gets to the text of the New Testament; in other words, the best account of the subject had already been written."

+ New Yorker 18:66 Ap 4 '42 60w

"This is a beautiful book by an artist who knows not a little of the thirst for ideals which has always tortured the best of men." G. N. Shuster

+ Sat R of Lit 25:8 Ap 11 '42 450w
Wis Lib Bul 38:120 Jl '42

KOONTZ, LOUIS KNOTT. Robert Dinwiddie; his career in American colonial government and westward expansion. (Old Northwest hist. ser.) 429p il $6 Clark, A. H.

B or 92 Dinwiddie, Robert. Virginia—History 41-3103

"Robert Dinwiddie came of an ancient Scottish family. He was born near Glasgow in 1693. In early life he engaged in the pottery business and in 1721 accepted an appointment as a representative of the Admiralty on the island of Bermuda. In 1738 he became surveyor-general of customs for the southern district of America. . . . A series of deaths and declinations advanced Dinwiddie to the place where he was the logical choice for lieutenant-governor of the Old Dominion. In November, 1751, he arrived at his post from England. . . . From 1752 until Dinwiddie's departure from Virginia January 12, 1758, the story has been deeply engraved on the records of American history. Mr. Koontz, on the basis of the Dinwiddie papers and other materials enlarges and illustrates but does not in essentials alter that story; he offers rather a documentation and a biography that says about everything that can be said about the life of the man whom fate cast for one of the official roles in the drama." Canadian Hist R

"Mr. Koontz apparently fell into that most grievous of biographers' errors: he tried to please the public and, in doing so, allowed himself at once to overlook all Dinwiddie's faults and to magnify his virtues to a superlative—and therefore unbelievable—degree. But the book is also full of errors of fact, some of which are important, and there are a good many points at which the author's interpretation of the facts does not seem to be borne out by the facts themselves." Max Saville

+ Am Hist R 47:347 Ja '42 850w

"If a fault can be found in Mr. Koontz's work, it is that he is a little prone to take Dinwiddie at his own valuation and to accept at face value Dinwiddie's justifications of his course. . . . However, this is merely saying that Mr. Koontz has not written a perfect book. The book which he has written is a very good and a very useful one." T. C. Pease

+ Canadian Hist R 23:201 Je '42 1150w

KOSARY, DOMINIC G. A history of Hungary; with a foreword by Julius Szeff. 482p il maps $2.75 Benjamin Franklin bibliophile soc, box 255, Grand central annex, N.Y.

943.91 Hungary—History 41-21428

History of Hungary as a separate country. The treatment is chronological. It begins with the origin and settlement of the Carpathian basin by the Magyars, and is brought down to 1940. Contains genealogical tables, statistical data, a bibliography, and index.

Reviewed by Oscar Jászi
Am Hist R 47:816 Jl '42 750w

"There are many works on Hungary which American readers might find useful. The present volume will serve only as a popular work which will not mislead the wary." H. N. Howard

Ann Am Acad 220:232 Mr '42 410w

"[The book] is the most subtle type of political propaganda we know." Max Fischer
Commonweal 35:372 Ja 30 '42 250w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:783 Jl '42 20w
Social Studies 33:47 Ja '42 30w

KOTINSKY, RUTH. Elementary education of adults; a critical interpretation. 205p $1.50 Am. assn. for adult educ.

374 Education of adults 41-20902

"In her new book Dr. Kotinsky has surveyed the whole field of literacy and naturalization education in order to describe its present nature and scope and analyze critically its strengths and weaknesses. She brings to her study a broad background of knowledge and understanding of the basic processes of education as they apply everywhere to young people and adults, and she is able, therefore, to evaluate literacy and naturalization teaching in terms of broad criteria, a distinct novelty in a field which has been too often characterized by amateur efforts and an emotional outlook." Library Q

"Elementary Education of Adults is an indispensable book for teachers of literacy and naturalization classes and for all other persons who are interested in education at this level. Those who are concerned with other kinds of adult teaching may also derive from the book many valuable insights which they can turn to profit in their own activities." C. O. Houle

+ Library Q 12:319 Ap '42 450w

Pratt p11 O '42

School & Society 54:340 O 18 '41 20w

KOURNAKOFF, SERGEI NICHOLAS. Russia's fighting forces. 258p maps $2.50 Duell 947 Russia—History. Military. Russia—Army. World war, 1939—Russia.

(W) 42-16791

"Captain Kournakoff's book is an academic history of the fighting forces of Russia, supplemented by a studious analysis of the operations of the Soviet-German campaign in 1941. . . . Captain Kournakoff's main thesis is that Germany lost the war in July, 1941, because of a series of blunders on the part of the German High Command and the Red Army's strength, fortitude, and equipment."

Captain Kournakoff, as he himself relates, comes from an old family of Russian military men. He served in the White Army against the Bolsheviks during the civil war, and for the past twenty-one years has been a resident of the United States." Nation

Reviewed by H. A. DeWeerd
Books p14 Ag 9 '42 1100w

Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 8 '42 450w

"Throughout his book Captain Kournakoff adheres rigidly to the 'party line.' He suffers, moreover, from a narrow military point of view. . . . Although he has unquestionably been a careful student of Soviet military publications, the fact that he has neither been in Russia nor had any direct contact with the Red Army for more than two decades limits the value of his work." John Scott

+ Nation 155:15 Jl 4 '42 500w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates
New Repub 107:59 Jl 13 '42 120w

"Captain Kournakoff performs a useful service when he briefly recalls the bright sides of Russian military history. . . . Unfortunately for the objectivity and value of his book, however, he swallows the 'Party line' completely and without reservation, thereby letting himself in for many demonstrable historical inaccuracies. And he impairs the excellent case which can be made out for the courage, discipline and technical preparedness of the Red Army by exaggerated claims and by refusing to admit the possibility that Stalin in particular or any Soviet lesser functionary could ever make a military, political or economic mistake." W. H. Chamberlin

+ N Y Times p1 J 5 '42 1000w

"The greatest service which this book performs is to present in brief and readable form the sources and traditions from which the fighting spirit of the Red Army of today draws its strength. . . . Captain Kournakoff has given us a book which everyone who wishes to understand the battles now taking place in Russia, battles upon which the fate of the civilized world may depend, should read with sympathy and understanding." G. F. Elliot

+ Pacific Affairs 25:492 D '42 900w

Pratt p13 D '42

KRAEHNBUHL, JOHN OTTO. Electrical illumination. 441p il $3.75 Wiley

621.32 Electric lighting 42-2709

"A technical treatise planned for use as a college textbook. It gives the principles underlying the design of electrical lighting for commercial and industrial buildings, with special attention to floodlighting and novelty lighting. Problems, reading references. Many diagrams." Booklist

Booklist 38:227 Mr 1 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:40 Jl '42

KRAEMER, ELMER OTTO; BARTELL, FLOYD EARL, and KISTLER, SAMUEL STEPHENS, eds. Advances in colloid science. v 1 434p il $5.50 Interscience

541.3452 Colloids (42-11751)

"The first volume of a series planned to present significant new papers in the field indicated by the title. This volume contains twelve contributions by sixteen authors. The author index to cited literature runs to eight hundred names and the subject index covers more than seven pages." N Y New Tech Bks

"The book is highly recommended to all colloid and physical chemists and can be read with profit by all advanced students in chemistry. Additional volumes in the series are promised when world conditions warrant additional publications. The editors and publishers are to be congratulated on the format and on meeting a real need in this field of science." R. A. Gortner

+ J Phys Chem 46:782 Je '42 300w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:38 Jl '42

KRAGHT, PETER E. Meteorology for ship and aircraft operation. 373p il $3 Cornell maritime

551.5 Meteorology. Meteorology in aeronautics 42-24368

"Senior meteorologist of American Airlines writes in language understandable to pilots, without much theoretical discussion. Practical illustrations and short glossary of winds and technical terms." Library J

Booklist 39:133 D 15 '42

"To one who wants a good practical knowledge of weather this book can be heartily recommended. A boy who expects to enter the Air Corps, Navy or merchant marine would find it especially valuable for it would give him a long start on an important subject." James Stokley

+ Books p22 D 13 '42 350w

Library J 67:953 N 1 '42 40w

"Since this book is addressed to seamen and airmen who are not highly trained in science it ought to make its appeal to the general reader." Waldemar Kaempffert

N Y Times p35 N 22 '42 100w

Reviewed by C. E. Buell

N Y Times p18 Ja 17 '43 200w

KRAINES, SAMUEL HENRY. Therapy of the neuroses and psychoses; a socio-psychobiologic analysis and resynthesis. 512p $5.50 Lea

616.8 Neuroses. Psychology, Pathological 41-3691

"The author states his conceptions of mental disorders and his methods of treatment in the hope that physicians other than psychiatrists will be able to use the principles of therapy set forth. Case histories from the author's practice are given to illustrate his concepts of etiology and mental mechanisms and to demonstrate his technique of treatment. The book's subtitle, 'A Socio-psychobiologic Analysis and Resynthesis,' indicates its conformity with the school of psychobiology." Am J Soc

Reviewed by M. F. Martin

Am J Psychol 55:300 Ap '42 550w

"Many excellent suggestions and comments are given about the practical aspects of psychotherapy. It is unfortunate that these are scattered throughout the book and that their effectiveness is somewhat vitiated by the lack of clarity in the exposition of the conceptual framework. This confusion is partly due to an awkward style in which poor construction and uncertain terminology obscure the meaning that one can sometimes guess was intended. There are also some misstatements of fact." H. T. Carmichael

+ — Am J Soc 47:646 Ja '42 320w

KRAITCHIK, MAURICE. Mathematical recreations. 328p $3.75 Norton

793.74 Mathematical recreations. Games (W) 42-51974

This collection of mathematical pastimes includes problems in logic, numerical problems, probabilities, dice, card and chess games, and magic squares. Index.

Library J 68:36 Ja 1 '43 30w

"One can find enough occupation in the permutational probabilities of chess, dominoes, or any of the standard games of chance to fill one's leisure for a decade or so. The book is written by a former Professor of Mathematics at the University of Brussels, now with the New School for Social Research in New York. The simple and sincere thanks he gives to his country of refuge in his preface are worth reading, whether one knows a modulo from a Heronian parallelogram or not, or wants to bother to find out." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 26:13 Ja 16 43 380w

KRAUS, RENE. Europe in revolt. 563p $3.50 Macmillan

940.54056 World war, 1939—Occupied territory (W) 42-16460

Account of the underground movements in the conquered countries of Europe, taken country by country. It describes the methods used by the Nazis and their system of Germanization, especially the economic squeeze. Secondly it depicts the sabotage, slow down in work, underground leaflets, the refusal to submit by teachers and the clergy, and other methods used in an attempt to thwart the invaders. The author, of Austrian and French descent, spent most of his earlier life in European diplomatic and journalistic circles.

"There is a good amount of what has already been said or written elsewhere. But there are also many revealing new facts which either have not been known generally or have not been evaluated on merits. The usefulness of the book would be much enhanced if it included a selected bibliography and particularly a good index. The American reader may find it difficult to trace all the foreign names scattered within more than 800 pages of this fact-packed volume." Josef Hanč

+ — Ann Am Acad 223:203 S '42 450w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Atlantic 170:136 S '42 230w

Booklist 38:439 Jl 15 '42

"Rene Kraus has done a good and useful job, even if his book has faults and often reads like a mystery novel. . . The latter part of the book suffers somewhat from exaggeration." Sonia Tomara

+ — Books p10 Je 28 '42 1000w

"Each little episode would be readable by itself; together they make a mosaic that confuses the reader. The vivid style cannot overcome this difficulty. 'Europe in Revolt' serves a good purpose by showing up the bestiality of Nazism, but it could have been much better had it been a journalistic report or a scientific study."

+ — Boston Globe p19 Ag 12 '42 280w

Reviewed by Dorothy Graham

Cath World 155:758 S '42 550w

"Kraus has been an editor in Berlin and Vienna, has traveled all over the world, and was lucky enough to be in the United States on a journalistic mission for the Austrian government at the time of the fall of Austria. His book is full of vivid, intimate and inside information."

+ Christian Century 59:887 J1 15 '42 90w

"One who has kept close tabs on day-to-day news developments since Munich, augmenting this knowledge with the more detailed accounts of correspondents returned from Europe, will find considerable familiar material in Mr. Kraus' book. On the other hand, even the best informed will find that many of the author's probings have gone deeper than previous analyses. . . Occasionally, there is a minor slip."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 8 '42 500w

Reviewed by Heinz Soffner
Commonweal 36:282 J1 10 '42 450w

"A must book for public libraries." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 67:581 Je 15 '42 50w

"A very useful and timely volume in itself."
Milos Safranek

+ N Y Times p9 Je 28 '42 1250w

"Probably the fullest and best recent report on the occupied, though not conquered, countries. . . Detailed and intelligently written, though the arrangement of the book calls for too much jumping back and forth."

+ New Yorker 18:62 Je 27 '42 100w

"Kraus writes well. The book, though it contains a plethora of data and information, is nowhere dry or academic. The sole criticism that can be leveled against the author is that here and there, in his effort to provide dramatic effects, he gives the reader too much of a good thing." Leo Lania

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 J1 25 '42 500w

KREYMBORG, ALFRED, ed. Poetic drama.
855p $5 Tudor

808.82 Dramas—Collections 41-27677

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

Booklist 38:230 Mr 1 '42

Bookmark 3:9 Mr '42

"It is hard to go wrong among the little that survives from classical Greek, but surely only a peculiar quirk could have determined Mr. Kreymborg to put forward the 'Ion' as a representative play by Euripides. Corneille's 'Cinna' may be queried, and one can only deplore the interminable bulk of Schiller's 'The Death of Wallenstein,' which not even Coleridge could make readable. A more representative play by Goethe than 'Torquato Tasso' would also be welcome. On the other side of the ledger Mr. Kreymborg has made excellent decisions in picking Edith Hamilton's version of the 'Agamemnon' and J. H. Frere's translation of 'The Acharnians' (instead of 'The Frogs'). The medieval section is well balanced, and contains notably a spirited rendering by Samuel Eliot of a Hans Sachs play not very commonly reproduced in England. Lope de Vega's 'The Sheep Well' is also a brilliant choice." G. F. Whicher

+ Books p22 F 1 '42 800w

"One of the many excellent features of this serious study is the carefully compiled, innumerable lists of supplementary reading, which are amplified still further in an appendix, added to the short critical interpretations that Mr. Kreymborg has done on each play and its author. This comprehensive anthology shows with vivid perspective the unfolding and the development of poetic drama, 'timeless in its validity,' and will be of great value to lovers of the stage and its history." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p16 F 22 '42 600w

"This book is, in the first place, a piece of propaganda—and very successful propaganda—for the revival of the theatre along classical lines. . . Here is a unique anthology of the drama—the first, so far as this reviewer knows, to be limited in its scope by form alone. In all other respects it is truly panoramic, stretching from the Orient to the Occident and from the beginnings of the drama to the present year. A long introduction contains a remarkably concise history of poetic drama, gives it the contemporary and political slant so necessary at the present moment, and expresses the hope of a true votary for the future of the art." R. D. Harper

Poetry 60:267 Ag '42 850w

Pratt p17 O '42

"The thirty-three plays in this new Alfred Kreymborg anthology—the first collection of verse plays in the 2400 years of drama—are not all equally great, but all are verse of high order,actable on a stage, and, in general, humanitarian in theme, thereby fulfilling the book's stated aim that it be 'a continuous plea for an indivisible people's and artists' theatre.' The selection is fresh, enlarging our periphery, many plays here being otherwise difficult of access. . . Every library, public and private, would be enriched by this book. Already of wide reputation for his poems and plays, and seven previous distinctive anthologies, Mr. Kreymborg again puts us in his debt." Jane Dransfield

+ Sat R of Lit 25:19 Ja 31 '42 650w

Theatre Arts 26:211 Mr '42 800w

KROLL, HARRY HARRISON. Rider on the bronze horse. 326p $2.50 Bobbs

42-19938

Eli Arn, a young Mississippi farmer, is the central character of this study of modern conditions in the South. Eli married the daughter of a rich planter-politician, whose bronze statue names the book. The struggle of Eli to equal or better his father-in-law's record, both in politics and on the plantation, is interrupted on the eve of his success, when an evangelist brother brings to light the renewal of Eli's first love affair.

"A good tale." John Cournos

+ Atlantic 170:150 O '42 120w

Booklist 39:34 O 1 '42

"There is humor and sweat here, and young love's fancy and tender dreams, square dances and beatings. 'The Rider on the Bronze Horse' is a sincere, sometimes powerful, story of two poor Southern boys passionately losing their way." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p3 Ag 23 '42 950w

"Kroll's story is alive with the ferment of a Southern community. That, indeed, is the best part of his book. While Eli's story is real and generally convincing, there are places where it creaks with bad structure and stilted talk. Kroll does less than justice to Harriet." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 23 '42 750w

"This novel might have been a moving, humorous, or tragic study of a modern southern demagogue driven by low or sentimental passion to become the holder of an office, and hence truly representative of the host of gross boors that holds office down here today. But Mr. Kroll has muffed his chance. Though he is dealing with a country and a people that possess all the elements of tragedy, he gives us only well-meant melodrama." E. P. O'Donnell

Sat R of Lit 25:17 O 5 '42 370w

KRONENBERGER, LOUIS. Kings and desperate men; life in eighteenth-century England. 331p il $3.50 Knopf

914.2 England—Social life and customs
(W) 42-9296

"The chief aim of this book is to provide a picture of eighteenth-century England until the time of the French Revolution. The whole thing lies much closer to a social chronicle than an orthodox history-book, and is more concerned with manners and tastes than with treaties and wars." (Note) Reading list. Index.

"A prefatory note admits frankly that this survey of eighteenth-century England 'makes no claims to scholarship'. . . [The author's] method, to use his own phrasing, is descriptive. That he succeeds in writing a fascinating book even the churliest critic would not deny. There is not a dull moment in the entire program. In a swiftly moving panorama the eighteenth century comes to life again as one after another of the great personalities in politics, literature, art, and religion parade across the stage at the bidding of the historian." C. A. Moore

KRONENBERGER, LOUIS—Continued
+ Am Hist R 48:98 O '42 600w

"A picture full of vigor and gusto, one thoroughly in keeping with the ruthless representations by Hogarth which illustrate the text. . . Mr. Kronenberger modestly disclaims any special scholarship, but it is evident that he is passionately interested in his theme as a social historian, that he has made an earnest effort to impart some sense of unity to the pattern of the time, and that he has sufficient writing skill to communicate to the reader his vision of the century that produced Marlborough and Bolingbroke, the two Walpoles, Hogarth and Swift, Johnson and Pope, Pitt the Younger and Burke; a century, too, in which the Industrial Revolution was born." John Cournoos

+ Atlantic My '42 200w
Booklist 38:29 My 1 '42
Bookmark 3:10 My '42

"'Kings and Desperate Men' has the virtues of Louis Kronenberger's best short pieces—vigor, discrimination and social awareness—plus far greater breadth. Since his theme here is the time-spirit and manners of an entire century, I will not say that he is as much the master of it as of a single novel or first-night, but I will say that he has written, within a certain compass, as interesting and stimulating a book about the eighteenth century as I know." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p4 Ap 5 '42 1000w

"It is a very successful effort on the whole. Even those with sufficient knowledge of the ground to be critical from time to time will enjoy a tour with an enterprising conductor who not only possesses an appreciation of the significant, but can offer shrewd comment." H. C. F. Bell

+ Commonweal 36:210 Je 19 '42 490w

"Well written and very readable. Although it contains no new material, it is recommended for libraries not already overstocked on this period." J. B. Fogg

+ Library J 67:181 F 15 '42 30w

"Mr. Kronenberger obviously admires the century he has chosen to write about more than he cares to admit or perhaps is even himself aware. With amusing persistence he denies its right to its renown, and then, willy-nilly, builds up that renown again. . . Two other things, one minor and one major, should be credited to Mr. Kronenberger's book. The first is a group of unhackneyed illustrations. The second is a wittily compressed style in which epigrammatic expression is used not so much for the purpose of getting something off as in order to make generalization memorable rather than dull." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 154:427 Ap 11 '42 1000w

"The characteristic of all these people is that under all circumstances they remained personages: none of them ever loses that sense of individual dignity that permits positive orgies of vituperation and mudslinging to be indulged in with an air of mutual respect. I feel that even Pope at his most vitriolic recognized that his victims, if only by reason of being his victims, possessed a distinction that made the attack worth while. Such people as these naturally attract gossip. This book is good because the gossip is great." George Barker

+ New Repub 106:837 Je 15 '42 850w

"'Kings and Desperate Men' is no mere picture, not even a picture that moves and speaks and registers changing emotions: it is a re-creation. And it is a re-creation of such deftness and wit, set in such limpid, full-packed prose, that every sentence is to be read with delight. This eighteenth-century study is alive; it is fascinating, in a sense it is almost, if not quite, unique." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 5 '42 1450w

"Mr. Kronenberger omits much, he condenses much, and other social historians will doubtless quarrel with his proportions. But on the whole I know of no book of comparable length that does this kind of job so intelligently, with such undeviating taste, and with so notable an absence of partisan spirit. Mr. Kronenberger does not go in for making bold and pioneer judgments. He would rather be right than startling. Yet there is a constant shimmer of independence about his view of the great wits and politicians and writers of the period. He never astonishes, but he rarely echoes." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 13:84 Ap 11 '42 360w
Pratt p14 O '42

"Mr. Kronenberger has written an admirable and most readable book, one which sums up neatly the way eighteenth-century England looks to an intelligent intellectual in mid-twentieth-century America." Crane Brinton

+ Sat R of Lit 25:8 Ap 11 '42 600w
Time 39:102 Ap 13 '42 750w

KROUT, MAURICE HAIM. Introduction to social psychology. 823p il maps $4 Harper

301.15 Social psychology 42-5146

"In this book the larger aspects of psychology of how human beings behave in social situations are considered. In a time when man's decisions and plans must be made with reference to major trends in human relations . . . it is helpful to make the effort to see things in larger wholes. These larger wholes integrate in such topics as environment, heredity, the organism, the group, culture, symbolism, patterning, lags, change, conflict, leadership, followership, and democracy. It requires more than precise and technical details of scientific method to attain this larger view hence the author has made an extensive survey of sociological knowledge that bears upon the social psychology of human behavior." (Editor's intro) Bibliography. Index.

"Since the entire treatise, while inclined to a behavioristic interpretation, is, nevertheless, upon occasion, tempered by the viewpoints of other schools of psychology and social psychology, the result is a somewhat confusing eclecticism. Despite its serious shortcomings, this volume is an interesting compendium of materials, thoroughly annotated, with well-conceived questions at the end of each chapter which would make it very useful for beginning students in sociology." S. M. Strong

+ Am J Soc 48:145 J1 '42 450w

"The book deserves and will find a place, though more probably in psychology courses rather than sociology." R. E. L. Faris

+ Am Soc R 7:456 Je '42 550w

Reviewed by E. G. Olsen

Social Educ 7:40 Ja '43 480w

Social Studies 33:239 My '42 40w

KRUMGOLD, JOSEPH. Sweeney's adventure; as told by John Kieran in the film Sweeney steps out; il. by Tibor Gergely. [40p] $1 Random house

42-21754

Rather than discuss with his father the bonfire he had built behind the sofa, Sweeney, who lives in The Bronx, makes an early morning visit to the Zoo. . . Sweeney meets a lot of animals and finally is faced with a real test of his courage and when that is met, he goes back home to take his punishment for the bonfire like a man.

"Sophisticated tale more suited to adult humor but offered as a very gay picture book for children. . . There will be difference of opinion regarding this book. It does teach a lesson: Sweeney finds he has been taught to act like a man." R. W. Stewart

Library J 67:911 O 15 '42 60w

"Although this extravaganza has some points of humor which will mean more to adults than to children, its main point is made clear even to 6-year-olds. And if they shouldn't stand in need of such a moral, they will like the book anyhow for its speedy action and especially for the sake of Tibor Gergely's many fine animal pictures." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p38 N 15 '42 240w

"Tibor Gergely has made some of the most charming drawings of a tough little boy of six that we have yet seen. His remarkable use of color makes even the rhinoceros a creature of beauty." Marjorie Flack

+ Sat R of Lit 25:25 N 14 '42 90w

KRZESINSKI, ANDRZEJ J. Is modern culture doomed? foreword by G. Barry O'Toole. 153p $2 Devin-Adair

261.6 Culture, Civilization, Christian, Materialism 42-9440

"To answer the question posed by his title, Father Krzesinski discusses the general questions of definitions of culture and civilization. He considers the history of philosophy with its flood of 'new' thoughts and 'new' movements. He analyzes modern culture, materialistic and Christian. And he arrives at the astonishing conclusion that today's materialism, because of rather than in spite of its shortcomings, 'is the best possible negative justification of Christian culture.'" Springfield Republican

"If you have read Sorokin you need not bother with this, unless you like such reading. The viewpoint is Sorokinian without Sorokin's scholarship and logical development of his premises. Krzesinski is polemic, homiletic, and dogmatic. The book is full of name-calling, undefined terms, and question-begging pseudo-logic." Read Bain

— Am Soc R 7:778 D '42 240w

"This superficial little volume is not really a study of modern culture at all. It is really an attack on the materialism of our age. However after reading Berdyaev and Dawson, these pages seem actually puerile. The author attempts to divorce modern culture from Christian culture, but can we really be so smug about the condition of the culture we call Christian? Are we Christians also not members of our age and have we no responsibility at all for some of its sins?" W. J. Marx

— Commonweal 36:234 Je 26 '42 280w

"This book is of no great value to philosophers, except for its long list of features of modern materialistic culture, all of them denounced as bad. . . The author tries to redefine the distinction between culture and civilization, with the result that the meaning of these terms becomes more involved than ever." H. T. C.

— J Philos 39:278 My 7 '42 120w

+ Springfield Republican p14 Ap 24 '42 700w

KUGELMASS, ISAAC NEWTON. Superior children through modern nutrition. 332p $3.50 Dutton

649.3 Children—Nutrition (W) 42-10258

"How to perfect the growth and development of your children from birth to maturity." (Sub-title) Partial contents: Energy foods; Vitamin foods; Minerals as protective foods; Individualized newborn feeding; Food allergy; Dietary needs of every age; Preventing constipation; Helping lean and fat children. Index.

"The defects of this book tend to outweigh the usefulness of other portions. Because the uninformed mother cannot distinguish between fact and fiction in the field of childhood nutrition, the book is not to be recommended." P. C. Jeans

— + Am J Pub Health 32:766 Jl '42 450w

Booklist 38:325 My 1 '42

Bookmark 4:7 N '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '42

"Author, well-known practicing pediatrician, has written several books on pediatrics, of which this is the least technical. Recommended for quantity purchase." E. D. Hart

+ Library J 67:267 Mr 15 '42 90w

Pratt p14 D '42

"Baby feeding from the day of birth is clearly written so that even inexperienced mothers can follow and have no fear of under-feeding or wrongly feeding the child. Older children have their place, too, with the fat or thin child, the fussy one or his hearty brother all being considered. This is one of the most complete and easily comprehensible books on child feeding available." A. B. T.

+ Springfield Republican p7e Ap 19 '42 190w

Wis Lib Bul 38:116 Jl '42

KUMMER, FREDERIC ARNOLD. For flag and freedom, 1812-1814; il. by Henry C. Pitz. 245p $2 Morrow

(W) 42-16498

The part played in the War of 1812 by a seventeen-year-old boy from Maryland forms the background for this book for grades seven to nine. Jeff sees the battles around Baltimore, helps to capture an English spy, and fights with the American troops. The climax is the reading of The Star Spangled Banner by Francis Scott Key.

Booklist 39:16 S '42

"This is an exciting book, more thrilling than many, because it is about actual events and the important role played by a lad in wartime. Henry Pitz's fine illustrations add distinction to a well-told tale." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 O 7 '42 130w

"Excellent historical story, so filled with thrilling events that readers from twelve to fourteen will follow eagerly and finish with much clearer picture of period." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 67:687 Ag '42 80w

"This is fresh story material which takes on new meaning at the present time. It is historical fiction of a reliable and satisfying kind for older boys, graphically illustrated." I. S.

+ N Y Times p34 N 15 '42 240w

KUMMER, FREDERIC ARNOLD. Torch of liberty; il. by Kreigh Collins. 301p $2 Winston

321.8 Democracy (W) 41-27240

Fourteen dramatically told episodes in the struggle of mankind for freedom from the days of the early Greeks to Dunkirk and the war in the Pacific. Junior and senior high schools.

Booklist 38:211 F 15 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 F 1 '42 340w

"Well selected and well told, the incidents make stirring appeal to liberty lovers to do their part in handing on the torch." A. L. Shea

+ Library J 67:321 Ap 1 '42 110w

Social Studies 33:144 Mr '42 20w

KUNS, RAY FOREST. Flight; aircraft engines; a general survey of fundamentals of aviation. 363p il $3.25 Am. tech. soc.

629.13 Airplane engines, Aeronautics 41-21292

A revision of a portion of the material published 1929-1930 by Junior air service of America, Inc., under title: Commercial Aeronautics. For other volumes see Wright, B. A. in Book Review Digest, 1941. Chapters cover: Elementary engines; Aircraft engine fuel, mixtures and carburetor design; Carburetors, fuel injectors, induction systems and superchargers; Ignition; Spark plugs, radio shielding and storage batteries; Starters, starting motors, generators, and accessories; Light plane engines; Lycoming light plane engines; Radial aircraft engines; Valve and ignition timing; and Lubrication and fuels. Supplementing the chapters is a series of questions and answers, with hints on how to study.

Booklist 38:192 F 1 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:3 Ja '42

Pratt p13 F '42

KUNTZ, GEORGE. Aircraft spot and seam welding. 108p il $1.25 Pitman

629.1341 Airplanes—Design and construction. Welding 42-21936

Textbook designed to aid the individual worker engaged in spot-and seam-welding to understand better the internal mechanisms of the machines with which he works. Index.

Booklist 39:117 D 1 '42

"Very useful manual."

+ Library J 67:963 N 1 '42 30w

KUO, CHING-CH'IU. I've come a long way.
369p $3 Appleton-Century
B or 92 (W) 42-10203

Autobiography of a young Chinese woman, who has "come a long way" from Canton to America. Born into a rich and progressive family she was allowed to have a good education, but even today ideals of her ancestors are often in conflict with the modern civilization in which she finds herself. In 1937 she had to flee to Hangkow under trying conditions, but was appointed an ambassador of good-will to England. In 1939 she was once more a refugee, but finally escaped and came to America.

Booklist 38:329 My 1 '42

Bookmark 4:14 N '42

"You will enjoy this story of a Chinese girl for the charm of strange places and customs and dramatic events but even more for the insight and humor with which she recounts experiences of youth the world over. A clew to her spirit lies in her reply to one of the British ladies who lauded Chinese servants, then asked if it is true that they are very clean. Miss Kuo replied that they certainly are, adding, 'At home we tried English maids and found them so dirty that we had to discharge them.' At that, she concludes, 'My torturer changed the subject.'" Mary Ross

+ Books p2 My 17 '42 1200w

"Somewhat tedious in style. Recommended for limited purchase." Jacqueline Overton

Library J 67:223 Mr 1 '42 40w

"One of the most appealing features of this engaging and informative autobiography is its artlessly candid disclosure of adolescent uncertainties. Here is the confrontation of old and new, to be sure; but here is also the natural oscillation of youth."

+ N Y Times p17 My 24 '42 700w

Pratt p5 D '42

"If you are intrigued by the disarmingly frank title 'I've Come a Long Way,' you will be completely fascinated by this autobiography of Helena Kuo, who has not wasted a minute of her short lifetime, which has been as incongruous as calligraphy and typewriting—but she does both equally well." F. G. Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 My 9 '42 400w

Wis Lib Bul 38:85 My '42

KUSZMAUL, ROSE. Nobody's children. 283p
$2.50 Houghton

42-24438

The scene is a state orphan asylum. It is the story of a woman, Sarah, who is one of the managers, with twenty-eight boys between the ages of six and twelve as her charges. At first the boys assume so little personality for her that Sarah regards them as so many young Chinamen. Gradually she grows to know and understand them, and finally to love them and be rewarded by their love and trust.

Booklist 39:184 Ja 1 '43

"The furrow which Miss Rose Kuzmaul plows in 'Nobody's Children' is clean and straight and true. With no change of pace whatever, without benefit of any of those beguiling artistry to which more skilful novelists habitually have recourse, Miss Kuzmaul manages—God knows how, by her simple sincerity, I'd guess, and her sound sense of human character and real values, and her constant though never overt humor—to hold one's responsive interest from the first page of her unassuming little novel to the last." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p14 N 22 '42 750w

"'Nobody's Children' is not a book which conforms neatly to any set pattern. In its style it is crisp, clipped, allusive, perhaps a little baffling. It has borrowed something, I should say, from the methods of expressionism. Throughout the story, moreover, little is explained. One never learns, for instance, what Sarah's background is, nor what impelled her to come to the home. . . All in all—and with few qualifications—'Nobody's Children' strikes me as a novel which is, in the liberal sense, remarkable, and which no one, I feel, can afford to overlook." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p24 N 1 '42 1000w

"The story might be improved if some of the interminable conversation of the boys was omitted for a somewhat closer study of a few of the lesser figures. . . There is also a tendency toward sentimentousness in some of the description. Miss Kuzmaul seems at times to missfire. The oversentimentality of her prose is occasionally overwhelming. The result is a sense of irritation and flatness. . . Miss Kuzmaul shows such an affinity for boys and such a vivid touch in depicting their lives and conversation that she should go on and tell us more. We want to know lots of things about lots of those boys." M. G.

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e N 8 '42 550w

KUZNETS, SIMON SMITH; EPSTEIN, LIL-LIAN, and JENKS, ELIZABETH. National income and its composition, 1919-1938. 2v 387;391-929p $5 Nat. bur. of economic research

339.2 Income. U.S.—Economic conditions

42-3712

"Exhaustive study of total income in the United States during the 20 years following World War I, coupled with estimates by industries and types of income and analyses of long-term changes and fluctuations during business cycles. Other points covered are the derivation of the estimates, their margins of error, the ways in which they differ from other estimates, and the reasons why they differ." Management R

"There has been some discussion among sociologists as to whether scientific method as known in the physical sciences can be applied to society. The work of this bureau is the answer in the affirmative, at least in this sphere of social life. . . The author of the Wealth of Nations would have been much impressed with these two volumes." W. F. Ogburn

Am J Soc 48:269 S '42 330w

Reviewed by J. G. Smith

Ann Acad 221:222 My '42 650w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:780 Jl '42 10w

"It might have been useful, in the discussion of business savings, to distinguish between corporations showing positive and those showing negative savings; and in connection with income from real estate gross rents might have been shown before taxes and other costs are deducted. These are personal wishes of the reviewer, however, and neither criticism nor a suggestion of incompleteness of the work, which is not only a comprehensive survey of the economic structure of this country but a monument to its economic statistics." J. V. Wyler

+ J Pol Econ 50:947 D '42 600w

Management R 31:152 Ap '42 100w

Reviewed by A. H. Hansen

Pol Sci Q 57:455 S '42 900w

L

LA BERGE, ARMAND JOHN. Woodworking for fun. 104p il $2.25 Manual arts

684 Woodwork

(W) 41-22662

Detailed instructions and diagrams designed to help boys in making things for themselves. Inexpensive materials and simple tools are used. Contents: A campfire seat; A sure trap for rats; A wren cottage; Robin house; Roller-scoot; The 'speedscoot'; The speed winner motorboat; The American clipper; The 'liberty special' pushmobile; The champion kite; The sky flyer kite; The hunter chief round bow; Making a bow string; Making arrows; The Robin Hood flat bow; Surface carving. Index.

Booklist 38:178 Ja 15 '42

"Introductory and interspersed remarks are colloquial, but directions are carefully worked out and complete. Some knowledge of terms and tools is presupposed. The choice of subjects and unusually great detail will make this popular." Alice Monroe

+ Library J 67:183 F 15 '42 50w

"It is a splendid book for a boy who is interested in making attractive things employing simple tools and inexpensive materials. It is richly illustrated and is full of helpful playtime suggestions and is educationally sound."

+ School Arts 41:4a My '42 80w

LA BOETIE, ESTIENNE DE. Anti-dictator; the Discours sur la servitude volontaire; rendered into English by Harry Kurz. 54p $1 Columbia Univ. press [5s Oxford]

321 Political science. Liberty 42-3374

"La Boétie is usually remembered as the great friend of the cautious Montaigne; but he was, in addition, on his own way to greatness when his premature death inflicted a major casualty on French culture of the Renaissance. The point of 'Contr'Un'—as Professor Borgese once defined it, and he should know—is that 'all servitude is voluntary, and the slave is more despicable than the tyrant is hateful.' It is, indeed, the first modern attempt to transfer the attention of the political thinker from the technique of the enslaver to the psychology of the enslaved. 'Liberty is the only joy upon which men do not seem to insist,' sighs La Boétie, 'for surely, if they really wanted it, they would receive it. . . Resolve to serve no more, and you are at once freed.' Our short-wave broadcasters must be catching on, since they recently sent over the air to La Boétie's fellow-Frenchmen an entire script drawn literally from his essay. As counterpoint to every paragraph of his felicitous rendering, Harry Kurz has added streamlined subtitles of his own, to remind the reader that appeasement, the fifth column, and no-foreign-battles-for-our-boys are just new terms for immemorial political diseases." Nation

Christian Century 59:432 Ap 1 '42 230w

"An excellent translation." Paolo Milano

+ Nation 154:376 Mr 28 '42 300w

LACEY, MARION. Picture book of musical instruments; il. by Leonard Weisgard. 55p $2 Lothrop

781.91 Musical instruments—Juvenile literature (W) 42-13404

"Miss Lacey's book is not for what we usually call 'the picture-book age'; its text, brief but unhurried, gives each instrument a touch of historical background. . . Descriptions are lucid, and while thoroughly musicianly, non-technical enough for any one. They bring out the way the tone is produced, its special value in the orchestra and its general use to the composer. Division is by strings, woodwinds, bass and percussion, with harp, piano and modern instruments separately considered." Books

Booklist 38:386 Je 15 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 Je 14 '42 270w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 18:258 Jl '42 70w

Reviewed by J. L. Sauer
Library J 67:582 Je 15 '42 90w
Wis Lib Bul 38:166 N '42

LADD, WILLIAM PALMER. Prayer book interleaves; some reflections on how the Book of common prayer might be made more influential in our English-speaking world. 188p $1.25 Oxford

264.03 Book of common prayer 42-3560

"Those who pick up this book expecting to find it an up-to-date edition of 'The Prayer Book Annotated' will be surprised and, in some cases, shocked. For this is not an archaeological commentary, but a book with a thesis. That thesis may be stated briefly thus: The life-giving heart of the Christian community is the Liturgy and 'the lost radiance of the Christian religion' can be regained only as Christians cultivate the Liturgical life, that life of sacrificial 'offering' which finds its effective symbol in the Eucharist. The book represents an effort to translate into the terms of our communion the Liturgical Movement. . . With that purpose as a background, Dean Ladd then undertakes to survey, in a series of papers, many of which originally appeared as articles in the church press, the whole field of Christian worship." (Churchman) Index.

+ Christian Century 59:154 F 4 '42 80w

"The style of the book is as lucid and unsentimental as was Dean Ladd himself, and is frequently tinged with a quiet, but caustic humor, as he touches upon current follies in the conduct of public worship. Needless to say, Dean Ladd represents no recognizable school of 'churchmanship.' The Anglo-Catholic and the Liberal Protestant will each find much that is pleasing, some things that are shocking, but everywhere a point of view that is fresh and stimulating." R. C. Dentan

+ Churchman 156:16 Mr 1 '42 700w

LA FARGE, OLIVER, ed. The changing Indian; from a symposium arranged by the American association on Indian affairs. (Civilization of the Am. Indian) 184p il $2 Univ. of Okla. press

970.1 Indians of North America. Indians of North America—Government relations 42-19929

"An instructive and highly interesting collection of essays on the American Indian as he is today, including a discussion of health, land tenure and ownership, arts and crafts, population, the use of native languages and culture, and religion and education." School & Society

Reviewed by John Collier

Ann Am Acad 2225:259 Ja '43 650w

Booklist 39:67 N 1 '42

Reviewed by Erna Fergusson
Books p18 N 8 '42 850w

"The book offers no final solutions, but it is immensely stimulating; it should have a place in any library on the Indian problem." K. C. K.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 7 '42 450w

Reviewed by F. W. Seymour

N Y Times p4 S 6 '42 1000w

School & Society 56:136 Ag 15 '42 40w

"Unlike most collections of papers by experts, these expressions hold together as a unit; they constitute a whole, and the whole is an indispensable source of information for those who wish to know what is happening to the North American Indian in these times." E. C. Lindeman

+ Survey G 31:428 O '42 300w

LA FARGE, OLIVER. Copper pot. 295p $2.50 Houghton

(W) 42-15420

Story of a young New England-born, well-to-do painter, and the months of his maturing in the French Quarter of New Orleans.

Reviewed by Wilson Follett

Atlantic 170:144 S '42 200w

Booklist 38:442 Jl 15 '42

"If any layman wants to learn the particular-go of the painter fellow he cannot do better than to read the novels of the men who understand them. Somerset Maugham's 'The Moon and Sixpence,' an early, rough but brilliantly illuminating novel of Thomas Craven's called 'Paint,' Irving Stone's life of Vincent Van Gogh, published as a novel under the title 'Lust for Life,' are cases in point. Gently clumsy and amateurish as it is, Mr. La Farge's 'The Copper Pot' belongs by full right in this goodly and useful company—as a step-by-step account of the slow process by which a gifted and ambitious American painter beats his life and his art painfully, exultantly into shape." F. H. Bullock

LA FARGE, OLIVER—Continued

+ — Books p4 Je 21 '42 800w

"Add to the clichés of the story the filter of Harvard gentility through which the former Pulitzer prize-winner sees them, and perhaps it isn't only the fault of the times that a book about love and art in the Latin Quarter of New Orleans doesn't even make us nostalgic."

— Nation 154:720 Je 20 '42 150w

New Repub 106:902 Je 29 '42 50w

"'The Copper Pot'—the title, by the way, of the first painting Tom Hartshorn succeeds in selling—is a much better than average account of an artist's daily working life. Oliver La Farge knows more than most writers about the technical business of painting, as the grandson of John La Farge and the son of Grant La Farge should. On this score alone, for its exciting and veracious detail, 'The Copper Pot' is well worth reading." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 Je 21 '42 900w

"Mr. La Farge's recent work, of which 'The Copper Pot' is a good example, is deficient in the one quality to give it authority. It is the quality Tom himself lacks: intensity. This story, balanced and perceptive as it is, has no pressure behind it, despite the luxurious nature of some of its episodes. It has form but only a low charge of power. Perhaps Mr. La Farge himself is still trying to break through a mold not dissimilar to that which inhibits his hero." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 18:65 Je 20 '42 400w

LAHEE, FREDERIC HENRY. Field geology.

4th ed rev and enl 853p il maps $5 McGraw

550 Geology 41-10765

"This new edition of an old standby, which was last revised in 1931, includes among the new topics 'only those which can be said definitely to be applicable in the study of pure geology in its numerous branches—especially stratigraphy, structural geology, and geologic history. . . . New material will be found on mass movements, varvs, lensing strata, permeability of sedimentary rocks, flow structure and fracture structure in igneous rocks, field study of igneous bodies, etc.' A table of the identification of common rock minerals has been arranged as Appendix II." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:549 Jl 15 '41

"That this handbook has reached the fourth edition is ample proof of its usefulness to students and professional geologists alike. There is little doubt that this book will retain its deserved popularity. Any adverse comments on a fourth edition of a book so obviously well received may perhaps occasion surprise. Your reviewer, however, notes that the fourth edition does not include any methods of reconstruction of folds from observed strike and dip readings or the related problem of determination of thickness when the top and bottom surfaces of a bed have different dips (or even different strikes and dips), the two-tilt problem, or even the most useful, though older, two-level or contour method of W. S. T. Smith for the solution of fault problems." F. J. Pettijohn

+ — J Geol 50:922 O '42 280w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:55 O '41

LAIRD, JOHN. Theism and cosmology. 325p $3.50 Philosophical lib. inc. 15 E. 40th st, N.Y.; Alliance bk. [10s 6d Allen, G]

211 Theism. God. Cosmology [41-11839]

"This important book represents the first series of Gifford Lectures delivered on the general subject of Metaphysics and Theism, and is to be followed by a second series on the theme of Mind and Deity. The division between the two facets of the argument may be said roughly to correspond with the generic distinction between the metaphysical and moral attributes of godhead or with that between the realistic and idealistic philosophies, the attitude taken up in this first series being 'provisionally realistic.' " Times [London] Lit Sup

"This book is at once attractive and disconcerting. The reader cannot fail to be impressed by the author's engaging frankness, the vigour and clarity of his thought and style, and his manifest intellectual integrity. He handles a theme which has been ridden hard since it was first broached by Plato, with a refreshing independence of tradition that will be gratifying to philosophers, if not to theologians. . . . What is disconcerting is the refusal to offer a definitive solution. Professor Laird's first series is avowedly tentative. . . . We are left with an uneasy impression that, while Professor Laird has the parts of his problem—or at least some of them—firmly in hand, the Geistige Band of the argument to Theism has eluded his grasp." W. G. de Burgh

+ — Hibbert J 39:106 O '40 1650w

Reviewed by H. W. Schneider

J Philos 39:440 Jl 30 '42 2350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p468 S 14 '40 900w

LAIRD, STEPHEN, and GRAEBNER, WALTER. Conversation in London between [the authors] [Eng title: Hitler's Reich and Churchill's Britain]. 120p $1.50 Morrow [6s Batsford]

940.5342 World war, 1939—Germany. World war, 1939—Great Britain (W) 42-2129

Two representatives of Time, Inc.—Stephen Laird who was Berlin correspondent in 1940 and 1941, and Walter Graebner, who had been London correspondent for five years—met in London. This is a stenographic record of their interchange of experiences, given in question and answer form.

Booklist 38:207 F 15 '42

"A most worthwhile and readable book. They say so much in so few words." J. M. Minifie

+ Books p4 F 22 '42 600w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:778 Jl '42 20w

"Interesting for viewpoints, but stilted and a little pompous in print."

New Repub 106:158 F 2 '42 50w

Reviewed by G. W. Stonier

New Statesman & Nation 23:111 F 14 '42 1350w

"Superlatively worthy of its present appearance in book form. The 'conversation' is at once concise and illuminating."

+ N Y Times p8 Ja 25 '42 500w

Reviewed by Bernard Foley

Spec 163:264 Mr 13 '42 650w

"The book is brisk and provoking rather than profound."

Times [London] Lit Sup p62 F 7 '42 750w

LAITEM, MRS HELEN (HOLLMAN), and MILLER, FRANCES SUE. Experiences in homemaking. 505p il $1.80 Ginn

640 Home economics 42-5979

Introductory textbook in home economics. "The authors' objective is to develop an appreciation of wholesome home life and an understanding of the responsibilities and skills involved in homemaking. The approach is made through the pupil's present needs and interests with the aim of improving her personality and enhancing her social adjustment in her home." (Pref) Index.

"An unusual number of good illustrations together with suggestions for observation, thought-provoking questions, and assignments make up its 500 pages and provide usable material for either junior or senior high school. That the authors have evidently kept in mind the needs and desires of modern girls and have been unusually successful is evident from the remark of one of my ninth-grade pupils who idly picked up a copy recently and a little while later exclaimed, "Say—this is interesting!" C. L. Cox

+ J Home Econ 34:319 My '42 150w
School & Society 55:84 Ja 17 '42 10w

LAMBERT, MRS CLARA (BREAKEY). I sing America. 184p il $2.50 Day

811 U.S.—Poetry (W) 41-23912

A pageant in verse describing life in the various regions of the United States, and combining history and geography.

Booklist 38:187 F 1 '42

"Clara Lambert doesn't justify Walt Whitman in any way. She simply pecked historic events meticulously from our native lore and dropped them upon her pages without polishing them until the imagination put a glowing burnish on them. Her poetic lenses have no quality of refraction. When a string of words lacks the power to refract phenomena into image through sensation it misses being poetry." Maurice Swan

— N Y Times p5 D 28 '41 320w

LAMBERT, JANET. Dreams of glory; decorations by Woodi Ishmael. 252p $2 Dutton

(W) 42-15976

Carrol Houghton of Star-spangled Summer (Book Review Digest, 1941) renews her friendship with the Parrish family, now settled in West Point where David is a cadet. Penny Parrish is in and out of excitement, as usual, and on a trip to New York, gets lost at the Army-Notre Dame football game, meets a famous actress, and decides on her own career. For girls of twelve and over.

"Carrol and Penny have these adventures in and around West Point. If that doesn't fill the bill for its audience, nothing would. So many people aren't happy just now that some of them will be glad, remembering their pre-teens, that this busy little life will go on a little longer, and that happy stories are still written for their still-sheltered readers." M. L. Becker

Books p7 J1 12 '42 330w

"Girls will find the story almost breath-taking, so rapid is the tempo Penny and her friend Carrol maintain as they move from one scene and one event to another. Good characterization, story interest, a romance plus a picture of life at the Academy awaits the reader of this up-to-the-minute book about and for young moderns." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 27 '42 180w

LAMBERT, JORDAN W. Air raid warden in America; a manual; ed. and rev. by Ira W. Hirshfield. 57p $1; pa 75c Hastings house

355.23 Air raids—Protective measures

(W) 42-9421

Manual for aid raid wardens, describing their duties, relations with people under their charge, and how to deal with blackouts, bombs, gas, and fires.

Booklist 38:341 My 15 '42

Reviewed by Emmet Crozier

Books p14 My 24 '42 30w

Pratt p8 O '42

LAMBERT, REITA (MRS A. F. NEVIN). When next we meet. 255p $2 Macrae Smith co.

42-14358

The love story of two modern young people: Mona whose life has been too easy, and Tom whose sense of humor was his most valuable asset. Tragedy and separation brought them both to an important decision on the eve of Tom's departure for war.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p16 Je 7 '42 100w

"There is a good deal of genuine feeling in this light novel, and most of it is unpleasant. The book also differs agreeably from the pattern of the fiction with which it naturally falls by ending with an unconventional design, happy, but not the regular happy ending. Written with clever approximation of real conversation and, better still, in its penetration of character, it makes a good story." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p20 My 24 '42 200w

LA MERI, pseud. See Hughes, R. M.

LAMPREY, LOUISE. Building a republic; maps and decorations by Kathleen Voute. 269p $2.25 Stokes

973 U.S.—History—Juvenile literature

(W) 42-21197

Discussion of the principles upon which our republic was founded, with some consideration of the requisites for the building up of any great country. "Attempts to give thoughts and opinions of people on the scene, rather than conclusions of a later day embalmed in history. Breaks down many clichés accepted as basis of common thought." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"The ideal reader for this book is a high school student laboriously making his way through a course in American history and convinced that the subject is dull. He will rub his eyes pretty early, read steadily faster, and skip around in these lively pages for parts that take him behind the scenes in the period he is studying. For this is really what the book is: a backstage view of the American people in process of bringing into being, and developing by trial and error, the Republic of the United States." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 N 29 '42 400w

"Stimulating, challenging, controversial in some statements. Used in conjunction with conventional high school histories, it is bound to make even the laziest pupil think a little." Eleanor Kidder

+ Library J 67:913 O 15 '42 80w

School & Society 56:280 S 26 '42 50w

Springf'd Republican p10 O 9 '42 550w

LANCASTER, BRUCE. Bright to the wanderer. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 451p $2.50 Little

(W) 42-12031

This novel of the Upper Canadian rebellion of 1837, is mainly the story of the Stensrood family, originally Loyalist refugees from the United States. The principal character is young Gilbert Stensrood who joins with William Lyon Mackenzie in his fight against the corrupt Family Compact.

Booklist 38:384 Je 15 '42

Bookmark 4:17 N '42

"This is a book frankly intended to entertain you, and I for one do not see how it can fail to do so. Brisk, lively, fast-moving, it is the performance of a man who knows the first purpose of his job; and despite its bright, superficial quality, it is itself a very sound vindication of the continued existence of the field of entertaining historical fiction." A. B. Tourtellot

+ Books p6 My 10 '42 550w

"If you enjoy history, if you are interested in men who fight for something worth fighting for, if you enjoy the pageant of temperament and character of a colorful family tree, if you enjoy Kenneth Roberts and Mazo de la Roche, here is a happy mating of pleasures and a good substantial evening's reading." Dorothy Hillyer

+ Boston Globe p15 My 20 '42 500w

"A novel soundly historical, vigorous in action, and firm in characterization." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 J1 3 '42 700w

Reviewed by J. E. Tobin

Commonweal 36:185 Je 12 '42 700w

LANCASTER, BRUCE—Continued

"Although characterization is a bit uneven and romance too weak to satisfy all readers, the varied political feelings of citizens and temper of times are well portrayed and story is well developed. Recommended." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 67:414 My 1 '42 70w

"What Mr. Lancaster examines here, when we come to the heart of his novel, is a vital part of the process by which Canada won her present dominion status. Admittedly it is something of which most Americans know too little. One can hardly imagine a pleasanter way of absorbing the knowledge than through the pages of 'Bright to the Wanderer.'" Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 My 10 '42 900w

"'Bright to the Wanderer' combines painless and reasonably accurate instruction with literate popular entertainment. It is said not to have been serialized, and one wonders why not. Some fiction magazine missed a good bet." M. T. Garrett

Sat R of Lit 25:10 Je 6 '42 340w

Wis Lib Bul 38:120 J1 '42

LANDIS, PAUL HENRY. Our changing society; its social, civic, and economic problems. 488p il maps $1.76 Ginn

300 Social problems. U.S.—Social conditions (W) 42-5677

Textbook in the social sciences for high school students. The author is professor of sociology and dean of the Graduate school of the state college of Washington. The work is based on the theme that "cause and effect predominate in human experience as in other fields—that social problems arise from social conditions. It is built on the assumption that the beginning student should be introduced to problems by considering the social conditions that produce them." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

School & Society 55:140 Ja 31 '42 70w

"The book deserves a preferred place in the textbook literature for the simple but important reason that it communicates substantial scholarship about the phenomenon of social change to high-school boys and girls in a way which cannot fail to make it intelligible to them. . . . [Certain] criticisms do not deny the solid and scholarly contribution which Professor Landis has made to the teaching of the social studies in the secondary school." E. S. Johnson

+ School R 50:732 D '42 1000w

"The text is so interestingly written that it can be used by any age group of the secondary level and enlarged upon according to need. It is well-illustrated with ample sociographs, charts, pictures, cartoons, and maps. These in themselves will give the student an excellent idea of the problems facing us today." P. R. Busey

+ Social Educ 6:287 O '42 450w

Reviewed by N. P. Ferry

Social Studies 33:236 My '42 320w

LANDON, FRED. Western Ontario and the American frontier; introd. by Chester Martin. (Carnegie endowment for int. peace. Division of economics and hist. Relations of Canada and the United States) 305p maps $3.50 Yale univ. press

971.33 Canada—Relations (general) with U.S.—Relations (general) with Canada. Ontario—History A42-3895

"This volume is not a history of Western Ontario but is, as its title suggests, a study of the influences exerted upon this particular area by neighbouring American communities. In general, it is the period preceding Confederation which has been examined since after that era, with the spread of communications and the development of Canadian nationality, the particular shades of Western Ontario life tended to become a part of the general Canadian pattern. Certain topics also have not been pursued beyond 1867 since they are dealt with in a large way in other volumes of the series on Canadian-American relations." (Author's pref) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. P. Pritchett

Am Hist R 48:159 O '42 430w

Reviewed by J. I. Cooper

Am J Soc 48:520 Ja '43 800w

"No one could have been chosen with better qualifications to write this study in Canadian-American relations. It fulfills the high expectations of those who know Professor Landon's earlier publications in this field, and, in addition, the book is interesting, pleasurable reading." Carl Wittke

+ Ann Am Acad 223:230 S '42 550w

"This is a notable volume among learned publications because it is so readable. Of all the volumes in the Carnegie series on Canadian-American relations it is the one which may most confidently be recommended to the intelligent non-professional reader as something that he will thoroughly enjoy. Professor Landon, writing about his own Western Ontario, has obviously been engaged in a labour of love; and his book has an attractive charm about it which is apt to hide from all but the professional student of Canadian history the immense amount of original research that must have preceded the writing." F. H. Underhill

+ Canadian Hist R 23:76 Mr '42 1100w

LANDRETH, CATHERINE and READ, KATHERINE HASKELL. Education of the young child; a nursery school manual. 273p il $2.50 Wiley

372.2412 Education of children 42-25490

"Dr. Landreth has brought together not merely the results of her own experience as a teacher and director of nursery schools, but also the pertinent backgrounds of psychology and home economics. Parents as well as teachers will be benefited by the competent discussion of the nursery school in its most recent aspects and of the nursery-school child." (School & Society) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

Booklist 39:218 F 1 '43

School & Society 56:504 N 21 '42 60w

"This manual is written for the teacher and the parent of the preschool youngster. The teacher will find help in organizing and equipping a school and how to make the school suit the individual needs of the children. For the parent this book offers objective suggestions for handling the preschool child who is trying to adjust to everyday living. Through the entire discussion the author shows a real understanding and extensive knowledge of the subjects—the child and the school—from the point of view of the teacher, child and parent." M. B. G.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 3 '43 220w

LANDRY, ROBERT JOHN. Who, what, why is radio? (Radio house bk) 128p $1.50 Stewart

621.384 Radio. Radio broadcasting (W) 42-5974

A study of radio broadcasting, emphasizing the part played by governmental regulation and public opinion upon the policies and methods of broadcasting companies. The author is radio editor of Variety.

Booklist 38:437 J1 15 '42

"A thoughtful, informative, briskly written book, representing a social-industrial point of view to which radio's largely technical literature has not paid much attention." J. K. Hutchens

+ Sat R of Lit 25:20 Mr 28 '42 550w

LANDSBERG, HELMUT. Physical climatology. 283p il pa $3.50 Gray ptg. co, DuBois, Pa.

551.5 Climatology 41-52525

"This book fills a need that has been felt for a quarter of a century—ever since R. DeC. Ward's translation and expansion of Hann's 'Handbook of Climatology' (1903) went out of print. There are four chapters. The first is on collection and use of climatic data. The second deals with the climatological elements: the atmosphere, heat balance, simple elements, complex elements. Chapter 3 considers climate as a whole world, regional, local, spot, and artificial. The last chapter on applied climatology, includes climate and environment and the foreshadowing of climate—climatic variations, cycles, interrelations. The book is well illustrated, with 79 figures; and there are 125 tables in the text." Geog R

"The climatological elements are clearly presented, and proper attention is given to radiation and heat balance. There is an omission, of mean solar distance, in the definition of the solar constant (p.85); and the discussion of heating and cooling of land and water surfaces (p.104) does not distinguish between heat capacity (per unit of volume) and specific heat, or between conductivity in the molecular sense and eddy 'conductivity.' . . . There are some inaccuracies; for example, in the picture of local thermal circulations. . . . [However] the main fault of the book is that there is not more of it." C. F. Brooks

+ — Geog R 31:698 O '41 750w
N Y New Tech Bks 27:9 Ja '42

LANE, JARLATH ROBERT. Political history of Connecticut during the Civil war. 321p pa $2 Catholic univ. of Am.

974.6 Connecticut—Politics and government
A 41-4464

"Dr. Lane's monograph might better have been entitled 'Party Politics in Connecticut, 1850-1865', for his study is primarily an account of party activities during fifteen dramatic years of Connecticut history. A third of his narrative is devoted to party developments in the 1850's; the remainder consists of chapters on the battle between the two major parties in Connecticut in 1860, their conflicting attitudes regarding the compromise proposals of the winter of 1860-61, the renewal of party strife a few months after the truce that followed the attack upon Sumter, the intensification of the struggle when Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation broadened the objectives of the war, the reaction of Connecticut people and party leaders to the drafts of 1862 and 1863, and finally the party contests of 1864-65, which gave the Republicans a firm control of the state." Am Hist R

Reviewed by A. H. Meneely
Am Hist R 48:135 O '42 390w

"The author has held strictly to his appointed task of discovering the interplay of issues and partisan response, and has let the historical record speak for itself. If fault is to be found with this quality in the dissertation, it is that the author has confined himself too closely to the local record. He has left to the reader rather too much searching for the dynamic forces which created those issues and roused partisan emotions. There could have been more exposition of these forces, and less assumption that the reader would know of them from his familiarity with the national scene." A. B. Darling

New Eng Q 15:363 Je '42 850w

LANE, MARGARET (MRS BRYAN EDGAR WALLACE). Walk into my parlor. 343p $2.50 Harper [9s 6d Heinemann]

41-28063

Character study of Emma Shardiloe, whose parents had been on the English variety stage. In 1891, when she was eleven, Emma discovered how easy it was to fool credulous people with bogus psychic manifestations. This was the beginning of her life as a medium, progressing, as she grew older, to a trial in 1913, when she was threatened with prison, and her doctor husband with professional ruin. The story closes with the present, in a back room in Pimlico, with Emma as a cheap fortune teller.

"Miss Lane tells her story with plenty of sense, judgment and skill. She almost makes one sneakily fond of Emma, or—at the worst —amused by her unashamed energy and downright wickedness. By comparison, it must be admitted that the other characters are a little dim and uninteresting." Iris Barry

+ — Books p4 F 1 '42 700w

"As a novel I found it disappointing. Much of the detail is well done, but the book is far too long and the central motive is not nearly so powerful as it should have been." J. D. Beresford

— + Manchester Guardian p3 J1 18 '41 300w

"An engrossing story of a charlatan, with a fascinating side trip through the psychophenomena production line."

+ New Repub 106:214 F 9 '42 80w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Statesman & Nation 22:116 Ag 2 '41 60w

"'Walk Into My Parlor' is an absorbing study of mediumship—a subject upon which there is probably more general interest than information—and a thoroughly good story in its own right. Its very genuine claim to distinction, however, rests squarely upon Emma herself. It is as a novel of character that 'Walk Into My Parlor' merits, and doubtless in many instances will get, a second reading." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p23 Ja 25 '42 700w

"A skillful portrait of a charlatan and a credible story of the effect her career has on the people around her."

+ New Yorker 17:67 Ja 24 '42 80w

Reviewed by Currie Cabot

Sat R of Lit 25:8 F 7 '42 360w

"I suppose we all have some bigotries and one of my strongest is against spiritualism. . . . And yet here is Miss Margaret Lane, who by sheer exercise of good sense, gentleness, humour and all-round ability to tell a story well, has compelled me to read every one of 412 pages, all about the life of a bogus, bad medium. And like it, up to a point. Like the medium herself, what's more. . . . Miss Lane's method is the well-trying one of pedestrian naturalism. She writes only of what she knows, and takes the trouble to know that well. She carries the reader along in perfect safety. Her conversations are true; her characters have only the oddities of everyday; and whatever they are up to, they suffer the emotions and troubles of ordinary life. It is a sound recipe, and here again it should be widely appreciated." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 167:94 J1 25 '41 340w

"Miss Lane has produced a really interesting study of a woman who spends the greater part of her life in deceiving other people but whose greatest deception is practiced on herself. Her description of the environment that produced Emma Shardiloe is the best part of the book, but the girl's increasing hypocrisy as she learns one trick after another is well written and holds the reader's interest up to the end."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 1 '42 330w
Times [London] Lit Sup p333 J1 12 '41 480w

LANE, WHEATON JOSHUA. Commodore Vanderbilt; an epic of the steam age. 369p il maps $3.75 Knopf

B or 92 Vanderbilt, Cornelius (W) 42-36093

"[Since] this biography of Commodore Vanderbilt is essentially a narrative of his business career, the emphasis in this book is put upon those aspects of Vanderbilt's life which are important in American economic history. Only slight attention is given to family matters and social activities." (Pref) Index.

"There is something admirable in the author's rigorous avoidance of tempting pitfalls of sensationalism, even though in warily skirting such snares he narrowly misses falling into that of dryness and nearly makes the Commodore's colorful, rugged, and picturesque character and career seem almost uninteresting. Perhaps a happier middle way might have been found in a greater vividness of description and narrative, but there is little doubt that, as between extremes, the author made the wiser choice. There are plenty of novelists who could 'interpret' in highly entertaining fashion Vanderbilt's life and times, but it is to Mr. Lane's carefully worked out and logically arranged facts that historians and economists will turn for authentic information on the transportation magnate's actual achievements." K. W. Porter

LANE, W. J.—Continued

+ Am Hist R 48:139 O '42 550w

"Courage, energy, and judgment are public virtues much more than unselfishness, almost as much as honesty. Commodore Vanderbilt may have been a bad man but he lived a good life, and Mr. Lane's record of it is permanent." Ellery Sedgwick

+ Atlantic My '42 270w

Booklist 38:250 Mr 15 '42

"This excellent life of Commodore Vanderbilt—objective, scholarly, yet written with warmth and admiration for its subject, the history of an era as well as a biography of one of its leaders—helps in rounding out a composite portrait. Vanderbilt, Carnegie, Rockefeller, the 'Big Four' of the Southern Pacific, sprang essentially from the same American soil; and, essentially, they used similar business policies and practices not only for their own aggrandizement but for the economic advancement of the nation." L. M. Hacker

+ Books p5 Mr 8 '42 1350w

"The book is designated by the publisher as the first modern biography of Vanderbilt. Just why a biography would have to be modern in order to be good is not made clear. Modern or not, it is the best account available of the famous Commodore." Paul Kiniery

+ Commonweal 35:650 Ap 17 '42 550w

"A readable account of one of the great figures in the history of shipping and railroad finance. . . A book useful for reference and reading on this phase of American economic history in the nineteenth century." Walter Hausdorfer

+ Library J 67:85 Ja 15 '42 110w

"For the frivolous, or the social historian, there still remains 'The Vanderbilt Legend.' But for any one who wants to know, now and for many years to come, what Commodore Vanderbilt, the fortune builder, did, thought and said, and sometimes wrote, 'Commodore Vanderbilt; An Epic of the Steam Age,' will be the final source. And for the general reader who wants no frills but good, meaty and often exciting information, here is a biography of old-fashioned proportions and solidity wherein the facts are justly arranged and allowed to interpret themselves." Karl Schriftgiesser

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 8 '42 1250w

"A well-balanced portrait. . . A scholarly job."

+ New Yorker 18:64 Mr 7 '42 50w

Pratt p6 O '42

LANG, ANDREW. Prince Prigio; il. by Robert Lawson. 110p $1.75 Little

(W) 42-23975

Republication of the first story in Andrew Lang's My Own Fairy Book, the story about the prince who was too clever.

Booklist 39:144 D 15 '42

"Many a heart will pick up a beat at the sight of this title. . . It might have been written for Lawson to illustrate. From the page on which all the fairies uninvited to the christening come sliding down like light into the chairs at the table, every picture means just what the words do, and expresses it with the same gayety and artistic precision." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 N 8 '42 450w

Cath World 156:373 D '42 130w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:423 N '42 50w

Reviewed by R. W. Stewart

Library J 67:1069 D 1 '42 70w

"The Prince's adventures are lively and unexpected. Mr. Lawson's delectable drawings have a humor and a lively fancy completely in the spirit of the tale. A book which it is good to own." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p7 D 20 '42 320w

"A delightful and almost forgotten Lang fairy tale, plus Robert Lawson pictures, makes this a prize package." K. S. W.

+ New Yorker 18:116 D 12 '42 30w

LANG, PAUL HENRY. Music in western civilization. 1107p il maps $5 Norton

780.9 Music—History and criticism (W) 41-9128

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"This formidable volume of over 1100 pages is an extraordinary achievement, and it is hard to imagine a book which music-lovers will cherish more than this one. Professor Lang is that very rare thing, the ideal critic. Not only is he a prodigious collector of facts, but, what is still better, he knows how to put them in relation. . . The illustrations are singularly felicitous. This book implores a place on the permanent shelf and should not be denied it." John Cournos

+ Atlantic Mr '42 200w

Bookmark 3:9 Mr '42

"This volume is a valuable contribution to the bibliography of musicology. . . As an academic history of occidental music, his book is amazingly comprehensive and unbiased. But it is much more than a history of the art. It is an explanation of the characteristics of various schools of musical thought as they were influenced by ethnological facts and by the psychological traits of various peoples in various epochs. . . A copy of Music in Western Civilization should be in the library of all music lovers. No professional musician can afford to be without the volume. It is indeed a chef-d'oeuvre." W. J. Finn

+ Cath World 155:113 Ap '42 700w

"This book is a colossal achievement, unrivalled in modern English literature. . . It is an invaluable treasury of musical knowledge." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 155:18 D 1 '41 190w

"Dr. Lang's extensive volume has already been reviewed by some of the most distinguished scholars in its field. The highest praise has been bestowed on the richness of scholarship, the lucid style, and the successful solution of the difficult problem of space allotments evident throughout this close-packed, sustained book. Rarely have critical experts been more completely agreed in their appraisal of a new publication, and more rarely has a book received and warranted such high commendation." R. D. Welch

+ Yale R n s 31:635 spring '42 1100w

LANGDALE, MRS HAZEL LOUISE (RAY-BOLD). Mark of Seneca Basin; il. by Sandra James. 216p $2 Dutton

(W) 42-1415

Story of the Erie canal and the part in its opening played by a fourteen-year-old boy. The most exciting parts are the account of the great boat parade from Buffalo to New York city, and the clearing of the mystery about the boy's family. For grades five to seven.

Booklist 38:253 Mr 15 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p5 Je 28 '42 300w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 23 '42 90w

"Easy style, excellent dialogue, good characterization, and exciting plot combined in a nice piece of bookmaking. Recommended for children ten to fourteen." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 67:322 Ap 1 '42 60w

"In spite of good background and what should have been enough plot, story somehow leaves this reviewer with little praise for it. . . Best part is in description of water parade from Buffalo to Albany when canal is completed. For boys and girls from ten to twelve who may be interested in semihistorical stories." E. T. Dobbins

+ — Library J 67:322 Ap 1 '42 50w

LANGDON, WILLIAM CHAUNCY. Everyday things in American life, 1776-1876. [v 2] 398p il maps $3 Scribner

917.3 U.S.—Social life and customs, U.S.—Civilization (W) (37-34608)

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

Reviewed by R. H. Anderson
Am Hist R 48:190 O '42 210w
Bookmark 3:12 Ja '42

"Since this book is vividly written and attractively illustrated, it will probably invite many readers into the study of American social history. Its author does not make clear at the outset that the book is designed, like the English series of similar title, simply to interest and to inform readers who are not already familiar with social history. Consequently, some well-read students of the subject may pick up the book, thinking that it is intended for such eyes as theirs. They will come upon much information, in considerable measure available elsewhere, on American transportation, commerce, journalism, home life, and technology, and finally on the International Exhibition of 1876; but they will fail to find much for which they may hope, since this book is decidedly not comprehensive." Richard Storr

+ New Eng Q 15:185 Mr '42 500w

"The delight of recognition, comparison, pride, leads one on and on, but we cannot repeat here the story of the thing-makingest people in history. We just say: here is good reading for these days, escape literature, yes, but even more a challenge—to carry on." Leon Whipple

+ Survey G 31:87 F '42 350w
Wis Lib Bul 38:14 Ja '42

LANGER, MRS RULKA (GODLEWSKA). The Mermaid and the Messerschmitt. 372p $2.75 Roy pubs, 25 W 45th st, N.Y.

940.542 World war, 1939—Poland. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, Polish 42-50798

"Gripping story of experiences of one family and their friends in Warsaw during blitzkrieg of September, 1939. The terror, horror, and destruction are depicted vividly and realistically. The Mermaid of Warsaw was engulfed in bombs and blood and eventually subdued by power of the Messerschmitt; but her spirit of defiance and her faith in ultimate peace prevail, despite months of hunger, fear, and uncertainty, following the blitz. . . . Author, a young Polish woman, spent two years on scholarship at Vassar and some time as wife of Consul in Washington." Library J

Booklist 39:198 Ja 15 '43

"It is hard to put the book away once you start reading it. Tension and atmosphere of the siege unfold slowly and relentlessly. The world which was 'rosy with sunshine and silver with dew in the morning' by noon has turned dark with smoke and dust from falling houses. . . . Yet ultimately you are not left with the feeling that all is a senseless nightmare and hopeless despair but rather with a deep exultation that the human heart under adversity is capable of so much courage, sacrifice and endurance." Felizia Seyd

+ Books p34 D 6 '42 700w

Reviewed by R. B. Rankin
Library J 67:951 N 1 '42 120w

Reviewed by Marianne Hauser
N Y Times p29 Ja 24 '43 800w

"Not at all weighty, perhaps, but told with a civilized balance and an eye for moving detail. Fluently written."

+ New Yorker 18:52 Ja 2 '43 60w

"This is probably not an 'important' war book. Certainly it offers no new facts or interpretations. But it will make every woman who reads it feel war as no correspondent or statesman can. It will also make it clear why Mrs. Langer is homesick for Warsaw and why she says 'Perhaps it was hell. But if so, it was my own kind of a hell, a hell I loved with all my heart. It was only for my children's sake that I left Warsaw.'" M. S. Ulrich

+ Sat R of Lit 26:7 Ja 2 '43 750w

Time 40:76 D 28 '42 900w

LANGER, MRS SUSANNE KATHERINA (KNAUTH). Philosophy in a new key; a study in the symbolism of reason, rite, and art. 313p il $3.50 Harvard univ. press

153 Symbolism. Philosophy A 42-3266

"Mrs. Langer declares that for our age the key to both scientific and humanistic problems is the study of 'symbolic transformation.' This study is considerably more inclusive than what has been popularized as 'semantics,' and wider even than philosophy of language. In 'Philosophy in a New Key,' Mrs. Langer attempts to treat the scientific of ritual, myth, and art. To this end she draws upon the findings of psychoanalysis, anthropology, and aesthetic criticism as well as upon those sciences which have previously been the focus of semiotics." Nation

"A subtly reasoned book this, full of a wide sweep of exact learning in fields as different as the semantics and comparative religion. And the vista Mrs. Langer opens of an approach to the whole of life through the rationalities of art and music as well as the explicit logic of words constitutes a really generative idea. I suspect Mrs. Langer has established a key in terms of which a good deal of philosophy these next years may be composed." Irwin Edman

+ Books p2 S 27 '42 1500w

Reviewed by P. B. Rice
Nation 155:486 N 7 '42 1020w

"Although Mrs. Langer carefully analyzes the processes whereby the human mind learned many of its earlier feats of transformation, when she turns to art and to the intellectual situation of our own time it is her tendency to accept the entities of our thinking as finalities to be applied rather than as occasions for further intellectual activity. . . . The use of materials from the arts is not necessary, of course, in a book of this kind, provided the logical materials on which attention is focussed are treated dynamically as generators of further symbolic transformations. The failure to regard them in this light indicates, therefore, a rather severe limitation in a certainly delightful and useful book." John Stork

+ — Yale R n s 32:411 winter '43 750w

LANGSTAFF, JOHN BRETT. Doctor Bard of Hyde Park. 365p il $3.75 Dutton

B or 92 Bard, Samuel 42-13356

Biography of an American physician of Revolutionary times, who is credited with doing much to advance the medical profession in New York city and the country generally. Bibliography. Biographical index.

"We know far more, as President Butler observes, of the political than of the cultural beginnings of the American nation. It is for its contribution to the cultural, and especially the scientific, history of Revolutionary and Federal New York that this volume is chiefly valuable. And it is valuable, too, because it recreates for us one of the most interesting figures of our early history—a man who, except in the political arena, was to New York much what Benjamin Franklin was to Philadelphia." H. S. Commager

+ Books p10 S 6 '42 1000w

Reviewed by L. L. Riley
Churchman 156:17 Jl 1 '42 210w

"Marred occasionally by sentimentality and excessive detail, book should be worth while to readers interested in Revolutionary period or in development of American intellectual life." J. S. Cleavinger

Library J 67:475 My 15 '42 70w

"Thanks to Langstaff, we know now so much about the events of Bard's life that we can almost see the doctor at the great moments of his career. . . . On the other hand, the medical achievements of Samuel Bard could have been more lucidly interpreted and more stress might have been laid on explaining the Huguenot background of the Bards. But this and some other shortcomings shall not prevent us from acknowledging the fact that Langstaff has succeeded in reviving one of the major figures in the early history of American science." F. E. Hirsch

LANGSTAFF, J. B.—Continued

+ — N Y Times p3 Je 7 '42 1850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p407 Ag 15 '42 270w

LANGTON, CLAIR VAN NORMAN. Orientation in school health. 680p il $3 Harper

371.7 School hygiene. Hygiene—Study and teaching 41-20519

"A discussion of the organization and administration of the school health program as a whole, with emphasis upon aspects of the subject that are less understood. The essential facts related to (1) the prevention and control of communicable disease, (2) healthful school living, or the sanitation of the school plant, and (3) the hygiene of the school child are considered. The material is presented with a view to making it as simple, understandable and practical as possible." (School & Society) Index.

"After turning the pages—there are over 600 of them—from stem to stern and reading much, I emerged with a very satisfying feeling. This is a textbook primarily for teachers and teachers in training. All prospective teachers ought to be familiar with it. It is fair and temperate." G. T. Palmer

+ Am J Pub Health 32:97 Ja '42 320w

Booklist 33:183 F 1 '42

School & Society 54:340 O 18 '41 80w

Reviewed by A. R. Turner, M.D.

School R 50:150 F '42 1000w

LANGTON, EDWARD. Good and evil spirits; a study of the Jewish and Christian doctrine, its origin and development. 324p $4 Macmillan [15s S.P.C.K.]

291.211 Animism. Jews—Religion. Christianity [A42-4799]

"Scholars have generally agreed that there is a close connexion between the Jewish and Christian beliefs in good and evil spirits and the corresponding beliefs held by other peoples. Up to the present, however, little has been done to set the whole body of Jewish and Christian teaching upon this subject against its historical background, to trace each conception to its original source and, by so doing, to arrive at a true estimate of the nature and value of the beliefs in question. The aim of the scholarly volume before us is to remedy this gap in our theological research." Times [London] Lit Sup

Christian Century 59:1425 N 18 '42 260w

"The author has done some extensive research work, and has added greatly to the value of his book by citing his authorities extensively." L. W. Batten

+ Churchman 156:17 N 1 '42 120w

"Based upon careful and comprehensive reading, this work goes far to earn the tribute paid by Dr. W. O. E. Oesterley in his foreword, when he declares that in comparison with other books which deal with the subjects here presented it transcends them all in its wideness of range, its method of treatment and its sympathetic appreciation of beliefs which have been the heritage of mankind throughout the ages."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p304 Je 20 '42 950w

LANIA, LEO, pseud. See Herrmann, L.

LANKS, HERBERT CHARLES. By Pan American highway through South America; photo. by the author. 205p $5 Appleton-Century

913 South America—Description and travel. Automobile touring (W) 42-15543

Account of a 13,000 mile automobile trip from Venezuela to the Straits of Magellan and north again to Rio de Janeiro. Illustrated with more than eighty photographs taken by the author. Index.

Booklist 38:440 J1 15 '42

"The report is worded so much like that of any motorist that it is informative rather than literary; the vehicle is motor but the style pedestrian. For this very reason its usefulness to motorists will be greater; it tells them how to get where they want to go. The general reader gets most from the photographs, reading on their impetus; the result is something nearer first-hand experience in a country new to him, than might be conveyed by a more impressionistic account."

Books 23 S 13 '42 350w

"Herbert C. Lanks is well known as an expert photographer; and the photographs, which number eighty-four, are really the heart of this book. The text is an adequate narrative support of the pictures, a straightaway chronicle of where the travelers went and what they saw, how much they paid for gasoline and lodging, how they like the inns, and what casual pleasant contact they had with the people. It is all interesting, and it is not without its sufficiently vivid passages of description and comment. But pictures and text, in this quarto volume, must be received as one."

+ N Y Times p3 J1 12 '42 500w

"Lots of information, but too much of the and-now-we-leave-beautiful-Ohio school of travel writing."

+ — New Yorker 18:63 Je 27 '42 90w

Pratt p21 D '42

"The absolutely outstanding photographs, over eighty in number, chosen carefully for variety, interest, and beauty from more than eight thousand exposures, make this book, with its text, a most de luxe publication, the story of a six months' trek of more than thirteen thousand miles." A. H. Compton and others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:1 J1 '42 1250w

Wis Lib Bul 38:118 J1 '42

LANSING, MRS ELISABETH (HUBBARD) (MARTHA JOHNSON, pseud.). Kate Russell, wartime nurse. 257p $2 Crowell

42-9792

Kate Russell, a Red cross nurse, has her first big assignment during a disastrous flood. Her second comes when she sails for England on a convoyed freighter, which is torpedoed near Iceland. Even a week at sea in an open boat does not stop her career. On the last page she is ready to "set out again for England." For girls of fourteen or older.

"Told without undue melodrama." M. L. Becker

Books p8 Mr 8 '42 130w

Christian Century 59:323 Mr 11 '42 10w

LANSING, MRS ELISABETH (HUBBARD) (MARTHA JOHNSON, pseud.). Leonardo, master of the renaissance; with il. by William Sharp and an introd. by Hendrik Willem van Loon. 237p $2.75 Crowell

B or 92 Leonardo da Vinci—Juvenile literature (W) 42-36378

A biography of Leonardo da Vinci and his times which reconstructs, as nearly as possible, a picture of the daily life, amazing thoughts, plans and dreams of the artist, inventor and scientist.

Booklist 39:124 D 1 '42

"Writing with a sound knowledge of the period and with agreeable clarity, Mrs. Lansing makes one feel a really intimate friend of the genius to whom art and science were one. . . . Our only criticism of Mrs. Lansing is that she seems to be prejudiced against Lorenzo de Medici and Michelangelo—as a man. Hendrik Van Loon has written the preface in which he admits he really read the book and liked it. So will many others.”

+ Cath World 156:382 D '42 180w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 37:119 N 20 '42 20w

Eng N 129:103 N 5 '42 100w

“Vividly written and finely illustrated.” A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:432 N '42 70w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Library J 67:896 O 15 '42 20w

“Long and somewhat detailed but fascinating reading. . . . Recommended where libraries have special senior or young adult departments rather than for juvenile.” A. L. Shea

+ Library J 67:1070 D 1 '42 90w

LANSING, MRS. ELISABETH, (HUBBARD)
(MARTHA JOHNSON, pseud). Nancy Naylor, air pilot. 313p $2 Crowell

41-18713

Continues the adventures of Nancy Naylor, begun in Sky Service (Book Review Digest, 1939). Nancy spends her spare time learning to fly and the knowledge she gains comes in very handy when she is involved in an espionage plot. For teen age girls.

“The plot is a trifle far-fetched, but it is lively, light reading for the air-minded.” E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p8 Je 21 '42 30w

Spring'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 90w

LANSING, MARION FLORENCE. Against all odds; pioneers of South America; il. by William Sharp. 265p $2 Doubleday

920 South America—History. South America—Biography (W) 42-23539

Biographical and historical sketches of the men who explored and developed South America. Contents: El Dorado, the gilded king; Three treasure hunters meet; Father Fritz maps the Amazon; The horse comes to South America; Dyewood and diamonds in Brazil; A Frenchman experiments with rubber; Don Ambrosio O'Higgins; Bolivar and his marches; San Martin crosses the Andes; William Wheelwright of Newburyport; Henry Meiggs, promoter and railroad builder; Young Darwin in South America; Hidden treasure; Santos-Dumont, Brazil's hero of the air; Over the Uspallata Pass; With pen and sword—Sarmiento; Pioneering on other fronts. Index.

Booklist 39:144 D 15 '42

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 37:119 N 20 '42 30w

“These dramatic and well written chapters tell the stirring stories of men who became national figures in the history of South America; and of great events in the background. . . . Fine drawings accord with these results of careful research.” A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:433 N '42 70w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Library J 67:896 O 15 '42 20w

Reviewed by E. S. Smith
Library J 67:1070 D 1 '42 110w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p8 D 27 '42 280w

LANSING, MARION FLORENCE. Liberators and heroes of Mexico and Central America. 299p pl $3 Page

920 Mexico—Biography. Central America—Biography (W) 41-26783

After a short sketch of Mexican history to the year 1810, the author outlines the further development of Mexico and Central America thru the lives of some famous men of those countries who have left their imprint on history.

Contents: The parting of the ways; Hidalgo of Mexico; Morelos of Mexico; Iturbide, soldier and emperor; Don José Del Valle; Delgado of Salvador; Father Simeon Canas; Larreinaga of Nicaragua; Morazan, champion of federation; Galvez of Guatemala; Mora, Costa Rica's national hero; Zamora of Costa Rica; Benito Juarez, Mexico's Indian hero; Barrios, the reformer; “Mista Kee”—Minor C. Keith; Between oceans, and between continents; Independence days. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:211 F 15 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 Ja 25 '42 200w

“Here we have a pleasantly written description of certain Latin Americans highly honored in the countries which they helped to free. . . . One chapter, less satisfactory than the others, places Juarez on too high a pinnacle by the device of carefully selecting quotations and suppressing discreditable features, thus destroying the perspective and leaving otherwise uninformed readers with a totally false impression.”

+ Cath World 155:510 Jl '42 250w

“Good collateral material for history students, either of high school age or adults, for the author keeps in mind events and personalities of our own history, contemporary with those of the other Americas. In spite of colorful binding and good margins, the type set-up, with frequent topical headings, unfortunately gives a textbook appearance that discourages voluntary reading.” Maude Adams

+ Library J 67:86 Ja 15 '42 70w

“These sketches will well repay adult as well as high-school readers in an understanding of the forces and events which have helped to shape the destiny of these countries and the whole hemisphere.” E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 F 15 '42 360w

Wis Lib Bul 38:99 Je '42

LANZ, HENRY. In quest of morals. 226p $3.50 Stanford univ. press

170 Ethics. Relativity 41-14449

“In 1936, Swedish, Norwegian, and Finnish publishers offered a prize for the best answer to the question: ‘Can an objective moral standard be set up for the present age; and if so, on what is it to be based?’ This essay won the prize. It has already been published in Swedish and Norwegian translations. Professor Lanz attempts to escape subjectivism by generalizing the notion of relativity beyond its role in contemporary physics. His principal argument begins with the thesis that relativity does not imply subjectivity in physics.” Am J Soc

“The book is provocative but gives no assurance that the suggested lines of research will be fruitful. The author does not pretend to have a formula for overcoming disagreements; and his last chapter, wherein he searches for an objective standard ‘in our age,’ is much more impressionistic than his previous generalizations would lead the reader to expect. That rival ethical standards have some highly formal similarities is, of course, not a new idea. Whether Professor Lanz's formula identifies more important formal similarities than are now recognized is a question which awaits further exposition.” W. A. R. Leys

Am J Soc 47:784 Mr '42 390w

Am Soc R 7:463 Je '42 90w

LARISON, RUTH HOOPER. Those enduring young charms; drawings by Dorothy Townsend Voorhies. 244p il $2.75 Harper

646.7 Beauty, Personal (W) 42-22150

Advice for the woman of forty or over on health, beauty aids, clothing, and mental attitudes. Contains diagrams of corrective exercises.

Booklist 39:97 N 15 '42

“Although somewhat superficial and sentimental with too much emphasis on glamor will have an appeal for many women.”

Wis Lib Bul 38:158 N '42

LARSEN, PEDAR. Offshore gold; il. by Warden Wood. 174p $1.75 Macmillan

(W) 41-14772

Story of two boys who want to earn money to go to college. With very little knowledge they embark on a commercial shark fishing job in San Francisco bay, and after many setbacks, achieve their purpose. For ages twelve to fifteen.

"The plot has possibilities, and no doubt the material is authentic but it is poorly worked out, with no sustained interest, in spite of the mystery element. Style is amateurish and dull." Elizabeth Babcock

— + Library J 66:846 O 1 '41 110w

Wis Lib Bul 38:71 Ap '42

LARSSON, RAYMOND ELLSWORTH, ed. Saints at prayer. 283p $2.50 Coward-McCann 264.1 Prayers 42-3562

"A chronological collection of prayers since the birth of the Lord Jesus Christ by the saints, with extracts from their writings on prayer." Subtitle

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '42

Reviewed by D. H. Moseley

Commonweal 35:441 F 20 '42 450w

LASKIER, FRANK. My name is Frank [introd. by William McFee; foreword by Eldon Moore]. [Eng title: A merchant seaman talks]. 96p $1 Norton [pa 2s 6d Allen, G]

940.545 World war, 1939—Naval operations. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English. Merchant marine—Great Britain

(W) 42-36066

Records fifteen true stories of life at sea in the present war. Frank, an English merchant seaman, talked into a microphone for the British Broadcasting Company without notes and with very little preparation, and he told of his own harrowing experiences in a simple, straightforward way. The stories are about life on an oil ship in war time, meeting with Nazi submarines and dive bombers, escorting a shipload of children safely to Canada, and what changes in human outlook have resulted from these encounters.

Booklist 38:231 Mr 1 '42

"This is a fine little book that rings true from cover to cover. It is a native expression of the spirit of seamanship, that unmixed yet subtle spirit so easy to know when you are of it, so easy to misunderstand when you are outside it, and altogether so true and admirable." Lincoln Colcord

+ Books p17 F 15 '42 290w

"Merely a collection of talks into a recording microphone, for transcription in BBC programs, this book takes honors above any books on the war I have seen so far." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 106:306 Mr 2 '42 1000w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 23:10 Ja 3 '42 320w

"Frank is a natural yarner. There are tales of raiders, of survivors in open boats, of dive bombers and a certain tough mate. Sharp, clean phrases come through on every page. A few of the talks, not more than four, appear to be a little strained, as if Frank had not slipped into the subjects himself but got started on them at some one else's suggestion. That leaves eleven of the most sharply drawn testimonials to the merchant service I have seen." H. A. Stevens

+ N Y Times p8 F 22 '42 650w

"It's all simple stuff, and true stuff, and beautifully non-literary. You'll like it, and you'll like the stout Englishmen Frank talks about, and you'll like even less than you do now the Nazis he and his fellows encountered in the course of their little-publicized, dangerous, and essential voyages." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:67 F 14 '42 180w

"Raw as a knife gash, this little 96 page book is a record of one of radio's most human contributions." W. M. Ramsey

+ Sat R of Lit 25:14 Mr 7 '42 200w

Spec 167:584 D 19 '41 300w

"Those who read his little book while tankers are going down off our own coast may begin budgeting their driving. It's that kind of a book." Marshall Bragdon

+ Springfd Republican p6 F 14 '42 700w

LASSWELL, HAROLD DWIGHT. Democracy through public opinion. 176p $1.50 Banta

301.154 Public opinion. Democracy 41-7248

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"This is one of the most thought-provoking of the recent books on democracy. Perhaps because the form given the material was developed in numerous lectures and discussions, and because the book is not a 'war baby,' it is characterized by a tone of calm reasonableness that enhances its value." C. W. Smith, Jr.

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:348 Ap '42 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '42

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:772 J1 '42 10w

"Dr Lasswell's new book is an important discussion by an important social scientist. It blinks no discouraging facts but it is full of confidence in America's future." Ruth Benedict

+ Sat R of Lit 25:19 Mr 7 '42 800w

LASSWELL, MRS MARY. Suds in your eye; with il. by George Price. 220p $2 Houghton

(W) 42-25812

Gay story of three elderly ladies living in a Southern California junk yard and making life a thing of joy to all around them with their humor and their cold beer.

Booklist 39:138 D 15 '42

"It is a rare treat to find so much laughter and human warmth in the same book. Humor is too often unkind to those who provoke it. Mary Lasswell loves her people, as well she should, and pours out sentiment as unabashedly as she does wit. Her plot is simple, her point is obvious, her characters are wonderful. Sterne and Fielding used the same formula; in the hands of an able craftsman it always works. Miss Lasswell is an able craftsman, and because there is so much room for this kind of writing, it is to be hoped she will continue with Mrs. Feeley, Mrs. Rasmussen, Miss Tinkham and Mrs. Feeley's remarks, which are not quotable in a family periodical." Thomas Sugrue

+ Books p12 D 13 '42 750w

"Their story is hilariously funny, uproariously beguiling. . . One of the funniest, jolliest books of the season." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p26 D 13 '42 700w

"Mrs. Lasswell has successfully drawn three dimensional characters and she has not resorted to lengthy descriptive passages to do so. These three ladies are the very breath of life and fun. . . In spite of all the fun 'Suds in Your eye' is a gallant book. It carries a neatly packed moral for all those who spend time grousing about 'shortages.' The illustrations by George Price are as inspired as the text and it's by far the funniest book to come along in many a moon." H. L.

+ Springfd Republican p7e D 20 '42 330w

LATHROP, WEST. Juneau, the sleigh dog; il. by Kurt Wiese. 279p $2 Random house

(W) 42-11049

A city-bred boy on his first wilderness vacation in Alaska is left alone, except for his dog, Juneau, because his father has been recalled to his engineering job. The Indian guide with whom the boy was left proved a renegade, and it was up to Juneau to help the boy and outwit the Indian. For boys of ten to fourteen.

Booklist 38:373 Je 1 '42

"An honorable thriller, one that tightens the nerves by genuine adventure, not the worn-out formula of an old-fashioned 'boys' book,' is an addition to any boy's library: this is one."

+ Books p20 My 10 '42 300w

"This is a lively story, full of suspense, well told, and is good entertainment." F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 14 '42 90w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 13:257 J1 '42 80w

"Good description and characterization of boy and of Indian guide who deserts his post. . . Format disappointing and does not match story interest. Such a dramatic story needs color and a more attractive page." R. W. Stewart
+ Library J 67:477 My 15 '42 80w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p8 My 24 '42 280w

LATOURETTE, KENNETH SCOTT. Unquenchable light, 191p $2 Harper

270 Church history, Civilization, Christian 42-897

This book contains the William Belden Noble lectures delivered at Harvard in 1940 by the author of A History of the Expansion of Christianity. Christianity, that is Jesus' influence on civilization, has during the last twenty centuries sometimes been weak, sometimes strong. Reviewing this past history the author concludes that if the present era is indeed witnessing an ebb tide of Christianity, it will yet become stronger than ever in the future. Index.

"Readers who find the first third of the book less alive than they had hoped will find in the last two-thirds the vigor and liveness that one expects from Dr. Latourette." D. A. Hall
+ Books p15 Ja 25 '42 550w

"An excellent and useful volume."
+ Christian Century 59:1425 N 18 '42 100w

Reviewed by G. A. Cunningham
+ Churchman 156:17 Ap 15 '42 240w
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '42

"It is evident that Dr. Latourette's thesis has compelled him to reject to a large extent in these lectures the social approach which helps make his larger work so valuable. There is, as a matter of fact, in this study a suspicion of the concept of an essence in Christianity which has guaranteed its precise identity from one age to another. . . Nevertheless one reads this book with pleasure and profit. Here is information and incentive. The staunch faith in the resilient power in the lives of men expressed in Christianity holds steady, still, the hope of a new world." R. E. E. Harkness
+ Crozer Q 19:145 Ap '42 750w

LATTIMORE, ELEANOR FRANCES. Questions of Lifu; a story of China; il. by [the author]. 105p $2 Harcourt

(W) 42-36276

Lifu was a seven-year-old Chinese boy whose father was away at war. Lifu's most frequent question was "when is father coming home?" When the answer did not suit him, Lifu started out to find his father, but instead he found a little girl refugee and brought her home to be his little sister. For grades three to five.

Booklist 39:16 S '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p12 N 15 '42 320w

"A simple and charming tale of contemporary childhood in China."
+ Churchman 156:15 N 15 '42 10w

Reviewed by Emily Hutson
Library J 67:686 Ag '42 80w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 67:885 O 15 '42 20w

"Lifu is a new and welcome addition to Eleanor Lattimore's gallery of Chinese children. . . This is a good story to set before Lifu's contemporaries in this country, for whom, as to him, war and separation are realities, sensed but only partially understood.

And they may learn as he did that their work and play on the home front must go on. The lesson will be effective without being hard because the grimmer aspects of war are not present to shadow the happy fulfillment of the climax. The story is told with the skillful simplicity which is the hallmark of Miss Lattimore's work and there is valid suspense in Lifu's odyssey. The illustrations are less bold and more fluid in line than in her former work, but no less vital." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p11 O 4 '42 320w

"Miss Lattimore is able to endow her stories and drawings of Chinese children with universal childlike qualities and yet keep them authentically Oriental. Her writing is a model of unstudied simplicity." K. S. W.
+ New Yorker 18:110 D 12 '42 70w

LATTIMORE, ELEANOR FRANCES. Storm on the island. 181p il $1.75 Harcourt

(W) 42-36067

Rose Ann, aged ten, and her brother Paul, who was eight, lived with their father and mother and the baby, on an island off the Carolina coast. When a hurricane struck their island it was an anxious time for all the islanders, but Rose Ann and Paul helped in the work of reclamation and felt they were learning to be grown up. For children eight to ten.

Booklist 38:253 Mr 15 '42

"This is the most sensible as well as the happiest way in which to put a catastrophe like this into a story for seven-year olds, or to be read to younger children. For in every upheaval, from house cleaning and moving day to the aftermath of a storm, there is something fascinating to children. Especially is this true after a flood." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 My 3 '42 350w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 31 '42 90w

"The description of the storm seems to be written out of knowledge, and the characters are real. Ten-year-old readers will like it all, including the effective line drawings." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:107 Mr '42 110w

Reviewed by Dorothea Dawson
Library J 67:269 Mr 15 '42 50w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 67:886 O 15 '42 30w

"The clarity and perception with which Miss Lattimore has written of the simple happenings of everyday life for young children, are just as effective in this narrative for children of the middle years, which does not depend on melodrama to make its dramatic events so vivid. This is a fine, true piece of work." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 15 '42 300w

"An unpretentious, well-written, quietly satisfying story."
+ New Yorker 18:74 My 23 '42 50w

"The story is a hopeful, forward-looking one for youngsters to read."
+ Springfield Republican p7e F 15 '42 100w

LAUBACH, FRANK CHARLES. You are my friends. 178p pl $1.50 Harper

248 Christian life. Jesus Christ 42-16113

A collection of essays or chapters on the continuing influence of Christ on the Christian way of life. The author is a missionary who has served for twenty-five years in the Philippines. Partial contents: Christ is the world's hope; Christ in our midst today; Christ speaks to us all; How His love enlarges us; The fellowship of His suffering; Christ heals us today; The rewards of His friendship; Mystical experiences.

"As a guide to personal fellowship with Christ and the practice of his presence, not only by discipline of soul and by deeds of service but also by the mystical experience which means much to the author, this book is extraordinary for its sanity, simplicity and clarity."

+ Christian Century 59:783 Je 17 '42 80w

LAUBACH, F. C.—Continued

"The author is a mystic, and his book is essentially the record of a mystic's insights and experiences. An earlier book, Letters of a Modern Mystic, went through a number of printings. He writes graphically and beautifully. I characterize the content as devotional literature of high order; it will feed the religiously hungry and give them strength in the Lord. It is not a book for the critically minded. . . The volume is full of overstatement of fact, bordering on religious sentimentality. But who can understand the mystic save a mystic?" W. R. McNutt

Crozer Q 13:338 O '42 200w

LAUFERTY, LILIAN (MRS JAMES WOLFE).
Crimson thread. 370p $2 Simon & Schuster 42-2908

Detective story.

"Here are generous helpings of mystery gambits of many kinds, some of them highly exciting, and the yarn grows more so toward the end. It's much too long, but why kick at some extra footage? Behind-the-scenes stuff and a furious puzzle to boot." Will Cuppy

+ — Books p13 F 15 '42 120w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p14 F 22 '42 240w

"Characterizations excellent—especially those of clever radio personalities—plenty of emoting and rough hewn but enjoyable detective. Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:21 F 21 '42 40w

"Emotion sometimes clouds the plot, but the general effect is pleasing."

+ — Time 39:80 Mr 2 '42 40w

LAVERTY, MAURA. Never no more. 284p
$2.50 Longmans

42-8278

Story of a young girl's life in a small isolated Irish village during the 1920s. The chief character in the story is Gran, Gran so forceful and sympathetic, Gran the marvelous cook, whom her grandchild idolizes and whose final passing brings the story to a close.

Booklist 38:346 My 15 '42

"The theme of the grandmothers, affectionately illuminating their old-time virtues and graces—sturdy self-dependence, dauntless industry, unbreakable spirit, honesty—has been a popular one in modern American fiction ever since Glenway Wescott opened up the vein. Now along comes an Irish girl, Maura Laverty, and does for her 'Gran' in an Irish setting and her own Irish idiom as nice a job as any I've seen." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p10 Mr 22 '42 850w

"Never No More is autobiographical and portrays the life of a small Irish village on the edge of the Bog of Allen. It is told so simply and with so much charm that it hardly seems like a novel at all. . . The author, it seems to me, would have done better to write straight autobiography. There is no real story in Never No More and no other progression than the development from childhood to adolescence. Miss Laverty has a rich sense of life, enough humor to salt a dozen books, skill with incident, and understanding, qualities which will stand her in good stead in later novels." N. E. Monroe

+ — Cath World 155:115 Ap '42 400w

Commonweal 36:187 Je 12 '42 90w

Reviewed by M. H. Zipprich

Library J 67:225 Mr 1 '42 80w

"Among the numerous characters in the village of Ballyderrig there are a dozen whom you'd recognize immediately, should they walk into the room. Like them, the writing is unworldly, unpretentious, yet at times surprisingly wise, with the wisdom of the peasant. It can make you laugh, yet there are passages so profoundly moving that you have to stop and wonder how it has been done. The quality of the heart behind the words, not the words themselves, is the only answer." James Stern

+ New Repub 106:434 Mr 30 '42 360w

"As Delia would say: 'There's a book for you!' Story on story, character on character. A mellowed background, rich in the blues and purples of bog-heather and the soft splendor of golden gorse. A book written as only one of Irish blood could write it; breathing a civilization that has never succumbed to industrial strain or to over-exigencies of modernity. . . Not again, having read 'Never No More,' will you readily think of the Irish countryside in terms of poverty and poor feeding. Gran's dozens and dozens of wonderful recipes, scattered throughout like spices in a grand cake, and her matter-of-fact sharing with those less fortunate than herself take care of both." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 22 '42 800w

"What is unusual for an Irish writer today is that the book makes Ireland a happy as well as a mysterious place." Some wonderful-sounding Irish cooking, too."

+ New Yorker 18:70 Mr 21 '42 80w

Pratt p13 O '42

"Miss Maura Laverty is a new writer, and her first book—memories of childhood in a village on the plain of Kildare—should certainly give great pleasure to a great number of readers." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 168:401 Ap 24 '42 420w

Times [London] Lit Sup p129 Mr 14 '42 500w

Wis Lib Bul 38:68 Ap '42

LAVES, WALTER HERMAN CARL, ed. Inter-American solidarity, by Herminio Portell Vilá [and others]. 228p $1.50 Univ. of Chicago press

970 American republics. America—Defenses 41-52047

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"This volume of seven assorted essays is typical of the repetitious parade of writings in the last two years which has served very little to advance realistic understanding of the economic issues of inter-American policy. . . The three sections entitled 'What Have the Americas in Common?' 'Cultural Relations Among the American Countries,' and 'Pan Americanism and the World Order,' are largely rhetorical, and the first of these is marred by several careless generalizations. Major Eliot expounds in the fashion of a formula his well-known ideas on modern warfare in his section on 'The Strategy of Hemisphere Defense.' Professor Frank Scott's contribution, 'Canada and Hemispheric Solidarity,' on the other hand, is thoughtful, substantial, and attentive to neglected questions." H. G. White, Jr.

+ — Am Econ R 32:168 Mr '42 300w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring

Am J Soc 48:287 S '42 700w

Reviewed by D. G. Munro

Am Pol Sci R 36:382 Ap '42 450w

"The series has long since established a justifiably high reputation, and one should not cavil at an occasional lecture which fails to come up to some mythical par. This volume of published lectures does nothing, by and large, to detract from the standard set by previous volumes. The outstanding lecture is by all odds that by Professor Arthur R. Upgren . . . on 'Raw Materials and Inter-American Solidarity.'" R. H. Fitzgibbon

+ Ann Am Acad 220:253 Mr '42 420w

"Such efforts on a central theme contain unavoidable repetitions, strike a formal note and rarely transfer to the printed page effectively. This collection is above the average in its literary values. Mr. Eliot gets a punch into his treatment of the military problem, and because of his advocacy of all-out measures and the fact that war has since come to the hemisphere his views do not seem dated. Mr. Ortega brings the essayist's touch to his consideration of culture. He pleads humorously for good-will ambassadors who remain long enough to know and appreciate Latin America instead of trying to 'blitz' each country in a week. Mr. Scott gives a lucid explanation why Canada has not joined the Pan-American Union, an end to which he hopes that she will yet come." W. A. Roberts

+ Books p14 Mr 8 '42 230w

"I have read recently a number of books on Pan Americanism and Latin America. This is one of the best. I was particularly impressed by its high standard of scholarship and by the restraint with which the authors have dealt with a subject which is too often charged with wishful thinking and easy sentimentalism." J. P. Humphrey

+ Canadian Forum 21:382 Mr '42 240w

Reviewed by H. A. Larrabee
Ethics 52:509 J1 '42 480w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:786 J1 '42 20w

LAVIN, MARY. Tales from Bective bridge.
(Atlantic monthly press bk) 220p $2.50 Little

42-13270

Ten short stories about Ireland and Ireland's people, by a new writer, who the American by birth is 'Irish by adoption.' There is an enthusiastic preface by Lord Dunsany. Contents: Lilacs; The green grave and the black grave; Sarah; Brother Boniface; At Sallygap; Love is for lovers; "Say could that lad be I?"; A fable; Miss Holland; The dead soldier.

"Before one has read many of the ten stories in this collection, one recognizes that Mary Lavin is more than a skillful writer of short stories. She is a poet whose stories remind us of Katherine Mansfield's delight in recognizing half-perceived beauty. Mary Lavin's stories are more robust, however. Her stories have humor and charm characteristic of Irish tales. But they also have a realism and bluntness which prevent the humor from becoming Celtic whimsy." W. A. S. Dollard

+ Books p6 J1 5 '42 850w

"If these are Mary Lavin's first stories (first published book) she is indeed a master, sprung from godhead. Highly recommended." M. H. Zipprich

+ Library J 67:414 My 1 '42 80w

"Those readers who revel in the short stories of Katherine Mansfield and Kay Boyle will find a new delight in these tales. They are memorable because of the life with which the author endows the characters and the extreme sensitivity of the way in which the stories are written. . . . There are weaknesses, of course, in some of the stories." Martha Foley

+ N Y Times p7 My 31 '42 600w

"Occasionally Miss Lavin tries too hard and her narrative becomes opaque, but not too often." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:65 My 30 '42 180w

"Mary Lavin is a born short story writer. Like many beginners, paradoxical as it sounds, she is technically quite excellent. . . . Miss Lavin's stories do not have the grandeur of a Maupassant or the felicitous prose of a Stephen Vincent Benét. But she has a note of her own. Occasionally she tries something beyond her power ('The Green Grave and the Black Grave'); sometimes she forces herself to be lighthearted and humorous neither of which is her line. But there are excellent and impressive pieces." R. R. Plant

+ Sat R of Lit 25:9 Je 6 '42 430w

LAW, BERNARD A. Fighting planes of the world; with an introd. by Nathaniel F. Silsbee; il. by Barry Bart. new rev ed 72p $1 Random house 629.13 Aeronautics, Military. Airplanes.

(W) 42-23276

"For this new edition [Book Review Digest, 1940] the explanatory text appraising the air strength of the major powers has been completely rewritten and new pictures have been added. All ages." Booklist

Booklist 39:109 N 15 '42

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p12 D 24 '42 120w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 37:118 N 20 '42 20w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 18:435 N '42 60w

"Excellent material at reasonable price." Dorothea Dawson

+ Library J 68:39 Ja 1 '43 40w

"Illustrations of these planes, many of them in colors, are excellent and are ably complemented by brief textual descriptions of the planes, their functions and engineering backgrounds. . . . This reviewer doesn't know how it is in other parts of the world, but here in the United States youngsters seem more apt and accurate in recognizing the plane in the sky than their elders. And those youngsters will probably be America's first generation of 'air-conditioned' rather than merely 'air-minded' adults." Frederick Graham

+ N Y Times p11 O 4 '42 400w

New Yorker 18:115 D 12 '42 30w

Wis Lib Bul 38:189 D '42

LAWRENCE, CHESTER HENRY, ed. New world horizons; geography for the air age; maps by Ray Ramsey. 92p il $2.75 Duell 910 Geography (W) 42-21793

"New kind of geography for the air age. Author has kept present-day conditions in mind as he presents the continents and countries and their importance and relationship to each other. Geography has taken on more significance, now that the whole world is involved in a crisis. Charts and many maps, by Ray Ramsey, help to start new lines of thought. For adults and children from ten years up." Library J

Booklist 39:100 N 15 '42

"The idea back of this slight volume has grandeur and is most timely. . . . But alas, the book fails in many regards and is so disjointed as to lack the unity which a book must have. Most of the text is sketchy geography of slight importance. The photographs illustrate the text but have little to do with the aerial geography. The justification for the volume lies in the maps. Some of the map presentations are clever and instructive. But in a technical presentation of air distance problems the reader must know something of the type of projection used. . . . After this criticism has been made it still remains to be said that some of the map demonstrations are original and worthwhile."

+ Books p22 N 1 '42 200w

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 21 '42 320w

Reviewed by D. M. MacDonald
Library J 67:847 O 1 '42 60w

"Compact and informative in what its text and maps tell us, sound and helpful as a grounding for further study—a book for very wide public perusal and consultation, in short. . . . [The maps] are so clear, laid out in such easily distinguished and attractive colors, explained in such simple legends, that their practical value is very high; the book is worth having just for its maps."

+ N Y Times p20 S 13 '42 500w

LAWRENCE, DAVID. Diary of a Washington correspondent. 356p $2.75 Kinsey 973.917 U.S.—Politics and government. U.S.—Foreign relations. World war, 1939—U.S.
(W) 42-22053

Day by day record of national and international affairs from May 1940 to May 1942. The author has been a Washington newspaper writer for thirty-two years, and part of this material appeared in his newspaper columns.

Reviewed by L. M. Lyons
Atlantic 170:168 D '42 180w
Booklist 39:118 D 1 '42

Reviewed by Joseph Driscoll
Books p16 O 4 '42 950w
Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '42

"Good record of public reactions to momentous events during two critical war years and important for future study; but, while each day brings such unpredictable happenings, it may not receive wide attention. Recommended." Katharine Shorey

LAWRENCE, DAVID—Continued

+ Library J 67:794 S 15 '42 100w
Pratt p13 D '42

"This volume of his brings together a number of carefully selected articles of the grist he turns out so facily for a considerable group of dailies, and it must be said at once that they read a great deal better in this juxtaposition than in pages hot from the press. . . . Regrettable is his attempt to prove that opposition to the efforts to put us into the war was largely Nazi-inspired propaganda. Nonetheless, Mr. Lawrence's batting average is high among the commentators, and his frequently uncanny intuition as to the real meaning of events deserves full and just recognition." O. G. Villard

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:16 O 10 '42 850w

LAWRENCE, ELIZABETH. Southern garden; a handbook for the middle South. 241p $3 Univ. of N.C. press

635.9 Gardening. Floriculture 42-13688

Chapters on gardening, filled with practical information for gardeners of the middle south. Includes tables of blooming dates of annuals, perennials, bulbs, and shrubs, and a directory of nurseries. Index.

Booklist 39:28 O 1 '42

"A straightforward, sensible, informative and pleasantly readable book by a Middle Southerner who knows from personal experience precisely what she's talking about. . . . You who garden in her chosen region can never again complain that the horticultural publishers have forgotten you, for you have been remembered here in a volume of unusual charm and merit." R. S. Lemmon

+ Books p12 J1 12 '42 130w

LAWRENCE, JOSEPHINE. There is today. 331p $2.50 Little

(W) 42-23976

Story of two young people, who, in the face of war and the certainty of the draft, marry and have the happiness of a year together in spite of the criticism and gossip of neighbors.

"There is a sense of reality here, an understanding of the desires and dreams and thoughts and acts of the everyday white-collar American that must be honored. Everything, including the writing, is keyed to the level of the average, and somehow it sticks in the mind as important. Miss Lawrence is either very representative or very clever. I am not sure that it matters which." Wallace Stegner

+ Atlantic 171:142 Ja '43 200w

Booklist 39:184 Ja 1 '43

"The portraits of the two young people are the finest in Miss Lawrence's long career of writing. She captures their youth, their dreams, their devotion to each other. . . . Her portrayal of Sarah Daffodil and the Peppercorns is excellent. When she deals with Mrs. Fitts and the Waterses, however, her anger and her indignation mar her work. The even flow of her realism turns to exaggeration and overemphasis of their selfishness, their ruthlessness and their essential fraud. One doesn't deny the existence of such people, but a subtler touch would have been more effective." Rose Feld

+ — Books p2 O 25 '42 900w

"There is an undercurrent of gentleness and warmth present whenever Andy and Candace appear. The author tells their story gladly, unfolding the incidents which make up their treasured year of togetherness—little, everyday happenings common to all. The infinitesimal stitches, the fragile threads in the pattern of their days, serve as a challenge to Andy and Candace to weave them into something durable and strong. In the end, they achieve a serenity which is inviolable." M. W. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 O 27 '42 430w

"Because they are so brightly contemporaneous, so shrewd, so very glib, Miss Lawrence's novels tend always to seem a little better than they are—a little more purposeful and significant. Even 'There is Today'—which is not, I feel, one of her better books—has qualities which blind one to its basic spuriousness and thinness, to its conspicuous sentimentality." E. H. Walton

— + N Y Times p26 O 25 '42 850w

"Told with a compassion that is all the more affecting for its simplicity."

+ New Yorker 18:82 O 31 '42 60w

"'There Is Today' is a realistic account of the Thanes, their problem and their friends. It is quieter in tone than some of Miss Lawrence's previous books, but it has the same satisfying, honest picture of contemporary life. Her subject is only too timely for it must be a major preoccupation in the minds of many young couples at this exact moment." R. C. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 25:48 D 5 '42 550w

LAZAREFF, PIERRE. Deadline; the behind-the-scenes story of the last decade in France; tr. from the French by David Partidge. 369p $3 Random house

944.08 France—Politics and government 42-8014

A survey of French politics and French journalism during the last ten years, by the former editor of Paris-Soir, now an exile living in the United States. Index.

Reviewed by Eric Sevareid

Am Hist R 48:116 O '42 210w

"Pierre Lazareff's is a badly organized book that gives the impression of being a compilation of a number of articles for 'Paris Soir.' It contains many mistakes both of orthography and fact. . . . Despite its many faults, M. Lazareff's story is a useful contribution to an understanding of the causes that led to the collapse of France." John Elliott

— + Books p17 Ap 19 '42 650w

Cath World 155:637 Ag '42 160w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:781 J1 '40 60w

"The sincere student of history will enjoy the author's keen insight into the issues at hand and the excellent portrayal of the leading Frenchmen of the past decade." R. S. Alvarez

+ Library J 67:85 Ja 15 '42 90w

Reviewed by Pierre Cot

Nation 154:432 Ap 11 '42 700w

"Paris-Soir's dynamic ex-editor seems to have run a dead heat with the title of his book. 'Deadline' begins like a nightmare 'Personal History,' telling how the last edition of France's biggest newspaper was made up with the Germans almost at the delivery exit, and proceeds like a blitzed 'Berlin Diary,' unforgivably wise after the event, with essays, profiles and whatnot sandwiched between vaguely dated paragraphs in the style of 'My Day.' But any reader who has the stamina to hang on will dig out many pieces of the key to the fall of France." Hal Lehrman

— + New Repub 106:674 My 18 '42 1000w

Reviewed by Eleanor Kittredge

N Y Times p25 Mr 29 '42 1550w

"Here is a book to be recommended not to those who have made up their minds about the responsibility of labor or capital for the fall of France, but to those who want more information before making up their minds. . . . There is not much in the book that is new, although there are some hitherto unpublished documents and records of cabinet meetings and conversations which provide enlightening footnotes to history. Its great value lies in its broad compass and in its clear and rapid exposition of the tragic course of events which led to the defeat of France by Frenchmen." S. L. McGee

+ Sat R of Lit 25:8 Mr 28 '42 550w

Reviewed by Leo Gershoy

Yale R n s 31:834 summer '42 250w

LAZARSFELD, PAUL FELIX, and STANTON, FRANK NICHOLAS, eds. Radio research, 1941. 333p $2.50 Duell

791.4 Radio. Radio broadcasting. Radio—Social aspects. Radio in education 42-36037

This volume contains six papers dealing with "the relationship of listeners to the broadcasts." The studies which resulted in these papers were directed from Columbia University's Office of Radio Research. Contents: Foreign language broadcasts over local American stations, by Rudolf Arnheim and M. C. Bayne; The popular music industry, by Duncan MacDougald, jr.; The radio symphony, by T. W. Adorno; Invitation to music, a study of the creation of new music listeners by the radio, by E. A. Suchman; Radio and the press among young people, by F. J. Meine; Radio comes to the farmer, by W. S. Robinson. Index.

Booklist 38:205 F 15 '42

"The book is written in the approved, scientifically spartan prose style of research reporting, but the journey from point to point is not unpleasant because the points in themselves are so interesting." W. M. Ramsey
+ Sat R of Lit 25:14 Mr 7 '42 70w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 31:155 Mr '42 650w

"It is obvious that it is impossible to summarize briefly such a varied and factual book; it is equally obvious that this is a book of enduring value and sound scholarship in a field where Mr. Lazarsfeld has pioneered." Quincy Howe

+ Yale R n s 31:643 spring '42 300w

LEACOCK, STEPHEN BUTLER. Montreal: seaport and city. (Seaport ser) 340p il $3.50 Doubleday

971.4281 Montreal (W) 42-25621

A history of the city and port of Montreal from the days of Jacques Cartier down to the present, written by a professor of economics at McGill University who is also famous as a humorist. Both sides of the author's literary personality are evident in these scholarly, readable pages. Index.

Booklist 39:182 Ja 1 '43

"Stephen Leacock has written with skill, humane understanding and unfailing good humor. . . Montreal has been fortunate in its historian. To read this book is to have a new understanding of the quality of the city." Henry Beston

+ Books p3 N 29 '42 550w

Commonweal 37:378 Ja 29 '43 750w

Reviewed by A. R. Eaton

Library J 67:908 O 15 '42 80w

"Canada's commercial metropolis is supremely fortunate in having Stephen Leacock as its portrait-biographer. Interesting as the facts are in themselves, they gain enormously in their zestful approach to the reader by the scholarly assimilation, balance and literary skill with which they are presented." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p10 D 6 '42 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 38:185 D '42

LEACOCK, STEPHEN BUTLER. My remarkable uncle, and other sketches. 313p $2.50 Dodd

817 (W) 42-6212

Collection of sketches, most of them on the humorous side. The title essay describes the author's uncle, Edward Philip Leacock "known to . . . people in Winnipeg fifty or sixty years ago as E. P.," whose character was "so exaggerated already that you couldn't exaggerate it." Other essays have a wide range of subjects from A welcome to a visiting American, to Why do we fish?

"Anyone who can force an unexpected chuckle out of us this spring is to be blessed. Which is to say that My Remarkable Uncle is a godsend. . . Begin this new book by watching Leacock's sentence structure: here is some of the clearest and most supple prose of our time. See how he lets the emphasis fall on this innocent-appearing verb; see how he smuggles in his aside, the friendly nudge of recognition, so that you read half for the fun of what is said and half for the pleasure of being in Leacock's intimacy. Leacock created this style of his more than thirty years ago. It has been enriched—not made lean—by the years." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic My '42 270w

Booklist 38:306 Ap 15 '42

"In this volume the professor has brought together most of the fruits of his literary work of the last few years. . . The result, as might be expected, is uneven. Some of the material is utterly trivial, but the total effect is rich and rewarding. Here again, as in so many of his other books, is the evidence of a first-rate mind at work, a mind that is gay, luminous, and at the same time somber. His considerable reputation has been built in that field known as 'foolishness,' and yet his strong point is a consistent common sense which sees through flummery and affectation." Stanley Walker

+ Books p18 Mr 1 '42 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '42

"The pieces in literary and philosophical vein are stimulating, some because you agree with them heartily, and others because they are argument-provoking stuff. The title sketch, 'My Remarkable Uncle,' really rates an exclamation point after it, quite in line with 'My Sainted Aunt!' Professor Leacock's uncle, E. P., was a character so exaggerated already that stories about him needed no blowing up." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 8 '42 600w

Pratt p16 D '42

"There is a fine range of subjects and variety of treatment in these sketches. . . There are very sound essays on literary subjects, with far more sense than a great deal of heavily pondered esthetic stuff. . . Here's a book that is often close enough to the war, yet a merry and heartening book that will help to keep its readers' spirits up." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 Ap 4 '42 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p370 Jl 25 '42 800w

LEAF, MUNRO. War-time handbook for young Americans; il. by [the author]. 64p $1.25 Stokes

355.23 World war, 1939—War work—Juvenile literature. Civilian defense—Juvenile literature (W) 42-20394

"Munro Leaf's handbook is for children of 7 and up, for any child in fact who is old enough to carry messages or gather salvage, although its style and format will probably find its major public under 12. . . There are specific suggestions for actual service with direct bearing on the emergency, such as learning the rudiments of first aid, gardening, running errands, collecting salvage." N Y Times

Booklist 39:36 O 1 '42

"Many a book for children's war-time work will be 'made to order' before this war is won, and some will be pretty awful. But this one was evidently made to the personal order of one American father who knows just what he means when he says 'American,' and because he is clearly aware of what we are fighting for and what we are fighting against can speak, not only for the fathers of America, but for the Founding Fathers." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ag 16 '42 450w

Cath World 156:374 D '42 20w

"Two features may detract from its use in the library: The child is directed to record important telephone numbers on page thirty-nine, while, on pages forty-six and forty-seven, he is to draw a map of his neighborhood. Important chiefly because of its timeliness." Clair Nolte

Library J 67:911 O 15 '42 100w

"The advice, both as to practical matters and to attitude, pointed up by drawings in the author's drolly grotesque style, should do a lot toward building a generation of cooperative democrats." E. L. Buell

LEAF, MUNRO—Continued

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 16 '42 320w

New Yorker 18:115 D 12 '42 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 24 '43 350w

Wis Lib Bul 38:167 N '42

LEAR, EARL BEAN, and DILLON, JAMES EDWARD. Aircraft riveting; a guide for the student. 118p il $1.25 Pitman

629.1341 Airplanes—Design and construction. Rivets 42-36264

The purpose of this text is "to outline the subject in a very broad way, emphasizing certain practical aspects of the most important functions of riveting so that the student will not go blindly into his work." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 38:437 J1 15 '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 J1 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:36 J1 '42

LEAVENS, ROBERT FRENCH, and LEAVENS, MARY AGNES, comps. Great companions; readings on the meaning and conduct of life from ancient and modern sources, v2. 684p $3 Beacon press

808.8 Literature—Collections

"A second volume of brief selections, for reading and meditation. More are from modern than from ancient authors, and a large proportion are from writers still living. For this reason there is less familiar material than in most similar collections, and the reader will enlarge his acquaintance with thoughtful writers while feeding his soul." Christian Century

"A generation has grown up on the first volume of this pocket companion of readings on the meaning and conduct of life from ancient and modern sources. The second volume, complete in itself, will have even wider, stronger influence. Small in size, with clear, well spaced type, it will be taken to camp or read at home on sleepless nights."

+ Books p22 Mr 22 '42 200w

Christian Century 59:187 F 11 '42 70w

LEAVITT, JOHN ANTON. The voting trust; a device for corporate control. 216p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

658.1146 Corporations. Trusts and trustees 41-16973

"A study for economists of the nature, history, uses and law of the voting trust, with appendices containing the Securities and Exchange Act, Form 16; the Securities Act, Form F-1; and a comparison of the earnings of firms with and firms without voting trusts." (Management R) Bibliography. Index.

"Restricted though the scope of this study is admitted to be, it leaves much to be desired both in form and content. The general structure could have been considerably improved by the inclusion of a concise introduction, by the relegation of countless illustrative cases to footnotes or summary tables, and by more careful organization throughout. Among the more noticeable substantive shortcomings are a failure to give sufficient attention to the real estate trust and a tendency to provide categorical answers to many of the issues raised when a further resort to facts seemed warranted. Nevertheless, this volume contributes some very worth-while explanatory and taxonomical spadework." J. B. Eckert

+ Am Econ R 32:387 Je '42 600w

Management R 30:472 D '41 40w

"The subject of voting trusts is simply too sterile to merit the lengthy treatment accorded it in the present volume. The book itself is needlessly repetitious and includes much unnecessary material which could more wisely have been omitted. From another point of view the foregoing comments may perhaps do the book an injustice. Policy matters aside, the author's deductions are invariably sound. The non-lawyer will find the volume an easily understandable exposition and even the lawyer seeking the general arguments pro and con on various points will find it a convenient source of information. He may also find the bibliography and the collection of voting trust provisions distinctly helpful." J. F. Meck, Jr.

+ Yale Law J 51:531 Ja '42 700w

LE BLANC, MRS DORIS (KENT). Dear to this heart. 282p $2.50 Putnam

42-19937

Story of home life in a small Mississippi town. The Chesters, John and May, and their twin sons, take into their home a crippled orphaned cousin, John. With love and understanding replacing neglect John becomes strong and an accepted part of the family. The lives of the three boys, their parents and friends, are worked out from childhood to maturity.

"A pleasant book, lovingly written, about people and a way of living that in our warmer sentimental moments we like to consider typically American." Margaret Evans

+ Books p10 S 20 '42 600w

Boston Globe p19 S 23 '42 120w

"The vast majority—among whom count this reviewer—will have nothing but blessings for a new American novelist who has dared, in a skeptical age, to write of charming things charmingly and of lovely things with deep conviction and quiet, barbless humor." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p27 S 20 '42 750w

LEDWARD, PATRICIA, and STRANG, COLIN, eds. Poems of this war, by younger poets; with an introd. by Edmund Blunden. 99p $1.75 Macmillan [5s Cambridge]

821.08 English poetry—Collections. World war, 1939—Poetry 42-23186

Anthology of poems on the present war. "A long article might be written on this book, analyzing this body of poetry and showing how it expresses different, and even contradictory, reactions to the stresses of war—contradictory sometimes within the work of a single poet. . . These younger poets are of the generation that is doing the fighting; some of them are personally in it. They are vigorous and earnest, sensitive alike to beauty and to duty. There is none of them who loves violence, or who shrinks from it when the call comes. Nearly all of them consciously look beyond it. Though they do not say it so prosily, they are envisaging not the glory of victory but such peaceful fruits of the present struggle as poets, artists and other good Christians can hope for with good conscience." (Christian Century)

"In spite of the variety, there is a certain singleness of outlook. Every one of the writers feels himself to be living under the imminence of death, 'waiting daily for the skies to fall,' and this creates an urgent, quickened sense of the present, of living in the moment, which gives the volume a peculiar vividness." Elizabeth Drew

+ Atlantic 170:152 N '42 210w

"They are good."

+ Christian Century 59:1259 O 14 '42 130w

"The editors are to be congratulated on all their selections." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 O 24 '42 650w

"Already several anthologies of the work [of the younger poets] have been issued, and in Poems of this War we have yet another and perhaps the most rewarding. Without any aggressive militarism or blatant nationalism, these young writers respond to the crisis with a grave and unhysterical courage and, never losing sight of the eternal values, manage to disengage a poignant beauty from the confusion of what must surely be the most desperate situation that the souls of sensitive men and women have ever been called upon to face."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 26 '42 200w

Reviewed by G. W. Stonier

New Statesman & Nation 24:175 S 12 '42 370w

"There's not a trace here of the self-pity noticeable in certain poets of the last war. Love and sorrow are recurring themes, and a strong religious feeling, which has been absent in the poetry of the young for over a generation, underlines everything said. One real talent is that of John Hall. To those who have held the firm hope that the literature of this war would not sound in the least like the literature of any former one, this book provides true support. The stock sentimentality and despair have disappeared." Louise Bogan
+ New Yorker 18:80 O 31 '42 500w

"The tone and temper of the poetry so far published during this war are inevitably distinct from that of a quarter of a century ago. But this anthology provides plenty of proof, if it were needed, that once again war has quickened the pulse of young English poets rather than deadened it. The fact is perhaps all the more impressive and heartening in the long view, as reflecting the essential spirit of the country which has nurtured them, since of war-ardour, of defiance or combativeness, there is hardly an echo in any of the hundred poems collected here."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p392 Ag 8 '42 700w

LEE, ALISON. Ladder mystery; il. by the author. 230p $2 Lothrop

42-10026

Mystery story for girls of Junior high school age.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 J1 26 '42 100w
Wis Lib Bul 38:100 Je '42

LEE, BABS, pseud. See Lee, M. V.

LEE, CHARLES JAMES. Cornish tales. 382p $2.50 Dutton [8s 6d Dent]

(W) 42-14083

Two short novels, The Widow Woman, and Dorinda's Birthday; a collection of sketches called Our Little Town; and three short stories, all descriptive of life in Cornwall antedating the last war.

Booklist 38:442 J1 15 '42

"These are sensitive, lovely tales, delicately attuned. Mr. Lee is a romancer, a discoverer of the poetry that exists in every hamlet, and its denizens." Donald Corley

+ Books p6 Je 28 '42 550w

Reviewed by Harold Hobson
Christian Science Monitor p11 O 4 '41 400w

Reviewed by J. G. E. Hopkins
Commonweal 36:307 J1 17 '42 350w

Reviewed by M. H. Zipprich
Library J 67:533 Je 1 '42 70w

"Allowing the merits of the other tales, 'The Widow Woman' and 'Dorinda's Birthday' may be taken to represent Mr. Lee's full range—his robust humour and his poetical imagination,—and the difference between them, apart from prevailing tone, might be not unfairly stated as that between accuracy and truth in the larger sense. The Cornishness which is explicit in the one is diffused and sublimated in the other as happens when direct observation is 'recollected in tranquillity.' The Cornishness savoured on the palate, the deep satisfaction of humanity remains." Charles Marriott

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 5 '41 380w

"The outstanding prize of the books collection is the story of the grotesquely ugly, twice-married widow who was besieged by suitors not solely for her boat and houses and money in bank but for her cooking and her good temper. Never was love-story—not hers, but that of one of her suitors, pushed by an ambitious sister but with heart elsewhere—more tenderly told nor tale of equal size so packed with side-splitting situations. Never was impossible heroine more likable nor actual heroine more fascinatingly feminine. And a town-load of uninhibited fisherfolk as chorus. The whole group of tales is a sure-fire antidote for glumness." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p20 Je 28 '42 700w

"These stories of Cornish life are excellent old-fashioned stuff, neat and carefully done as a cottage flower-garden, or a piece of old embroidery; none the worse for having a period flavour, since it was such a good period, and gone for good. . . It is good to have Mr. Lee's modest, unambitious, but truthful, evocation of those days; all the more moving, for he is an artist within his careful, chosen limits." A. L. Rowse

+ Spec 167:216 Ag 29 '41 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p409 Ag 23 '41 480w

Wis Lib Bul 38:120 J1 '42

LEE, DWIGHT ERWIN. Ten years; the world on the way to war, 1930-1940. 443p maps $3.75 Houghton

940.5 Europe—Politics. World war, 1939—Causes (W) 42-5100

"Presents both a factual survey and an interpretation of European international affairs in the decade of the thirties in order to make as clear as is possible at this time [1941] the more immediate causes and the character of the war that began in 1939." (Pref) The author is professor of modern European history at Clark university, Worcester, Massachusetts. Bibliographical note. Index.

"In writing his book the author has embodied many of the best features of the work of the professional historian and the journalist. He obviously was well prepared for the task. He has written on recent events without being in too much of a hurry to publish. He has written with the resources of a historian and the punch of a journalist. The result is an excellent volume with the usual format and helpful aids of most scholarly works in the field of history." C. P. Higby
+ Am Hist R 48:113 O '42 380w

"In spite of its interpretations which can be questioned here and there, this is nevertheless a book of uncommon quality, a superb piece of history-telling which nobody who finds interest in postwar history can afford to neglect." J. S. Roucek

+ Ann Am Acad 221:202 My '42 550w

Booklist 38:328 My 1 '42

Bookmark 3:10 My '42

Books p13 S 6 '42 180w

"Although Ten Years cannot be and does not pretend to be an exhaustive study, it is a careful, coherent and impartial record of the main events of the decade and, as such, is a valuable addition to reference works on current history." C. T.

+ Current Hist 3:261 N '42 390w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:772 J1 '42 40w

"The story is told with great skill in presentation and integration, with careful attention to details, and with an interpretation that draws the right lessons. The book suffers somewhat from its too exclusively political character. It does not do justice to the underlying 'ideological' conflict which alone can explain the tremendous character of the crisis. . . Despite these flaws the book has great value as a reliable, intelligent, and well-written guide to the political and diplomatic events of the past ten years." Hans Kohn

+ Nation 154:493 Ap 25 '42 650w

"This book is a sound review of diplomatic events, with some faults but substantially more virtues. On the whole it adheres to the chronicle rather than the interpretative school of history. While neither exciting nor inspired by brilliant interpretation, this record of diplomatic events during the years 1930 to 1940 should be useful either as a reminder to those who have followed closely the events of that period, or as an introduction for those who wish to commence serious study." George Woodbridge

LEE, D. E.—Continued

+ — Pol Sci Q 57:611 D '42 600w

"The early chapters show evidence of more research and reflection than the later ones. The forest is occasionally lost sight of because of the trees. And on certain questions of judgment and interpretation those who have studied the documents more carefully than Dr. Lee may be disposed to make reservations. But for those who want to read the record of how and why the Western world arrived at 1942, here it is—skillfully presented, well balanced, temperate, critical, and fairly complete." F. L. Schuman

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:10 Mr 21 '42 430w

"An excellent combination of narration and interpretation, with the emphasis on the Great Powers. Useful for a graphic, analytical account."

+ Social Studies 33:239 My '42 30w

Wis Lib Bul 38:96 Je '42

"If the book has a fault it lies in Mr. Lee's failure to devote more careful attention to the ideas which motivated foreign policy. Like most diplomatic historians he gives too much space to the details of diplomacy—conferences, conversations, notes. But in spite of this common fault, the book should be read by anyone who wishes to trace the steps which led the world to war." Basil Henning

+ — Yale R n s 31:853 summer '42 550w

LEE, GYPSY ROSE (ROSE LOUISE HOVICK).

Mother finds a body. 312p $2 Simon & Schuster

42-24237

Detective story.

"Well, Gypsy Rose Lee is a regular now with two high, wide and handsome mysteries to her credit. 'Mother Finds a Body' is every bit as good as 'The G-String Murders,' if not superior in some ways, and the authoress seems to be all set for a whodunit per year. For our money, she can go on writing bafflers with a show business background as long as she can think up the funny stuff that puts them over so resoundingly." Will Cuppy

+ Books p16 O 11 '42 450w

"We are glad to note that Gypsy Rose Lee does not lean quite so heavily on vulgarity as she did in 'The G-String Murders.'" Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p38 O 25 '42 160w

"Three murders take place in rapid succession in a frenzied atmosphere—pure ozone to those who enjoy breathing it."

New Yorker 18:92 O 17 '42 80w

"Diverging."

Sat R of Lit 25:41 O 24 '42 40w
Time 40:104 N 2 '42 70w

LEE, HARRY. More day to dawn; the story of Thoreau of Concord [in verse] with a foreword by Brooks Atkinson, 167p $2.50 Duell

811 Thoreau, Henry David—Poetry

41-19677

An arrangement of prose and verse conveying the story of Thoreau's life from the day of his birth in 1817, to his death in 1862. Arrangement is by subject: Henry is born; Henry's boyhood; young manhood; Henry leaves home; life in the woods; maker of books; self-portrait; new friends; the war years.

"An appreciation of Thoreau in verse, as Mr. Brooks Atkinson remarks in the foreword to this volume, is more apt to arouse curiosity than expectation. But Mr. Lee has performed a minor miracle. . . Mr. Lee would be the last to claim that he has written great poetry, but we may claim for him that he has composed little that does not succeed in doing exactly what he intends it to do. His narrative and descriptive bits possess an inevitable grace and point, and many of the briefer lyrics are utterly charming. Perhaps the highest praise that can be given is to say that his poems move on the same level as the occasional passages from Thoreau's prose that he has arranged as free verse and woven into his composition." G. F. Whicher

+ Books p7 S 28 '41 650w

"The interpretation of Thoreau is authentic and appealing. An excellent book to place in school collections as a supplement to American literature."

+ Wis Lib Bul 38:84 My '42

LEE, JENNIE (MRS ANEURIN BEVAN).

This great journey; with a foreword by William L. Shirer. 298p $2.50 Farrar

B or 92

(W) 42-17781

Autobiography of a Scottish coal miner's daughter, who has become well-known for her efforts in behalf of labor. Her early memories are of the mining village of Lochgelly in Scotland, where her father was well up in the politics of the Independent Labour party. Jennie went to Edinburgh university and graduated, and at twenty-four was elected to Parliament from North Lanark. In 1931 she lost her parliamentary seat, but has remained active in I. L. P. politics. Her husband, Aneurin Bevan, is Labour party M. P. from South Wales. This book is an enlargement of the London edition (Cresset press, 1939) published under the title: Tomorrow Is a New Day.

"Written with ease and humor, with insight, sympathy, anger, and understanding, and shot through with the modesty of the British working class, it has all the strength and weakness of the common people. By telling a good story, Miss Lee throws more light on the real nature of British politics and objectives than all the propaganda and political theory which the war has produced." G. E. Taylor

+ Atlantic 170:134 O '42 700w

Booklist 39:31 O 1 '42

"In his enthusiastic foreword to her autobiography, 'This Great Journey,' William L. Shirer writes, 'There is only one Jennie Lee in the world.' Reading the book, one can see how he came to this conclusion. The facts of her career, the vital statistics, so to speak, are interesting enough. . . But more interesting than 'Jennie Lee, M. P. for the mining district of North Lanark,' is Jennie Lee, the individual, the person with whom Shirer no doubt had many long and disturbing talks. For, judging by her book, she is a disturbing person. Hers is the memory of a class rather than an individual and it is that memory, clarified by knowledge and experience, which colors and directs her thinking." Rose Feld

+ Books p3 Ag 16 '42 1350w

"This is a very earnest story of a Scottish socialist—appealing, in its directness and encouraging, in the breadth of vision the author betrays. Probably its chief charm lies in the fact that, almost unique in contemporary war literature, it has the feel of being completely free of propaganda of one sort or another." Kay Morris

+ Canadian Forum 22:186 S '42 450w

"There is a common, but quite mistaken, notion that if you study a fine Conservative type of Englishman like Mr. Churchill, you will understand England. All that you will understand by such study is one influential and stabilizing element that has flourished through the ages on English soil. For a balanced view of Britain you could not do better than read this informal life story of Jennie Lee. . . As we read these pages, with their pleasant sense of humor and absence of dogmatism or invective, we begin to feel that here is something typical of that sturdy faith that alone can triumph over the forces of fascism and enslavement." H. J. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 19 '42 600w

"Add this autobiography to those books that help Americans to understand changing economic and social scene in England. . . Worthwhile and recommended." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 67:680 Ag '42 140w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison
Nation 155:197 S 5 '42 500w

"Her book is like Jennie—passionate, stubborn, violent and intensely sincere. You can hear her Scots burr speaking out to you through its pages, feel the intensity of her conviction, love her for it. . . . Midway in her story Jennie confesses that she has been driven to write her book by the conflict of two very strong emotions (all Jennie's emotions are strong): a great fear and a still greater hope. Toward the end she seems to discard the fear and embrace the hope. Others may differ in their appraisal of the chances. But none can deny the relevance of her argument, or its supreme importance." Varian Fry

+ New Repub 107:325 S 14 '42 800w

"Every one, it is said, has a good book in him if only he could write it, and this is a very good book. It is genuine autobiography, a psalm of life that is still youth, sung full-throated by a Scottish lassie as the air that she breathes, joyous in its zest for experience and gayly triumphant over disillusion. Poets tell of the happy warrior, and Jennie Lee, whose opinions are in the red, whose hair is a blackout, rides whirlwinds as the happy Valkyrie, full gallop and usually ahead of the clouds. . . . Throughout the narrative, excellently arranged, there is intimate, precise and colorful detail, mellowed by the reminiscence that glorifies survival as a victory—no bitterness even in the savageries of cynicism." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p19 Ag 30 '42 1100w

New Yorker 18:60 Ag 29 '42 60w

"Miss Lee writes simply and with candid sincerity. Her earlier chapters on her childhood in Fife, and her university days at Edinburgh, are delightful; and her portrait of her parents has a profound, affectionate beauty." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 25:10 S 12 '42 700w

LEE, MRS MARION (VAN DER VEER) (BABS LEE, pseud). A model is murdered. 243p $2 Scribner

42-20998

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p9 S 6 '42 180w

"The story is well plotted and entertainingly told." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p15 Ag 23 '42 160w

"Fair plot bogged down in 'witty' repartee and extraneous matter. Many unbelievable details not satisfactorily explained. Indigestible."

— Sat R of Lit 25:15 Ag 29 '42 40w

LEEMING, JOSEPH. Fun with wood; il. by Charles E. Pont; how to whittle and carve wood to make useful and decorative articles, toys, puzzles, and unusual figures. 111p $2.25 Stokes

684 Woodwork. Wood carving (W) 42-17492

Directions for carving and whittling useful and decorative articles out of wood. Kinds of wood needed, right grain, and types of knives for each are considered. Diagrams. Bibliography.

Booklist 39:17 S '42

"You will find inspiration as well as complete directions in this valuable addition to books on hand crafts." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 22 '42 130w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 18:343 S '42 40w

Reviewed by Maude Adams

Library J 67:848 O 1 '42 70w

Wis Lib Bul 33:167 N '42

LEFFINGWELL, ALBERT (DANA CHAMBERS, pseud). Frightened man; a new Jim Steel mystery. 288p $2 Dial press

42-14045

Detective story.

"This struck us as the best of [the author's] output to date." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 My 31 '42 150w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p17 Ap 26 '42 240w

LE GRAND, pseud. See Henderson, Le G.

LEIGHOU, ROBERT BENJAMIN. Chemistry of engineering materials; rewritten by members of the Chemistry faculty of the Carnegie inst. of technology; J. C. Warner, ed. [and others]. 4th ed 645p il $4.50 McGraw

620.1 Chemistry, Technical. Building materials (W) 42-23138

"The third edition [Book Review Digest, 1931] has been rewritten by members of the chemistry faculty of the Carnegie institute of technology with many changes in content and treatment to bring it up to date." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 39:142 D 15 '42

Chem & Met Eng 49:183 O '42 250w

LEIGHTON, CLARE VERONICA HOPE (MRS HENRY NOEL BRAILSFORD). Southern harvest. 157p il $3.50 Macmillan

917.5 South—Description and travel. South—Social life and customs 42-51247

"Clare Leighton explains in her introduction that 'Southern Harvest' was written to fill a need of her own as an Englishwoman—an endeavor to push her roots into the new earth of the country of her adoption. Miss Leighton's fourteen short sketches, beautifully illustrated with her own engravings, are entirely subjective in manner of presentation. Whether she describes the yellow wheels of a wagon, a single clump of pitcher plants or the graceful movements of the white egret, her observations become a personal experience, a treasured sensation. One might call the first sketch, 'Cotton,' a psalm to the cotton-pickers of the Mississippi Delta." Books

"'Southern Harvest' is not without a quiet humor, and 'Old Ollie,' 'Saturday in Court House Square' and 'Po' White' are pictures every Southerner will recognize. But in portraying the Reverend Hill in greasy rags or Jessie Perlick in faded jeans, Miss Leighton never fails to value the native dignity of man, and more than any writer I remember she has a gift for transferring to paper the gentle childlike quality of humble people." R. Y. Williams

+ Books p3 D 20 '42 650w

Library J 67:1013 N 15 '42 30w

* "Since this artist in two mediums is also, and first of all, an artist in awareness, her vivid and exquisite text and pictures have a value of communication that reaches far beyond the personal. The reader feels the South. But he also feels more. It is the common quality of man's earth-sustained living that is the broad, deep theme of this book, in text and magnificent engravings alike. . . . Clare Leighton has seen the Southern harvest and made it hers. She has made it ours as well, in a book for us to cherish and understand." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p5 D 20 '42 1300w

Reviewed by Basil Davenport

Sat R of Lit 26:22 Ja 23 '43 480w

"The word 'vision' is fitting here, for 'Southern Harvest' is eminently a book of vision. In this it is rather kin to poetry which proceeds from the heightened perceptions of the sensitive inner self, than to prose, which is more concerned with externals." Sarah Schiff

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 31 '43 400w

LEIGHTON, MRS MARGARET (CARVER). Twelve bright trumpets; il. by Frank Dobias. 172p $1.75; school ed $1.28 Houghton

42-19438

Twelve stories for older boys and girls, describing the life, manners, and customs of the Middle Ages.

LEIGHTON, M. C.—Continued

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 37:120 N 20 '42 20w
Reviewed by Dorothea Dawson
Library J 68:39 Ja 1 '43 30w

LEISERSON, AVERY. Administrative regulation; a study in representation of interests. 292p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

353 Administrative law. Association and associations. U.S.—Executive departments 42-18098

"The subtitle of this book describes it better than the title. The author, after a chapter on group interests as sources of public policy, discusses the representation of interests in administrative procedure, on boards, and on advisory committees. There are two chapters on the administrative functions of interest groups, a chapter on legal aspects, and a concluding chapter on the political theory involved." Ann Am Acad

"The author does not avoid frank statement of his preferences, while sensitive to qualifications dictated by wide observation; and he leads from specific data to wide-ranging and well considered generalization concerning the fundamentals of politics when the nature of his inquiry requires it. The book ends with useful suggestions for action that reflect hard thinking, an even temper, and a sense of civic responsibility." J. M. Gaus

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:1158 D '42 900w

"The book is an excellent summary of the theory, legislation, and existing practice regarding the use and misuse of organized special interest groups in regulative public administrative procedures. The footnotes are both copious and selective and serve well as a guide to the literature in the field. All in all, it raises a series of pertinent questions which all interested or involved in the managerial revolution now occurring must face." J. O. Hertzler

+ Am Soc R 7:876 D '42 480w

"This book is a good summary of the problems and practices of group representation. Very little attention, however, is given to the effect of party politics on the selection by the executive of the group representatives in the administrative processes, and still less attention to the politics within groups that either makes men available for appointment or results in their election by the group, whichever is the legal requirement." D. D. McKean

+ Ann Am Acad 224:217 N '42 230w

Reviewed by F. M. Watkins

+ Harvard Law R 56:150 S '42 950w

LEMAITRE, GEORGES EDOUARD. From cubism to surrealism in French literature. 247p il $3 Harvard univ. press

840.9 French literature—History and criticism. Impressionism (art). Surrealism
A41-4666

"Many partisans of modern painting have claimed for it an exceptional role in the history of Western art. Its enemies have maintained the opposite, and the result has often been that the public is confused as to just what it should think. . . . M. Lemaître, who has a post as a lecturer at Stanford University, provides this assistance by way of describing vanguard literature in France during the last fifty years. In fact, he goes even further back to list Rousseau, Hugo and Baudelaire because of certain revolutionary implications in their work. Later sources were Nerval and Rimbaud, and de Lautréamont." New Repub

Reviewed by Jerome Mellquist

New Repub 106:404 Mr 23 '42 480w

Pratt p17 O '42

Reviewed by Oliver Larkin

Sat R of Lit 25:16 Mr 21 '42 270w

"The book is beautifully set up and printed, and is copiously illustrated from the works of the artists mentioned in its pages. It is not a book to be read casually or without sympathy." E. H. C.

Springf'd Republican p14 N 28 '41 600w

"Professor Lemaître enables us to understand but hardly teaches how to love his subjects, if indeed he loved them. Doctrines and manifestos engross his attention more than actual works, and his reader is not made conscious of the profound and moving sensibility of such true and tender poets as Apollinaire, Eluard, Reverdy, or of the tragically human despair which underlies the bitter, and at times inhuman singularities of Picasso, Rouault, Soutine, or Dalí. While the present volume is the most comprehensive and the best account of cubism and surrealism written in English, it does not quite rival those two masterpieces of contemporary criticism in French devoted to modern poetry and modern painting: Marcel Raymond's 'De Baudelaire au Surréalisme,' and René Huyghe's 'Les Contemporains.'" Henri Peyre

Yale R n s 31:637 spring '42 1550w

LENANTON, MRS CAROLA MARY ANIMA (OMAN). Napoleon at the Channel [Eng title: Britain against Napoleon]. 316p $2.50 Doubleday [12s 6d Faber]

942.073 Great Britain—History—1789-1820.
Napoleonic wars
42-18608

Social history of England in the Napoleonic era—from 1793 to 1821. The narrative is made up of dramatically told anecdotes, of the great and near great, and episodes of their less favored contemporaries as well, all woven together to make a history of the English people of that period. Index.

Booklist 39:67 N 1 '42

"The grand saga, Europe against Napoleon, a fit subject for Tolstoy and Hardy, is interlarded with wilfully incongruous episodes. I am not a stickler for the purity of the genres. The heroic, the commonplace and the ludicrous have their place in life. . . . But the difficulty of combining political history, social chronicle and mere gossip is greater than Carola Oman seems to have realized. . . . Still, if the book as a whole leaves a blurred impression, it is far from commonplace, and many of the details are charmingly done. Miss Oman's talent is unquestionable; and although she can be as smart as was the fashion some fifteen years ago, she never becomes annoying." Albert Guerard

+ Books p2 Ag 30 '42 1250w

"This is the most interesting and vivid account that has been given of life and feeling in Britain during the great French war. Miss Oman has made excellent use of her intimate knowledge of the history, manners, and culture of the period, and her book is a study in the behaviour of eighteenth-century society under conditions resembling our conditions to-day." J. L. H.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 10 '42 280w

"A book for those who like a historical perspective with their war news and for those who like their history written lightly and entertainingly, without the sacrifices of either accuracy or scholarship."

+ New Repub 107:326 S 14 '42 60w

"Her book disappoints. For one thing, she has succumbed to the fashionable vice of 'popular' biographers and historians. . . . Her book, nevertheless, does contain much that is interesting." Raymond Mortimer

+ New Statesman & Nation 23:95 F 7 '42 850w

"Miss Oman's method is one of rapid little pictures, odd items, historical flashes, the moment observed through the eyes of personalities of the time—a difficult method, to be sure, and one that sometimes runs away with itself, but Miss Oman, author of several biographies and historical novels, has a rare sense of discipline; her agglomeration of minutiae is carefully selected and merged into a whole that suggests stature and breadth." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p1 Ag 9 '42 1450w

"Handled in the montage style of Peter Quennell, though with not quite the same déjà-gé polish. Entertaining, but rather too pat now and then."

+ New Yorker 18:56 Ag 8 '42 90w

Reviewed by Crane Brinton

Sat R of Lit 25:3 Ag 29 '42 1050w

"Miss Oman's book would be good reading at any time, and is particularly good reading today. . . Her success is the more remarkable because she has not limited herself to a series of discrete pictures. She has been bold enough to try to describe the main issues of the revolutionary and Napoleonic wars, and to give the reader all that a text-book would tell him, without any of the text-book 'atmosphere.' Miss Oman is never didactic, and never parades her knowledge, but there is not a page in her book which does not gain in vividness from this accumulation of exact and interesting detail." E. L. Woodward

+ Spec 168:162 F 13 '42 750w

"This interesting book is always instructive and often amusing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p44 Ja 24 '42 850w

LENDE, HELGA, ed. What of the blind? a survey of the development and scope of present-day work with the blind, v2. 206p $2 Am. foundation for the blind

362.4 Blind—Asylums and education
(W) (38-14789)

"The first volume [Book Review Digest, 1938] covered topics of a general nature; this book is more specific, dealing with subjects that required elaboration, as well as giving recent advances. Chapters contributed by workers with the blind are grouped under these headings: Interpretation of blindness—Special educational problems—Personal adjustment of the adult blind—Economic and vocational adjustment—Statistics of blindness—The federal government and the blind." Booklist

"A 'must' for all concerned directly and indirectly in the well-being of the blind." Harry Best

+ Am Soc R 7:149 F '42 360w

Booklist 38:74 N 1 '41

"Although primarily intended for those engaged in aiding the blind, it holds interest for laymen and for anyone, concerned with the subject of which it treats." E. B. Hanna

+ Survey 78:63 F '42 800w

LENNARD, REGINALD VIVIAN. Democracy: the threatened foundations. (Current problems ser) 122p $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d Cambridge]

321.8 Democracy. Great Britain—Politics and government
[A42-1245]

"A concise, readable appreciation of the fundamental ideals and objectives of Anglo-Saxon democratic traditions and processes, by a reader in economic history at Oxford." Foreign Affairs

Reviewed by H. M. Kallen
Ann Am Acad 221:195 My '42 360w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:568 Ap '42 20w

Reviewed by H. J. Laski
New Statesman & Nation 23:29 Ja 10 '42 600w

"This little book has an unfortunate title. For Mr. Lennard, the foundations of democracy are not threatened where they have been well and truly laid and they have been well and truly laid in England. Democracy is a way of life and action, not a mere piece of political machinery, and this is an able, critical and acute statement of the case for historical evolution, for freedom slowly broadening down and all the rest of it. A book of this kind could be unendurably complacent, but Mr. Lennard's is not. . . What Europe can learn from us is that great adjustments can be carried out pretty quickly, without a dramatic and dangerous surgical operation. We don't throw out the baby with the bath water, but we do throw out the bath water. Mr. Lennard's readers might be pardoned for thinking that we only add a pint or two of tepid clean water with every new bath. But this is the only blemish in an admirable little tract."

+ — Spec 168:68 Ja 16 '42 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p638 D 20 '41
360w

LENNON, THOMAS. Truth about Ann. 132p $2 Day

$12 Shakespeare, Mrs Anne (Hathaway)—Drama. Shakespeare in fiction, drama, poetry, etc. 42-18035

Play based on the life of Shakespeare's wife, Ann. In his portrayal of her character the author makes Ann Shakespeare a strong understanding woman; Will Shakespeare a tolerant and forgiving husband; and their son, who died in childhood, a genius.

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p19 O 11 '42 150w

"The text veers between a pseudo-Shakespearean imagery, and contemporary breeziness, which, together with the general tone of the play, is just the thing for breathless amateurs." C. W. Durgin

Boston Globe p19 Ag 10 '42 130w

LENSKI, LOIS (MRS ARTHUR COVEY). Animals for me. unnp il 75c Oxford

42-16501

Jingles and colored pictures describing animals familiar to country children. For the youngest readers.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p9 D 14 '41 50w

"Miss Lenski has her special talent and her followers. A very simple thing, this time, with all the simple animals: cat, dog, cow, chicken, turkey, rabbit, frog, toad, etc. Simple drawings and text, too, for any child who knows animals." H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 40w

Wis Lib Bul 38:33 F '42

LENSKI, LOIS (MRS ARTHUR COVEY). Little farm. [48p] il 75c Oxford

(W) 42-17223

Picture-story book about Mr Small, hero of The Little Train (Book Review Digest, 1940). Mr Small has become a farmer, and his work with his animals, his tractor, and his farm activities are pictured for grades two to three.

Booklist 39:17 S '42

Churchman 156:15 N 15 '42 10w

"Good factual material in its most elementary form. Physical make-up similar to that of other books in series. For children four to eight." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 67:796 S 15 '42 70w

"Miss Lenski's pictures have clarity and restfulness, plenty of detail without confusion and she draws them with a gentle humor and understanding of children. For boys and girls from 4 to 8." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 S 13 '42 180w

Wis Lib Bul 38:139 O '42

LENT, D. GENEVA. Needle point as a hobby. 180p il $3 Harper

42-13832

Combines history and legendary lore with practical instruction in the art of needlepoint. Index.

Booklist 38:365 Je 1 '42

Bookmark 3:9 My '42

Books p15 Ap 19 '42 130w

"The book would tie in nicely with a study of period furniture. I recommend it for craft and homemaking teachers, students, and homemakers. The material is excellent and up to date but could have been better organized for reference purposes." D. W. Erway

+ J Home Econ 34:682 N '42 80w

Wis Lib Bul 38:84 My '42

LENT, HENRY BOLLES. Air patrol; Jim Brewster flies for the U.S. Coast guard; il. with official U.S. Coast guard photographs. 171p $2 Macmillan

(W) 42-22864

Life in the U.S. Coast guard, set forth in a story of the career of James Brewster from the day he joins up as an ensign in the air patrol to the day he is decorated with the Distinguished flying cross.

Booklist 39:74 N 1 '42

"Though fictional in form, the information is authentic." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 19 '42
90w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 37:118 N 20 '42 20w

"Many fine pictures, from the files of the Coast Guard and from exposures on an actual patrol flight, accompany the text." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:435 N '42 70w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:894 O 15 '42 20w

Reviewed by M. B. Snow

Library J 67:958 N 1 '42 70w

"It is the sort of reading boys lope through, and the photographs illustrating it are excellent." F. P. Graham

+ N Y Times p24 N 15 '42 40w

Wis Lib Bul 38:189 D '42

LENT, HENRY BOLLES. Aviation cadet; Dick Hilton wins his wings at Pensacola; il. with official U.S. navy photographs. 176p $1.75 Macmillan

629.13 Aeronautics, Military (W) 42-509

"Following Dick Hilton's decision to learn to fly for the navy came a month's preliminary training at Floyd Bennett field and further intensive training and study at the Naval air station at Pensacola before he received his wings. Accurate, fascinating information in an interesting story illustrated with official U.S. navy photographs. Grade 6 and up." Booklist

Booklist 38:211 F 15 '42

Reviewed by Maude Adams

Library J 67:87 Ja 15 '42 60w

"The author went straight to headquarters for his material, and he managed to make the hero a thoroughly credible and natural youngster. . . The formula of Horatio Alger is apparently immortal, but air-minded boys will swallow the moral pill easily when it is as successfully coated as it is in Henry Lent's book."

+ Springf'd Republican p7c Ja 4 '42 130w

Wis Lib Bul 38:100 Je '42

LEON, MAURICE. How many world wars? the warning of Foch. 164p $2 Dodd

940.314 European war, 1914-1918—Peace. Wilson, Woodrow. Foch, Ferdinand

42-19290

In 1919 Marshal Foch proposed that the Allies institute a permanent military control over the Rhine bridgeheads. It is the author's thesis that Woodrow Wilson, and later Harding and Borah, by disregarding and nullifying this plan, are jointly responsible for paving the way for the rearmament of Germany, the coming of Hitler, and the Second World war.

"The book makes no pretense to systematic argument and tells only a few trivia of inside history not already on the record. The author writes vigorously in praise or blame of those who supported and opposed such a policy, respectively. He has hearty words for Foch, Theodore Roosevelt, Ambassador Page. He hurls his arrows at Woodrow Wilson, Bernard Baruch, Senator Borah and Herbert Hoover. He believes that Wilson really made 'peace without victory,' and that is why his peace did not last." Hiram Motherwell

Books p18 S 13 '42 250w

"Mr. Léon is not convincing. He is accurate in his statements, fantastic in some of his innuendoes, and surely incomplete. No one can hold that the necessities of foreign relations, important as these are, are the only determinants in American life. He takes no account of personal, party, or other pressures as directives for public men. He is essentially French in his judgment of Americans. His criticism of American neutral action is made upon a Continental basis. We in the United States have developed the concept of neutrality in our own way and have made a distinct contribution to international relations thereby. Wilson lived in this tradition which Mr. Léon does not understand. Harding and Hoover also lived in American traditions and should not be judged by foreign standards." W. H. Cooke

Current Hist 3:167 O '42 1100w

LEONARD, CHARLES L., pseud. See Heberlein, M. V.

LEONARD, EDITH M.; MILES, LILLIAN E., and VAN DER KAR, CATHERINE S. Child at home and school. 850p il $3.60 Am. bk.

136.7 Child study. Education of children 42-15413

A book for mothers, and pre-school and primary grade teachers, which discusses the physical, mental, social, aesthetic and emotional traits of the young child. The book is in two parts: one, The child himself; and two, The child in school. Index.

"Two criticisms of the book might be offered. (1) The authors have covered so many topics, especially in Part I, that the sketchy discussion of each topic may confuse a person unfamiliar with the field. . . (2) The authors use very few quotations or footnotes to indicate the sources of the scientific materials to which they refer." F. A. Beu

El School J 43:54 S '42 600w

Reviewed by Katharine Roy

J Home Econ 34:742 D '42 150w

LEONARD, JOHN PAUL, and EURICH, ALVIN CHRISTIAN, eds. Evaluation of modern education; with coöperation of Reginald C. Bell [and others] a report sponsored by the Society for curriculum study. 299p il $2.50 Appleton-Century

370 Education 42-11689

"Includes a discussion of the nature and objectives of modern education; a critical summary of studies that have attempted to appraise educational practices; an evaluation of existing studies in the light of current criticisms with their implications, and suggestions for future study." (School & Society) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

Christian Century 59:563 Ap 29 '42 50w

School & Society 55:428 Ap 11 '42 40w

LEONARD, JONATHAN NORTON. Enjoyment of science. 327p $2.50 Doubleday

500 Science (W) 42-36094

Introduction to the sciences for the layman. Each branch of science has an introductory chapter, containing enough analysis to assure the reader of his probable enjoyment of further reading on the subject, and a bibliography composed of both popular books and serious studies. Partial contents: biology, anthropology, microbiology, ecology, rocks and minerals, astronomy, chemistry, physics, mathematics. Index.

Booklist 38:245 Mr 15 '42

Bookmark 3:6 My '42

"This is a well written book, remarkable in content and notable for the authentic enthusiasm that is the essence of the amateur spirit." H. M. Parsley

+ Books p15 Mr 22 '42 450w

Reviewed by Otto Zausmer

Boston Globe p19 My 27 '42 40w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '42

"An excellent book for laymen." J. B. Fogg
+ Library J 67:129 F 1 '42 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:44 J1 '42

"The author's aims are to give you pointers, sketch methods of home study, offer encouragement, map the field, supply bibliographical hints—that sort of thing. He succeeds admirably and I commend his book to all hobbyists who feel an urge to get beyond pastimes like philately into something offering a little more resistance to the teeth of one's mind." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:67 F 21 '42 180w

"Any reviewer or editor could criticize Mr. Leonard's judgment and his critical standards but his book remains a very interesting and adequate guide to intelligent reading in science." Gerald Wendt

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:18 Ag 15 '42 550w

"The book is replete with sound advice on the types of books to be read and how to read them. In some instances specific volumes are highly recommended in the text, and at the end of each chapter occurs a long list of titles, each with a terse sentence of description."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:3 Mr '42 360w

LEONARD, ROYAL. I flew for China; Chiang Kai-shek's personal pilot. 295p il $2.50 Doubleday

951 Chinese-Japanese war, 1931-. Chiang Kai-shek. Aeronautics, Military (W) 42-36351

An account of the author's six exciting years, 1935-41, flying for the Republic of China and of his experiences as personal pilot for Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Booklist 39:99 N 15 '42

"Good story of his personal adventures. . . I strongly recommend that any one who proposes to read 'The Flying Tigers' [by Russell Whelan] should hold his appetite for aerial fireworks in check long enough to read 'I Flew for China' as a preface to it." Rodney Gilbert

+ Books p2 N 8 '42 500w

Boston Globe p19 O 28 '42 140w

"Captain Leonard, now thirty-seven, writes casually a journal of chance, but records in it a deep feeling for the destiny of China. His report to General MacArthur on aerial warfare adds substance. Recommended." Catherine Van Dyne

+ Library J 67:844 O 1 '42 90w

Reviewed by E. F. Allen

N Y Times p2 N 1 '42 600w

LEONHARDT, HANS LEO. Nazi conquest of Danzig. 363p $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press

943.12 Danzig. World war, 1939—Danzig

42-18651

"For the first time in 1930, under the impact of the economic world-crisis, Nazi votes increased to proportions which made public opinion [in Danzig] aware of their existence' (p.42). In 1939 L'Europe Nouvelle reported that 'the nazification of the Free City and the cruel extermination of the parties of the opposition and of the Jews had been completely achieved' (p. 332). Dr. Leonhardt reports the details of the nine-year process, the beginning and end of which are indicated in these two quotations. He had at his disposal information acquired through personal participation as a member of the opposition party in Danzig during the process and through exhaustive review of the documents available to him after coming to the United States." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Reinhard Bendix

Am J Soc 48:527 Ja '43 950w

Reviewed by Heinz Guradze

Am Pol Sci R 36:996 O '42 370w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Atlantic 170:144 O '42 180w

Booklist 39:46 O 15 '42

Christian Science Monitor p18 S 17 '42 450w

Reviewed by Thelma Brackett

Library J 67:680 Ag '42 100w

"This remarkable book by a member of the Danzig opposition, who has been living in the United States since 1938, gives a detailed account of the betrayal of Danzig by the forces of order." A. J. P. Taylor

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 14 '42 280w

"The example of Danzig stands as a great indictment of reconstruction without understanding. Everyone concerned with the next peace conference should read this book."

+ Nation 156:68 Ja 9 '43 180w

"The present important work is based not only on documents but on personal experience."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p482 O 3 '42 800w

LEONTIEF, WASSILY W. Structure of American economy, 1919-1929; an empirical application of equilibrium analysis. 181p il $2.50 Harvard univ. press

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—Industries and resources. Prices. U.S.—Statistics A41-1805

"Professor Leontief has undertaken not less than the description of the American economy in 1919 and 1929 in terms of a neoclassical equation system. Hitherto we have possessed only a qualitative notion of the equations necessary to determine some kind of economic equilibrium (demand equations, cost equations, etc.). All quantitative determination has been of the partial equilibrium type, for example, evaluating demand elasticity of a particular good, other things being equal; Professor Leontief himself has made important contributions in this field, which he is now inclined to look down upon. The aims of his present book are much wider, to give quantitative determination to the equation system of general equilibrium theory. The statistical material consists of the input and output figures for the different industries." Am Econ R

Reviewed by H. P. Neisser

Am Econ R 31:608 S '41 1150w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:380 Ja '42 10w

LERMAN, LEO. Michelangelo; a renaissance profile; with il. by Richard F. Hunter and with photographs. 451p $3 Knopf

B or 92 Michelangelo Buonarroti

(W) 42-22486

A full length, popularly written biography designed for the adolescent as well as for the adult reader. By the author of Leonardo da Vinci (Book Review Digest, 1940). Index.

"Mr. Lerman resorts at times to the so-called fictional method neither to bridge gaps in his information, which is solid and thorough, nor to psychiatrize his subject beyond what it is possible to know, but simply to enliven occasional aspects of the truth for readers of high school age. Here, as in his Leonardo da Vinci, the author thoroughly respects these readers. . . One result is a book ostensibly for the young for which a great many of their non-specialist elders will be grateful. Another result is a perception in the reader that a good many latter-day biographies ostensibly for adults would have been immeasurably better for everybody if they had been deliberately written to beguile and reward the young." Wilson Follett

+ Atlantic 170:174 D '42 270w

Booklist 39:183 Ja 1 '43

"Young people are honored and trusted when a biography of this caliber is written for them. No other popular life of Michelangelo has given more sensitive treatment to the life and work of a creative genius, nor evoked a more convincing vision of the period of which he was part. Frankly, few of his adult biographies are so interesting as this." M. L. Becker

+ Books p18 N 15 '42 300w

LERMAN, LEO—Continued

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 18:433 N '42 70w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Library J 67:896 O 15 '42 10w

"Lerman's canvas is broad as Michelangelo's, and popes, princes, and prelates pass before our eyes, as well as the great in art and literature. Generously and authentically illustrated by Richard F. Hunter. Chronology of world events of period. Excellent index. Recommended highly for senior high school and adult reader." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 67:958 N 1 '42 110w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p11 Ja 24 '43 410w

"The author says it is written for 'young adults,' in which term he includes mature high-school students. For those who are up to it, it can be recommended as a stimulating book about a personality of heroic proportions whose life span covered perhaps the most creative and enterprising years in the world's history. Excellent illustrations." K. S. W.

+ New Yorker 18:114 D 12 '42 90w

LESCAZE, WILLIAM HOWARD. On being an architect. 287p $3 Putnam

720 Architecture. Architecture as a profession (W) 42-13892

Considers architecture as a profession and its relation to modern life. The chapters are grouped in three divisions: to the layman; to the student; and to fellow architects. "Illustrating his book mainly by photographs of the buildings he did himself, Mr. Lescaze addresses the student and his fellow-architect with much valuable advice taken from his own experience, and discussions of the architect's role today. Every practising architect will find analogies to his own daily problems,—how to get a job, how to deal with clients, how to find the right balance between sometimes contradictory practical requests, etc." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 38:382 Je 15 '42

"To Mr. Lescaze's great credit he has succeeded in making clear the social and esthetic importance of architecture in our contemporary life and he has done so with such a careful selection of data, such breadth of view and such crisp and persuasive argument (here is an architect as articulate in words as he is in structural design) that what he says deserves a wide reading." W. R. Agard

+ Books p8 Jl 12 '42 800w

Reviewed by A. L. Kocher
New Repub 107:237 Ag 24 '42 550w

Reviewed by R. W. Sherman
N Y Times p31 Ja 24 '43 800w
Pratt p4 O '42

"Mr. Lescaze's volume makes good reading. It is exceedingly informal, but this quality will probably stimulate the layman to give some thought to the subject of architecture more than would scholarly books on theories." Paul Zucker

+ Sat R of Lit 25:10 Je 20 '42 400w

LESLIE, MRS DORIS (OPPENHEIM). House in the dust. 374p $2.50 Macmillan [9s 6d Hutchinson]

(W) 42-5126

An old lady stands before a bombed London house in September, 1940, and recalls the days of her youth when this ruin had been her home. Memories of her lonely childhood, of her happiness in the household next door, her presentation to Queen Victoria, her reluctant engagement to a young snob, the broken engagement and her elopement with a charming Irishman who turned out to be a dipsomaniac, his death, and a glimpse of a later happier life, all pass in review.

Booklist 38:251 Mr 15 '42

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p21 Ap 5 '42 450w
Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '42

"Well-written, readable novel of Victorian London, with carefully sketched period background. . . Recommended." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 67:268 Mr 15 '42 70w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 25 '42 80w

"Miss Leslie has made the middle and later decades of the nineteenth century so completely her own that she has come at length to move within them with the ease of a Victorian; but a Victorian looking into a past seen in undivorced relation to what preceded it and what has followed it. As a consequence 'House in the Dust' is entirely lacking in period consciousness. What is shown is life in continuity." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 15 '42 750w

"A very clumsy method, to be sure, of telling a rather familiar Victorian tale. . . Prettily done, however."

+ New Yorker 18:79 Mr 14 '42 50w

"The sharpness and unconventionality of Jennifer herself emerge with refreshing vigor, especially in her disdain for the accepted methods of getting a husband. Illusion is lost, however, in the narrative method itself, where the use of the first person creates in the reader an uneasy feeling of remoteness from the center of the story—as if he were watching someone listening to a tale. The narrator conveys the impression that she is reminiscing more for her own sake than for yours. But maybe that is really a subtle way of establishing Jennifer's personality." Bess Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 25:13 Mr 21 '42 400w

"It is a well-written story, tense and graphic, with characters who, if something too much in the Victorian novelist tradition, are reasonably creditable. Jennifer herself, however, is admirably realized and expressed, a rebel against the conventions of her period. The setting is adequate, the idea of the eighties gathered by one who could not have known them by personal experience. But there are some anachronisms, such as the mention of Svengali by one of the characters, although du Maurier's 'Trilby' was not published until 1894."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p125 Mr 14 '42 300w

LETTER to my son by a soldier's mother. 32p 50c Dutton [9d Hodder]

316 Conduct of life 42-13557

"An American mother who brought up her son to hate war found him joining up when this war came, because 'it's nobody's duty to fight for me or anybody else who isn't willing to pay for their peace and safety with risk and sacrifice.' Her letter to him offers advice to one soldier, but looks over his shoulder toward other mothers with letters to write to sons whose mail will be forwarded 'destination unknown.'" Books

"The little book, evidently taking its lead from 'An Airman's Letter to His Mother,' loses in comparison with that already classic message because advice from a non-combatant to one on the firing line, however heartfelt, has not the force of advice offered the other way round, but by its strong conviction it gives words to many inarticulate mothers."

Books p14 Mr 15 '42 170w

Christian Century 59:355 Mr 18 '42 70w

LEVEN, DAVID D. Done in oil; photography by Richard Yarnell Ritchie. 1084p maps $10 Ranger press, 347 5th av, N.Y.

338.2 Petroleum industry and trade 41-8089

"A monumental work on the petroleum industry, including numerous illustrations, maps, and charts. The subjects covered include the financing of the industry, oil royalties, transportation and marketing, prospecting and refining of the oil, and all the other major subjects of interest to both the student and the practical man. There is a glossary of more than 140 pages; sample lease forms are appended and there are limited tables of statistics, and also a selected list of the more important periodicals of interest to the industry." (N Y New Tech Bks) Glossary. Bibliography. Index.

"Almost two-thirds of the volume has been devoted to what might be regarded as a glorified, documented and interpreted edition of A.P.I.'s famous 'Petroleum Facts and Figures.' But the author has done something more than put flesh and blood on that statistical skeleton. He has made it an intensely interesting, readable life story of Old King Crude and all his descendants." S. D. Kirkpatrick

+ Chem & Met Eng 48:148 Ag '41 550w
N Y New Tech Bks 26:60 O '41

LEVIN, HARRY. James Joyce; a critical introduction. (Makers of modern literature) 240p $1.50 New directions

823 Joyce, James 42-6211

Critical study of the life and writings of James Joyce, by a teacher of English at Harvard. The book is one of a proposed series of "critical Baedekers" to great modern writers from Melville and Ibsen to Eliot and Mann. Bibliography. Index.

"One can only indicate briefly a few of the many things in Mr. Levin's book that one would wish to dwell on: his account of Joyce's literary origins and the struggle to fuse together in his work the double heritage of naturalism and symbolism; his comparisons of Joyce and Proust; his analysis and expositions of the substance of Joyce's writings. Mr. Levin has made full use of the insights of his fore-runners in Joyce's criticism such as Edmund Wilson, but his points are freshly conceived and freshly put. His book is the best general stock-taking we have of Joyce as a literary artist." H. N. Doughty, Jr.

+ Books p14 Mr 22 '42 950w

Reviewed by Earle Birney
Canadian Forum 21:379 Mr '42 430w

"The critical and sensitive qualities of Mr. Levin's book are of an exceptional kind and these may finally establish it as a definitive analysis of Joyce's work. His perception of the part religion played both as positive and negative factors, in the development of this writer, is intuitive and logical. It is, necessarily, an outside view and this must, to some extent, externalize his conception. While this is not an aspect that obtrudes in the book it is reasonable to assume that a critic whose background made it possible for him to associate himself mentally with Joyce, in his journey away from his spiritual center, might have contributed matter of more spiritual significance. This however would be conditioned on such a writer also possessing the critical scholarship and taste that is Mr. Levin's equipment." Barry Byrne

+ Commonweal 36:91 My 15 '42 400w

"Apart from the fact that this autopsy omits to take the heart out of the corpse of Joyce, it is at once scrupulous, intelligent, and expertly surgical. Mr. Levin deserves all the applause that I am sure his study will receive. Well, almost all. That he has, as I happen to feel, missed the mill where the gist of Joyce is ground down to a kind of anathematical eucharist, is not, finally, as important as the possibility that a gifted critic has at last appeared on the landscape." George Barker

+ Nation 154:236 F 21 '42 850w

"A book on Joyce that is not a bare physiognomic map, but a rich, allusive and civilized guide through Joyce's technology, a first-rate study in literary history, an essay full of marginal richness as both literary and social criticism." Max Lerner

+ New Repub 107:386 S 28 '42 950w

"The best critical appraisal of the man I have come across in English, serious, unfaddy, and written in broad perspective. It even manages to explain 'Finnegans Wake' (well, more or less) without being toplofty or pedantic. The little book marks, quite possibly, the arrival of a young critic of genuine stature." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:58 Ja 10 '42 90w

Pratt p18 O '42

"Mr. Levin makes more than one statement that is contradicted by its opposite elsewhere in the text. . . Mr. Levin's study is everywhere provocative, and as such most welcome. His opinions are thoroughly informed, and his scholarship is lively. In a sense his is the first all-round appraisal; the others have been biographical, or else limited to one work or another. Let it open the floodgates. We shall need to write and read a great deal more about Joyce before we see him clearly." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 25:13 Ja 24 '42 750w

Time 39:79 Ja 19 '42 450w

LEVY, HARRY. Burro that learned to dance; with ill. by Howard Simon. [47p] $1.25 Knopf 42-8146

Rocinante was a sad little burro belonging to a good-natured Peruvian peasant. On a Sunday in town when there was a fiesta and music Rocinante suddenly began to keep time with her feet. After that her sadness could not last. Picture story book for six-year-olds.

"The author, whose work with a moving-picture concern has kept him long enough in Peru to get the feel of the country, tells the little story for six-year-olds with unforced affection, and the drawings have genuine humor. Rocinante's very ears take part in her change of mind, and the scenes from village life—the book is illustrated in color—have festal feeling."

+ Books p17 My 10 '42 330w

"Unfortunately, frequent use of Spanish words will make story a little difficult for some children to read by themselves. Gay drawings by Howard Simon add atmosphere." E. T. Dobbins
Library J 67:476 My 15 '42 90w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:882 O 15 '42 30w

"The drawings by Howard Simon have a fine humor and an engaging liveliness. They show the peasant types found in the Andes and suggest the sweep of the mountain country; while boys and girls will find Rocinante, in her sad and in her gay moods, an endearing little animal. For children from 6 to 9. Although a few Spanish words are used, the simple style, short sentences and clear type will make this an inviting book for beginners in reading." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 My 31 '42 450w

New Yorker 18:72 My 23 '42 60w

W's Lib Bul 38:141 O '42

LEVY, ROGER. French interests and policies in the Far East. 2 pts in 1 209p map $2 Inst. of Pacific relations. Am council [10s Allen, G]

327.44 France—Relations (general) with East (Far East). France—Colonies. Indo-China, French 41-23698

"Part I, A Century of French Far Eastern Affairs, by Roger Levy, with a supplement by Guy Lacam: The economic relations of Indo-China with southern China: Part II, French Indo-China in transition, by Andrew Roth." (Subtitle) Index.

"The author has used great industry and entire frankness in drawing upon what sources were available for such recent events in a region about which it has always been hard to get information. Especially considering the difficulties and the nearness of the events, this is an amazingly factual and calm recitation of one of the least credible dramas in modern history." M. M. Knight

+ Am Econ R 32:144 Mr '42 550w

Reviewed by J. F. Cady

Am Hist R 48:117 O '42 290w

"It is perhaps unfortunate that only an 'abridged' version of M. Lacam's report is printed, with no indication as to the nature or extent of the omissions. This abbreviated essay, however, is notable as the interpretation of an able French financier and imperialist... The third study... brings the story down to March [1941] and the signing of the Franco-Thailand treaty. The study is one of the most effective contemporary accounts in the present I. P. R. series." P. H. Clyde

LEVY, ROGER—Continued

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:178 F '42 180w

Reviewed by L. A. Mills

Ann Am Acad 221:201 My '42 340w

"Part II is necessarily the most topical section of the book. In many ways, indeed, it is the most valuable, written as it is by an observer who has no national predilection for the area under discussion. Its relating of the specific problem of Indo-China to world political events as a whole forms a fitting conclusion to the more narrowly historical background of Part I and its Supplement; it is one which helps to explain the dilemma, both economic and military, in which France's Far Eastern colonies found themselves as a result of the collapse of French resistance in the West." Vera Dodds

+ Pacific Affairs 14:491 D '41 650w

LEWIS, MRS ELIZABETH (FOREMAN). When the typhoon blows; il. by Kurt Wiese. 273p $2 Winston

(W) 42-24104

Story of a Chinese boy's bravery when the war struck his home, leaving his aged grandfather, his only relative, in a state of shock. The boy's struggle for existence typifies Chinese courage. For grades seven to nine.

Booklist 39:144 D 15 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p26 N 15 '42 450w

Horn Bk 19:37 Ja '43 120w

"Worth-while story, written with zest and sympathy." J. E. Wooster

+ Library J 67:1107 D 15 '42 70w

LEWIS, GEORGE ELMER. Indiana company, 1763-1798. (Old Northwest hist. ser. 4) ltd ed 355p il maps $6 Clark, A.H.

975.4 Indiana grant. Walpole grant 41-22544

"The 'Indiana' under consideration in this 'study in eighteenth century frontier land speculation' was a tract of three and one-half million acres in what is now West Virginia. The Indians of the Six Nations were induced to make this grant, in 1763, to a company organized by traders in the Indian country who had suffered heavily in the uprising of 1763, known as Pontiac's conspiracy. The next problem was to get this grant ratified by the British government. Agents in London, including Benjamin Franklin, carried on a steady but ineffectual campaign to this end. American independence transferred the argument to our shores, and it became a large item in the thorny problem of 'western lands' with which Congress had to deal and which came near to wrecking the frail confederation." Christian Century

Reviewed by B. W. Bond, Jr.

Am Hist R 48:348 Ja '43 420w

"Dr. Lewis has competently explored and clearly mapped an area of American history which has not previously been so thoroughly studied."

+ Christian Century 59:153 F 4 '42 290w

"In a time when there is so much loose generalization masquerading as history, it is a pleasure to read so careful, conscientious, and well-documented a study as this. Under Dr. Lewis's cool, objective relation of facts simmers the play of greed, interest, and rivalry. His detailed recital of this story throws new light on both the promoters and their time. Only at the end does his objectivity break down." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 4 '42 550w

LEWIS, JANET (MRS YVOR WINTERS). Wife of Martin Guerre; decorations by Valenti Angelo. 152p $2.50; ltd autog hand col ed $5 Colt

Guerre, Mme Bertrande (de Rois)—Fiction 42-36038

"A tale of the sixteenth century in Languedoc, based upon old court records... The story has to do with a woman who, abandoned by her husband for some years, is for a time convinced by an impostor that he is her returned spouse." New Yorker

Booklist 38:209 F 15 '42

"If we could be as sensitive to beauty this year as we were in 1927, this would have the reception then accorded to 'The Bridge of San Luis Rey.' It has the same pellucid—and deceptive—simplicity." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 F 22 '42 400w

New Yorker 17:60 D 27 '41 60w

LEWIS, LANGE. Murder among friends. 282p $2 Bobbs

42-19134

Detective story.

"Miss Lange Lewis brings a new and honest-to-goodness talent to a field that can use it nicely. Her 'Murder Among Friends' is highly recommended on the grounds of graceful writing, human characters and worthy plot, all scarce as hen's teeth in the criminous trade if you come right down to it. It's a surprise package that will keep you wide-eyed." Will Cuppy

+ Books p12 Ag 16 '42 200w

"Good August reading."

+ Boston Globe p17 Ag 5 '42 20w

"The author presents a most convincing picture of the medical school and the persons connected with it, and her solution is in keeping with the characters of those persons as she has so expertly drawn them. This appears to be Lange Lewis's first book. Let us have more." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p15 Ag 9 '42 220w

"Blood-chilling atmosphere of opening chapters followed by interesting if confused, man-hunt with an unusual conclusion. Out-of-the-ordinary."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 Ag 8 '42 40w

LEWIS, LLOYD. John S. Wright; prophet of the prairies. 215p il $2.50 Prairie farmer pub. co, 1230 Washington blvd, Chicago

B or 92 Wright, John Stephen 42-3739

A sympathetic biography of an early citizen and ardent booster of Chicago, the founder and editor of the Prairie Farmer which celebrated its centennial last year.

Booklist 38:273 Ap 1 '42

"It is fitting that Lloyd Lewis should have written this book. For John S. Wright is a fabulous name to compassionate Illinois historians, such as Carl Sandburg, Mabel McIlvaine and Edgar Lee Masters, and to such writers of Chicago fiction as Edna Ferber and Mary Hastings Bradley. None of them has been so consistent a barker, press agent and affectionate deliver into the history of Chicago and its makers as Lloyd Lewis. His is the ideal curiosity, the unborn reporter's inquisitiveness that sends him to sources, most of which are in the neighborhood for the asking, and may be exhumed by a person who has both curiosity and patience." F. P. Adams

+ Books p2 F 8 '42 1250w

LEWIS, MRS MARY CHRISTIANNA (MILNE) (CHRISTIANNA BRAND, pseud). Heads you lose. 248p $2 Dodd

(W) 42-7949

Detective story.

Booklist 38:310 Ap 15 '42

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p10 Mr 15 '42 150w

Reviewed by E. R. Punshon

Manchester Guardian p3 My 27 '42 40w

"This is a good puzzle, with a sugary sweetness about it that becomes a trifle cloying. Even the detective leans a bit toward the sweet side." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 15 '42 220w

"Some scary bits in this one."

New Yorker 13:80 Mr 14 '42 20w

"Worthwhile."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:19 Mr 14 '42 40w

Reviewed by John Fairfield

Spec 168:404 Ap 24 '42 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p201 Ap 18 '42 70w

LEWIS, OSCAR. I remember Christine. 266p $2.50 Knopf

42-5127

Looking over the biography of a San Francisco millionaire of pioneer days the author decides to fill out the story with omitted details. He writes of his own memories of James Horton, of the wife who left him, of his proper son, his tolerant daughter, and finally of the daughter's best friend, Christine, who became Jim Horton's mistress. The time is from the 1850's to the present.

"This is not Mr. Lewis's most 'important' book, but nowhere else has he written with greater ease or with a more incisive irony. His novel,—if it can be called such,—although apparently formless and discursive, has the sure line and the sensitive shades of a good etching, and far more humor than one generally finds in etchings. As for Christine, she will be the favorite character of 1942 for many readers. This reviewer backs her against the field for the balance of the year." R. E. Danielson

+ Atlantic J1 '42 200w

Booklist 38:331 My 1 '42

"There emerges from the book, first, a quietly done, deftly painted portrait of a city in what was probably its most romantic period. . . . But there is no way, in a review, to convey accurately the delicate flavor either of Christine herself or of Mr. Lewis's shrewdly satirical story of her and her city. 'I Remember Christine' is a novel to be read slowly and savored quietly for its uncannily sensitive estimate of both a person and a place. And Mr. Lewis is a novelist to watch, now that he has made the move into fiction." J. H. Jackson

+ Books p6 Ap 26 '42 1250w

"Well written and thoroughly engrossing." Lena Ruppert

+ Library J 67:319 Ap 1 '42 90w

"The writing of I Remember Christine is unapproached for lucidity by any novel I have read this year. . . . This is a tip-top performance." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 13 '42 140w

"There is not enough bite to make the book important, but the smooth blend of irony and superficial shrewdness about people sends it near the head of the season's lightweight class."

+ Nation 154:525 My 2 '42 100w

"'I Remember Christine' is economical in style, swiftly paced, and gorgeously ironic. It scores, perhaps, less by what it says than by what it pointedly leaves unsaid. . . . It is as real and vigorous and entertaining as it could possibly be." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 19 '42 750w

"Preeminently the novel has readability—that curious quality of luring a reader on from sentence to sentence, lacking which even the most noble works of literature can become boring. He who begins 'I Remember Christine' will not easily put it down unfinished." G. R. Stewart

+ Sat R of Lit 25:8 Ap 18 '42 550w

Reviewed by John Hampson

Spec 169:440 N 6 '42 260w

Times [London] Lit Sup p509 O 17 '42 420w

LEWIS, WARREN KENDALL; SQUIRES, LOMBARD, and BROUGHTON, GEOFFREY. Industrial chemistry of colloidal and amorphous materials. 540p il $5.50 Macmillan

660 Colloids. Chemistry, Technical 42-5003

"A comprehensive text based on twenty-five years of teaching at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Covers the structure of liquids; viscosity; surface tension; surface tension and orientation; adsorption; suspensions; amorphous solids; emulsoids; the electrochemical behavior of colloids; gelation; emulsions and foams; crystalline and amorphous states; thermoplastics; plasticization by solution; paper; the plastic fibers; leather; rubber; ceramic industries; synthetic resins and plastics; and textile fibers." (N Y New Tech Bks) Indexes.

"The material is well-written, and is presented in a straightforward manner which will be readily comprehended by the student."

+ Chem & Met Eng 49:173 Ag '42 200w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:22 Ap '42

LEWISOHN, LUDWIG. Renegade. 333p $2.50 Dial press

(W) 42-6285

The France of DuBarry, Voltaire, and Louis XIV is the background for this story of a wealthy Jew who deserted his people because he fell in love with a titled French woman. His wealth enabled him to buy a title, and for a time he was happy in his new life and love. Then misfortune struck and he discovered that denying one's race involves more than a change of name.

Booklist 38:331 My 1 '42

"Mr. Lewisoohn's mind seeks out every nook and cranny, every subtle variation of the problem faced by the Jew in an alien world. I forget of which writer it was once said that his strength lay in his digressions. That apt phrase might be appropriated to describe the impression made by 'Renegade.' . . . There are a number of memorable characters in this book, and the turns of the story have that element of surprise which every story must have to be good." Milton Hindus

+ Books p8 F 22 '42 600w

"Lewisoohn has very adequately re-created a little known bit of Jewish social history. He has, however, been more successful in depicting an era and an oppressed people than in portraying living characters or telling a story convincingly. For libraries with a large Jewish reading public—not for others." E. P. Potter

Library J 66:463 My 15 '41 50w

"As a period piece, as a romantic novel, or just as writing, this is pretty shoddy and often impossible stuff. Mostly, though, it is a sermon with effective moments: the 'renegade' Jew can never find inner peace."

+ New Repub 106:550 Ap 20 '42 60w

"This is a historical novel in the best tradition, written by one who has mastered the art of story telling." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p7 F 22 '42 950w

LEY, WILLY. Days of creation. 275p il $2.75 Modern age

560 Creation. Evolution. Natural history. Paleontology. Universe (W) 42-4222

Outline of evolution, which the author calls a "sketchy biography of the earth." It is composed of seven chapters, each paralleling one of the seven days of Genesis. At the beginning of each chapter the Biblical quotation is given, and in the ensuing pages the story of creation is expounded. Contents: The first day: "Let there be light;" The second day: Division of the waters; The third day: Conquest of the land; The fourth day: Great new invention; The fifth day: Triumph of the reptiles; The sixth day: Glory of the mammals; The seventh day: Consolidation of brainpower. Index.

Booklist 38:228 Mr 1 '42

LEY, WILLY—Continued

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley
Books p4 Ap 5 '42 350w

Reviewed by E. D. Hart
Library J 66:1093 D 15 '41 80w

"A good up-to-date summary for brushing up; but mainly for the popularized-science reader, to whom the processes of evolution may still be news."

+ New Repub 106:374 Mr 16 '42 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:23 Ap '42

Scientific Bk Club R 13:3 F '42 420w

LEY, WILLY. Shells and shooting. 223p il $2
Viking

623.4 Ordnance. Projectiles (W) 42-22924

Data on the history, construction and use of different types of bullets, shells, grenades, mortars, cannon, rockets, etc. Made up from the author's articles and drawings from PM and other magazines.

Booklist 39:97 N 15 '42

"Shells and Shooting" is not a text book but an entertaining essay with readable text and illustrative diagrams."

+ Books p14 D 13 '42 330w

"The book is worth reading by persons interested in the mechanics and technics of warfare."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 26 '43
270w

LEYBURN, JAMES GRAHAM. Haitian people. 342p $4 Yale univ. press.

972.94 Haiti—History. Haiti—Social conditions 41-27832

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

Reviewed by A. C. Millsbaugh
Am Hist R 47:915 J1 '42 550w

"The bibliography is adequate and highly useful especially to those who are so situated as to make it difficult for them to collect primary and secondary references on Haiti. The tyro, however, should take care in the use of this material else he will be forced, for reasons that cannot be explained here, to accept uncritically a large amount of it. In the opinion of the reviewer the approach in this book is essentially a historical and anthropologic one, and not, as the author states, 'conceived along sociological lines' (p. 305). Nevertheless, it is a valuable substantive contribution to the knowledge of our Caribbean neighbors." Charles Rogler

+ Am Soc R 7:726 O '42 700w

"The Haitian People will make increasingly difficult the publication of books and articles of the belittling type so popular just a few years ago. La leyenda negra is rapidly disappearing from American historiography. This book will hasten its demise. Professor Leyburn richly deserves the Anisfield Prize, which is awarded annually, for the most notable literary contribution to race relations during 1941." R. W. Logan

+ Ann Am Acad 221:216 My '42 750w

Booklist 38:249 Mr 15 '42

Reviewed by W. A. Roberts
Books p15 J1 19 '42 600w

"Mr. Leyburn tells enough of the history to dispel the darkness but his main interest is in a sociological analysis of the present conditions. The caste system is less complicated than that of India but almost as rigid, three million blacks being dominated by a few thousand persons of lighter hue. This broad statement is far too general to be quite accurate. The author fills in the details with great thoroughness. The present political, economic and social problems are discussed with care. Students of linguistics will be interested in the chapter on the Creole language, a derivative of Norman French with almost no African element."

+ Christian Century 59:432 Ap 1 '42 180w

"Dr. Leyburn has supplied the need for such a study in English, and his work will be welcomed by students, though it will not feed that appetite for thrills which a book on Haiti is often expected to satiate. The historical background is given only in outline since the author is writing for persons already acquainted with that history and therefore is careful not to be drawn away from his fundamental interests, which is the social evolution and present state of the Haitian people. He has done his work excellently, basing his conclusions on careful observation and research and refraining from unwarranted theorizing and premature solutions of problems. The conclusions are not particularly encouraging but they are not more pessimistic than persons acquainted with Haiti will be prepared for." Edwin Ryan

+ Commonweal 35:491 Mr 6 '42 550w

"This is easily the best informed and the most comprehensive treatise on Haiti to appear in English." R. G. Woolbert

+ Foreign Affairs 20:786 J1 '42 80w

"The Haitian People' has a greater value than that inherent in a solid history of one society. Its importance as an illumination of the problems of revolution and reform is in no way to be measured by the apparent unimportance of the case. The liberal reader will find himself constantly provoked to fresh and fruitful thought concerning such events as the Mexican and Russian revolutions." Ralph Bates

+ Nation 154:719 Je 20 '42 390w

"One gathers that the author was probably influenced relatively more by his contacts with the élite than with the common people. On the whole, however, he has succeeded remarkably well in producing a sympathetic and balanced sociological picture of the Haitian people." G. B. Johnson

+ Social Forces 21:108 O '42 160w

"The great charm and value of Professor Leyburn's book is that all the points of view, all the facts, have been fairly discussed; and while some of us may criticise the emphasis, we cannot for a moment fail to appreciate the spirit back of the book, the labor that has gone into it, and the inspiration it must give to future scholars." W. E. B. DuBois

+ Yale R n s 32:188 autumn '42 750w

LEYSON, BURR WATKINS. Air raid safety manual; what you must know to protect yourself, your family and your home. 92p il na $1 Dutton

623.38 Civilian defense. Air raids—Protective measures (W) 42-5041

"Elementary handbook of air-raid information, covering home preparations, types of bombs, gas, shelters, training for wardens, and so on." New Yorker

Bookmark 3:8 Mr '42

Reviewed by Emmet Crozier

Books p14 My 24 '42 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:20 Ap '42

New Yorker 17:63 F 7 '42 40w

LEYSON, BURR WATKINS. It works like this. 224p il $2.50 Dutton

600 Technology (W) 42-3576

Explanations of basic principles and diagrams showing the mechanical operation of such modern inventions as: The automobile engine, The airplane, The diesel engine, The steam engine, steam locomotive, turbine, and water wheel, The electric generator, the electric motor, the electric battery, The camera and photography, Communications: the telegraph, telephone, radio, The radio vacuum tube, The airway radio beam, the marine radio beam, the radio compass, Television, Mechanical refrigeration and air conditioning. No index.

Booklist 38:269 Ap 1 '42

Reviewed by Dorothea Dawson

Library J 67:263 Mr 15 '42 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:42 J1 '42

"The drawings help make the work intelligible to those who have a high school background in physics and chemistry. One thing that can be said in favor of this new Leyson work is that the author has not oversimpli-fied his subjects as has unfortunately been the case in recent popular physics books for youth."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 15 '42 170w
Wis Lib Bul 38:43 Mr '42

LEYSON, BURR WATKINS. Wings of defense. 210p il $2.50 Dutton

623.746 Aeronautics, Military (W) 42-4476

A concise, matter-of-fact description of the United States air forces, covering the various types and uses of the airplanes, as well as the training of the men who fly them. One chapter is devoted to paratroops, another to anti-aircraft defenses.

Booklist 38:279 Ap 1 '42

"Captain Burr W. Leyson's 'Wings of Defense' is written with crisp competence. . . The abominable baby talk that is the curse of so much aviation writing is absent. So are political discussions, cheap patriotism, pet ideas concerning air policy. The author sticks to the subject of how the airplane functions as a weapon. . . This book should be of absorbing interest to all newspaper readers, and even more so to men serving with the Army Air Forces, including flying cadets." Wolfgang Langewiesche

+ Books p1 J1 26 '42 250w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Library J 67:894 O 15 '42 10w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:36 J1 '42

L'HOMMEDIEU, MRS DOROTHY KEASBEY. Tinker, the little fox terrier; il. by Marguerite Kirmse. 62p $1.75 Lippincott

(W) 42-21439

The little dog Tinker was altogether too fond of chasing birds, and chipmunks and rabbits, and so when he chased a yellow cat into the woods and got lost himself, none of the others would help him find his way home. The story of how he was finally vindicated and how he finally chased the yellow cat back home again is told in words and pictures in this book for young readers.

Booklist 39:124 D 1 '42

"There is a picture of Tinker or one of his comrades on every page; child owners of fox terriers will love them, but so will any child who loves dogs." M. L. Becker

+ Books p14 N 15 '42 250w

Cath World 156:372 D '42 10w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:884 O 15 '42 10w

"A dog story that 5-to-6-year-olds will enjoy, while dog lovers, young and old, will be charmed by the illustrations." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p38 N 15 '42 200w

School & Society 56:280 S 26 '42 10w

LIDA, Cuckoo; pictures by Rojan; tr. by Lily Duplaix. [32p] $1.25 Harper [2s 6d; lib ed 3s 6d Allen, G]

(W) 42-36190

Picture-story book of the Père Castor series, describing the arrival of the birds in the spring, the cuckoo's trick to deposit her egg in another bird's nest, because she neither builds nests nor hatches her young, and what happened thereafter. Grades one to three.

Booklist 38:334 My 1 '42

"A truly spring book, lovely to look at and telling a good story." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 27 '42 110w

"Rojankovsky's decorative pictures give a glow to the simple story." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:174 My '42 70w

Reviewed by E. W. Turpin

Library J 67:415 My 1 '42 80w

New Yorker 18:77 My 23 '42 60w

Wis Lib Bul 38:139 O '42

LIDE, MRS ALICE (ALISON), and JOHANSEN, MRS MARGARET (ALISON). Mystery of the Mahteb; il. by Avery Johnson. 237p $2.25 Longmans

(W) 42-21564

Mystery story of thirteenth century Ethiopia, in which the youth Amlak, of ancient kingly lineage, seeks the lost symbol of power, the Mahteb. For older boys and girls.

"A very exciting tale. . . The drawings deserve honorable mention."

+ Christian Century 59:1360 N 4 '42 10w

"Unusual story for boys and girls eleven to fifteen, which will answer demand for mystery stories and arouse interest in 'Land of the Burnt Face people.' . . Recommended." J. E. Stromdahl

+ Library J 67:798 S 15 '42 110w

"This is an exciting story of mystery and adventure." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 N 29 '42 220w

LIEBLING, ABBOTT JOSEPH. The telephone booth Indian. 266p $2 Doubleday

920 New York (city)—Biography 42-11062

Collection of articles reprinted from the New Yorker magazine. "Here are Mr. Liebling's mordant Profile of Roy Howard, his hilarious account of the denizens of the Jollity Building (whence comes the title of the book), the life and works of the Brothers Shubert, and seven other lively and knowing excursions into the habits of prize-fighters, checkroom girls, and strange mid-Manhattan folk in general, including Olsen and Johnson." (New Yorker)

"All Liebling fans (and there must be a good many of these) will want to add this gallery of astonishing characters to their shelves. It is amusing, unimportant and at times faintly unpleasant reading—and extremely well done." Stanley Walker

+ Books p11 F 8 '42 800w

New Repub 106:438 Mr 30 '42 50w

Reviewed by S. E. Hyman

New Repub 107:91 J1 20 '42 70w

New Yorker 17:64 F 7 '42 70w

"A. J. Liebling is one of the more proficient of The New Yorker's stylists; this is a collection of ten of his pieces. To read them at one sitting is like using a scalp vibrator for two hours on end. Taken with rest periods between, they are funny, sharp, engaging slices of Manhattan life."

Time 39:75 F 9 '42 650w

LIEFERANT, HENRY, and LIEFERANT, MRS SYLVIA (SALTZBERG). Heavenly harmony. 281p $2 Dial press

42-21518

Love story of a glamorous New York debutante and a youthful but sensationally successful concert violinist. Because Leda wants Mark to conform more nearly to the conventions of her friends, Mark is eventually goaded into action that almost wrecks his career. That it does not wreck both career and love story is due to the understanding of parents and friends.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p20 S 20 '42 200w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p16 Ag 30 '42 120w

LIEFERANT, HENRY, and LIEFERANT, MRS SYLVIA (SALTZBERG). They always come home. 320p $2.50 Dutton

(W) 42-570

Continues the story of the Van Linden family, begun in United They Stand (Book Review Digest, 1940). All the five girls had their problems: Dorothea had married wealth and acquired two spoiled children; Joan feared she had lost the love of her steady-going husband; Peg had to choose between marriage and the teaching profession; Ann, the scientist, followed her scientist husband to South America; and Lucy, the youngest, was in love with a soldier. The older Van Lindens were able to help each one of their children, and each of the younger generation knew that they could always go home to an understanding mother and father.

LIEFERANT, HENRY—Continued

Booklist 38:209 F 15 '42

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p17 F 22 '42 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '42

Spring'd Republican p7e F 8 '42 210w

LIES, EUGENE THEODORE. How you can make democracy work. 131p $1.75 Assn. press 323.35 Social problems. Citizenship. Democracy 42-19486

"The book is designed to make each person see his responsibility toward democracy and to show him how he can fulfill it by taking an active interest in the affairs of his own community. The author outlines a definite course of action and recommends working through organized groups, such as educational, religious, labor, and business groups. He also advocates a federation of these major civic organizations for the most effective work for the common welfare." Booklist

Booklist 39:2 S '42

Christian Century 59:808 Je 24 '42 70w

"The chief value of this book is that it makes the everyday needs of the community come alive and indicates what John Smith and Eva Jones can do about them." H. A. Overstreet

+ Survey G 31:440 O '42 290w

LILLARD, RICHARD GORDON. Desert challenge; an interpretation of Nevada. 397p il $4 Knopf

979.3 Nevada 42-20630

"Useful book on Nevada, its political, economic, and social history from its beginnings to present day. Factual and compact but readable. Mr. Lillard admits the State's less desirable characteristics, defends some of these, and—he likes Nevada." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 39:99 N 15 '42

"In no more than three or four years it has become possible to pick up a new book about the West in a reasonable expectation that it will know what it is talking about. There has arisen a kind of Western literature which is informed, understanding, realistic and authoritative, on the average much better than its predecessors. To this literature Mr. Lillard now adds a first-rate book about the least understood, most consistently misrepresented part of the interior West, the State of Nevada." Bernard De Voto

+ Books p3 S 20 '42 950w

"Recommended." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 67:628 Jl '42 50w

"Perhaps the key to Mr. Lillard's viewpoint can be found in this: Even while he is vigorously slapping down the ears of the State's detractors he is tossing his own barbs at Nevada. If he weren't so annoyed by chance criticism, if he weren't so self-consciously defensive, he would write a much better book. His section on the State's geology proves that beyond doubt. This man can write. But he should see the State as a whole, and he should glory in the material he has to work with. Then he will give us a really heart-warming book." Hal Borland

+ N Y Times p28 S 20 '42 750w

New Yorker 18:67 O 3 '42 40w

LIMBACH, RUSSELL T. American trees; il. by [the author] with an introd. by T. H. Everett. 39p $1 Random house

582 Trees—Juvenile literature. Trees—U.S. (W) 42-19815

Description and drawings of some fifty-five American trees. Detailed drawings of leaves and fruit are given on margins. For grades four to six. Index.

Booklist 39:36 O 1 '42

"The pictures in this book are a triumph of beauty and fidelity: no photograph, even in color, could give the essential features of a tree at the height of its vigor, such as these full-page paintings give. . . Like all the nature books in the series of which this is a distinguished example, this gives a beginner a good start and a desire to go on to more advanced manuals." M. L. Becker

+ Books p24 N 15 '42 100w

"One of the most usable [tree books] yet published for young people. . . As I read this book, I enjoy with satisfaction the excellent workmanship and authenticity but wish it might have dealt with a greater variety of trees, perhaps less well known to average young student but characteristic of given localities. Recommended." A. E. Brown

+ Library J 67:911 O 15 '42 110w

"Mr. Limbach and his publishers have performed a real service to American boys and girls in making available at such a reasonable price a truly beautiful and useful book." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p36 N 15 '42 180w

Wis Lib Bul 38:190 D '42

LIN, YU-T'ANG, ed. Wisdom of China and India. 1104p $3.95 Random house

890.8 Indic literature—Collections. Chinese literature—Collections. Philosophy, Oriental (W) 42-50902

An anthology of excerpts from Eastern classical literature with introductions, notes and chronological tables. Some of the translations have been newly made by the editor.

Booklist 39:197 Ja 15 '43

"This huge volume of translations from Indian and Chinese texts is the fruit of enormous reading and an amount of hard work that staggers the imagination. It is no hastily assembled anthology. Mr. Lin evidently set out to select from the whole range of Indian and Chinese literature, heavy and light, digestible and indigestible, generous samples of all kinds of Indian and Chinese thought, so that the Occidental who has a serious ambition to know what eight hundred million Asiatics think and how they go about the business of thinking can satisfy his curiosity. In addition to this, Mr. Lin has written extremely intelligent introductions to each and all of his selections in which there is abundant internal evidence of the pains he took to do his Asiatic ancients justice." Rodney Gilbert

+ Books p1 Ja 10 '43 2200w

Reviewed by J. P. Ryan

Commonweal 37:403 F 5 '43 1000w

"The Wisdom of China and India' is a truly magnificent book. It abounds in beauty and charm, both in the material selected and in the manner in which it is edited. Here one can enjoy Dr. Lin Yutang's enchanting style of writing and his poetic conception of life, already so exquisitely expressed in his 'The Importance of Living' and other books. The variety and scope of this anthology surpass those of similar collections." Wing-tsit Chan

+ N Y Times p2 Ja 3 '43 2700w

"It is the considered judgment of the reviewer that the book will serve as a reference work on the culture of the Chinese and Hindus for teachers and laymen with whom lie the great responsibility of spreading truth about other peoples to promote human brotherhood, irrespective of race and religion. The publishers are to be congratulated along with the author, for their part in this endeavor to popularize the best in oriental thought among the English-speaking world." Tarakanath Das

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 D 26 '42 1550w

LINCOLN, ABRAHAM. Mr Lincoln's funny-bone; wherein the White House joker retells his best yarns and fables; ed. by Loyd Dunning; il. by Oscar Ogg. 136p $1.50 Howell, Soskin

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham—Anecdotes

42-4214

Collection of some of the best stories told by Abraham Lincoln, each given with its setting. Bibliography.

Christian Century 59:220 F 18 '42 60w

"The stories themselves show that Lincoln loved plain and hearty humor; nothing subtle or delicate. Petroleum V. Nasby and Artemus Ward were his favorites. . . Lincoln's close friend, Isaac N. Arnold, wrote that about one-half the very complete McClure collection of Lincoln stories were actually Lincoln's. Most of the yarns in the Dunning collection appear to be authentic." M. W. B.

Christian Science Monitor p18 F 10 '42 310w

LINDSAY, GEORGE MACKINTOSH. War on the civil and military fronts. 112p $1.50 Macmillan [5s Cambridge]

355 Military art and science. Tanks (military science). Mechanization, Military, Civilian defense 42-21112

"One of the pioneer British advocates of tank warfare develops his views in a plainly written, well-organized study of blitzkrieg methods and the coordination of the home front." New Yorker

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 3 '42 230w
New Yorker 18:60 S 5 '42 80w

"This year's Lees Knowles lectures were well worth publication in volume form. The author claims with justice to have some sound qualifications to deal with the subject he has chosen. . . His lectures are full of value for all the varied subjects which he treats. Possibly he has attempted to do too much, with a certain resultant lack of balance."

Times [London] Lit Sup p290 Je 13 '42 650w

LINDSAY, ROBERT BRUCE. Introduction to physical statistics. 306p $3.75 Wiley

530.151 Mathematical physics. Physics—Methodology 41-22044

"A survey of the applications of statistics to the physical sciences, intended for readers with a background in theoretical physics. The work is comprehensive rather than selective in order that similarities as well as differences in statistical methods may be noted." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 27:10 Ja '42

"It is inevitable that when so much material and so many points of view are covered in less than three hundred pages, the presentation is sometimes a bit jumpy and superficial. This is particularly true near the end of the volume, which in our opinion, is not as well written, and has less of the author's original flavor, than the first portion." J. H. Van Vleck

+ R of Scientific Instruments 13:179 Ap '42 650w

LINFORTH, IVAN MORTIMER. Arts of Orpheus. 370p $3.50 Univ. of Calif. [21s Cambridge]

292 Orpheus. Dionysus. Mysteries, Religious 41-52443

"This work is a review and critical analysis of the evidence concerning Orpheus and Orphism from the sixth century B.C. to the sixth century A.D. Professor Linforth introduces his work by commenting on the many ill-defined theories about Orphism which are widespread among scholars today and states his own intention of challenging the actual existence of an Orphic religion in the ancient world." (Class Philol) Index.

"The whole treatise—for such it is—should be read as a corrective supplement to its only important rival, the long article on Orpheus in Pauly-Wissowa-Kroll's Real-Encyclopädie. Professor Linforth's treatment of his material is a credit to the American classical tradition; and the publication of such a book at such a time by the University of California Press is an encouraging earnest that there must still be Americans who will buy and read a work of pure scholarship." Rhys Carpenter

+ Am Hist R 47:404 Ja '42 240w

Reviewed by Donald King

Class Philol 37:339 Jl '42 1800w

LINK, EUGENE PERRY. Democratic-Republican societies, 1790-1800. 256p $2.75 Columbia Univ. press

973.4 U.S.—History—Constitutional period, 1789-1809. Political clubs 42-5915

"[A] study of a very substantial quantity of source material, some of it not previously examined, concerning popular political societies in the United States in the last decade of the eighteenth century. These are the 'self-created' societies which were at one time the object of a bitter attack by George Washington. The author is of the opinion that they were squarely in the main stream of the great democratic tradition of the United States. . . The social and political ferment of the early years of the constitutional period is evident on every page of the volume. Students of politics will be interested, not merely in the issues of public policy agitated by the promoters of early political associations, but also in the developing technique of organization." (Am Pol Sci R) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by William Miller

Am Hist R 48:125 O '42 420w

"An unusually conscientious and detailed study." E. E. Schattschneider

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:579 Je '42 380w

"This scholarly volume makes a significant contribution to our knowledge of the last ten years of the eighteenth century." G. A. Koch

+ New Eng Q 15:357 Je '42 1750w

School & Society 55:196 F 14 '42 60w

LINKLATER, ERIC. Cornerstones. 85p $1 (2s 6d) Macmillan

828 War

[A 42-1247]

Imaginary conversations in the Elysian Fields, the principal speakers being Confucius, Lincoln and Lenin. The chief topic of their converse is the nature of the new world to follow the second World war. A television screen and a radio commentator in the background carry the news of fighting in Egypt, Russia, Asia, western Europe, and elsewhere.

"In the mild air of Elysium's 'perpetual spring,' poor Mr. Lincoln, Lenin and Confucius are forced to voice Mr. Linklater's rather insignificant ideas about the past and future."

— New Repub 107:206 Ag 17 '42 60w

"The elegance of the handling and the generosity of the opinions combine to make this small book signally enjoyable. Reason is made seductive by wit, and good manners, in Elysium, seem to unite men who differed in their terrene opinions and now see that they are united in good will to human beings. An uncommonly civilized book."

+ New Statesman & Nation 23:31 Ja 10 '42 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p647 D 20 '41 90w

LINTZ, MRS GERTRUDE DAVIES. Animals are my hobby. 301p il $2.75 McBride

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of (W) 42-14843

A doctor's wife, living in Brooklyn, describes her experiences with birds and animals which she has raised and trained in her own home, beginning with pigeons and ending with two apes, Massa and Buddy. When these last grew to five hundred pounds in weight Mrs Lintz sent Massa to the Philadelphia Zoo, and Buddy went to the circus where he was renamed Gargantua.

Booklist 38:381 Je 15 '42

Bookmark 3:6 My '42

LINTZ, G. D.—Continued

"Quite likely there will not be another gorilla book as interesting until Gargantua writes 'My Hobby is Mrs. Lintz.' That eventuality seems not wholly improbable after reading Mrs. Lintz's book." Robert Peck
+ Books p12 My 24 '42 750w

"Young people greatly interested in animals will accept this mixture of amusing anecdote, animal psychology, and details of diet, etc.; those less interested would prefer more anecdote. Mildly recommended for large collections and those with groups reading anything about animals." M. C. Scoggin
Library J 67:583 Je 15 '42 80w

N Y Times p10 J1 12 '42 400w

"Here is a fascinating book by a woman who is that rarest of all human creatures—a person who understands and is understood by 'nature's other children'—the lower animals. . . 'Animals Are My Hobby' is not only a worthwhile contribution to human knowledge, but interest-holding reading." Linton Wells
+ Sat R of Lit 25:11 Je 6 '42 700w

LIPMAN, MRS JEAN H. American primitive painting, 158p il $5 Oxford

759.1 Painting, American 42-14277

Presents a short sketch on early American painting and painters, between the years 1790 and 1875. Pictures and text are arranged under the following headings: a critical definition; portraiture—a revaluation; the composite scene; a lady's painting portfolio; wall decorations. Selected bibliography, listed chronologically; important exhibitions, 1924-1942; a list of primitive painters known by name, with locale, date, subject, and medium of painting.

Booklist 38:422 J1 1 '42

"A book for all Americans, future histories of our art are not likely to be considered complete without some of the material on its pages." Marie McSwigan
+ Books p27 N 8 '42 650w

"As a foreigner might not unreasonably have foreseen, the American is a man not at all unlike other men—possibly of a type even more general and more inclusive than are many since he is the product of the fusion of many races. From this magnificently commonplace observation there are some conclusions to be drawn and Jean Lipman's book illustrates them exceedingly well." M. A. Coururier
+ Commonweal 36:378 Ag 7 '42 300w

"Mrs. Lipman's conscientious and coolly written text is an important if brief contribution to the subject. . . The illustrations in Mrs. Lipman's book do not sacrifice aesthetic merit to documentary interest. Those in black and white are excellent; the color plates, however, are rather poor, and perhaps less well chosen—four of them are detachable from the book. But Mrs. Lipman's book is valuable enough without them." Clement Greenberg
+ Nation 155:350 O 10 '42 1850w

"To the serious student of American art, Jean Lipman's book is little helpful, and he is further irked by the lack of detailed information about the originals. For the general reader, it will furnish an introduction to a phase of American art hitherto little appreciated, but deserving to be better known and understood." W. L. Nathan
New Eng Q 15:368 Je '42 2000w
New Yorker 18:75 My 16 '42 70w
Pratt p4 D '42

"One of the most fascinating of recently published art books."
+ Spec 169:488 N 20 '42 210w

"It is not clear why the earliest American portraits (such as that of Mrs. Freke and her baby, in the Worcester Museum) were thought ineligible, and why several contemporary examples were included for purposes of comparison. . . In so lavish a publication one might have wished for more than twenty pages of text, especially since many absorbing questions are left untouched. . . American primitive painting had very distinct limitations. It is important to define them because it is impossible to believe that eighty years of uninhibited design revealed nothing of the American character and only the generic properties of all primitive art. Very little information is at hand, and it should be acknowledged with gratitude that Mrs. Lipman has supplied an exhaustive appendix listing all known painters." S. L. Faison, Jr.

Yale R n s 31:855 summer '42 700w

LIPS, EVA (MRS JULIUS E. LIPS). Rebirth in liberty, 304p $3 Flamingo pub. co, 250 4th av, N.Y.

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel. U.S.—Civilization (W) 42-15132

"A little more than eight years ago the anthropologist Julius Lips and his wife left Germany, exiles—as readers of Mrs. Lips's 'Savage Symphony' remember—in the cause of scientific truth. . . In accepting an invitation from Columbia University they came to the United States. . . The long-drawnout process of naturalization paralleled (though it was so slow that it considerably outlasted) the process of personal rebirth which Mrs. Lips declares to be a necessity for real Americanization. This book is the story of that rebirth, and indeed of the naturalization as well." N Y Times

Booklist 39:10 S '42

"It must gratify any American reader to read this generous outpouring of appreciation of our country and the author's tolerance of our faults. There is no doubt of the underlying spirit of the book; it does much to counterbalance the clumsiness with which the tale is told, the too fully orchestrated sentiments which, to Anglo-Saxon ears, sound the clamorous tone of propaganda and the rather wicked tactlessness of adding in footnotes to explain the most obvious foreign expressions. After all, it is good to know that, among so many involuntary migrations to this country, for the Lipses, at least, their acceptance as citizens has meant a real rebirth." Virginia Sapieha

+ Books p10 J1 5 '42 450w

Christian Science Monitor p18 J1 9 '42 350w

"This wholly personal record has the double merit of significance and spontaneity. Being personal, it is not infallible in judgment, final in knowledge or unfailingly poised in mood; but, being personal, it is alive and natural, charmingly sincere and open-eyed, both earnest and blithe. . . Eva Lips's 'Savage Symphony' was one of the most illuminating personal narratives from Nazi Germany. Her book of devotion to America is a happy successor." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p5 Je 7 '42 1400w

"Vivid work, though perhaps somewhat breathless."

+ New Yorker 18:79 Je 6 '42 70w

Reviewed by P. K. Roberts

Sat R of Lit 25:19 J1 18 '42 420w

LIPS, JULIUS ERNST. Tents in the wilderness; the story of a Labrador Indian boy; ill. by Kurt Wiese. (Story press bk) 297p $2.25 Stokes

(W) 42-22147

Describes in story form the lives of the Labrador Indians of today, both in the winter woods where they trap and hunt, and at the Hudson Bay company post where they spend their summer.

Booklist 39:124 D 1 '42

"It is written by a famous anthropologist and will appeal strongly to every Boy Scout."
+ Cath World 156:383 D '42 50w

Reviewed by Eleanor Kidder

Library J 67:1070 D 1 '42 110w

School & Society 56:280 S 26 '42 10w

LIPTON, LAWRENCE. Brother, the laugh is bitter. 309p $2.50 Harper

42-12032

Story of one young Jew who lost out, even in America, in the struggle for better living, love and life against the forces of anti-Semitism, corruption and greed.

"It might be questioned whether Mr. Lipton's choice of a leading character is the wisest one. The portrayal of Max, ex-bootlegger and racketeer, uneducated, crude, loud, could conceivably open the novel to misinterpretation. But if another type of Jewish character had been used, Max's friend, Dave Davenport, for example, the story would have been an altogether different one. As it is, the picture of Max is genuine and sympathetic." Barbara Woolcott

+ Books p8 My 17 '42 650w

New Repub 106:902 Je 29 '42 60w

"A readable, intelligent and worth-while book. It is faulty, sometimes overdone for best effectiveness, lacking in convincingness. Indeed, even Max himself fails to get a good grip on your emotions—which is the criterion of this order of work—as fiction. But he is entirely credible, and along with him a few of the others, as an objective portrait, and in that respect well done in a pertinent book not without significance." F. T. Marsh

+ — N Y Times p6 My 31 '42 650w

New Yorker 18:79 My 9 '42 60w

"It boils down to a lot of melodrama—sex, death, suicide, other things—but you will remember a harsh light cast upon the whole turbulent scene, Chicago just under the surface. This is something straight from the shoulder." N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 25:10 My 30 '42 350w

LISSITZYN, OLIVER JAMES. International air transport and national policy. 478p maps $5 Council on foreign relations

387.7 Aeronautics, Commercial 42-14407

Examines the subject of the relationship between commercial aviation and government policy. Partial contents: The interest of national states in transportation and communication; Air transport and national interest; economic considerations; Air transport and national interest; psychological and administrative considerations; Air transport and national interest; military considerations; Governmental control and the statization of air transport; A survey of governmental promotion of air transport; Regulation; some American problems and policies; Air transport in the western hemisphere; The North; Air transport in the western hemisphere; Latin America and the West Indies; The United States and world air transport; The diplomacy of air transport. Bibliography. Index.

"All that anyone could possibly want to know about the policies of governments in regard to airlines is in this book. The volume is so packed with useful and carefully gathered information that it cannot be read through easily by ordinary mortals and should be employed mainly as a reference work. For that purpose it is invaluable. Mr. Lissitzyn's knowledge of the politics of air transportation is profound, and his scholarship is of the highest quality." P. S. Wild

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:969 O '42 450w

"A scholarly treatise." R. G. Woolbert

+ Foreign Affairs 20:773 Jl '42 50w

"All in all, this volume is easy to read and highly enlightening; a most worthy contribution to our literature on air transportation." W. E. Rudolph

+ Geog R 32:688 O '42 950w

Reviewed by H. J. Friendly

Harvard Law R 56:656 Ja '43 1200w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:35 Jl '42

LISTON, JOSEPH. Aircraft engine design. 486p il $4.50 McGraw

629.13435 Airplane engines (W) 42-14027

"This text has been assembled to aid technical students in bridging the gap between the point (a) where they have a fairly complete knowledge of the fundamentals of mathematics, mechanics, and machine design and (b) the point where they are sufficiently familiar with the application of these fundamentals to the design of aircraft engines to enable them to be of value to the aircraft-engine building industry." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 38:437 Jl 15 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:36 Jl '42

LITTEN, FREDERIC NELSON. Airmen of the Amazon. 280p $2 Dodd

(W) 42-23862

Tale of a boy's adventures, first in learning to fly, and then on an expedition to the jungles of South America in search of a long-lost father.

"The story, unfortunately, is not very well written."

— Cath World 156:383 D '42 60w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:896 O 15 '42 30w

"Much adventure makes fast-moving story for young people of twelve and older. Recommended for larger libraries." J. E. Wooster

Library J 67:1107 D 15 '42 70w

LITTLE, CONSTANCE, and LITTLE, GWENYTH. Black thumb. 272p $2 Doubleday

42-21959

Detective story.

"The narrator's teeth chatter like sixty, and some readers are pretty sure to be scared at one time or another, though the Littles do not pester the customers with pumped-up excitement. Nurse Gale is good company, with a pleasant, casual way about her." Will Cuppy

+ Books p25 S 27 '42 150w

"This is not altogether a horror story. There are amusing interludes as well, there is a love story which does not follow any conventional pattern. The murders are a complete puzzle to the police until Norma helps them out by discovering an important clue. There is a little of everything in this book, and all of it is good." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p10 O 4 '42 220w

"Enjoyable."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:19 O 5 '42 30w

LITTLE pitchers with big ears, by the children of the fifth grade and Nan Hall, their teacher. [64p] il 50c Garden City pub. co.

Children as authors—Books by children 42-8147

"Twenty-five fifth grade pupils of an Atlanta public school and their teacher are responsible for this unique volume of stick-men and hand printing on simulated blackboard pages. Its aim is 'to help the ones who read it to be strong, sound Americans.' Its chief value will possibly be that of motivation of similar efforts in group composition in the classroom. Grades 3-5." Wis Lib Bul

"Enchanting book. . . Their gaiety all through the book is catching, and we feel the spring of youth and new hope for the world when, on the last page, we see the picture of the children hand in hand laughing down the road towards us." Mildred Hayward

+ Churchman 156:31 Ap 15 '42 180w

Wis Lib Bul 38:98 Je '42

LIZARDI, JOSE JOAQUIN FERNANDEZ DE.
See Fernandez de Lizardi, J. J.

LLEWELLYN, KARL NICKERSON, and HOEBEL, EDWARD ADAMSON. Cheyenne way; conflict and case law in primitive jurisprudence. (Civilization of the Am. Indian) 360p il $3 Univ. of Okla. press

970.634 Cheyenne Indians. Law, Primitive 41-23735

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

Reviewed by R. H. Lowie
Am Anthropol 44:478 J1 '42 1150w

"Interesting in substance and methodology. It adds another valuable volume to the lengthening list of works dealing with the Indians and published by the University of Oklahoma Press."

+ Am Hist R 47:694 Ap '42 140w

"The book is well written and the authors do not hesitate to use an occasional pithy colloquialism. Only rarely do they forget the value of the period and hence develop labyrinthine sentences for which they should furnish maps and miners' lamps. The case-finder at the back of the book is a helpful device and the Index is excellent. A glossary of terms, especially legal terms with which many social scientists are unfamiliar, would have been helpful, as would a bibliography. It is pleasing to see this concrete evidence of a fruitful collaboration between a student of comparative jurisprudence and a social anthropologist in a report that is obviously a solid contribution both to factual knowledge and to the molding of social theory." J. E. Weckler

+ Am J Soc 47:767 Mr '42 600w

"The chief purpose of the authors has not been achieved. This does not prevent the book, however, from being a very stimulating contribution to the sociology of law, as well as an outstanding study of societal regulation in primitive society." N. S. Timasheff

+ Am Soc R 7:130 F '42 550w

"Not only anthropologists and lawyers will be interested in The Cheyenne Way; it should be of value to sociologists and social psychologists, for it casts further light on one of their primary problems: How do human societies actually work? We are becoming more and more aware that purely descriptive accounts of institutions, culture patterns, and folkways do not answer this question. The case histories in this volume, although analyzed from the standpoint of legal concepts and processes, illuminate very clearly the dynamics of a human social order." A. I. Hallowell

+ Ann Am Acad 22:272 Mr '43 320w

Wis Lib Bul 38:67 Ap '42

"Just how much 'illumination of modern law by a primitive problem,' or 'of the primitive by the modern' (p.44), may be said to shine from this cooperative study of the law-ways of the Cheyenne Indians by a lawyer and an anthropologist, I am not qualified to judge. It appears to be the most competent case study of a body of primitive law yet produced and, as such, should occupy an important place in the literature of anthropology." C. E. Ayres

+ Yale Law J 51:881 Mr '42 1700w

LOCHNER, LOUIS PAUL. What about Germany? 395p $3 Dodd

943.085 Germany—Nazi movement. World war, 1939—Germany (W) 42-24535

The author, a veteran Associated Press correspondent in Berlin, left Germany last May after five months internment. He is thus able to give us some new information on recent conditions, but the greater part of his book is taken up with an on-the-spot review of the by now fairly familiar developments since the Weimar Republic." (New Yorker) Index.

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Atlantic 170:172 D '42 300w
Booklist 39:136 D 15 '42

"This book is distinguished, among those by correspondents, more by its point of view than by its subject matter—by Mr. Lochner's theory as to the reasons for the rise of National Socialism and the attitude of the German people as a whole toward the regime and toward the present war. . . . The style of the book may best be described as episodic. The treatment of the material is something like that of a feature-length—or double-feature-length—news reel. All in all, Lochner's book resembles 'The Foe We Face,' by Pierre J. Hüss, more than it does those of any of the other American correspondents who have written on Germany." W. R. Deuel

Books p8 N 22 '42 1000w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 2 '43 550w

Reviewed by Max Fischer
Commonweal 37:236 D 18 '42 550w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates
Nation 155:587 N 28 '42 420w

"It is impossible to do justice in a few brief words to the wealth of significant observations in Lochner's book. Most valuable are the sections dealing with the thoroughly unscrupulous methods of Goebbels' propaganda and the meticulous care with which directives are given to German editors on their proper reactions to various political events, important and unimportant." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ New Repub 107:763 D 7 '42 500w

"Mr. Lochner's book is so informative and wise that it makes the reviewer despair of his ability to convey to the reader even a faint idea of its importance. It is the book that should be pondered over by the heads of the United Nations armed forces, government officials and all who want to know what forces of evil we are facing. Few chapters in all the war literature deserve more serious consideration than Mr. Lochner's pages about the lessons we can learn from the foe." Emil Lengyel

+ N Y Times p6 N 15 '42 550w

"Pedestrian writing."

New Yorker 18:83 O 31 '42 70w

"The book is written in the practiced prose of a veteran journalist, and is highly readable. Mr. Lochner, however, would have done well to make two books of it, for the last third is devoted to an over-elaborated technical description of the work of a journalist in a country at war. This would have formed a valuable monograph in itself for pressmen and would have served also as a textbook deserving of careful study for the O. W. I. and propaganda services; but the lay public may find this part heavy reading." S. L. Harris

+ Sat R of Lit 25:3 N 14 '42 900w

Reviewed by Alzada Comstock
Springf'd Republican p6 D 31 '42 550w

LOCKE, ALAIN LE ROY, ed. When peoples meet; a study in race and culture contacts; ed. by Alain Locke and Bernhard J. Stern. 756p $3.50; to members $2.50 Progressive educ. assn.

901 Acculturation. Minorities. Race problems 42-326

"A comprehensive study of what happens when dominant and minority groups meet—in the past, in the present, in America and all over the world—analyzed by such authors as Ruth Benedict, Franz Boas, Randolph Bourne, Charles Darwin, Otto Klineberg, Ralph Linton, Margaret Mead, Robert Redfield and Clark Wissler." School & Society

"The selections themselves, good as they are, might have corresponded more closely to the 'progressive' method if they had been made to include more in the way of 'cases,' and less of general and abstract conclusions. One looks in vain for a full, human, and lively account of the more naïve reactions of people who live in contact with people of another race or culture; or of how some despised people have wormed its way into and taken root in some niche of an apparently tightly fitted social system; or of the frustrations of an 'inferior' person who getting education at the instigation of his 'betters,' finds them unwilling to give him the full fruits of his efforts. The ideas are there, but it is all too predigested." E. C. Hughes

+ Am J Soc 47:1002 My '42 800w

"If between the covers of any other volume as much richness is to be found on the subject of majority and minority population elements, dominant and submerged peoples, as in this book, I am sure I don't know what it can be." E. A. Ross

+ Am Soc R 7:285 Ap '42 450w

"The book is like its subject: huge, ambitious, many-sided, often dazzling. It is compounded of some weak selections and more extraordinarily good ones. Against the background of our critical age it projects a nearly complete portrait of the problem which is identified with existence of contemporary statehood." J. S. Roucek

+ Ann Am Acad 221:204 My '42 600w

Booklist 38:344 My 15 '42

Bookmark 4:11 N '42

"For those who are working in race and cultural relations this volume is a storehouse of special instances, of careful research and of wise and well founded interpretation. Where library resources are limited, as in many schools, it will meet an immediate need. And for those who want only to save time when consulting facts it is equally valuable." Ruth Benedict

+ Books p14 F 8 '42 600w

"Interesting and important book."

+ Nation 154:441 Ap 11 '42 120w

"An excellent introduction to the vast literature, past and contemporary, bearing on the problems arising from group and racial conflict."

+ New Repub 106:277 F 23 '42 60w

School & Society 55:28 Ja 3 '42 50w

Reviewed by Agnes de Lima

School & Society 55:675 Je 13 '42 850w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek

Social Educ 6:337 N '42 600w

Reviewed by G. B. Johnson

Social Forces 21:109 O '42 160w

"There is no longer an excuse for a single dull hour in the highschool social science class. Largely through the influence of the Progressive Education Association, we now have a growing body of teaching materials that help even the teacher who is not especially resourceful to get his class enthusiastic about the pursuit of learning. In the present instance the subject is fascinating in itself. The individual pearls of information and wisdom, torn from the dull matrix of scientific jargon, are lustrous with inner meaning." Bruno Lasker

+ Survey G 31:257 My '42 550w

"There is one happy hope for the motorless days ahead of most of us. There will be time to read. There will be time, for example, for such a fascinating, thoughtful, meaty book as When Peoples Meet, which, quite apart from all its social values, is surely a mine for dramatists, although the authors probably never thought of this as one of its uses." E. J. R. Isaacs

+ Theatre Arts 26:488 Jl '42 300w

LOCKLIN, ANNE LITTLEFIELD. Tidewater tales; il. by Raffaello Busoni. 222p $2 Viking (W) 42-24040

Simple stories of everyday life and adventures in a little New Hampshire town "when Grandfather Wib was a boy." The stories were first told to the author, by her father. Suitable for boys and girls from ten to twelve.

Churchman 156:16 N 15 '42 20w

Reviewed by P. E. Edie

Library J 67:891 O 15 '42 20w

"Such tales as 'Ice-poling Days,' 'The Tramp,' an amusing April Fool story, and the really fine bee adventure, 'The Silver Spoon,' will be new to the story hour and for reading aloud. Excellent for family use. . . Recommended." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 67:1106 D 15 '42 80w

"It is good to be able to put into the hands of boys and girls a book as real and as human as this one, one so filled with the spirit that we are proud to call American. . . [The] style [is] so easy, so simple and direct that it suggests the best kind of oral story telling." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p7 D 20 '42 340w

LOCKRIDGE, MRS FRANCES LOUISE (DAVIS), and LOCKRIDGE, RICHARD. Death on the aisle; a Mr and Mrs North mystery. 288p $2 Lippincott

(W) 42-10938

Detective story.

Booklist 38:347 My 15 '42

"The authors deserve another medal for this one, especially for writing about people as we know them instead of the goofs who generally inhabit mysteries. Unfortunately, they seem to have paid no attention to this department's campaign against the intemperate use of the verb 'to stare.' Believe it or not, the people in 'Death on the Aisle' stare and stare and stare, just like in the pulps." Will Cuppy

+ Books p18 Ap 26 '42 330w

"'Death on the Aisle' would be an absorbing mystery even with Pam left out; not that we should want her left out—not for the world." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p17 My 3 '42 220w

"Stabbing and drowning are made pleasant by this expert writing team."

+ New Yorker 18:72 My 2 '42 30w

"Satisfying."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:20 My 2 '42 40w

"Good plot, high-lighted by Pam North's wacky humor."

+ Time 39:92 My 4 '42 40w

LOCKRIDGE, MRS FRANCES LOUISE (DAVIS), and LOCKRIDGE, RICHARD. Hanged for a sheep. 301p $2 Lippincott

42-22725

Detective story.

Booklist 39:122 D 1 '42

"It's standard Lockridge." Will Cuppy

Books p26 N 1 '42 160w

"Sergeant Mullins is right when he says that since he and Weigand first met Pam and Jerry North the cases which they have had to investigate have become 'screwier and screwier.' This one fully justifies that verdict. By the same token, it is fully as amusing as any of the other stories about the Norths." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p38 O 25 '42 280w

"Could be better."

New Yorker 18:84 O 24 '42 50w

LOCKWOOD, MRS MYNA. Free river; a story of old New Orleans; il. by [the author]. 255p $2 Dutton

(W) 42-16135

Historical novel of New Orleans at the time of the Louisiana Purchase, for girls of twelve to fifteen. The heroine is a young girl of mysterious antecedents, living in the household of a wealthy Spaniard. Guita's fortunes seem in some way bound up with the fortunes of the city itself. The mystery of her birth is not solved until the death of her faithful Negro slave.

"Plot rather complicated and not too probable, but girls of eleven to fourteen will not be critical. They will like foreboding atmosphere and the thwarting of Guita's efforts to solve mystery." Eleanor Kidder

Library J 67:688 Ag '42 80w

Reviewed by E. A. Groves

+ Library J 67:688 Ag '42 70w

"The author has attempted to use too large and crowded a canvas to make a thoroughly effective story and some young readers will have difficulty in following the complicated threads of the tale. . . There are, however, few books on this period and the author has followed historical records carefully."

N Y Times p10 Ag 9 '42 550w

LOEB, LEONARD BENEDICT, and MEEK, JOHN M. Mechanism of the electric spark. 188p il $3.50 Stanford univ. press [17s Oxford]

537.53 Electric spark 41-12694

"Prof. Loeb explains the streamer theory of spark discharge evolved by himself after many years of experimental study. It is an extension of the classic Townsend theory of the spark. John Meek, research engineer with Metropolitan Vickers, who has worked with Prof. Loeb on a Fellowship of the Commonwealth Fund, contributes the chapter on 'The calculation of breakdown in various types of gaps,' giving methods of procedure and exemplary solutions." (N Y New Tech Bks) Indexes.

N Y New Tech Bks 26:54 O '41

Reviewed by R. C. Mason

R of Scientific Instruments 13:168 Ap '42 850w

LOESSER, ARTHUR. Humor in American song; arrangements by Alfred Kugel; il. by Samuel M. Adler. 317p $3.75 Howell, Soskin.

784.4 Folk songs, American, Negro songs. Ballads, American (W) 42-50891

More than a hundred American humorous songs with music, ranging in time from anti-British songs of Revolutionary times to the first World war songs. Indexed by title.

"Whether or not you're interested in the pre-eminence of American music or in the progress of American humor, you'll probably find here some old favorites which you sang once upon a time, or your fathers before you. You're sure to find many songs which you didn't know and if you agree with me you'll think that their charm, or even their outright beauty, is worth the price of the book." John Erskine

+ Books p16 N 29 '42 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '42

"The introductory material in Mr. Loesser's ample volume has not been written down to the putative child mentality. Children are therefore likely to enjoy his account of how these songs came to be, which is full of curious information and puts no strain on their intelligence. Moreover, they will take pleasure in the uncensored versions of certain old favorites. Their elders, however, for whom the book is intended, may find unmitigated humor a trifle dreary. . . . Mr. Adler's illustrations have a sly humor in keeping with the text, and the musical arrangements by Mr. Kugel are simple and pleasing." Babette Deutsch

+ New Repub 107:833 D 21 '42 240w

Reviewed by E. T. Canby

Sat R of Lit 26:30 Ja 30 '43 100w

LOEWENSTEIN, PRINCE HUBERTUS. On borrowed peace. 344p $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Germany—Politics and government 42-25669

Continues the autobiography of this half-Austrian, half-English anti-Nazi prince, begun in Conquest of the Past (Book Review Digest, 1938). In the present volume he begins with his exile from Germany in 1933, describes the aftermath of his connection with the Catholic youth movement in Germany, his activities in the cause of liberty in England and on the continent, his lecture tours in the United States, and his present home in this country.

"The narrative has some of the weaknesses of youth along with the attractive qualities. The prince sometimes appears to follow his heart rather than his head. . . . One can only hope that some day he will realize his dream of broadcasting a message to America from a free Germany." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic 171:140 Ja '43 250w

"It is impossible not to like this autobiography. Its comment is sometimes miles beside the point. You are often in the clouds and not on the good earth. This man, every reader will find himself saying, is not above being astonishingly gullible. Even so you put the book down thinking that the clean of heart are the children of God, and that in such writing as this part of our dirty world may have saved its soul." G. N. Shuster

+ Books p8 N 8 '42 1150w

Cath World 156:636 F '43 290w

Christian Science Monitor p18 D 18 '42 300w

"Some will protest that Prince Loewenstein is too left wing in his sympathies. Perhaps that is true. But he is still a good antidote for most of us, who are either too right wing in our sympathies or too unsympathetic—call it uncharitable, just to avoid arguments—toward both wings and most of the center." J. C. Cort

+ Commonweal 37:329 Ja 15 '43 500w

"Written with vigor and verve and often amusing. . . . Not a deep but an informative and entertaining book. . . . Recommended for public libraries." H. H. A. Bernt

+ Library J 67:903 O 15 '42 100w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr
New Repub 107:765 D 7 '42 480w

Reviewed by John Cournos

N Y Times p24 D 13 '42 950w

LOEWENSTEIN, KARL. Brazil under Vargas. 381p map $2.75 Macmillan

981 Brazil—Politics and government. Vargas, Getulio (W) 42-22052

"Professor Loewenstein, a specialist in constitutional law, describes the Vargas government as authoritarian rather than totalitarian, a fairly well-liked régime personnel adapted to a tolerant social tradition. His book provides us with the first thorough technical study of the political, legal, and administrative setup of our newest ally." (New Yorker) Index.

Am Hist R 48:440 Ja '43 20w

Reviewed by A. C. Wilgus

Ann Am Acad 225:224 Ja '43 750w

"Karl Loewenstein, ex-German with the German scholar's capacity for piling up facts, has given us the first sound interpretation of current Brazilian politics." Hubert Herring

+ Atlantic 170:142 N '42 250w

Booklist 39:67 N 1 '42

"'Brazil Under Vargas' is a solid and serious study that was years in the making, a readable, informing, soundly documented, penetrating book, the best political survey so far made of modern Brazil and one of the best extant on any Latin-American country." B. D. Wolfe

+ Books p6 S 20 '42 1600w

"It may be considered unfortunate from the point of view of a hush-hush policy that Loewenstein's book has been published right now. On the other hand it is particularly valuable because it destroys any illusions as to the democratic zeal of the Brazilian President. One thing which is just as good evidence as all the documents with which the author backs up his well founded opinion is his repeated statement that, as a Guggenheim fellow assembling the material for the present book in Brazil, he received information from Brazilian lawyers, representatives and other politically minded people, but he must keep all names secret for fear they might otherwise be persecuted."

Boston Globe p19 S 23 '42 300w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin, Jr.

Commonweal 37:19 O 23 '42 600w

Reviewed by D. F. Lucas

Library J 67:628 Jl '42 140w

"Here is the first book to tell anything of importance about the government of Getulio Vargas. And Vargas and his Brazil are of such immediate and critical interest as to give the volume a chief place in current reading. Mr. Loewenstein brings to his task solid study of the sources, substantial experience in Brazil, and a mind thorough, fair, and wise." Hubert Herring

+ Nation 155:393 O 17 '42 650w

Reviewed by Duncan Aikman

New Repub 107:721 N 30 '42 1000w

+ N Y Times p3 O 11 '42 1100w

New Yorker 18:71 S 12 '42 90w

"'Brazil under Vargas' is an essential book for all who would seek to understand this great Republic to the South, and now that we are comrades in arms it is more than ever imperative that we do understand her." C. A. Hutchinson

+ Sat R of Lit 25:8 O 31 '42 500w

"Since this book was written, Brazil has entered the ranks of the United Nations. She is our partner in a war against despotisms with which her own dictatorship has almost nothing in common. Its timeliness and appropriateness are only accentuated by this circumstance. It is not an apologia for absolutism, but a very cool and judicial exposition of an extraordinary political regime. Since Roy Nash's 'Conquest of Brazil,' no other book has done so much to make the colossus of the South and its growing pains understandable to us." W. L. Schurz

Social Studies 33:286 O '42 40w

LOGAN, MALCOLM. Home front digest. 231p il pa $1.50 Howell, Soskin

355.23 Civilian defense. Morale. World war, 1939—Economic aspects (W) 42-19244

"Elementary outline of the full life of wartime, dealing with not only such matters as first aid and air-raid protection but also pointers on morale building, where to take a vacation without your car, and how to buy fresh fish. Some of the material has appeared in the New York Post." New Yorker

Books p17 Ag 9 '42 60w

New Yorker 17:59 J1 25 '42 50w

LOGASA, HANNAH, comp. Regional United States; a subject list. (Useful reference ser) 71p $2 Faxon

016.9173 U.S.—Bibliography. American literature—Bibliography (W) 42-36170

"A selected subject list of over 2000 regional books, predominately fiction but including also travel, biography, memoirs, poetry, essays, and history. Symbols show three reading concept levels, for children, young people, and adults. Generally useful but of special value in public and school library reference work, and a first purchase in the field." (Booklist) Partial contents: Cities; Immigration and emigration; Islands; Natural resources and conservation; Territorial expansion; Transportation and communication. Index.

Am Soc R 7:587 Ag '42 70w

Booklist 38:332 My 1 '42

Social Studies 33:286 O '42 40w

LOMAX, BLISS, pseud. See Drago, H. S.

LONG, CLOYD DARL. School-leaving youth and employment. 84p $1.60 Teachers college

371.42 Vocational guidance. High schools—Curricula 42-11687

"At least half the boys and girls whose formal education ends with high-school graduation or earlier need, want and do begin as soon as possible to earn their own living. This Ph.D. study establishes clues for educators in their search for means of providing more nearly adequate education for such youth. Information from a group of school-leaving youth is analyzed to discover whether personal characteristics, school and home background and behavior are associated with duration of employment." School & Society

School & Society 55:168 F 7 '42 70w

Reviewed by N. B. Henry

School R 50:313 Ap '42 750w

LONG, MRS GABRIELLE MARGARET VERE (CAMPBELL) (MARJORY BOWEN, GEORGE PREEDY, JOSEPH SHEARING, pseud.). The spectral bride [Eng title: The fetch]. 314p $2 Smith & Durrell [9s Htuchinson]

42-19355

"This story of the young Earl of Seagrove, a dabbler in spiritualism, and Adelaide Fenton, a village miss with illusions, takes place in England in 1870. Mr. Shearing has once more based his facts on a real crime." New Yorker

"Speaking of borderland cases, old crimes that breed new horrors, graveyard creeps and the like, this latest volume by an expert in such matters is really something. Whether or not Mr. Average Fan happens to fall for its unusual blend of the real and the fantastic, the numerous tribe of Shearingians will accept it with rapture as one of the master's finest works or we miss our guess." Will Cuppy

+ Books p11 Ag 2 '42 400w

"Such a story deserves full-blooded romantic treatment, with no soft-pedalling: yet Mr. Shearing writes with dignity and restraint. Never were these admirable qualities more out of place. The penalty of failure in this genre is far more severe than in most, for nothing in the world is more boring than an unsuccessful attempt to alarm. But Mr. Shearing achieves an impressive success in quite another field. His style is a masterly reconstruction of the most recent archaic." Philip Toynbee

— + New Statesman & Nation 24:28 J1 11 '42 170w

"There is not a single character in the book, not even the long-dead Harriet, with whom the reader finds it possible to sympathize, but the strange, grotesque story is fascinating through its very gruesomeness, a first-class book to read on a stormy night while the wind whistles and wails in the chimney." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p7 J1 26 '42 700w

New Yorker 18:56 Ag 1 '42 50w

"In no one of his previous books has Shearing displayed his particular gift for mingling the real and the unreal, the psychological and the pure fantastic to better effect, and never before has he contrived such breath-taking suspense. Not only Shearingians, and there is an extensive cult of these, but everyone addicted to tales of murder and horror will welcome his latest thriller." Leo Lerman

+ Sat R of Lit 25:11 Ag 15 '42 450w

"None of the characters is very lifelike, but the story has a curious fascination." John Hampson

Spec 169:20 J1 3 '42 170w

"It is all rather too complicated to produce the effect of the macabre which is evidently intended, though the incidental detail is practised and often helpful. The sketch of the social standards of the period is just and pointed. But much might have been gained by a little less haste. The history of the murder of Harriet Bond is needlessly repeated some half-dozen times, and in the first chapter the repetition of the words 'simpering' 'sullen' and 'sly' is so tireless that even the most phlegmatic reader may suddenly feel he will scream if he meets any one of them again."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p293 Je 13 '42 420w

LONG, MANNING. Vicious circle. 277p $2 Duell 42-13384

Detective story.

"Plenty of airy persiflage and gooseflesh." Will Cuppy

Books p13 My 24 '42 90w

"The story makes a thrilling and often amusing tale." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p17 Ap 26 '42 220w

"York State family complications with grisly outcome imperil inquisitive Liz Parrott but fail to dampen her ebullient spirits. Lively."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:20 My 2 '42 40w

LONGSTREET, STEPHEN (THOMAS BURTON, DAVID ORMSBEE, pseud.). Gay sisters. 306p $2.50 Random house

(W) 42-5834

The "Gay sisters" were the three beautiful daughters of an American multi-millionaire who was blown to bits in the Argonne in 1918. This story of the next twenty years is chiefly concerned with what lawyers, courts and trust companies were able to do with the sisters' fortunes, helped on by the scandals arising out of the love affairs of the father and his daughters.

"'The Gay Sisters' is written in a crisp, ironic prose that admirably suits the theme. Mr. Longstreet knows what he wants to say and how he intends to say it. Now and then you detect just the shadow of a sneer." Lisle Bell

Books p12 Ja 25 '42 340w

"It is not a dull book and it is not an exciting book, but it has a job to do and does it. On the scale of one hundred for informative-readability, it gets a passing sixty." Otis Ferguson

New Repub 106:157 F 2 '42 160w

"Nobody should ask him, probably, to get his British titles right, and if he wants to make repeated reference to a Sargent portrait of the lovely Gaylord sisters, why should he be deterred by the fact that Sargent died in his seventieth year when the younger two were children and gave up painting portraits some time before they were born? It is surprising to note an apparent confusion between Pernod and Calvados. But really it is a mistake to ask Stephen Longstreet to think about a little thing like factual accuracy... Yet Stephen Longstreet can set down details of real observation with freshness and clarity... If you ask the reason for any of his novel's incident, however, the answer must always be to make a story. That, with colorful phrase, he does." Katherine Woods

— + N Y Times p25 F 1 '42 900w

"Mr. Longstreet moves about easily enough from character to character and scene to scene to gain a rather deceptive appearance of mastery over materials and style. Thus the solution of love affair between the second sister Susanna and the artist, with the near-disruption of it by the third Gaylord daughter, is made to depend on Fiona's surrender to Berkeley, but it is not convincing. The truth is, like many other novelists of competence without brilliance, Mr. Longstreet (who lives in Hollywood) sees his story less in terms of writing than in the sharp pictorial and scenic qualities of the movies. It ought to make a very good one." H. M. Bess

— + Sat R of Lit 25:15 F 14 '42 380w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 8 '42 300w

LONGSTREET, STEPHEN (THOMAS BURTON, DAVID ORMSBEE, pseud.). Last man comes home; American travel journals, 1941-1942; il. by the author. 408p $3 Random house 917.3 U.S.—Description and travel

(W) 42-25758

"Here is a sequel to 'Last Man Around the World,' Stephen Longstreet's travel book about a trip on the last luxury liner to circle the globe before the war closed in on us. Mr. Longstreet returned to an America being stirred out of its complacency by the furious goings-on everywhere else in the world. In 'The Last Man Comes Home' he records in several hundred diverse essays and dozens of on-the-spot drawings his impressions of this country, seen from innumerable vantage points." Books

"Mr. Longstreet, a novelist as well as a writer of travel books, covers an incredible amount of ground in the pages of this book, and almost all of it makes entertaining reading, even though it doesn't add up to anything, and you put the book down with the realization you have had a very good time but haven't been reading about the United States. . . . At the end the reader is as pleasantly exhausted as Mr. Longstreet must have been." H. C. Lewis

— + Books p44 N 15 '42 550w

"The best [episodes] are realistic and intensely vital in content, leavened with some compassionate irony and not too subtle humor. For large public library." G. O. Kelley

— + Library J 67:950 N 1 '42 80w

"A little more tolerance, not of the rich and powerful (who can generally look after themselves), but of certain very human types, a little more liking for the human race when it is confused and ludicrous, a few more pains taken to find the men and women who are really leading and not just taking the pay and the glory for pretending to lead, would, in this reviewer's estimation, have made this a better book. The nation Mr. Longstreet saw and recorded will take a long time to win this war, and a longer time to establish a civilization after the war. Some of the rest of us, who have also run around the country from time to time, have the right to say that Mr. Longstreet is often sensational and unrealistic. If the inhabitants of the United States put their hearts into this struggle it is because they see their country and its democracy in brighter lights than he has succeeded in doing." R. L. Duffus

— + N Y Times p53 N 15 '42 1200w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 31 '43 60w
Time 40:103 N 9 '42 380w

LONGSTREET, STEPHEN (THOMAS BURTON, DAVID ORMSBEE, pseud.). Sound of an American. 319p $2.50 Dutton

(W) 42-19131

The American is Abner Coe, an American musical critic, who thru a fluke is claimed by the French army during the early days of the present war. His experiences in love and in war, and his return to America make up the story.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (8)
N Y Times (7) RB (1) W (1)

"Whichever way you look at it, this novel is strong meat, not for the squeamish. You have to be pretty well disillusioned to read it without suffering additional bruises and shocks. . . . Primarily it is a war story, only secondarily a love story. As a war picture it is superb; as a romance it is rather paltry." John Cournos

— + Atlantic 170:146 O '42 180w

"The theme of this story is the awakening of an American. That makes it a matter of special regret that it is not carried out more subtly and effectively. This book demonstrates better than any I have recently read that a facile technique is not enough to make a good novel." Milton Hindus

— + Books p8 S 6 '42 500w

"Our initial inclination was to call this the first great novel of this war, so strong was its appeal. It may be great, but it certainly is the best novel of the war we have read. David Ormsbee's book has more than the sound of an American; it has the faith, the feeling and the creed of Americans roused to battle. . . . Here is an answer to the cry that Americans are false romantics. Here is a story as vivid as it is simple, of America waking up and moving into battle." Elizabeth Watts

— + Boston Globe p17 S 2 '42 410w

"War scenes are brutal to the extreme (no simple, clean casualties); sex is played up constantly; language hovers between gutter and curb; and atmosphere of moral decadence (more like Briffault's Europa than Hemingway's For Whom the Bell Tolls) envelops pages. No real value as literature. Not recommended for library purchase." H. G. Kelley

— Library J 67:683 Ag '42 90w

"The vulgarity of Mr. Ormsbee's novel and its pretentiousness are matched only by the claims its publishers make for this shabby performance."

— Nation 156:68 Ja 9 '43 180w

"It is a vivid, cruel, high-colored picture of a disintegrating nation that will be found here, a picture of despair, cowardice, corruption and betrayal. No one who ever lived through it will ever forget it, and the names of its instigators, Laval, the ancient defeatist Petain, Bonnet et al., will last as epitomes of the final degradation of a once-brave but helpless people. Mr. Ormsbee pulls no punches about all this. He is angry and the anger splinters through the paragraphs of his novel." Herbert Gorman

N Y Times p16 S 6 '42 850w

"It is a lurid, fake-Hemingway affair. . . There are many 'strong' scenes and torrid bedroom episodes that are almost certain to make a best-seller out of a clever job of sensationalism. This comment is intended as a warning."

— New Yorker 18:58 S 5 '42 90w

"The story is smooth enough and exciting in many places but the love story is not convincing, and it is unfortunate but simply true that the bankruptcy of Europe is, though worth keeping severely in mind, old hat—the story was prophecy in Max Nordau and Briffault's 'Breakdown,' prophetic in Feuchtwanger, Neumann, and many others and has been discussed as a fait accompli in hundreds of books and periodicals." Phil Stong

— + Sat R of Lit p8 S 5 '42 450w

— Time 40:96 S 21 '42 450w

LOOMIS, FREDERIC MORRIS. Bond between us; the third component. 267p $2.50 Knopf

B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Obstetrics (W) 42-4653

Further reminiscences of a "woman's doctor," author of Consultation Room (Book Review Digest, 1939).

"This is not a medical book and not, thank heaven, a psychological book written by a medical man; instead it is an invitation, an opportunity to meet a fine man and to share with him some of his experiences as a 'woman's doctor.' . . Some of the stories are very funny and all are worth reading because the man who tells the stories likes people and knows how to write about them so that the reader likes them, too." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p12 My 31 '42 600w

N Y Times p8 My 31 '42 400w

"You may find this a little bland and sunshiny, though it stacks up fairly well with Dr. Loomis's earlier book."

New Yorker 18:74 My 16 '42 50w

"The title of Dr Loomis's book, and the somewhat labored attempt to follow his theme in selecting chapter headings, should not be permitted to obscure the fact that his anecdotes and adventures are of highest interest in revealing the personality of both doctor and patients."

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 My 20 '42 220w

LOOMIS, ROGER SHERMAN, and WELLS, HENRY WILLIS, eds. and trs. Representative medieval and Tudor plays; tr. and modernized; with an introd. by [the editors]. 301p il $3.50 Sheed

792.1 Miracle, morality and mystery plays. Interludes 42-24454

"Ten translated and modernized plays including three Saint Nicholas miracles, an Andrieu de la Vigne farce-miracle, plays from the Wakefield and Hegge cycles, Everyman, and two interludes by John Heywood, with an informative, scholarly introduction." Theatre Arts

Reviewed by Katherine Brégy

Cath World 156:631 F '43 360w

"Professors Loomis and Wells are well equipped both as scholars and as translators to undertake a work of this kind. Their introductory essay is informative and helpful and should raise no substantial disagreement, although this reader would have appreciated a somewhat greater emphasis on the positive poetic and dramatic value of the medieval theater in general and on the religious qualities of the earlier church plays, to counterbalance the discussion of the faults of the later dramas. The translations as a whole are faithful to the spirit of the original texts, and modern enough to appeal directly to the present-day reader or hearer." Granger Ryan

+ Commonweal 37:234 D 8 '42 490w

"Sound, scholarly, careful, and sensible twenty-eight-page introduction to anthology. Translations, by the editors, and selection of plays are most satisfactory. Recommended for large public and college reference libraries."

+ Library J 67:1013 N 15 '42 40w

Theatre Arts 26:796 D '42 80w

LORANT, STEFAN. Lincoln; his life in photographs. 160p $3 Duell

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham, Lincoln, Abraham—Portraits (W) 41-52064

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"The running story of Lincoln's life which accompanies the photographs is succinctly but effectively done. It is a volume no admirer of Lincoln should be without."

+ Churchman 156:17 F 1 '42 80w

"Reproduction is excellent. Adults and young children will enjoy pictures, but recommendation is for high school age especially." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 67:226 Mr 1 '42 110w

"It is a fascinating volume, and an uncommonly handsome one too. . . One's only regret is that the editor fell so short in his appreciation of the wonderful opportunities inherent in the picture-book project. Apart from the fact that Mr. Lorant is mistaken in his claim that his is the first book of this kind (Agnes Rogers published a Lincoln album six years ago), and that it is untrue that all Lincoln photos have been included, a number of basic critical remarks are in order. First, a word about the commentary. Not only is it awkwardly arranged, confusing as it does the chronology of the labels and the biographical text, but it is rather bare and pedestrian. It fails to give shape, direction and full impact to the realities caught by the camera." M. J. Lasky

+ — New Repub 106:515 Ap 13 '42 600w

"Mr. Lorant includes some New Salem photographs without explaining that what they show are modern reconstructions and not the original structures. He may have made other errors in captions. He made a large error, as this reviewer sees it, in rewriting the story of Lincoln's life in connected text, instead of confining it, as he might better have done, to the captions under the pictures. But his book is valuable. Mr. Hitler's prisoner has earned the gratitude of his adopted countrymen."

+ — N Y Times p3 F 8 '42 650w

"Stefan Lorant is especially well qualified to produce an attractive and skillfully handled book of Lincoln portraits. Until 1933 he was the editor of the Munich Illustrated Press. The technique of modern pictorial journalism is apparent throughout his book. . . One can not help but be impressed by the labor which must have gone into this collection, and the painstaking care evidenced in the authenticating and dating of each picture. . . The life of Lincoln is briefly reviewed in rather undistinguished prose. Mr. Lorant should have let his pictures, properly captioned, tell their own story." W. H. Hartley

+ — Social Educ 6:237 My '42 350w

LORD, FRED TOWNLEY. Conquest of death. 185p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury [6s Student]

237.2 Immortality 42-14603

Study of the "Christian interpretation of immortality." The author does not claim the soul is "an indestructible entity. Science, he says, leaves the continuity of life an open question. It is answered affirmatively on Christian grounds, the character of God and the revelation in Christ." (Christian Century)

"One of the best of recent books on immortality."

+ Christian Century 59:154 F 4 '42 30w

"The author of this volume, an eminent English pastor, has written a dozen books dealing with various phases of religion, with man, his character and destiny, but in no other, perhaps, has he brought deeper satisfaction to his readers than in the considered conviction based upon the greatest of all evidence, the Bible, that not only does the person survive but goes on unfolding the higher spiritual qualities which find expression in the normal life." A. F. G.

LORD, F. T.—Continued

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 4 '42
900w

Reviewed by I. G. Matthews
Crozer Q 19:162 Ap '42 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p4 Ja 4 '41
200w

LORD, GARLAND, pseud. of ISABEL GARLAND and MINDRET LORD. She never grew old. 276p $2 Doubleday

42-18662

Mystery story.

"The solution is unexpected, which is as it should be, but it can scarcely be called illogical." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p14 Ag 2 '42 200w

"Rather slow getting under way but pace quickens after murder occurs, and good amateur sleuthing leads to exciting finish. Readable."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 Ag 15 '42 40w

LORWIN, LEWIS LEVITZKI. Economic consequences of the second World war. 510p $3 Random House

330.9 World war, 1939—Influence and results. Reconstruction (1939-) 41-23638

"When the titanic struggle between the irreconcilable systems of totalitarianism and democracy ends, the world will have to face a completely new economic existence. What can we expect if the Nazis succeed in dominating the world? What can we look forward to if the forces of democracy overcome the threat to our way of life? Every thinking person must try to find an answer to these crucial questions. This book, realistic in its analysis of historic trends, accepts the challenge of these questions and offers a pattern of the world in prospect." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by C. H. Pritchett

Am Pol Sci R 36:366 Ap '42 750w

"While the book brings together much useful material and enumerates problems which have to be faced—and solved—in a postwar world, it fails to achieve a final synthesis. In all, however, it represents a stimulating addition to the fast-growing literature on post-war reconstruction." John Lindberg

+ Ann Am Acad 220:206 Mr '42 650w

Booklist 38:152 Ja 1 '42

Bookmark 3:4 Mr '42

"An invaluable source book on the causes of the war and the nature of the peace. If I were Mr. MacLeish and were seeking the one necessary vade mecum for the intelligent person, I would end the hunt right here and now. This is it." L. M. Hacker

+ Books p4 F 15 '42 1200w

Reviewed by Honor Croom

Christian Science Monitor p10 F 14 '42 600w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:572 Ap '42 100w

"Interesting material for the thoughtful reader." R. H. McDonough

+ Library J 66:840 O 1 '41 120w

Management R 31:152 Ap '42 50w

"'Economic Consequences of the Second World War' seems to me the best all-around book yet published to provide us with that knowledge, to help us appraise the complex and abundant data and to sharpen our definitions and objectives." J. R. Walsh

+ New Repub 106:122 Ja 26 '42 900w

Reviewed by William Brandt

Pacific Affairs 15:121 Mr '42 500w

Pratt p14 My '42

"Most writers who attempt to draw a picture of our future reflect visibly their own likes or fears. Lorwin tries to escape that danger by assuming that the future is a continuation of trends which had their roots and their beginnings in the past. This scientific and dispassionate approach makes the book surely one of the best on the subject. With great diligence and in spite of obvious difficulties, a wealth of material has been gathered and evaluated about the pre-war German economy and the policies followed in the conquered countries." Walther Lederer

+ Survey G 31:259 My '42 500w

LOTHIAN, PHILIP HENRY KERR, 11th marquis of. American speeches, July 1939 to December 1940; with a pref. by Lord Halifax and a memoir by Sir Edward Grigg [pub. under the auspices of the Royal inst. of int. affairs]. 143p $1.75 (7s 6d) Oxford

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Great Britain—Foreign relations—U.S. 41-12296

"Lord Lothian was in the tradition of Bryce and Balfour and Grey, the eminent man of affairs filling a special mission to a special people. Of all his predecessors, it was Bryce whom Lord Lothian most resembled. He was not a scholar like Bryce, but he was a Scot and a student. Some of his historical allusions might have moved Bryce's famous bushy eyebrows a little higher and there was missing in Lord Lothian's the legal precision of Bryce's mind. But both were democrats, both were students, both admirers, indeed lovers, of America." Times [London] Lit Sup

"To re-read these speeches is to be impressed anew by those characteristics of naturalness, of simplicity, of deep humanity, and above all of clear vision, which distinguished him. Like the man himself, his American speeches possess that quality, not entirely definable, that made so many millions feel of Lord Lothian that, to them, he was not only a great man, but their friend." Mallory Browne

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 26 '41
850w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:385 Ja '42 10w

"These speeches abundantly merit publication, both as tribute to their author's singular wisdom in a position in which a false step would have been as easy as it might have been disastrous, and as an unfaltering and incontrovertible statement of the common principles which unite the two democracies—whether in a common belligerence or not—against everything that National Socialism aims at." Wilson Harris

+ Spec 166:585 My 30 '41 950w

"Lord Lothian was not a great orator; his distaste for poetry is well exemplified in at least one speech, and he wound into his argument with less than the smoothness of a serpent. But a greater orator might have been a less effective one. The speech was the mirror of the man, and it was the man, not the orator, who best pleaded his country's cause."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p258 My 31 '41
1500w

LOVE, JULIAN PRICE. Missionary message of the Bible. 203p $2 Macmillan

266 Missions. Bible. Whole 41-26258

"In this book, Dr. Love presents a revealing study of the Scriptures and shows their empathic missionary message. He surveys the Patriarchs, Historians, Poets, and the Major and Minor Prophets of the Old Testament, and reveals the missionary emphasis of their atmosphere and thought. He finds a similar unity in the New Testament, in the life and teachings of Christ, the missionary strategy of the Book of Acts, and the Epistles." Publisher's note

"All who remember [Professor Love's] previous very excellent book, How to Read the Bible, will have confidence in his teaching in this field."

+ Christian Century 59:22 Ja 7 '42 50w

"Dr. Love has written a kindly book on a stirring theme." I. G. Matthews

+ Crozer Q 19:167 Ap '42 300w

"It could be wished that Professor Love had more clearly traced the growth of Hebrew-Christian universalism both in idea and in historical practice instead of treating the individual books in their canonical order without regard to chronological development. Further, the very significant intertestamental literature is wholly ignored, as are the radical accommodations of extra-Palestinian Judaism to gentile culture prior to the Christian Era. Nevertheless, the book comes as a timely warning to the church that religious isolationism has no part in the Christian scheme. The application of this insight to other areas of social living should be obvious." A. L. Jamison

+ — J Religion 22:453 O '42 160w

LOVEJOY, ALLEN FRASER. La Follette and the establishment of the direct primary in Wisconsin, 1890-1904. 107p maps $1 Yale univ. press

324.237 La Follette, Robert Marion. Wisconsin—Politics and government. Primaries 42-2880

"This is an undergraduate prize essay written by Allen F. Lovejoy of the class of 1941 in Yale College and published under the Frank Miner Patterson Fund of Yale University. It deals with Robert M. La Follette and the establishment of the direct primary in Wisconsin—a 'landmark,' as the author puts it, 'in the early history of Progressivism in America.'" (Ann Am Acad) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. L. Sellers

Am Hist R 48:203 O '42 250w

Reviewed by Waldo Schumacher

Am Pol Sci R 36:584 Je '42 220w

"On the whole, this study makes a considerable contribution to our knowledge of American political institutions, and to our understanding of one of America's great political leaders—Robert M. La Follette. It includes a good bibliography and a satisfactory index." J. K. Pollock

+ Ann Am Acad 221:199 My '42 360w

"Well written and well documented, an addition to Wisconsin material."

+ Wis Lib Bul 38:42 Mr '42

LOVELACE, MRS MAUD (HART), and LOVE-LACE, DELOS WHEELER. Golden wedge; Indian legends of South America; il. by Charlotte Anne Chase. 189p $2 Crowell

398.2 Indians of South America—Legends (W) 42-14949

Nine legends of the beginnings of things as they appear in pre-Columbian South American mythology, retold for grades five to seven. Bibliography.

Booklist 38:386 Je 15 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p5 Je 21 '42 280w

"The easy, pleasant style of writing, the abundant conversation and the beauty and warmth of these Indian myths combine to give a flavor of tribal storytelling before a circle of eager listeners." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:255 Jl '42 80w

"Most of the stories are new or little known, and admittedly, authors have taken liberties with various accounts given them and have combined according to their fancy; but probably legends are essentially authentic. Fine for storytelling. Recommended." Elizabeth Babcock

+ Library J 67:631 Jl '42 50w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:884 O 15 '42 20w

"Will pleasantly increase the available supply of legendary literature." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Je 14 '42 260w

Wis Lib Bul 38:167 N '42

LOVELACE, MAUD (HART) (MRS D. W. LOVELACE). Over the Big Hill; a Betsy-Tacy story; il. by Lois Lenski. 171p $2 Crowell

(W) 42-23557

The three little girls Betsy, Tacy, and Tib, who have appeared in earlier books by this author, have now achieved the age of ten, and consider themselves quite grown-up. Birthday parties; school entertainments, a visit to Little Syria over the Big Hill, take up part of their time, but their most delightful experience is a mass love affair with the then boy king of Spain, Alfonso XIII.

"I do not wonder children enjoy these three children of Deep Valley, so American and so like children anywhere in the world." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ja 3 '43 380w

Churchman 156:16 N 15 '42 10w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:886 O 15 '42 20w

"A certain convincing spontaneity [is] in all [these children] do and say; their joys and sorrows are really those of ten-year-olds." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 67:956 N 1 '42 70w

LOVENSTEIN, MENO. American opinion of Soviet Russia; introd. by Broadus Mitchell. 210p $3.25; pa $2.75 Am. council on public affairs

947.084 Russia—Economic policy. Public opinion—U.S. U.S.—Relations (general) with Russia. Russia—Relations (general) with U.S. 41-18999

"A summary and analysis of opinions on Russia expressed by American labor journals, business and trade periodicals, learned journals, general magazines, books, newspapers, and government documents. The time covered is divided into four periods: 1917-21, 1921-29, 1929-33, and 1933-40." Am Pol Sci R

Am Hist R 47:921 Jl '42 70w

Reviewed by C. W. Smith, jr.

Am Pol Sci R 36:373 Ap '42 230w

"Within limitations, the author has done a satisfactory job, although his suggestions for improving the quality of American opinion in the future errs on the side of generalities. The omission of an index is regrettable." D. F. White

Ann Am Acad 218:201 N '41 650w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:780 Jl '42 20w

LOW, ARCHIBALD MONTGOMERY. Submarine at war; with a foreword by William V. Pratt. 305p il $3 Sheridan [10s 6d Hutchinson]

359 Submarine warfare (W) 42-16172

Popular study of the submarine, its past, present, and future place in warfare. The author is a British technical expert, a specialist in mines and torpedoes, and a popularizer of science for the layman.

Booklist 38:421 Jl 1 '42

Reviewed by P. J. Searles

Books p14 Jl 5 '42 400w

Pratt p19 O '42

"It is unfortunate that a work otherwise so good should suffer from two great defects, which are really the single defect that it was written in too much of a hurry. Mr. Low mentions for instance, the submarine freaks, such as the X-1, Surcouf and M-1 but without telling what was wrong with them, why they did not become accepted naval types, which is exactly what everyone wants to know about such ships. In other words the book is incomplete just at the most interesting point. It also has had errors at nearly all points—errors which could have been corrected by the use of a comparatively small amount of time in checking facts and figures." Fletcher Pratt

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:11 Je 6 '42 310w

LOW, A. M. Continued

"A most informative and well-written book."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:2 Je '42 420w
"Allowing for a number of inaccuracies, [the book] is useful to the lay reader as an introduction to a highly technical subject."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p243 My 17 '41 150w

LOWE, MARVIN EDMUND. British tariff movement; introd. by Percy W. Bidwell, 133p $2.50; pa $2 Am. council on public affairs
337.0942 Tariff—Great Britain. Great Britain—Commercial policy 42-14168

"Professor Lowe seeks to explain the persistence of the protectionist drive from the days of Joseph Chamberlain, and its ultimate triumph in 1932; and to evaluate this triumph as an attempted cure for the nation's ills and as a contribution to war-breeding economic nationalism. The chapter headings suggest the plan of treatment: Tariffs and Wars; Pre-War Years, 1910-1914; Protectionism and World War I; The Post-War Struggle; Safeguarding Policies; The Effects of Depression; and Protectionism Victorious. In each are analyzed the beliefs, the attitudes, and the pressures of particular interests, groups, and leaders, and the effect of basic economic changes upon them." Ann Am Acad

"The major defect of the work is its lack of interpretation. Since the book was written by an historian one should not quarrel with the obvious (and indeed, intentional) lack of economic analysis. . . . Another defect of the book is its wholly unwarranted reliance upon journalistic sources. Nearly two-thirds of the footnote documentations are to the London Times. Although the newspaper is undoubtedly a fertile source of historical information, one can scarcely justify using it instead of Hansard in quoting from Parliamentary debates, or instead of the Board of Trade Journal and Parliamentary Command Papers when referring to official pronouncements." Carl Kreider

Am Econ R 32:615 S '42 300w

"The author's sympathies are apparent, but his work is, on the whole, well poised and thoroughly documented." P. S. Peirce
+ Ann Am Acad 223:244 S '42 490w
Social Studies 33:240 My '42 20w

LOWENTHAL, MARVIN. Henrietta Szold: life and letters, 350p $3 Viking
B or 92 Szold, Henrietta 42-10391

Biography of one of the great figures in the Zionist movement. Henrietta Szold, the daughter of a well-known rabbi, was born in Baltimore in 1860. Her family had migrated from Hungary, and almost at once took a high place among Baltimore Jews. Miss Szold has been a teacher, an editor, and an organizer in the Zionist movement for the last thirty years. Thru her whole life her faith in Judaism as a way of life has been her guiding light. There are many family letters, and letters from and to Miss Szold in the study—the last one dated from Jerusalem, September, 1941. Index.

Booklist 38:425 Jl 1 '42

Bookmark 4:15 N '42

"In effect, Miss Szold tells her own story and tells it with the warmth, penetration and incisiveness that characterize her letters to her family and her friends. . . . Mr. Lowenthal's discrimination and restraint as a biographer and the riches placed at his command in Miss Szold's letters have resulted in a book which is a moving personal footnote to history and a memorable portrait of a woman." Mary Ross
+ Books p2 Ap 5 '42 1100w

"Remarkable study of career and personality of outstanding woman and scholar. Highly recommended. Will be especially popular with Jewish readers." E. A. Olcott
+ Library J 67:267 Mr 15 '42 70w

Reviewed by Elsie Gluck

Nation 154:742 Je 27 '42 600w

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster
N Y Times p6 Ap 19 '42 1100w

Reviewed by J. G. McDonald
+ Survey G 31:298 Je '42 650w

LOWINGER, ARMAND. Methodology of Pierre Duhem, 184p $2.25 Columbia univ. press

520.1 Duhem, Pierre Maurice Marie. Physics—Philosophy. Methodology 41-25635

Summary of Pierre Duhem's La Théorie Physique, followed by a brief criticism. "Duhem thinks of himself as anti-metaphysical, but later positivists would probably condemn him as still saturated with metaphysics. His dislike for the English type of physicist, who always wants a model, and makes physics a machine shop, instead of the austere formal analysis found in the great French masters, leads to some amusing pages." (J Philos) Bibliography. Index.

Christian Century 59:1060 S 2 '42 70w

"The principle of selection in the bibliography, which leaves out some of Duhem's most famous works and some of the best works about him, (Pierre Humbers's, for instance), is a puzzle, though seemingly it aims to confine itself to articles on scientific method relevant to the one book. . . . La Théorie Physique is a notable book, and I should like to testify to its value. I wish it had been even now translated in full, but our author gives us many of the main points." H. T. Costello
J Philos 39:160 Mr 12 '42 1550w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:44 Jl '42

"The physicist is not likely to find the book inspiring. In fact he will occasionally wonder, particularly in reading the discussion of Newton's law of universal gravitation on page 138 et seq., whether technical matters have been correctly stated. Nevertheless, the book contains historical notes of interest, and it reinstates forgotten issues whose consideration may be fruitful in modern problems. As to form of presentation, the book is scholarly. The discourse is heavy, repetitious, and massively documented. Many pages have more footnotes than sentences." Henry Margenau

+ R of Scientific Instruments 13:180 Ap '42 350w

LOWNDES, MARIE ADELAIDE (BELLOC) (MRS F. S. LOWNDES). I, too, have lived in Arcadia, 318p il $3 Dodd [16s Macmillan]

B or 92 Belloc, Mme. Bessie Rayner (Parkes) (W) 42-6863

Biography of the author's mother, who was Elizabeth Rayner Parkes Belloc, one of the early leaders of the fight for women's rights in England. The story of her mother's romantic marriage with the Frenchman, Louis Belloc, and of the author's own childhood memories, of her brother Hilaire Belloc, and their neighbors in the little French village near Paris, form a large part of the book.

"This book comes as a surprise to readers of Mrs. Belloc Lowndes's extremely readable but not very distinguished novels. For distinction is its keynote. It tells the story of a group of people belonging to a bygone society, and it is a group whose intelligence, simplicity, grace, courage, and genuineness are unforgettable." Elizabeth Drew

+ Atlantic Ap '42 200w

Booklist 38:273 Ap 1 '42

"An altogether heartening book. We are permitted to see for ourselves that France has fallen before—and risen again; that we have had bad news before—and have come through. This story comes through into the conscious life of little Marie, surrounded by the admiration that upholds every little girl in France, adjusted by the methods of a horrified, devoted English nurse. Before the tale pauses, she is reporting on the world as she remembers it. But there has been no break in her memories. The family tie that holds France together has made her mother's memories her own." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Mr 1 '42 1300w

"In a time of fear and foreboding such as this, we would recommend a reading of this utterly delightful book, the best that Mrs. Lowndes has given us, even if she did write The Lodger." + Cath World 155:248 My '42 430w

Reviewed by Harold Hobson
Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 13 '42 290w

"Mrs. Lowndes' affection and reverence for her family papers have constrained her to include too many. As she writes without humor, one rather misses the frank sentiment of French memoirs to give a glow to the really good material." E. V. R. Wyatt
Commonweal 35:623 Ap 10 '42 550w

"The book is full of family pride. Many letters; rambling style. Slow reading." E. H. Crowell
Library J 67:130 F 1 '42 50w

"Unusual and charming biographical study of an interesting family group. . . The story is richly amplified by details of famous characters and events described in the letters quoted and in the impressions left on a child's mind. Mrs. Belloc Lowndes, already known to thousands of readers for her thrilling romances, has added to these a valuable record of fact no less thrilling and no less romantic." Evelyn Sharp
+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 31 '41 350w

"Mrs. Belloc Lowndes's memory has served her well, and though her material sometimes wears rather thin, producing an effect of diffuseness, her characters and their story never fail to hold our sympathy. The intelligence and charm of mind displayed in these memoirs are, however, but ill served by a style which is 'homely' to the point of slovenliness." E. S. West
+ New Statesman & Nation 22:412 N 8 '41 600w

Reviewed by Katherine Woods
N Y Times p8 Mr 1 '42 1300w

"A charming idyll, reminiscent in flavor of 'The Barretts of Wimpole Street.'" Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 18:58 F 28 '42 180w

Pratt p5 D '42

"The story, as their daughter tells it, would be beautiful if this couple and their children had been unknown and lived an obscure life remote from affairs and famous people. As it is, the book has the vivid interest of history as well as the lyric beauty of romance. At the moment the most poignant passages are, perhaps, those which deal with the Franco-German war. As I read them, I decry a terrible contemporaneity in the events and the comments of the sufferers." R. E. Roberts
+ Sat R of Lit 25:8 Mr 14 '42 950w

Times [London] Lit Sup p509 O 11 '41 1100w

LOWREY, JANETTE SEBRING. Tap-a-tan! il. by Masha. 98p $1.50 Harper

(W) 42-36209

"Delicate little story of two children and the little white kid, Frasuquita, who was given to them by the gypsy. As long as the children did not tie Frasuquita all went well, but when they tied her with a long rope and a loose knot, she ran away. For ages four to seven."

Booklist 38:348 My 15 '42

"The story has a special audience; it will not appeal to every child, but those to whom it appeals will love it." M. L. Becker
Books p7 My 24 '42 350w

"This delicate springtime book of flowers and birds and children is centered in William Blake's poems, Infant Joy and Little Lamb. . . The pictures, at times a little sentimental, will be enjoyed for their soft colors and child-like portrayal of animals and good things to eat." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 18:173 My '42 100w

"As delightful as story are the illustrations by Masha. The softly shaded drawings and full-page drawings in beautiful color are delicate and fanciful. Children of six to nine will enjoy book's refreshing quality." R. W. Stewart

+ Library J 67:476 My 15 '42 90w

"The pictures are delicately lovely in color. They are sometimes oversweet (indeed the story itself borders on the sentimental); nevertheless they have charm and often a gentle humor. The text has freshness and originality and though it does not always succeed in keeping the delicate balance between the real and the unreal at which the author aims, it shows promise and indicates that some day Janette Lowrey will write an even better imaginative story." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 J1 5 '42 320w

LUCAS, JANNETTE MAY. Fruits of the earth; il. by Helene Carter. 72p $2 Lippincott

634 Fruit (W) 42-22282

Study in prose and picture maps, showing the origin, travels, and development of many of our common fruits. Index.

Booklist 39:74 N 1 '42

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:892 O 15 '42 10w

"This makes interesting reading for an adult or unusual child with background to enjoy it, but may fail to interest many children. However it is well indexed and gives information on fruits about which we have no other material." Laura Wang
+ Library J 67:956 N 1 '42 100w

"Curiously enough, the classic grape is not to be found in these glowing pages, but there are enough and aplenty of fruits to remind us that the fruit stall which we take so much for granted is one end of a bright thread in man's history. Helene Carter's softly colored pictorial maps not only fix in the mind the geographical names and travels of the peach, the pear, the incomparable strawberry, but with her flowery decorations in half-tone make the volume a joy to the eye." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p9 O 18 '42 240w

School & Society 56:336 O 10 '42 20w

LUCAS, MARY RINEHART. Organization and administration of library service to children [thesis]. 107p pa $1.25 A.L.A.

027.625 Libraries, Children's (W) 42-36009

"In the pattern of organization of public-library service to children, library practice has not become standardized, as it has in many sectors of administration and technique. The present study identifies four distinct types of organization. Conditions vary so greatly from library to library and from period to period in library development that it now appears unlikely that a single type of organization satisfactory in all situations will be developed. This study is centered about four questions: (1) What causal factors have influenced the development of the present organizational types? (2) What are the salient features of each type of organization? (3) What are the outstanding similarities and dissimilarities of the different types? (4) What further studies in this general field are desirable?" School & Society

Booklist 38:183 F 1 '42

School & Society 55:112 Ja 24 '42 70w

LUCKAU, ALMA MARIA. The German delegation at the Paris peace conference. (Carnegie endowment for int. peace. Division of economics and history. Paris peace conference: hist. and documents) 522p $5 Columbia univ. press

940.3141 Peace conference, 1919 41-26857

"Dr. Luckau has presented in a comprehensive and competent volume the documents concerning the activities of the German delegation at the Paris Peace Conference. She was fortunate in having the help of Dr. Walter Simons, the former Chief Justice of Germany and Commissioner-General of the German delegation at Versailles. His letters to his wife written from Versailles from April 30 to June 12, 1919, are translated in this volume, and offer one of its most interesting parts. The volume contains an introduction of about 110 pages, which tells the story from October 3, 1918 to June 23, 1919 from the point of view of the German preparations for the Peace Conference, and the attitude of the German delegates at the Peace Conference itself. The documentary part contains seventy different documents." (Ann Am Acad) Bibliography. Index.

LUCKAU, A. M.—Continued

"The seventy official documents which form the bulk of the volume vary in length from a fraction of a page to a hundred pages. . . Some of them were obtainable in printed form; others came from unpublished sources. Those that were not already in English were, with only one exception, translated into English by Dr. Luckau. The originals are available to researchers at the office of the Carnegie Endowment. By collecting these scattered records and making them easily accessible, Dr. Luckau has performed a valuable service, not only to students of history and public affairs but also to future peacemakers, who might well profit from the experience of those who were responsible for the peace treaties of 1919-20." M. B. Garrett

+ Am Hist R 47:859 J1 '42 650w

Reviewed by D. P. Myers

Am Pol Sci R 36:573 Je '42 850w

"This important volume presents the fullest account of the preparations and activities of the German Peace Delegation at Versailles. A detached and scholarly survey of the first tragic defeat of the German Republic is given. Many hitherto unpublished documents, among them twelve letters by Dr. Walter Simons, chief of the administrative staff of the German delegation, and the Wilhelmstrasse documents, will be indispensable reading for all who are concerned with the future peace settlement and are willing to learn from the past."

+ Am Soc R 7:462 Je '42 100w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

Ann Am Acad 219:181 Ja '42 270w

Reviewed by R. G. Woodbert

Foreign Affairs 20:577 Ap '42 20w

Social Studies 33:47 Ja '42 30w

LUDWIG, EMIL. Bolivar; the life of an idealist. 362p $3.50 Alliance bk.

B or 92 Bolivar, Simon (W) 42-36095

"This is a command biography for the Venezuelan government. It achieves a psychological rather than a military portrait, in the author's familiar romantic-intellectual manner. Bolivar is projected as an idealist thirsting for glory and driven by circumstances into assuming a dictatorship his instincts reject." (New Yorker) Index.

Reviewed by W. S. Robertson

Am Hist R 48:162 O '42 600w

"Bolivar, tempestuous, temperamental, grandiloquent in speech and writing, was just as authentically Spanish-American as Washington was Anglo-American. Mr. Ludwig . . . achieves a convincing character portrait, drawing heavily on a collection of Bolivar's letters which was placed at his disposal." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic Mr '42 210w

Booklist 38:274 Ap 1 '42

Bookmark 3:13 My '42

Reviewed by W. A. Roberts

Books p6 Mr 8 '42 1550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '42

"The moving life story of this colorful character is yet to be written in the vivid and rounded form which will make him as familiar a figure here as 'Honest Abe' is in Latin America. Nor is this a landmark for scholars, though it is ponderous in tone and philosophical in intent. Unfortunately, 'The life of an idealist—essentially the psychological history of a man,' according to the jacket, does not quite accomplish its purpose, for it is just such a biography of Bolivar that is lacking. . . Stylistically the book leaves much to be desired. Bolivar's ringing words seem flat and uninteresting in their English version, although here again, of course, it may not be Mr. Ludwig's fault but that of the anonymous translator. Over the entire work, like a pall, is Mr. Ludwig's unsympathetic attitude and his complete lack of understanding of the Spanish temperament and culture. This is indeed a blow to the popular Latin American myth that 'The Europeans really understand us!'" L. V. Vila

+ Commonweal 35:464 F 27 '42 950w

"The government of Venezuela chose wisely in asking Emil Ludwig to write this biography, and Ludwig chose wisely in making it a psychological study. His theme is always foremost, clearly developed, making fascinating reading with factual details pictured always in relation to Bolivar. A remarkable portrait. . . Very timely." H. R. Burdett

+ Library J 67:130 F 1 '42 80w

New Repub 106:406 Mr 23 '42 40w

"That searching appraiser of the lives of Napoleon, Bismarck and Lincoln, in applying the findings of psychological biography to the Latin-American liberator, succeeds in presenting this moving historical character from perhaps the only angle that had been heretofore allowed to remain in the dark. . . That Mr. Ludwig himself did not single out the South American for his private gallery does not really detract from the significance of the homage, for even if the government of Venezuela was instrumental in making of it a sort of command performance, an official assignment, the biographer seems to have found in it material of sufficient worth to make of his job something far beyond the anecdotal and the picturesque." Ernesto Montenegro

+ N Y Times p5 F 8 '42 1650w

"Not definitive by any means, but readable even though the translation is clumsy."

New Yorker 17:71 F 14 '42 80w

"Mr. Ludwig has taken full advantage of the spectacular in Bolivar's life. He has done more: he has interpolated at innumerable points his own reconstruction of Bolivar's psychological drives and reactions, as he imagines the Liberator felt them. While this is an interesting biographical technique, it can be carried too far. In this reviewer's opinion, Mr. Ludwig intrudes his own personality into the narrative just a bit too frequently. . . If Bolivar had received the same sober treatment at the hands of the author as does San Martin, Bolivar's counterpart in Argentina and Chile, the value of this book as history would probably be greater." D. H. Popper

+ Sat R of Lit 25:9 F 14 '42 500w

"Few books are better suited than this one (written at the request of the Venezuelan Government) to help North Americans to understand Latin Americans. . . The book is important in another respect. One bar to understanding Latin America has been the failure of the U.S. imagination before the sheer physical bulk and vastness of the southern continent. . . What has been needed is a sympathetic human figure on a scale and of a piece with the continent, and embodying something of its volcanic fierceness. Such a figure is Simon Bolivar."

+ Time 39:73 F 9 '42 1500w

LUDWIG, EMIL. Mediterranean, saga of a sea [tr. by Barrows Mussey]. (Oceans of the world; Whitteley house publication) 635p il maps $3.75 McGraw

940 Mediterranean sea. Europe—History

(W) 42-17778

Chronicles the history of all the people whose lives have been connected with the Mediterranean, from the Phoenicians to the Spaniards and Greeks of 1939. Index.

"There are, of course, few dates. Mr. Ludwig's style renders them superfluous. The book is a nice blend of fable and fact, with a liberal garnish of Mr. Ludwig's own special brand of overcharged metaphor. Many will regard the result as literature. But there is little illumination of the theme. Never does he reflect upon the reason for the decline of the Mediterranean nations and the shift of power to other regions." William McFee

— + Atlantic 170:150 O '42 280w

Booklist 39:46 O 15 '42

"To appraise the book is difficult, for the subject is too vast for hurried digestion. There are flaws and inaccuracies, and there is also understanding that sometimes approaches genius. Certainly there is craftsmanship and polish. The volume is one to be read with admiration for its glowing words, praise for its insight, but without undue credulity respecting the author's judgments." P. J. Searles

+ — Books p7 S 27 '42 1350w

"The book is, in substance, a history of Western civilization with slightly more than normal emphasis upon the significance of the sea in connection with those places, people and events for which it had significance. This makes for picturesqueness. For continuous reading, Mr. Ludwig's book is greatly to be preferred to a college textbook containing practically the same material. He is not an academic historian, but he has studied his history well and his judgments, whether original or not, are generally sound. One might mistake this, at a glance, for a truncated edition of Wells' Outline of History. The similarities are enough to excuse the error. But Ludwig is distinctively himself, and his book will find thousands of properly enthusiastic readers."

+ — Christian Century 59:1222 O 7 '42 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '42

"Style is brilliant, and wealth of historical perspectives and geographical observations remarkable. Recommended for public and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ — Library J 67:628 JI '42 90w

New Repub 107:326 S 14 '42 100w

"Mr. Ludwig has a world-wide audience and he can make politics palatable even to the non-political-minded. He is conscious of his task and of his mission. He can reach layers of readers few other authors could reach. . . And Ludwig makes history fight in this book. Those fighting qualities, however, do not obtrude themselves into the smooth narrative. But the reader knows, after he has read this book, that temporary successes of the enemies of mankind are far from presaging their ultimate victory. . . The reader should know that Mr. Ludwig is not always on safe ground when presenting his facts. . . Such small matters, however, do not detract from the abiding value of Mr. Ludwig's book. It must be accepted on its own terms as popular history." Emil Lengyel

+ — N Y Times p9 O 4 '42 1000w

"The Nile' succeeded because it had a single, simple, defensible idea: that the flow of a great river resembles the course of a great life. . . 'The Mediterranean' I found less absorbing than 'The Nile' for another reason. 'The Nile' is a kind of titanic parable in which history, geography, botany, hydrography, engineering, ethnology, anthropology, zoology, and climatology are fascinatingly intertwined. 'The Mediterranean' is nine tenths history. . . and history which is, after all, reasonably familiar to us. 'The Nile' is the better book in a way, because we can learn more from it. . . For me, the value of 'The Mediterranean' lies not in the book as a whole but in certain of its parts. Ludwig writes really terrible novels, but often, when he writes history, he outdoes most novelists in his vivid presentation of character and his grasp of the principles of dramatic action." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 18:64 O 3 '42 1000w

"Those who want a lightning tour of the Mediterranean (all expenses paid) will find Mr. Ludwig an obliging and entertaining guide, who will not strain their patience or burden them with new ideas." C. J. Rolo

Sat R of Lit 25:18 S 26 '42 650w

LUDWIG, EMIL. Stalin [tr. by Mrs Erna McArthur]. 248p $2.50 Putnam

B or 92 Stalin, Iosif (W) 42-21549

Biography of the Russian leader, based largely upon secondary sources and a long interview which the author had with Stalin some years ago. The first part of the book devotes quite a bit of space to the struggle between Trotsky and Stalin. Chronology. Index.

Booklist 39:32 O 1 '42

"The book contains a number of factual inaccuracies. . . On page 126 Mr. Ludwig says that Russia has no nickel and no tungsten. Happily, this is not true; the Soviet Union is today producing large quantities of both metals in the Urals and in Siberia. There are also a number of minor inaccuracies and the editing is poor. Most of the Russian names are spelled according to German transliteration, and in some cases incorrectly given. All in all, your reviewer feels that even in these intellectually troubled times a man of Mr. Ludwig's ability and reputation might have been expected to give us a more adequate treatment of one of the most outstanding leaders of men of our era." John Scott

Books p18 S 27 '42 1000w

Christian Science Monitor p15 D 5 '42 700w

Reviewed by Helen Iswolsky

Commonweal 37:329 Ja 15 '43 1050w

"Emil Ludwig is neither a hero-worshiper nor an embittered enemy. Yet in his strained effort to be the honest and impartial historian, he pronounces pontifical judgments and gives superficial analyses that will infuriate the faithful, and also the objective student of Soviet affairs searching for new light. He adds no new facts and gives us no fresh interpretation. He seems torn between an admiration of Trotsky's personality and of Stalin's triumphs."

New Repub 107:422 O 5 '42 180w

"The book is valuable because we do wish to know all we can about Russia now, and because Mr. Ludwig is bright in the international constellation of writers. He knows his dictators, and can tell them apart. He has been studying Russia for a long time. Yet what he has now written will scarcely add to his stature, nor be long remembered. . . It would seem to this reviewer that even in the midst of war we could have had an objective appraisal of what makes Russia what she is. Mr. Ludwig . . . gives us no such appraisal." R. L. Duffus

+ — N Y Times p4 S 27 '42 1250w

LUECKE, EDITHA LOUISE. Factors related to children's participation in certain types of home activity. 103p $1.60 Teachers college
173.6 Child study 42-9884

"This study reveals the nature of children's participation in home activity and shows their attitude toward it. Certain related factors, including sex, age, socio-economic status, education of parents, special interests, home adjustment, and sibling position, offer implications to the teacher and parent for increasing interest in these activities and for improving home adjustment. A special feature is an interpretation by both children and parents of the importance of children's participation in home activity." Publisher's note

"Elementary-school teachers or administrators interested in social science, child guidance, and the functions of parent-teachers' associations, as well as home economists, will find in Luecke's publication much information helpful in curriculum development." Margaret Pritchard

+ — Ei School J 42:713 My '42 650w

J Home Econ 34:194 Mr '42 120w

School & Society 54:480 N 22 '41 30w

LUND, NILS WILHELM. Chiasmus in the New Testament; a study in formgeschichte. 428p $4 Univ. of N.C. press

225.7 Bible. New Testament—Language, style. Literature, Comparative 42-10794

"This study is devoted to the tracing of the Hebrew literary influence on the Greek text of the New Testament. . . More specifically, the study discusses one particular Hebrew form, namely, the extensive use of the inverted order called chiasmus, a form which seems to be a part of Hebrew thought itself, whether in poetry or in prose." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

LUND, N. W.—Continued

"There is no denying that Dr. Lund cites many convincing examples, and that passages and whole books of the New Testament are found to be highly effective because of their chiastic form. His work will not be superseded; the book is a marvel of patience and completeness."

+ Christian Century 59:664 My 20 '42 160w

"Dr. Lund's book can hardly be described as one for general reading; though it is well written and represents the results of long and careful research. It sets forth much of interest to the student of literary structure; and its recognition of the chiastic principle aids in clarifying many passages which would otherwise be obscure, and in determining the authenticity of certain disputed phrases on the basis of their conformity or lack of conformity to the chiastic pattern in which they appear." T. L. L.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 13 '42 700w

Reviewed by B. S. Easton
Churchman 156:17 S 1 '42 240w

Reviewed by M. S. Enslin
Crozer Q 19:328 O '42 1100w

Reviewed by H. J. Cadbury
J Religion 23:62 Ja '43 850w

LUNDBERG, GEORGE ANDREW. Social research; a study in methods of gathering data. 2d ed 426p $3.25 Longmans

309.1 Social surveys. Social problems 42-36010

New edition of a book first published over a decade ago (Book Review Digest, 1930). "New methods have made necessary the rewriting of most of this textbook; chapters on questionnaires and sociometric methods in ecology and interpersonal relations are added." (Booklist) Indexes.

Reviewed by Ethel Shanas
Am J Soc 47:998 My '42 600w

Reviewed by R. V. Peel
Am Pol Sci R 36:982 O '42 800w
Booklist 38:192 F 1 '42

"No other single volume has succeeded equally well in combining and integrating a lucid discussion of the principles and the logic of social research with a competent account of the numerous intricate techniques of gathering data. This explicitness and unity in conceptual orientation distinguishes Lundberg's volume from most of its competitors. . . There is no doubt that Lundberg has done an excellent job of incorporating the outstanding developments of the past decade into the framework of the first edition of his book; and there is probably no more convenient way for librarians to become acquainted with these current trends and the spirit of the social sciences generally than to read this concise, authoritative, and elegantly written exposition." Hans Muller

+ Library Q 12:315 Ap '42 1550w
School & Society 55:56 Ja 10 '42 50w

"Social Research is neither a handbook nor a manual, but serves rather as an introduction to methods of gathering objective social data and as a guide to the best of contemporary materials for additional reading. The value of the volume is mainly for the beginning student in social research and is twofold: the presentation indicates the scope of quantitative research in sociology and provides references to the more recent literature; and it summarizes the basis of scientific method and provides illustrations and material for discussion where doubt still exists over the possibilities of a scientific sociology." Severn Provus

+ Social Forces 21:119 O '42 320w

"This is a thorough revision of the 1929 text by Dr. Lundberg. No advanced scholar, professor or student in the social sciences can afford to be unfamiliar with this work which covers the known techniques of quantitative social research. Excellent tables and figures are included." A. H. Burrows

+ Social Studies 33:233 My '42 550w

Reviewed by N. R. Deardorff
Survey 78:317 N '42 450w

LUNDEBERG, OLAV K. The song of Aino; il. by Regina Swedenborg. 158p $1 Augsburg

42-571

Romance of a young Finnish American girl living in the "wedge-shaped tract called The Arrowhead" in northern Minnesota.

"There is no attempt to reproduce Finnish-American dialect: the characters speak only to each other and what they say has rhythmic beauty. This is emphasized by the moments when they do speak English, one of them as touching a moment as there is in the book."

+ Books p8 Ja 4 '42 130w

Christian Century 59:115 Ja 28 '42 60w

LUNDHOLM, HELGE. Aesthetic sentiment; a criticism and an original excursion. 223p $2.50 Sci-art pub.

701 Esthetics 41-12703

"The author recognizes three problem regions in axiology: (a) the relation of man to value, (b) the relation of value to any particular type of value, and (c) the relation of man to the particular type. This psychological study concentrates upon (c); but Lundholm contends: 'sharp separation of problems of these contrasted types is untenable.' . . The Aesthetic Sentiment contains sections on the formal appeal of art and on the affective appeal. The former include comparison of the esthetic and the logical 'moments' of contemplation and of these with non-contemplative experience. Unity in the art objects is said to involve mutual reinforcement between an affective dominant form and affective subordinates." J Philos

Reviewed by C. C. Pratt

Am J Psychol 55:139 Ja '42 650w

"It is, of course, impossible in this writing to examine Professor Lundholm's discussion of the relation of aesthetic cognition to the logico-mathematical and other forms. Nor can we examine the argument and evidence allegedly supporting the 'hypothesis of general curiosity.' Suffice it to say that the writer is not greatly impressed with Professor Lundholm's treatment of either issue. It should be emphasized, however, that Professor Lundholm has written an interesting and stimulating book. Its chief defect from the literary point of view lies in the extensive use of extremely long quotations." George Gentry

+ — Ethics 53:71 O '42 900w

"In the literature of psychological esthetics Lundholm's book is distinguished alike for its broad perspective, and for its wisely restrained, well-considered claims." R. F. Creegan

+ J Philos 39:25 Ja 1 '42 300w

LUSH, CLIFFORD K. It's fun to build modern furniture. 111p il $1.75 Bruce pub.

684 Furniture. Woodwork 42-12215

"A series of projects designed for elementary woodworking classes. Range in difficulty from such simple pieces as tie racks and the like to completed pieces on the order of end tables and typewriter desks." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 38:437 JI 15 '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:94 Je '42

LUTES, MRS DELLA (THOMPSON). Cousin William. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 308p $2 Little

(W) 42-25384

A simple story of life in mid-western United States during the eighties. The story of the comings and goings, the feasting and celebrations, of the numerous branches of the Thompson family, are hung on a thread of reminiscences of Cousin William, who had lived for years far away among strangers, but finally came back to live near his own folks.

Booklist 39:183 Ja 1 '43

"It is a humble and honest book. Its virtues are solid." H. C. Abbott

+ Books p5 D 6 '42 700w

Reviewed by E. P. Potter

Library J 67:952 N 1 '42 80w

"The members of the Thompson family help to make up a real and often entertaining group, though when the book is finished one remembers the food a good deal better than the people. A pleasant, homely book, this tale of the events following the coming of 'Cousin William,' a book as unpretentious and as American as the apple pie in which it abounds." L. M. Field

+ — N Y Times p40 N 22 '42 750w

LUTHER, FRANK. Americans and their songs. 323p $2.75 Harper

784.4 Songs, American (W) 43-1261

"A story of America tracing its growth in a chronological arrangement of songs (and anecdotes about them) from 1640 to the early 1900's. Here are the minstrel songs, cowboy songs, political ditties of America, its war songs and the ballads of Harrigan and Hart." (Publisher's note) Chronological list of American songs from 1620-1900. Index.

"No such collection ever was or could be perfect. In general, Mr. Luther has done a fairly good job of what he set out to do. He has hit the high spots in popular song, and managed to squeeze in a surprising number of low spots, too. As for his running commentary, it is informal, chatty and pleasant, though scholars will regret a few lapses." J. H. Jackson

+ — Books p9 D 27 '42 350w

Horn Bk 19:32 Ja '43 70w

"The lack of a point of view, an overwhelming curiosity about tonsorial matters and a delight in sentimental ditties weaken the interest of an otherwise fascinating book. . . . Possibly because the compiler is a tenor, the key is usually rather high, but the arrangements are always acceptable." Babette Deutsch

New Repub 107:833 D 21 '42 150w

LYON, MARGUERITE (MRS ROBERT LYON). And green grass grows all around; with il. by Ronald Bean. 307p $2.50 Bobbs

917.78 Ozark mountains. Missouri—Social life and customs. Farm life (W) 42-22434

The author of Take to the Hills (Book Review Digest, 1941) describes the reception of that book among her neighbors in the Ozarks, and writes the further chronicles of Aunt Mealie, Virgil Crum, the Jedge, among others, and the daily life of the farm and its thriving business of making jelly.

Booklist 39:119 D 1 '42

Books p16 O 4 '42 300w

N Y Times p36 O 18 '42 500w

"The materials are genial and amusing, without exception; very much in the warm vein of the late Della Lutes." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 26:21 Ja 2 '43 230w

Wis Lib Bul 38:161 N '42

LYONS, JOHN HENRY. Stories of our American patriotic songs; il. by Jacob Landau. 72p $1.50 Vanguard

784.71 National songs, American 42-24375

The texts, music, and details of the history of ten American patriotic songs. Contents: The star-spangled banner; Yankee Doodle; Hail, Columbia; America; Columbia, the gem of the ocean; Dixie; Maryland, my Maryland; The battle cry of freedom; The battle hymn of the republic; America, the beautiful.

Booklist 39:186 Ja 1 '43

"These brief stories are realistic, trustworthy accounts of how these songs were written, never forgetting—as many annotators do—that the most exciting part of such a song's history is the national frame of mind that turned it from a concert-piece to a safety valve. It is this that makes the book so valuable today." Beatrice Warde

+ Books p14 N 15 '42 430w

Churchman 156:15 N 15 '42 10w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 37:116 N 20 '42 20w

"A fascinating book of folk songs and folk lore, which make the best background for true patriotism, illustrated with many decorative pictures." K. S. W.

+ New Yorker 18:115 D 12 '42 90w

LYTTLE, JEAN. Today the sun rises. 271p $2.50 Creative age

42-21968

A story of two English women during the period between two wars. The story is told in the first person by Monica Beamish—a cultured, educated woman whose life has been, in retrospect, futile and unhappy. To her, from time to time appears another woman, Honour Cartwright, who tells her a story of a life quite different from her own.

"When the novel is finished, one discovers that its more lasting impressions are those of the period it covers rather than of the central characters. Monica has analysed herself at length without arriving at the core of her being, and Honour has faded in and faded out, a shadow of unreality and a nebulous hypothesis." Lisle Bell

Books p12 O 25 '42 700w

Reviewed by J. M. Flexner

Library J 67:845 O 1 '42 90w

M

MAASS, EDGAR. Don Pedro and the devil; a novel of chivalry declining. 634p $3 Bobbs

(W) 42-6760

Don Pedro, a young Spanish adventurer, after his youthful experiences in his native Cordova, and his difficulties with the Inquisition, decided to court the beautiful Isabella and win a kingdom for her somewhere in the New World. So he went to Peru with the Pizarros. On his return to Spain he discovered that Isabella, horrified at bloody stories of conquest, refused to have anything to do with him; and Don Pedro had a new problem.

"I am afraid that the reader will not be much moved by Pedro's predicament. Like so many panoramic romances of our time, this one has an exciting and picturesque periphery but is somewhat lacking in a hard centre. . . . This weakness, if it is one, is, however, noted only as an afterthought. It is a grand story, swarming with people and teeming with life. The characters wear their clothes, mental and physical, like men and women of this world. Their thought-patterns are those of their time, but their passions are recognizable as universal. And perhaps the highest quality of the book is the sense it conveys of the past—to quote the motto—'as a projectile form'd impell'd, passing a certain line' and still moving on." R. M. G.

+ — Atlantic My '42 350w

Booklist 38:368 Je 1 '42

Bookmark 3:16 My '42

"Here is a book which, of its kind, is practically tops. It is a romance full of color and excitement. And it has what is unusual in such a story, namely, a moral. For Don Pedro de Cordova does not return from his adventure in Peru to fall automatically into the arms of his beloved. If he did, this would be simply a run-of-the-mill romance. Instead, he comes home to face the accusations of his friends and worse still, of his own conscience. . .

MAASS, EDGAR—Continued

The characters of the book are well delineated, and so are the gorgeous settings of barbaric splendor." Milton Hindus

+ Books p8 Mr 29 '42 650w

"Mr. Maass has the master hand, and his book is magnificent. No prejudice against long novels should turn away any reader from these pages. The book is over all too soon."

+ Boston Globe p17 Ap 8 '42 210w

"The year is yet young, but it is not likely to produce a better historical novel than this. It would be an unusual year that could claim two such." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 55:599 My 6 '42 400w

"It is written with accuracy in detail and charm in style. Not recommended for small libraries." A. R. Eaton

+ Library J 67:268 Mr 15 '42 50w

"Worth reading for the historical detail."

+ Nation 154:497 Ap 25 '42 60w

"This is an exceedingly fine historical novel, both as novel and as history. From the glowing pages of sixteenth-century conquest it re-creates not only the events, background and characters of Pizarro's achievement and treachery in the land of the Incas, but also the broader background of the reign of the great Emperor Charles V in Spain. And as a novel it fulfills the novel's more important purpose of searching the soul of man for truth." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p1 Mr 29 '42 1150w

"As both Pedro and Isabella are paste-board figures, the plot involving them is of remote interest. What is really worth your attention (and I shouldn't be surprised if the author secretly feels the same way) is the boldly colored world in which Pedro makes his nerveless and forgettable gestures. In this world Mr. Maass seems completely at home, whether it be Don Carlos' glittering Spain, crazed by the glitter of gold, racked by the Inquisition, at times uplifted by the dying remnants of an older chivalric ideal, or the New World of Cortés and the Pizarros, a land of blood and terror, agonizing in the totalitarian grip of the conquistadors." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:77 Mr 28 '42 400w

Reviewed by C. D. Abbott

Sat R of Lit 25:13 Ap 4 '42 550w

MABON, MRS MARY (FROST). A B C of America's wines. 233p $2 Knopf

663.2 Wine and wine making 42-13829

A guide to American wines, produced mainly in California, New York state and Ohio. The author appraises the wines and brands, indicates prices, and gives some historical data. No index.

Booklist 38:421 J1 1 '42

"Like France and every other wine-growing country in the world, America produces more bad wine than good. Mrs. Mabon, however, simply cannot find it in her heart to admit that all the wines of this country are not universally good, and she has a kind word to say for virtually every one of the three score producers alphabetically listed. Her very determination to name each wine producer seems to have weakened her critical faculties so that, with one or two exceptions, she never mentions a wine without at least a word or two of appreciation." Sheila Hibben

+ Books p18 J1 12 '42 800w

MACARDLE, DOROTHY. Uninvited [Eng title: Uneasy freehold]. 342p $2.50 Doubleday [85 6d Davies]

(W) 42-18493

A beautiful old English house, situated on the Devon cliffs, is reputed to be haunted. Roderick Fitzgerald, a London journalist, and his sister, buy the house, and convert it into a thing of beauty. Almost immediately psychic manifestations occur which grow stronger after every visit of the lovely Stella, who was born in the house, and whose mother had died there.

Roderick's growing love for Stella nerves him to a terrible ordeal, and the hauntings cease.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (20) B & T (1) N Y Times (22) R B (3)

"The characters are likable and the scenes of horror produce occasional real shivers; but everybody and everything is just a little too nice in a politely sophisticated way." R. M. Gay

Atlantic 170:152 O '42 100w

Booklist 39:11 S '42

"An ingenious story. It is written without much distinction—rather in the vein of the competent yarn of twenty or thirty years ago. And because it is a type of story not seen frequently these days, it seems a little dated. But the plot is clever, and the story carries a certain amount of suspense with it." Anne Brooks

+ Books p8 J1 26 '42 450w

"This novel achieves an atmosphere of poetic beauty and delicacy, very rare in fiction today, and achieves it without losing contact with reality or the demands of a vigorous narrative. . . . Though taking place on the border between the real and the unreal, the story is convincing in the extreme, because the author has subjected the supernatural to the laws governing thought and experience." N. E. Monroe

+ Cath World 156:116 O '42 460w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 J1 '42

"The Uninvited' is good entertainment, and introduces us to some interesting people, and lovely country. It is easy to take at a sitting. Miss Macardle does about as well as any woman can be expected to do in telling her story in the voice of a man. But what was Father Anson supposed to be doing in the 'action'? He had no part in the 'supernatural' element (the séances) and did not influence the dénouement. As a matter of fact the supernatural element is left 'unsolved' either way. It is unmistakably there, yet its resolution at the end seems a bit unconvincing. However, all said and done it is pleasant reading and well written. As such it, presumably, achieves the goal at which it was aimed. There is no sign of any desire to inculcate a 'moral.'" T. F. Woodlock

+ Commonweal 36:403 Ag 14 '42 350w

"You don't have to believe in ghosts to enjoy it, although it probably helps. A very successful job."

+ Nation 155:119 Ag 8 '42 90w

"Well written and with a few good moments which may cool you off in your hammock."

New Repub 107:206 Ag 17 '42 30w

"It would be quite unfair to this astute ghost story to reveal much of the plot. It is a clever and original one, with a solution which may be guessed some time before the end, and that is a good thing because it would be too confounding if it were sprung without warning. As it is, it seems satisfactory, if not quite up to the creepy thrills of the problem." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p6 J1 26 '42 500w

"Facile writing, but it does not produce the true shiver."

New Yorker 17:58 J1 25 '42 30w

"The ghosts are supposed to be there, and Roddy and Pam believe they are there, and others too, but the idea just doesn't take root. Atmosphere, density, realism, these are missing. The thing winds up in a fire that seems to clear the situation, but it was never serious. If a ghost can't convince you he's there, what kind of ghost is that?" N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 25:13 Ag 8 '42 180w

"Miss Macardle attacks her theme, the haunting of a charming Devonshire house, with a great deal of confidence and energy. . . . The atmosphere is slowly but surely created. . . . The minor characters are all pleasantly drawn, they all play essential parts in the whole; but readers of the contemporary detective novel will find the general technique very familiar. . . . Miss Macardle writes with sympathy and understanding of her ghosts, making them hardly less real than the flesh and blood characters whose lives are so affected by these revenants. Her methods prove so thorough and complete, we feel in the end she has told us rather more than we really need have known!" John Hampson

+ Spec 168:214 F 27 '42 250w

"This is the ideal ghost story and the author writes with such conviction as to make the story quite credible; above all, she writes with a curious understanding of and pity for the ghosts who are, quite obviously, as real to her as the flesh and blood people in her tale."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p81 F 14 '42 120w

MACARTHUR, DOUGLAS. MacArthur on war; with an introd. and editorial notes by Frank C. Waldrop. 419p maps $3 Duell

355 Military art and science (W) 42-36254

Collection of General MacArthur's official writings, including an address given some years ago on the character of soldiers and war; the texts of five annual reports as chief of staff, from 1931 to 1935; his outline of a projected defense system for the Philippines; and the texts of all the principle communiques on the Manila and Bataan campaigns up to April 16, 1942. Includes a biographical introduction.

Booklist 38:420 J1 1 '42

Reviewed by Walter Millis

Books p2 Je 14 '42 1150w

Christian Science Monitor p12 O 31 '42 750w

"This book quite clearly shows—despite the often strained attempts of Mr. Waldrop to build up the 'MacArthur legend'—that MacArthur was—and is—a man, a general reared in the West Point tradition, farseeing in some respects, shortsighted in others. Neither MacArthur's perspicacity nor his vision will be particularly embellished by this book, though it is quite evident in reading it that he grasps the large measure of things—military and civilian—with more than the common skill, and one cannot help but be impressed by his unwavering conviction expressed repeatedly in our pacifistic yesterdays, that 'horse and foot and guns' would decide the destiny of our tomorrows." H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 9 '42 900w

"Those who look for the real story of this campaign will not find it in this book. . . The greatness of MacArthur lies in his vision, in his execution of plans, in his magnetic leadership. His regrouping of forces in Bataan—particularly the successful retirement from southern Luzon when the wily Jap thought he had our forces split—will one day be held up as a classic example. At least, so this reviewer believes. Mr. Waldrop's book suffers for lack of an index, and because of the format which in places puzzles the reader to differentiate between public documents and author's opinion." R. E. Dupuy

Sat R of Lit 25:8 J1 11 '42 850w

Reviewed by H. A. DeWeerd

Yale R n s 32:169 autumn '42 1200w

MACARTNEY, CARLILE AYLMEY. Problems of the Danube basin. (Current problems ser) 160p $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d Cambridge]

943.6 Danube river. Europe—Politics 42-15783

"In outline form, Mr. Macartney gives us the general setting of the Danube Valley, traces the story of both the Ottoman and the Hapsburg empires, and then gives us the perspective of the years between the end of the last World War and the present great struggle. The concluding chapter deals with 'the future' of Danubia." Ann Am Acad

"All this is to the good, and the reader will find it very convenient for consultation concerning the problems of all the peoples of central and southeastern Europe. There are, however, a number of questions to be raised with reference to Mr. Macartney's specific treatment of particular problems. The author's general frame of reference seems to be more or less pro-Magyar or pro-Hungarian throughout the volume. . . Moreover, he seems fully convinced of the complete injustice of the Treaty of Trianon and its mistreatment of the entire Hungarian problem. It is very difficult to accept his statements about the so-called Jewish problem in Danubia. . . He remarks that the Munich 'compromise' created some injustices, but solved some problems—though he does not tell us exactly what problems Munich did solve." H. N. Howard

+ Ann Am Acad 223:223 S '42 350w

"Mr. Macartney, who next to Wickham Steed and Seton Watson is the outstanding authority on his subject, has chosen the historical approach to the Danubian problem. His succinct yet complete outline of the life and death of the Hapsburg monarchy proves that the dissolution was inevitable. . . It is to be regretted that a serious historian like Macartney should occasionally become the victim of the racial theory."

+ Nation 154:661 Je 6 '42 270w

"Learning is a fine thing, and learning carried lightly finer still. This small book is the distillation of immense knowledge, and has more potency than many a dilute tome. The problem of the Danube lands, so the author thinks, must be viewed historically, and he presents honestly, fairly, and entirely without wartime prejudice, the essence of their involved and changeable story." Freda White

+ New Statesman & Nation 23:230 Ap 4 '42 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p206 Ap 25 '42 1300w

MACARTNEY, CLARENCE EDWARD NOBLE. Great women of the Bible. 207p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

220.92 Women in the Bible. Sermons

42-20130

Thirteen sermons by the minister of the First Presbyterian church in Pittsburgh. The theme of each sermon is a woman who lived in Biblical times. Contents: The woman who got her man; The woman whose beauty saved a race; The woman who was better than her job; The woman to remember; The woman who cooked and the woman who prayed; The woman who sheared him; The woman who married the wrong man; The woman who deceived her husband; The woman who married the right man; The woman who had five husbands—and one who was not; The woman who lost and found life's greatest treasure; The woman who touched Him; The ideal woman.

"The theme is one that has attracted many writers. Dr. Macartney brings to it, in these sermons, unusual pulpit power and a very special skill in putting biographical material to homiletical use."

+ Christian Century 59:1122 S 16 '42 30w

"In a popular sort of way the preaching is good. . . [But] is 'great' really applicable to Rahab and Abigail and Lot's wife and others in the list? Most astonishing of all, the Mother of Our Lord finds no place in it!" F. J. M.

+ Churchman 156:31 O 1 '42 150w

Wis Lib Bul 33:158 N '42

MCCARTHY, JAMES REMINGTON. Fire in the earth: the story of the diamond. 263p il $2.50 Harper

553.8 Diamonds (W) 42-7066

Popular story of the diamond, its history, mining, and cutting, and stories of famous gems. Contains a chapter on advice about buying diamonds. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:269 Ap 1 '42

Reviewed by Peter Schwed

Books p12 J1 5 '42 650w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:39 J1 '42

"The diamond, says the author of this book, is an explosive subject. Certainly it is also, as he goes on to say, a subject which has 'many facets of human, historical, technical and popular interest.' James Remington Mc-

MCCARTHY, J. R.—Continued

Carthy has brought out that interest with a good deal of freshness, as well as necessary technical detail, in the picturesquely named 'Fire in the Earth.'

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 22 '42 390w

Wis Lib Bul 35:33 My '42

MCCARTHY, MARY (MRS EDMUND WILSON). Company she keeps. 304p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

42-13269

"The She of the title is young, pretty, neurotic, demi-intellectual, pseudo-radical, bohemian, and characterless—the familiar type that Pearl Harbor has, let us hope, dated completely. We get glimpses of her in six different mirrors. When we meet her she is having the affair which is to result in her divorce. Then, successively, we watch her as assistant to a fake art dealer, being seduced in a Pullman, attending an 'intellectual' dinner party, affecting the mind and body of a young liberal writer (Yale), and finally confessing to a somewhat dull psychoanalyst." New Yorker

"It is an intelligent book, giving promise of fine things to come. The method and structure give the impression that the chapters were written without reference to one another and then were somewhat highhandedly brought together by means of the tenuous theme of lost personality. The result is discontinuity and lack of cumulative effect. Two episodes—those of Mr. Sheer, the naively knavish dealer in antiques, and of Mr. Phiaumen, 'the Genial Host' a vulgarian who milks the brains of his guests—are especially taking, quite able to stand alone for their humor and truth." R. M. Gay

+ Atlantic 170:109 Ag '42 230w

"Mary McCarthy can write—there is no question about that. There are passages in the book that one relishes with satisfaction for their pointed wit and perfection of expression. On the whole, however, the book is very much like the performance of a highly gifted child who is deliberately and self-consciously trying to shock his elders." Rose Feld

+ Books p8 My 24 '42 800w

"Mary McCarthy looks like a glamour girl, and writes like a man who has been around for a long time. 'The Company She Keeps,' is her first novel, and it is, without any reservation, the book of the year. . . Miss McCarthy is consistently the novelist, never the cocktail party Aesop, writing fatuous, if good-intentioned essays, peopling them with symbolic paper dolls, and labeling the whole horrid hodge-podge fiction." William Abrahams

+ Boston Globe p19 My 13 '42 600w

"The book is a studied attempt to be so sophisticated and bawdy at the same time. Now there are standards in sophistication and bawdiness, but Miss McCarthy has fallen short of both. She has a gift for style, however."

+ Cath World 155:380 Je '42 220w

"The book is brilliantly written, and evokes with a sometimes malicious accuracy of detail the life of one social group in the disordered 1930's. The author seemingly had in mind the writing of 'A Portrait of the Intellectual as a Young Woman,' but her book is more like a little magazine version of 'Kitty Foyle,' with focus on the more lurid episodes." Mason Wade

Commonweal 36:209 Je 19 '42 240w

Reviewed by Christopher Isherwood

Nation 154:714 Je 20 '42 1000w

"Miss McCarthy has learned the difficult art of setting down everything as it might have happened, without telling a single self-protective lie and without even falling, in the midst of a seduction, to mention the safety pin that holds up the heroine's badly mended underwear. 'The Company She Keeps' is not a likable book, nor is it very well put together, but it has the still unusual quality of having been lived." Malcolm Cowley

+ New Republic 106:737 My 25 '42 1050w

"How to sum up this novel is something of a problem—for it is as full of contradictions as its heroine. That it is clever, witty, polished, no one could deny, and yet there lurks somewhere in it a fundamental immaturity. For all that she writes so well and has such sharp and fresh insight, Miss McCarthy never really comes to grips with the girl, Margaret Sargent—and seems even, at times, to be bemused by her. . . 'The Company She Keeps' has very definite merits, but its values, I feel, are suspect." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p7 My 24 '42 1100w

"Miss McCarthy is no novelist (the book does not hold together in the least) but she has considerable talent for dissecting people and leaving a nasty mess on the table. One has the feeling that her characters are drawn from life and that all of them are really much pleasanter and decenter people than Miss McCarthy gives them credit for being. Her book, however, has the definite attraction of high-grade back-fence gossip." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:73 My 16 '42 230w

Time 39:82 Je 1 '42 550w

MCCASLIN, HERBERT JOHN. Wood pattern-making; a textbook. 3d ed 339p il $2.25 McGraw

621.72 Pattern making 41-16133

"A complete revision of the previous edition published in 1932. The text has been expanded and the new illustrations have been clarified while much new material on problems and operations has been added." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 38:56 O 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:60 O '41

MCCLOY, HELEN. Cue for murder. 275p $2 Morrow

42-22690

Detective story.

Booklist 39:122 D 1 '42

Bookmark 4:18 N '42

"Here is show business in serious vein and an abundance of solid detection. A rewarding item for armchair sleuths." Will Cuppy

+ Books p16 O 11 '42 230w

"This story is worked out with a beautiful efficiency and gripping interest, in all its clues and cues and happenings and suspense-laden course to final surprise. But the cheers which must greet it go to more than its clever plot. Helen McCloy can not only make up a good mystery tale; she can write it as a good novel, with lively characterization, logical reasoning and satiric wit. 'Cue for Murder' is one of her best books. It shows again that she belongs in the small group of the best mystery writers, English and American." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p10 O 11 '42 280w

"Psychiatrist detective turns in another deftly solved and thoroughly documented case enhanced by good writing and vital characterizations. Best grade."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:41 O 24 '42 40w

Time 40:104 N 2 '42 70w

MCCLOY, HELEN. Who's calling? 282p $2 Morrow

42-9580

Detective story.

Booklist 38:369 Je 1 '42

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p18 Ap 12 '42 300w

"Helen McCloy's handling of the plot and the characterization is fully up to the high standard she has set for herself in her other books." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 12 '42 200w

"Neatly told story that has almost everything, and it may make you wonder what your subconscious is up to."

+ New Yorker 18:88 Ap 11 '42 60w

"Among the best."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 Ap 18 '42 40w

"Scientifically sound, deductively excellent."

+ Time 39:92 My 4 '42 40w

MCCONAGHA, WILLIAM ALBERT. Development of the labor movement in Great Britain, France and Germany. 199p $2.50 Univ. of N.C. press

331.88 Trade unions. Labor and laboring classes 42-19485

History and analysis of the labor movement of Europe, particularly in England, France, and Germany during the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Index.

"The brief introductory note on the theory of organized labor movements might well have been expanded, and one feels the want of a summary chapter which a truly comparative approach would require. The book is weak in recent developments, the British story, for example, ending with the Trade Disputes Act of 1927. Quarreling with the limits which the author imposed upon himself should not, however, obscure the fact that within those limits he has produced an excellent and useful survey of an interesting field." C. H. Pritchett

+ — Am Pol Sci R 36:1194 D '42 300w

"A taste for strong words and vigor of style more than once betrays the author into extreme statements, as when he refers to the 'autocratic' conduct of the American Federation of Labor or, when he says that in France after 1870 'all previous organizations were completely wiped out.'... The author disclaims originality and states that the book is immediately occasioned by the disappearance from the market of Professor Perlman's 'Theory of the Labor Movement. That work is, of course, 'an excellent little volume,' but there will be dissent from the view that it and it alone gave 'easy access to a knowledge of labor institutions beyond our national borders.' (p. v), or that the present volume fills that role." Witt Bowden

Ann Am Acad 225:245 Ja '43 360w

"Scholarly and unpartisan... For scholar and general reader. Small libraries will not need." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 67:628 Jl '42 70w

MCCONNELL, FRANCIS JOHN, bp. Evangelicals, revolutionists and idealists; six English contributors to Am. thought and action. 184p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

922 Religious thought 43-849

"The post-war reconstruction of the world and the creation of a better social order drive us to review the ideals and methods of the leaders of other periods of reconstruction in world history. The eighteenth century was such a time and there were leaders whose work can well be studied. This little book... deals with six such leaders who came out of England to make their contributions to American thought and life. Ogelthorpe, John Wesley, George Whitfield, Thomas Paine, George Berkeley and William Wilberforce are presented together with 'some extensive references to a number of other leaders of the times.' Churchman

"Readers may perhaps find his sketch of Oglethorpe, as a study of a tolerable imperialism, or of Wilberforce, as a study of a successful reformer, the most interesting in the book, but I suspect that the bishop himself most enjoyed writing the chapter on Paine. The attempt to use Bishop Berkeley as a means of exacting another testimonial to the importance of Borden P. Bowne is hardly as successful. Every one of the six studies, however, overflows with seminal ideas." P. H.

+ — Christian Century 59:1530 D 9 '42 260w

"Their stories are so well told that these men live again brimming over with help for us in this generation. It is a refreshing, encouraging and enlightening book" H. J. Simpson

+ Churchman 157:16 Ja 1 '43 150w

Reviewed by Rittenhouse Neisser
Crozer Q 20:75 Ja '43 900w

MCCONNELL, FRANCIS JOHN, bp, and others. Basis for the peace to come. 152p $1 Abingdon-Cokesbury

940.5344 World war, 1939—Peace, Reconstruction (1939-) 43-1002

"The 1942 Merrick-McDowell lectures at Ohio Wesleyan University were delivered by a remarkably able and varied group of thinkers: Bishop F. J. McConnell, Mr. John Foster Dulles, Dr. William Paton, Mr. Leo Pavlovsky, Ambassador Hu Shih, and C. J. Hambro of Norway, president of the assembly of the League of Nations. In these lectures they discuss the economic, political and religious aspects of world reorganization." Christian Century

"The two ablest lectures are those by the two churchmen, McConnell of this country and Paton of England. Both are characterized by a grim grasp of reality in no way inconsistent with unwavering idealism... The other lectures do not match the high level of these two, except only that of C. J. Hambro." J. H. Holmes

+ — Books p10 Ja 10 '43 410w

Christian Century 59:1394 N 11 '42 70w

"The reader of this volume will gain an excellent view of the problems ahead as viewed by men of broad vision and sound analytical ability... Every student of peace plans will gain much from this volume." A. F. G.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 D 19 '42 1300w

Reviewed by J. H. Franklin

Crozer Q 20:84 Ja '43 200w

MCCORD, JOSEPH. Walls of Jericho. 286p $2 Macrae Smith co.

42-572

Story of a small town which experienced a boom when an airplane factory moved in. The boom changed the course of a number of lives, notably that of Carol Delaine, but in the end true love won the day.

Booklist 38:234 Mr 1 '42

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p14 Ja 11 '42 60w

Wls Lib Bul 38:32 F '42

MCCORMAC, JOHN. America and world mastery. 338p $2.75 Duell

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. U.S.—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Great Britain —Foreign relations—U.S. World politics

42-3738

A Canadian newspaperman discusses the future of America, the British empire, and Canada. He rounds up present day reactions, as seen in newspaper editorials, on the stand taken by Americans on the question of co-operation with our British allies, and he concludes that: "Next to the winning of the war, the most important question for Americans is their future relations with Englishmen. These relations will determine the role of the United States in world affairs." Index.

Reviewed by J. Van der Zee

Am Pol Sci R 36:592 Je '42 230w

Booklist 38:246 Mr 15 '42

"It is the first two-thirds of Mr. McCormack's book that is really important. The remainder can be dismissed with the indulgent term 'provocative.' As a well buttressed argument for permanent co-operation and harmony on the part of the United States, Britain, Canada and Australasia, it is a timely and valuable work." Allan Nevins

+ Books p3 Je 7 '42 1700w

"Mr. MacCormack's references to Canada are disfigured by his violent dislike—to put it mildly—of Mr. Mackenzie King. The result, so far as Canadians are concerned, is sad reading, and it is difficult to remember that this pamphlet is really working on a good idea as one discovers inaccuracy after inac-

MACCORMAC, JOHN—Continued
 curacy in his account of Canada's entry into and participation in the war, everyone of which is designed to show the Canadian Prime Minister in a discreditable light. . . Like many others of his kind, Mr. MacCormac is full of praise of Australia at the expense of Canada. He declares that Australia 'as a manufacturer of munitions has surpassed Canada.' This is simply untrue. . . Mr. MacCormac's dislike of Mr. King leads him to ignore many realities which in other texts and vis-a-vis other governments he takes into full account. The book is badly marred by his prejudice." G. V. Ferguson

— + Canadian Hist R 23:194 Je '42 1050w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:778 Jl '42 90w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr

Nation 154:230 F 21 '42 300w

"The utility of Mr. MacCormac's book is that it will help to compel Englishmen and Americans alike to realize the importance of a problem which is one of moral discipline, as well as of politics, and which they should have faced and dealt with long ago before the present crisis descended upon them." Norman Angell

+ New Repub 106:336 Mr 9 '42 1500w

"Packed into this somewhat breathless volume there is the vast and varied debris of the shattered era in which Mr. MacCormac as a journalist in Ottawa, Vienna, London, Geneva and Washington has lived and moved and had his being. . . A reasonable verdict on this book—a very provocative and timely achievement—is that the title is hardly fair to the contents. What mankind means by mastery is not what he envisages. A better word would be cooperation in the interest of society." P. W. Wilson

+ — N Y Times p5 Ap 5 '42 1250w

"A thought-provoking work that will interest anyone vitally concerned with the shape of things to come. It does not overlook the inevitable economic rivalries and political obstacles that challenge close Anglo-American cooperation in time of peace, but poignantly insists that the dangers of any alternate course make a Pax Britannica necessary after the war." A. R. Elliott

+ Sat R of Lit 25:10 Mr 21 '42 550w

MCCORMICK, THOMAS CARSON. Elementary social statistics. 353p $3 McGraw

311.2 Statistics 41-20389

"This beginning textbook in statistical methods has been written to meet the needs of undergraduate college students who are concentrating in sociology and related subjects. In the choice of methods, in the character of the illustrative data and problems, and in emphasis throughout, it differs from the texts in economic or educational statistics that have generally been used by such students. The chief purpose has been to provide students who expect to become professional sociologists with the necessary groundwork for more advanced training in quantitative research methods." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by Clark Tibbitts

Am J Soc 48:263 S '42 400w

"McCormick's Elementary Social Statistics gives evidence of being based on considerable teaching experience. It is obviously designed for use as a textbook in introductory statistics courses for sociology students, and should serve this purpose well if used by a competent instructor. It does, however, put considerable demands on the instructor. It would scarcely be possible to write a statistics text that did not." E. P. Hutchinson

Am Soc R 7:439 Je '42 800w

"The volume is a remarkable achievement in condensation. With a minimum of waste motion, the conventional area of introductory social statistics is covered. The procedures are set forth clearly, and explanations are kept within the range of the student of limited mathematical background. The sixty excellent charts deal with data of interest to sociologists, and the student practice problems fall in the same area." Hugh Carter

+ Ann Am Acad 221:244 My '42 200w

"The work is well written, satisfactorily illustrated and indexed. A collection of useful tables is found in the appendix. The examples and applications have all been chosen from the field of sociology. Here is a book which no teacher of social statistics can afford to pass by in making his choice of a text." C. M. Rosenquist

+ Social Forces 20:405 Mr '42 200w

MCCRACKEN, HAROLD. Last of the sea otters; with drawings by Paul Bransom. 99p $2 Stokes

599.745 Sea otters—Juvenile literature

(W) 42-18696

Pictures the life of the fast disappearing sea otter, from babyhood to adult, in their haunts among the Aleutian islands. For children nine to twelve.

Booklist 39:36 O 1 '42

"Like many other narratives of wild animal life the story has a sad note, but it ends with a gleam of hope in the fact that sea otters are now protected by the government and are increasing. Paul Bransom's pictures add distinction to a finely made book." A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 18:333 S '42 110w

"What Salten did for the deer in Bambi, Harold McCracken does in simpler way for the sea otter in this thoroughly delightful story of these all but extinct creatures. . . Fine literary style. Authentic details. Illustrated with color frontispiece and black-and-white drawings by Paul Bransom." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 67:741 S 1 '42 80w

"This is a worthwhile addition to nature books for 9 to 14 year old readers." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p9 O 18 '42 360w

School & Society 56:136 Ag 15 '42 30w

MCCRADY, MRS MARJORIE ELLIS (FERGUSON), and WHEELER, BLANCHE. Manners for moderns. 195p $1.75 Dutton

395 Etiquet (W) 42-4334

Informal handbook on manners and the preserving of the amenities as to: letters, weddings, what to wear where, travel, invitations, tipping, entertaining, how to eat it, navy manners, military manners, and office behavior. Index.

Booklist 38:268 Ap 1 '42

J Home Econ 34:320 My '42 30w

Wis Lib Bul 38:115 Jl '42

MCCULLY, WALBRIDGE. Death rides tandem. 270p $2 Doubleday

42-24968

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p26 O 25 '42 180w

"This is Walbridge McCully's first mystery. More from the same pen will be welcome." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p26 N 1 '42 240w

Sat R of Lit 25:18 N 14 '42 40w

MCDONALD, ANGUS. Old McDonald had a farm; il. by Richard Bartlett. 278p $2.75 Houghton

630.1 Farm life. Oklahoma—Social life and customs (W) 42-36156

"The story is mostly about old Jim McDonald, a Presbyterian preacher who came from Mississippi, and who, at the age of sixty-one, succumbed to his long-nurtured yearning for a farm of his own. He bought a place a poor place, with little on it except rocks and air, in the southern foothills of the Ozarks in eastern Oklahoma. There, in the years between 1912 and 1922, lived old McDonald, always working and scheming. And out of his tremendous energy and his love of the soil, combined with more than ordinary intelligence, there blossomed a place that, to him, was a sort of paradise. Angus McDonald, the author of this unusual true tale, is the son of the old fellow. He lived on the farm, a mile or so north of Sallisaw, Okla." Books

"The character and his story make a valuable and completely disarming book in spite of manifest faults in the writing. For the reader whose curiosity takes a practical turn it is a misfortune that there could not have been a rather more realistic account, year by year, of the farm's economic and budgetary affairs." Wilson Follett

Atlantic My '42 180w

Booklist 38:308 Ap 15 '42

Bookmark 3:14 My '42

"Here is the real thing. Out of all the scores of 'regional' books that have come off the press since the rediscovery of America a few years ago, few, if any, surpass this one in simplicity and authenticity. It is exceptionally well done, utterly innocent of 'literary' frills, and the story it tells, now of all times, is eminently worth telling." Stanley Walker

+ Books p1 Mr 29 '42 1050w

Reviewed by E. L. Pennington

Churchman 156:18 Jl 1 '42 240w

"An instructive narrative on sound diversified farming, but it is so readable, and the obstinate old man, for all his sharp trading and unyieldingness so lovable, that a more delightful introduction to the subject of farming could hardly be found. The one long sermon that is reproduced is distinctly Protestant, but the picture of the McDonalds has far wider than sectarian interest. It is an ideal introduction to armchair husbandry, if not to something more personally energetic." Edward Skilling, Jr.

+ Commonweal 35:554 Mr 27 '42 280w

New Repub 106:614 My 4 '42 60w

"Written with a directness and simplicity of style unusual in a first book, Angus McDonald's narrative of his father's struggles as a farmer and preacher in Eastern Oklahoma is an honest and graphic piece of work. It is a saga of Okies who stayed at home and made good." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 29 '42 650w

"Good, shirtsleeves Americana, and lots of fun too."

+ New Yorker 18:87 Ap 11 '42 40w

"The author's father is a good full character—incredibly irritating at times, but always consistent for better or for worse; sometimes his stubbornness is foolish but sometimes it has aspects of heroism. The book is written very simply without much pretense at literary artifice, which old Doctor McDonald would probably have deplored as a kind of dishonesty, or at least, un-Presbyterian gaudiness. But there emerges from it a strong, convincing portrait." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 25:36 My 16 '42 500w

Time 39:84 Ap 6 '42 950w

Wis Lib Bul 38:85 My '42

MACDONALD, AUSTIN FAULK. Government of the Argentine republic. 476p il maps $3.75 Crowell

982 Argentina—Politics and government. 42-5567

"This volume is the first attempt in two decades to present a detailed, analytical account of Argentine politics and administration. . . Many of the facts brought within its pages have been obtained from the writings of Argentine scholars. But they have been supplemented by firsthand observation of elections, court procedure, legislative sessions and the like. And every major statement has been carefully checked with recognized authorities—economists, jurists, educators, bankers, public administrators." (Pref) The appendix contains the constitution of the Argentine republic; federal capital, provinces and territories of the Argentine republic; and an index.

"The only suggestion for improvement of the study from the reviewer's standpoint would be a fuller presentation of the author's personal conclusions concerning the subjects which he has so objectively and adequately presented." G. H. Stuart

+ — Am Pol Sci R 36:769 Ag '42 600w

"In the main this is an excellent book, and it is to be hoped that we may soon have equally good studies of the governments of the other important Latin American nations."

A. P. Whitaker

+ Ann Am Acad 222:218 Jl '42 650w

Booklist 38:440 Jl 15 '42

"The book's main weakness is its unsystematic construction. To deal with a certain topic partially in one section, partially in another, often without cross-references, impairs the value of a work intended to be used as a handbook. But, with all its shortcomings—which, after all, are not surprising in such a first attempt—the book is a very useful contribution to the American public's knowledge of Argentina." F. J. Weil

-- + Pol Sci Q 57:637 D '42 330w

"A volume which lives up to the highest standards of scholarly technic and at the same time profits by the personal exploration of the subject matter 'on location'. . . As a scholarly performance the book has no par in the field of South American political descriptions of the last decade. It is to be wished that others who deal with other South American states emulate the author in objectivity, thoroughness and balance of judgment." Karl Loewenstein

+ Springf'd Republican p10 My 8 '42 1000w

MCDONALD, EDWARD DAVID, and HINTON, EDWARD MARTIN. Drexel institute of technology, 1891-1941. 336p il $3 Drexel inst. of technology, 32d & Chestnut sts, Philadelphia

607 Drexel institute of technology, Philadelphia 42-17182

A memorial history written in commemoration of the fiftieth year of the institution's founding.

J Home Econ 34:553 O '42 50w

School & Society 50:624 My 30 '42 10w

MCDONALD, EUGENE FRANCIS. Youth must fly; gliding and soaring for America. 221p il $2.50 Harper

629.13333 Gliding and soaring (W) 42-5978

"The author, who is president of Zenith Radio corporation, has followed soaring and gliding as hobby and sport for some years. He here brings these forms of flying to the attention of young America, both as recreation and for training. He pays tribute to the contributions to radio development made by amateurs and believes the same may be true of aviation. Appendices occupying about a third of the book give federal regulations and other information." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

Booklist 38:303 Ap 15 '42

Reviewed by Wolfgang Langewiesche

Books p11 Jl 26 '42 500w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:894 O 15 '42 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:35 Jl '42

Pratt p3 O '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:64 Ap '42

MCDONALD, GERALD DOAN. Educational motion pictures and libraries. 183p $2.75 A.L.A.

371.335 Moving pictures in education

(W) 42-36096

"This report points out that librarians have done virtually nothing in the handling of films

MCDONALD, G. D.—Continued

and very little even in providing information which would further their use. How libraries may improve this situation is included in this discussion as well as a consideration of three problems: how to use films to the greatest educational advantage, particularly in adult education; how to improve distribution and provide more 'personalized contact between producer or distributor and the consumer,' and how to train librarians and educators in the intricacies of bringing films into widespread and effective use for educational ends." School & Society

Booklist 38:245 Mr 15 '42

"The basic idea of the book... seems so fundamentally sound that one wonders why it has not long ago received the kind of consideration given in McDonald's book. The volume is well worth the attention of any person concerned with the education of children or adults." Abram VanderMeer

+ EI School J 43:188 N '42 1200w

School & Society 55:252 F 28 '42 80w

MACDONALD, WILLIAM COLT. Boomtown buccaneers. 274p $2 Doubleday

42-18848

Western story.

Booklist 39:103 N 15 '42

"Active tale with no punches pulled." Will Cuppy

Books p31 N 8 '42 100w

MACDONALD, WILLIAM COLT. Crimson quilt. 268p $2 Doubleday

42-50441

Western story.

"This is a superior Western, hearty, sensible and not too cute." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 D 20 '42 110w

"Mr. MacDonald is one of the top-notchers among present-day writers in this class of fiction, and a new novel by him is always a treat for Western fans." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p24 Ja 17 '43 200w

MACDONALD, WILLIAM COLT. Riddle of Ramrod Ridge. 278p $2 Doubleday

42-10311

Western story.

Booklist 38:385 Je 15 '42

"Thoroughly pleasing outdoor yarn." Will Cuppy

+ Books p18 Ap 12 '42 180w

MACDONALD, WILLIAM COLT. Shadow rider. 276p $2 Doubleday [8s 3d Hodder]

42-36039

Western story.

Booklist 38:210 F 15 '42

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p13 Ja 11 '42 130w

"By dint of practice, acquired in doing some twenty-five novels, William Colt MacDonald has placed himself in the forefront of the writers of Western fiction. No man writing Westerns today can write a snappy, salty tale with greater skill. He has not always had such a surpassingly good story to tell; for with the possible exception of 'California Caballero,' this is the best he has yet turned out. In Western lingo, it sure is a humdinger." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p25 F 15 '42 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p417 Ag 30 '41 60w

MACDONALD, ZILLAH KATHERINE. Two on a tow; il. by Harvey Kidder. 231p $2 Houghton

(W) 42-5830

Story of Jerry and Jarvis, twin brothers, and their adventures on an Erie Canal barge belonging to their grandfather.

Booklist 38:311 Ap 15 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 Ap 12 '42 300w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 31 '42 180w

"This excellent story displays a group of unusual characters, convincingly portrayed with humor and realism. More than that, it is eminently successful in giving an accurate idea of the business of handling freight by strings of barges, drawn by a single tug, of the mechanics of locks and the rivalries of canal boat captains, as they race their craft along the way. Attractive pictures interpret the text." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:107 Mr '42 80w

"Action, mystery, and adventure make it an appealing story for boys of middle grades. Adults, however, may question ethics of story in which young lads connive to deceive their grandparents, make decisions by themselves, and risk life while outwitting adults about them. Readable but not especially valuable from standpoint of library purchase. Recommend reading before purchase." A. L. Shea

Library J 67:415 My 1 '42 110w

"'Two on a Tow' has a fresh and interesting background of life on the New York State Barge Canal and an unhackneyed, well worked out plot which is full of surprises for the reader." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Je 14 '42 280w

MACFARLAND, CHARLES STEDMAN. Digest of Christian thinking. 192p $1.50 Revell

016.2 Theology. Religious thought. Books—42-14257

Reviews

As in earlier books in this series, Dr Macfarland discusses and summarizes some forty books on religious topics that have appeared during the past year. Index.

Christian Century 59:635 My 13 '42 50w

Reviewed by W. F. Thompson

Churchman 156:17 Je 15 '42 210w

"The busy minister will save time by reading this book, for it will help him to determine his objectives in reading. The layman who is interested in religious thought will find it of like value." Rittenhouse Neisser

+ Crozer Q 19:253 J1 '42 400w

Reviewed by John Knox

J Religion 22:453 O '42 40w

MACGLASHAN, KATRINE. Horseless buggy. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 306p $2 Little

42-24434

Family portrait of a Middlewestern family of Scotch antecedents. Father and uncle had a bicycle factory, but uncle was tinkering with a strange contraption in the cellar, which turned out to be one of the early automobiles. Uncle was regarded by the neighbors as a bit of a crackpot, and was a source of humiliation to his young lady niece, Belle, but Ellen and Cora were on his side. The story traces the family ups and downs, thru bankruptcy and beyond.

Booklist 39:184 Ja 1 '43

"Katrine MacGlashan has made a delightful addition to the American family album, from the Morrisons themselves down to Mrs. Garety, the cook, who was always 'invigorated by the presence of love in the house,' but in no sense has she sacrificed her real hero to the transient emotions of mere human beings." R. Y. Williams

+ Books p20 N 22 '42 700w

"Pleasant reading. The plot and suspense do not amount to much, so that this would be a good book for the bedside table or for leaving around to be picked up and read in snatches." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p28 N 8 '42 260w

MCGRANE, REGINALD CHARLES. Economic development of the American nation. 691p il maps $3.75 Ginn

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions 42-6108

"This book is designed primarily for undergraduates. Economic developments have been treated chronologically rather than topically, and the material has been organized around successive periods of prosperity and depression. . . To facilitate more detailed study a selective bibliography has been appended to each chapter under the respective topics treated in the individual chapters, and the illustrations in the text have been selected with a view toward emphasizing certain phases of the text material. Particular emphasis has been placed upon the problems of the last few years. . . Brief sketches of some of the dominant industrial leaders and their economic and social philosophies have been introduced in the text, and an account has been given of the recurrent waves of reform that have swept over this country at stated intervals." (Pref) Index.

"Teachers who like to 'quarrel with the text' will welcome McGrane. Although the book is authoritative for most part, it is not free from passages which are open to amplification, qualification, or correction. One notes a strain of Marxist pessimism or depression psychology in the treatment of the epochs 1834-37 and 1922-29 which is revealed by the frequent use of such terms as 'apparent,' 'illusory,' or 'so-called prosperity.' These naïve catchwords are belied by the evidence in the book itself as to the behavior of employment, wages, and production. It is true that prosperity in each case was impermanent and overcapitalized, and affected some regions or industries to a smaller extent than others. This has been characteristic of all prosperous eras; but it has been equally characteristic of the depressions which came along later. The discussion of the crises of the 1830's leaves much to be desired." T. S. Berry

+ — Am Econ R 32:581 S '42 1200w

"As with most texts on this subject, this book contains more of the political and social than the economic. It should, therefore, find acceptance where economic history is offered in departments of history or by political historians. Those teachers who are looking for help in an economic analysis and interpretation of the development of this country will find this book descriptive." F. M. Jones

Ann Am Acad 223:230 S '42 380w

MCGRATH, FERGAL. Father John Sullivan, S.J. 285p $2.75 (8s 6d) Longmans

B or 92 Sullivan, John A42-3667

Father Sullivan was the son of Sir Edward Sullivan, Lord Chancellor of Ireland. Altho his father was a Protestant, and he was brought up in that faith, Father Sullivan's mother was a Catholic, and he later was converted to her religion. This biography stresses the years after Father Sullivan joined the Jesuits, and the manifestations of his saintly character. Index.

Reviewed by F. D. Cohalan

Commonweal 35:625 Ap 10 '42 500w

"Fr. Fergal McGrath has compiled the life of this saintly man with considerable skill, avoiding the excesses and sentimentalities that are common in hagiography, and that occur in some of the tributes paid to Fr. Sullivan. . . Catholics will be edified by accounts of his miracles and his teaching; others will be interested, surprised, impressed and probably puzzled by this description of a life so remote from their experience, and of practices that the more ignorant of them may suppose to have disappeared long since."

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:350 O 11 '41 410w

"The late Father John Sullivan has been fortunate in his biographer, for the author of this book has the gift of making his subject live again through its pages, showing him as a simple, strong, and vivid personality, humble and humorous."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p504 O 11 '41 360w

MACGREGOR, MRS FRANCES M. (COOKE), il. This is America. See Roosevelt, E. R.

MACGREGOR, JOHN CHARLES. Southwestern archaeology. 403p il maps $5 Wiley

913.78 Southwest—Antiquities, Indians of North America—Antiquities, Indians of North America—Civilization 41-26543

"This book is designed as an introduction, and not as a final and complete compendium on the subject. . . The first part presents a theoretical and general background, the principles of which may be successfully applied to archaeological work in any field. . . The second part is an historical reconstruction of the prehistoric Southwest. There are summary chapters on each culture wherein it is evaluated in the light of its history and achievements." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:250 Mr 15 '42

"This book will be indispensable to students of American archaeology." G. B. J.

+ Social Forces 20:533 My '42 90w

MACGREGOR, LESLIE. The aircraft apprentice. 134p il $1.50 Pitman

629.1341 Airplanes—Design and construction (W) 42-36157

"Elementary short text for boys and girls, first explaining the training and selection of a career in aviation, and then briefly describing the theory of flight, the principles of aircraft engines, blueprint reading, machine tools, sheet-metal work, bolting, riveting, welding, and assembly work." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 38:303 Ap 15 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:21 Ap '42

MCGUIRE, PAUL. Westward the course! 434p il maps $3.75 Morrow

* 919 Oceania (W) 42-36040

Survey of the Pacific countries of Hawaii, the Fijis, New Zealand, Australia, the Netherlands Indies, Batavia, Java, and British Malaya, just before the outbreak of the war. The book contains some historical background, and studies of the manners and customs, beliefs, and contemporary history of the "new world of Oceania." Maps. Index.

Booklist 38:208 F 15 '42

"The book is packed with information and challenging thought. Beyond question the person who reads it, in addition to having a good deal of stimulating pleasure, will know more about a vast and tremendously important section of the world than he ever knew before." Lincoln Colcord

+ Books p1 F 15 '42 1450w

"For the writing of these pages the author possesses numerous advantages—wide experience in travel, much practice as a writer, a flair for the unconventional, a jaunty style all his own, an ability to avoid the pitfalls of exaggeration, and, by way of climax, a rich culture. With these he has created the kind of book that large numbers of us will be glad to read." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 154:759 Mr '42 440w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '42

"Even if Mr. McGuire's touch is perhaps surer on the poetry and romance than on the politico-economics of the Pacific, 'Westward the Course!' is urgently recommended for immediate buying or borrowing and careful reading, before the Battle of the Pacific is finished and a new world has emerged." J. G. Murtagh

MCGUIRE, PAUL—Continued

+ — Commonweal 35:483 Mr 6 '42 650w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:785 Jl '42 20w

"A good deal of up-to-the-minute factual material is included. The author is no Gunther, and his diffuse style sometimes hinders the reader. Nevertheless, the fact that very little recent material exists on this subject would seem to warrant inclusion of the volume in most libraries. Maps; excellent photographs." R. H. McDonough

+ — Library J 67:130 F 1 '42 80w

"Mr. McGuire is a very well-informed and enlightened imperialist, but an imperialist he is. In spite of all this, however, his book is still enjoyable and still informative. The thirty-two photographs and three maps are excellent."

+ Nation 154:441 Ap 11 '42 180w

"A mature, well written survey."

+ New Repub 106:374 Mr 16 '42 90w

"It is a full-packed and many-faceted treasury of information to have by your side as the daily news comes in, and it is also a thoughtful study of the course of modern 'empire' to ponder over and remember. In both aspects it is timely and enlightening, and its author's style combines mettlesome picturesqueness, courageous earnestness and erudite wit. The book's immediate appeal is in its vivid and comprehensive presentation of facts about some of the lands and people now joined as an 'inevitable bloc for social, political and economic cooperation,' as well as military activity, in Malaya, the Indies and Australasia." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p3 F 15 '42 1450w

"Imperialism, new style, with some moralizing, but a superior job. Witty, penetrating, and distinguished."

+ New Yorker 17:71 F 14 '42 70w

"The swift advance of the Japanese since this book was written has made much of it as stale as yesterday's newspaper headline. It would therefore not be fair for a reviewer to use hindsight as a bludgeon to belabor McGuire for soured prognosis. However, the turn of events now gives a startling appearance to such statements as 'Singapore was one point at which the British were not caught unprepared.' . . . As a popular work the book has value in that it provides colorful, 'human-interest' material for the ordinary reader now vitally interested in these regions and peoples joined as an 'inevitable bloc for social, political and economical co-operation.'" Howard Daniel

Pacific Affairs 15:237 Je '42 310w

"Much of the writing is impressionistic—excellent stuff too—but information of a fairly solid kind is inserted at judiciously selected intervals. . . In short, 'Westward the Course!' is a book to read while you run, for the fun of being with that engaging chap Paul McGuire, a fascinating talker, skilful raconteur, aggressive moralist, and ardent propagandist for the recovery of the 'moral unity of Christendom.'" C. H. Grattan

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:8 F 14 '42 750w

Wis Lib Bul 38:45 Mr '42

"This is a fine book. The author is well read and very comprehending. He does his job conscientiously. He does not tell the whole story of Oceania, but he indicates the broad outlines of a region bound to be of extreme importance in the future development of the world." Raymond Kennedy

+ Yale R n s 31:616 spring '42 750w

MACINNES, HELEN (MRS GILBERT HIGGET). Assignment in Brittany. 373p $2.50 Little

(W) 42-17993

The time is the summer of 1940. Martin Hearne, a British secret service man, resembles Bertrand Corlay, a Frenchman picked up at Dunkirk, so strongly that he is trained to take Corlay's place at his home in Brittany. There were a few important things Corlay had omitted to tell Hearne—that he was a Nazi organizer was one of them; and about his friendship with the blonde Elise was another. In his attempts to gather information for the English, Hearne was captured by the Nazis, endured torture, escaped along the secret passage under Mont St Michel, and was rescued during a commando raid.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (17) B & T (1) N Y Times (12) PW (5) RB (4)

Reviewed by R. M. Gay

Atlantic 170:136 S '42 220w

Booklist 38:443 Jl 15 '42

Bookmark 4:17 N '42

"Again Helen MacInnes has done it. . . 'Assignment in Brittany' leaves small doubt as to her creative powers. She is more than the weaver of an exciting tale of war intrigue; she is a novelist who can hold her own on literary grounds. Her background, her characterization, her detail of plot and dialogue possesses finesse and subtlety and reality. And just as she brought the feeling and atmosphere of Germany into her first book, so does she capture and translate for the reader the strength and the spirit of the land and the people of Brittany." Rose Feld

+ Books p2 Jl 12 '42 650w

"'Assignment in Brittany' [is] one of the best adventure stories of the year. But Miss MacInnes is not limited to plot—her characters have depth and charm, her countryside is real and sensuous. This novel is an adequate vehicle for the bravery of those people who fight occupation, not as an army with banners, but as solitary shadows in the watches of the night." Dorothy Hillyer

+ Boston Globe p19 Jl 8 '42 650w

"There is not a dull moment in this stormy spy novel, and the author's Breton portraits of farmers, inn keepers, patriots and Quislings are drawn to the life. A delightful love story, subsidiary to the plot, adds greatly to the interest of the book, which captures the spirit and loyalty of the people of Occupied France."

+ Cath World 155:765 S '42 230w

Commonweal 36:547 S 25 '42 140w

"Librarians doubtless will find this story worth purchasing." A. M. Colt

+ Library J 67:629 Jl '42 50w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:897 O 15 '42 10w

"The author of 'Above Suspicion' gives us another literate tale of British espionage, less ingenious than its predecessor but more firmly written. . . It is neither a new device nor a very credible one, and Hearne, the expert lacks the charm of Miss MacInnes's earlier non-professional hero and heroine. But Miss MacInnes has an unusual sense of terrain, and her picture of Nazi-occupied Brittany is at least geographically absorbing."

+ — Nation 155:57 Jl 18 '42 150w

"Altogether it appears that the success of 'Above Suspicion' was no accident. 'Assignment in Brittany' is a consistently good piece of story-telling of its kind. And the kind is one of which there is never, in any circumstance, enough to go around. To the place left vacant by John Buchan's death, or to the one James Hilton deserted when he went to Hollywood, Helen MacInnes seems the most hopeful aspirant in anything like recent seasons." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 Jl 12 '42 700w

"Although this story is firmly put together and written in agreeably literate English, it lacks the freshness that made 'Above Suspicion' memorable."

+ New Yorker 18:56 Jl 11 '42 120w

"An entertaining, thrilling story, but all the freshness has gone. You are disappointed to feel that it is merely the old story in a new guise, all trimmed up for another success which it may or may not have along the lines of the first. The author employs a bagful of stale tricks." Klaus Lambrecht

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:12 Ag 8 '42 360w

Time 40:90 Jl 13 '42 130w

Wis Lib Bul 38:138 O '42

MCINNIS, EDGAR W. Unguarded frontier; a history of American-Canadian relations. 384p $3 Doubleday

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Canada. Canada—Foreign relations—U.S. 42-24583

A history of the relations between the United States and Canada from Colonial times to the present. About half the book is devoted to the period from 1814 on, the years of peaceful relations across an unguarded border, years which witnessed controversies and political strains, but no armed conflicts. A note on bibliography. Index.

Booklist 39:116 D 1 '42

"Scholarly, thorough, painstaking survey." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Books p3 N 8 '42 550w

"Not written in a style that will interest general reader. Presupposes rather thorough knowledge of all American history. Valuable contribution in its special field. Index and maps would have been helpful. Limited appeal." H. R. Burdett

+ Library J 67:908 O 15 '42 80w

Reviewed by J. H. Gray

Nation 155:552 N 21 '42 180w

"The author's extraordinary grasp of the details of Canadian and United States history has enabled him to offer many penetrating observations and interpretations. His book is not a history of Canada. It assumes a knowledge of Canadian and United States history which some readers will not have. But for those especially, the book will provide a new appreciation of the close interrelation of the two neighbors who, for the most part, have lived together in decency and friendship for a long time, and whose future will probably be even more closely linked than their past has been." Carl Wittke

+ New Eng Q 15:730 D '42 700w

"A book scholarly enough for the professional historian and popular enough for the general reader." H. P. Whidden, Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 25:9 N 28 '42 450w

MCINTIRE, MRS MARGUERITE (PEAR-MAN). Carey Brown. 305p $2.50 Farrar

42-3380

The Lindsay Browns, living on the outskirts of a small Maine town, were a lazy, shiftless, dirty lot—all that is except Gram and her favorite grandchild, Carey. This story tells how Carey grew up, hating dirt and vicious ways, and how she finally attained her goal, a clean house, babies, and a husband who wasn't afraid of work.

"'Carey Brown' is an earthy but lively story. It may make the reader feel decidedly itchy to read it. It may even shock him. But once started on the problem of removing the lice from Carey's hair, he will not be indifferent to her fate nor will he set the book down." Rosemary Benet

+ Books p8 My 17 '42 650w

"In spite of the darkness and the drabness of the life of the Browns, Mrs. McIntire writes about them with heartening lightness and flashes of sound humor. It is not that she writes down to her characters, but rather that she captures the zest with which they live. . . . The escape of Carey from the Browns is a little too heavily contrived, but it makes a good ending for Carey." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p22 My 17 '42 650w

"Amusing and observant."

+ New Yorker 18:74 My 16 '42 50w

MACINTYRE, CARLYLE FERREN. Black bull; poems. 112p $2.50 Press of James A. Decker 811

42-18229

"While the poems are strictly contemporary in form, they are not so in content. . . . There is mysticism, with modern brackets; considerable celestial colloquy with satiric implications. . . . The poems on people are among Mr.

MacIntyre's best: there is an excellent tribute to Hart Crane, and a series of skilled portraits in sonnet form." Books

"Because most of C. F. MacIntyre's poems, read separately, seem so good, it is hard to say just why this book as a whole leaves one dissatisfied. His work is technically clever, the figures eloquent and fresh, the diction informal and conversational."

+ Books p27 N 1 '42 200w

Reviewed by Harvey Breit

Poetry 60:343 S '42 300w

"C. F. MacIntyre is a cultivated and educated man with a gift for poetry, but very uneven in his execution. The smooth flatness of his 'Vigils' is nadir. But, on the other hand, 'Maidens' is flawless. 'Moon-Gazers' delightful." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 25:21 Ap 25 '42 230w

MACINTYRE, ELISABETH. Ambrose Kangaroo. [32p] il $1.50 Scribner

42-18292

"Coming from Australia, this nonsense picture book introduces a number of animals, strange to this hemisphere, like the emu and platypus, as well as Ambrose Kangaroo himself. There are rabbits, too, but it is only when the naughty little Kangaroo finds a flock of sheep that he secures playmates." Horn Bk

"All the animals are so droll, the dove-gray, pink and violet colors so gay and soft, and the artist's affection for little furry creatures so evident, that it makes a most cosy picture-book for children too young to read or even just beginning to be read to." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Jl 19 '42 300w

Churchman 156:15 N 15 '42 20w

"Any one sharing this book with a young child should be prepared to repeat the reading more than once. The colors are gay and the childlike repetitive story is amusing to five-year-olds who recently have heard the name Australia for the first time." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:255 Jl '42 80w

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus

Library J 67:687 Ag '42 90w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:882 O 15 '42 20w

"The tale of little Ambrose's day of freedom is both simple and, on a little child's level, thrilling, with just the right quality of adventure for the 3 to 6 year old, while the neat fashion in which the author turns Ambrose's history into a story that never ends appeals to the young child's sense of humor. The pictures, in gay and charming colors, have humor and immense liveliness and have evidently been drawn with zest and a sense of fun." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 30 '42 180w

New Yorker 18:105 D 12 '42 70w

"Delightful reading for the very young."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:28 N 14 '42 30w

MACIVER, ROBERT MORRISON. Social causation. 414p $3.50 Ginn

301.8 Causation. Social sciences—Methodology 42-14821

"This book aims to establish three theses: that causality is a universal and primary category, incapable of further analysis; that the generic idea of cause as 'the simple, ineluctable notion of making something happen' covers specifically different types of causal connections, and that social causation in particular has a nature distinct from that of physical causation; and finally, that the search for causal connections in the social realm must employ methods of investigation which are different from those used by the natural sciences. Without being primarily polemical, the book is an obvious challenge to positivistic and behavioristic trends of thought in the social sciences." (J Philos) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by D. W. Calhoun

Am Soc R 7:714 O '42 2550w

MACIVER, R. M.—Continued

"Aside from a certain mental stimulus which a treatise of this sort gives, I cannot but feel that such philosophical and logical exercises tend to be sterile in results. The book is pleasantly written and the annotated bibliography is interestingly arranged." M. R. Davie
Ann Am Acad 223:252 S '42 750w

Reviewed by Ernest Nagel
J Philos 39:552 S 24 '42 2050w

Reviewed by H. E. Moore
Social Forces 21:246 D '42 850w

MACKAY, MRS HELEN GANSEVOORT (EDWARDS). With love for France. 139p $2 Scribner

940.5344 World war, 1939—France. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 42-14555

Mrs Mackay, an American who has lived in France for more than thirty years, in this book gives a series of short, pointed pictures of France and French life during the months between September, 1939 and June, 1940. Part of the time she was in Paris, then in Dinard, then back in Paris again.

Booklist 38:439 JI 15 '42

Reviewed by Felizia Seyd
Books p2 JI 12 '42 450w

"This modest volume of 140 pages is more eloquent than dozens of other books dealing with the fall of France. Its disarming quality acts like a balm on wounds which are too painful to be talked about. That France can be the object of such love and understanding from an American renews one's faith in a country capable of inspiring such devotion." C. H. Bishop

+ Commonweal 36:305 JI 17 '42 550w

"This is a book of real people and how they felt. Those who know and love France will be thankful for it." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p6 My 24 '42 900w

"In spite of the poignant material, the book is not as moving as it might be. This is partly because of the curious style. It is as if Mrs. Mackay had forgotten her native English and substituted a mixture of sentences from a French grammar, a dash of Hemingway and a touch of Gertrude Stein instead." R. C. Benét

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:13 JI 18 '42 400w

MACKAYE, DAVID L. and MACKAYE, J. G. See David, J., pseud.MCKEE, RUTH ELEANOR. Storm Point. 337p $2.50 Doubleday

42-24443

Storm Point was the name of the Storm family home, a gloomy house set on a high point overlooking the California coast. The heritage of disaster, beginning with Black Matthew Storm had recurred in his grandson Daniel, a musical genius, but a drunkard. Daniel's daughter Sheila is the central character. It is the story of her life from the age of twelve to twenty-four, during the years 1928 to 1940.

Booklist 39:138 D 15 '42

"Had Miss McKee been content with a simpler canvas for her story, this novel would be one of greater force and less confusion. For it is too crowded a book, overlaid with the problems and struggles of too many characters—the students who come to work with Daniel, Sheila's tutors, the friends and lovers she finds at the university—and their complex stories, left vague and half-told, contribute little to the drama of Sheila and her family. But if there are many unfinished digressions Miss McKee has made that part of her story with which she is primarily concerned—the pattern of Sheila Storm's development—one that is told honestly, vividly and well." Pearl Kazin

+ — Books p12 N 1 '42 600w

"More competently than convincingly written. Since 1934, Miss McKee has published five well-received novels." Catherine Van Dyne
Library J 67:909 O 15 '42 70w

Reviewed by Rose Feld
N Y Times p26 N 8 '42 550w

MCKENNY, MARGARET. Trees of the countryside; il. with lithographs by Alice Bird. 63p $2 Knopf

582.16 Trees (W) 42-14697

Describes the habitat, peculiarities, and general characteristics of twenty trees commonly found in the United States. Each tree has a full-page colored lithograph, and small drawings of leaf, blossom and fruit.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p5 Ag 30 '42 250w

Reviewed by A. E. Brown
Library J 67:741 S 1 '42 90w

"Most tree books emphasize leaf and flower in order to aid in identification. Miss McKenny's book will make an excellent supplement to these for readers who have a special interest in the subject. Not only boys and girls but nature lovers of any age will enjoy these charming pictures which give so successfully the feeling of the countryside where each of the trees described is a native." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 S 13 '42 240w
Wis Lib Bul 38:190 D '42

MACKINDER, SIR HALFORD JOHN. Democratic ideals and reality; a study in the politics of reconstruction; introd. by Edward Mead Earle; foreword by George Fielding Eliot. reissue 219p maps $2.50; college ed $1.90 Holt

940.314 European war, 1914-1918—Peace. Sociology. Geography. World politics. League of nations 42-20675

"This remarkable work, written in 1919, is now given a timely new impetus. From it Haushofer and the modern geopoliticians are supposed to have drawn much of their theory. Sir Halford's main contention is that domination over the 'Heartland' (central and eastern Europe) means domination of the world. Maps and diagrams." (New Yorker) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1919.

Reviewed by H. W. Stoke
Am Pol Sci R 36:1171 D '42 650w

Reviewed by Crane Brinton
Ann Am Acad 225:236 Ja '43 650w

"In present understanding of the political and social trends that are shaping the modern world this eminent British geographer ranks with Oswald Spengler and Ortega y Gasset, even though his little book lacks the ponderous, prolix scholarship of The Decline of the West and the salty paradoxical quality of The Revolt of the Masses. Sir Halford is obviously at home in history as well as in geography, equipped with the detailed specific knowledge which alone makes possible the intuitive long view. Most important of all, he possesses the indispensable quality of the true seer: ability to look into the future without being too much affected by the emotional impact of his immediate surroundings." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic 170:152 D '42 700w

Booklist 39:105 N 15 '42

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson
Christian Century 59:1216 O 7 '42 1250w
Commonweal 36:572 O 2 '42 70w

Reviewed by H. A. Von Uff
Library J 67:681 Ag '42 30w

Reviewed by J. R. Smith
New Repub 107:322 S 14 '42 1500w
New Yorker 18:59 Ag 22 '42 50w

Reviewed by J. G. McDonald
Survey G 32:56 F '43 450w
Time 41:92 Ja 11 '43 440w

MCKINLEY, SILAS BENT. Democracy and military power; with an introd. by Charles A. Beard. new and enl ed 350p $3 Vanguard 355.09 Military art and science. Infantry. Democracy. Political science—History

41-25242

Originally published in 1934 (Book Review Digest, 1934) this study of military power as controlled by a dominant citizen infantry, is now republished with two added chapters. These chapters are a résumé of military developments since 1934, and a discussion of the threat to democracy constituted by the Axis. Bibliography. No index.

"The two chapters added contribute very little to the value of the book. . . But the original chapters contain a statement and an attempted verification of a vitally important thesis, one which deserves the emphasis given by the republication of the book. This thesis is that the common man can secure a significant place in political affairs only when he has a significant place in military affairs. . . To the reviewer, the argument is convincing and extremely important." Vernon Van Dyke

+ — Am Pol Sci R 36:388 Ap '42 380w

"In two platitudinous chapters written in 1941, the author calls for clouds of airplanes and thundering hordes of tanks, in order to defeat the Axis. Having answered such a call, Dr. McKinley can hardly expect the victorious powers to revert to the mere maintenance of a foot-slogging National Guard. Nor does he attempt to draw from his thesis any conclusions as to the nature of whatever post-war armies are to be permitted. His book therefore remains an academic treatise."

New Repub 106:29 Ja 5 '42 120w

MCLEAN, BETH BAILEY. See Bailey, N. B.

MACLEAN, CATHERINE MACDONALD. Seven for Cordelia. 270p $2.50 Macmillan [8s Chambers]

(W) 42-36024

The seven were children evacuated from the slums of Edinburgh and Glasgow, to a farm in the Scottish highlands. Cordelia was the gracious, understanding mistress of the farm, who with her husband, Donald, provided a haven for the little band. The character of each child stands out in this quiet story, but it is wee Rab, aged six, with his staunch independence and his adoration of Cordelia, who holds the center of the stage.

Booklist 38:190 F 1 '42

Bookmark 3:16 My '42

"The reader stands to gain in many ways from this sharply etched picture of an eventful home. In the foreground are the figures of the seven children—not conventional children, but actual little persons with qualities ranging all the way from the imps' to the angels'. Hardly less captivating is the background chronicle of the life of the farm through the slow turn of seasons. . . 'Seven for Cordelia' does not gloss over or underscore the inroads of war. It does stand witness that in the midst of change life can be lived with courage and grace and, for the most part, with gaiety. Furthermore, in both the novelty and distinction of its portraiture, it is a tale of unusual charm." Mary Ross

+ Books p4 F 1 '42 500w

"These are hopeful stories, perhaps because their people are real as the earth and their background of seedtime and harvest, of sun and snow and misty mountainsides, belongs to the things which war cannot touch."

+ Christian Century 59:732 Je 3 '42 100w

"This is not 'just another book about evacuees.' These children are keen with the special Scots' level, logical minds and the exterior of seemingly impenetrable hardness, so sensitive at heart. The farm engages them quickly enough, with its strange new ways of life, its methodical routines. Perhaps the big, essential point of these unforgettable pictures is the cruel separation of family members, which no amount of safety, of happier living can remedy." M. L. E.

+ Churchman 156:31 F 15 '42 100w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

Horn Bk M 18:31 Mr '42 170w

"Simply and beautifully written. Excellent for a young people's list." M. H. Zipprich

+ Library J 67:41 Ja 1 '42 60w

"The children's story is interesting, lively and entertaining. But there is something a little precious in the author's slant on these slum youngsters, even a shade of kindly snobishness. And her obvious admiration for the admirable Cordelia and her worthy husband makes the ordinary sinful reader feel that this pair are such paragons that it would be salutary to catch them up on just one thing." Beatrice Sherman

+ — N Y Times p7 Ja 25 '42 700w

"No one who has ever lived on a farm will be able to resist the thrill of Mrs. Maclean's sketches, the deftness and economy with which she suggests the ardors, the enjoyment and the unceasing drudgery which are the lot of those who wait on the seasons and the beasts. Mrs. Maclean must be congratulated, too, on the precision and the sympathy with which she portrays the changes in the children." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 25:15 F 14 '42 430w

"The 'seven' are 'evacuees,' and this is the only ordinary feature of the book, which incidentally comes with a glowing and deserved recommendation from Rachel Field. It is an unshapely chronicle, told by a visitor friend, but there is a hard core of integrity to it, softened by the compassion of Cordelia . . . by the author's understanding, and by the humour provided by the impact of haves and never-have-hads. However little or much of fiction there may be in it, there is real character in this picture of a strange but fortunate migration."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p658 D 27 '41 130w

Wis Lib Bul 33:87 My '42

MCLEAN, ROBERT NORRIS. Traded twins. 150p il $1; pa 60c Friendship press

42-14592

"On the surface this is the story of a high school boy's summer in Mexico as the guest of a missionary friend of his preacher-father. He had real adventures—bandits and everything, but they were bandits that did not prevent him from liking Mexico, and even them. Under all that, it is a book about the Mexican people and evangelical missions." Christian Century

"Vivacious in style and authentic in its picture of Mexico."

+ Christian Century 59:758 Je 10 '42 70w

Reviewed by Miriam Snow

Library J 67:632 Jl '42 80w

MACLEOD, NORMAN. We thank you all the time. 72p $2 Press of James A. Decker

811

41-11348

"[This] is the most recent volume of one of the republic's most prolific verse writers. Mr. Macleod writes about Indians, strikes, W.P.A., Tajikistan, Horizons, Life, Death, Beauty, Bellevue, Television, Sing-Sing and War." Poetry

"In each poem Mr. Macleod's style changes. He is not a 'recognizable poet,' but he is certainly one of the most intelligent poets writing." P. M. Jack

N Y Times p4 F 1 '42 400w

"A volume thin in more senses than one, and certainly not up to the general level of Mr. Macleod's verse. But for the Indians we do thank him. With reservations." Nelson Algren

Poetry 59:223 Ja '42 240w

MACLIESH, ARCHIBALD FLEMING (ARCHIBALD FLEMING, pseud). Destroyers. 128p $2 Day

812 Arthur, king of Britain—Drama 42-9268

A play, partly in verse, based on the life of King Arthur. It dramatizes the struggle between Arthur and the traitor Medrawt, ending in their death. It attempts to typify the "forces of creation, destruction, and rebirth."

"The enemy is so confused with plots and counter-plots, and the cause of all the trouble is left so completely unexplained, that the reader is bewildered no less by the story than the anachronisms. It is hardly a tempting item for a little theater. Sometimes one wonders if the plays the wicked commercial theater rejects aren't rejected for good and sufficient reasons." W. P. Eaton

— Books p19 O 11 '42 140w

"In 'The Destroyers' for the first time the auditory magic of poetry of a high order is combined with an unerring sense of character, plot, and action. That clean, electric excitement which we experience in the finest work of the Elizabethans, is communicated to the reader in the opening lines. . . . If the outcome of the present world conflict is anything like what we hope, the poet will undoubtedly write a different kind of play, even a different kind of tragedy. But as it is, and since 'The Destroyers' is in no sense 'promising,' we should be grateful for what he has written and see that it is produced on the stage. The theatre, no less than poetry, has long required this kind of revitalization." Selden Rodman

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 Ap 25 '42 1100w

MCLINTOCK, ALEXANDER H. Establishment of constitutional government in Newfoundland, 1783-1832; a study of retarded colonisation. (Royal empire soc. Imperial studies) 246p $6 (15s) Longmans

342.718 Newfoundland—Constitutional history [41-27671]

"This monograph is a thesis approved for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in the University of London. The author is a New Zealander. . . . Dr. McLintock's object is to bridge the gap between the 'struggling community' of 1783 and the 'flourishing colony which received the gift of representative government in 1832.' As no other comprehensive history of this period in Newfoundland has been published, the author had almost a virgin field in which to work." Canadian Hist R

"This monograph was planned as a thesis for the degree of doctor of philosophy in the University of London and has the merits and demerits of such works. One of its chief merits arises from the comparative detachment of the author, who is a New Zealander and, therefore, able to approach the subject with a fresh and open mind. On the other hand, the limitations imposed upon the author by the requirements of such a thesis, as well as those inherent in that stage of his training, impel him to make artificial arrangements of material and summary judgements of character which otherwise he might not have made. Consequently the overlapping of material in the middle chapters of this book is rather confusing, while the application of such phrases as 'They firmly believed' and 'In all sincerity they feared' to advocates of eighteenth century colonial policy hardly indicates either profound thought or prolonged research." D. C. Harvey

+ Am Hist R 47:909 Jl '42 550w

"Dr. McLintock develops his theme with convincing logic. He is at his best when he relates internal events in Newfoundland to the wider movements of the period. . . . Dr. McLintock's character sketches, too, although few in number, are unerringly executed, particularly his portrayal of Dr. Parson, of Patrick Morris, and of Sir Thomas Cochrane. The author's style is lucid and interesting." A. M. Fraser

+ Ann Am Acad 220:238 Mr '42 1000w

"Dr. McLintock has dealt with all sides of the island's history during his period, and has been careful throughout to show how developments in Newfoundland were linked to the general colonial policies of Great Britain. He has written in an interesting style and his book deserves study by all students of colonial government or of Newfoundland history. There is a good index and an extensive bibliography. The eight appendices include a map, but contain no extracts from any Newfoundland 'constitutional' Act." G. O. Rothney

+ Canadian Hist R 23:84 Mr '42 850w

Reviewed by H. A. Innis

Geog R 32:505 Jl '42 430w

Times [London] Lit Sup p265 My 31 '41 650w

MCMACKIN, FRANK JOSEPH, and SHAVER, JOHN H. Mathematics of the shops. 444p il $2.50 Van Nostrand

621.75 Mathematics. Machine shop practice (W) 42-4625

"The text lays the groundwork for the application of mathematics to shop problems by explaining in simple language the fundamentals of arithmetic, algebra, geometry and trigonometry. Emphasis is then given to basic problems arising in the building trades, the electrical shop and the machine shop." (Pref) Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:25 Ap '42

MCMECKIN, CLARK, pseud. of MRS DOROTHY (PARK) CLARK and MRS ISABELLA (MCLENNAN) MCMECKIN. Welcome soldier! 335p $2.50 Appleton-Century

42-7631

A novel about two wars in which the same set of characters provide the action. Camp Zachary Taylor, in 1918, and Fort Taylor, in November 1941, is the locale. In 1918 Andy Bennett set out for France from Camp Zachary Taylor, leaving Mary Lou Nelson disconsolate, and when he was reported missing, probably dead, Mary Lou mourned him as "her lover dead." In 1941 Colonel Andy Bennett turned up again at Fort Taylor, and found Mary Lou still waiting, but not for long.

Booklist 38:309 Ap 15 '42

"There is an acid, but not too acid, humor underlying 'Welcome Soldier.' The background of war activity, changing, yet in many ways the same—1918 contrasted with 1941—is well suggested. This is an amusing book, a lively picture, with a certain timely quality about the situation and setting." Rosemary Benet

+ Books p3 Mr 29 '42 700w

"Deft handling and sure characterization. A love story rather than a war novel; pathos without tears." Catherine Van Dyne

+ Library J 67:225 Mr 1 '42 80w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p7 Ap 12 '42 400w

Wis Lib Bul 38:88 My '42

MCMECKIN, MRS ISABEL (MCLENNAN). Journey cake; il. by Nicholas Panesis. 231p $2 Messner

(W) 42-23634

Historical tale for grades five to seven. It describes a long journey from the Yadkin valley into Kentucky in the 1780's, taken by Juba, a free Negro woman, and her six motherless charges, all of whom she brought in safety to their father. Glossary.

Booklist 39:108 N 15 '42

"A fine contribution to children's understanding of a time and a type of which few examples are found in fiction for them. . . . Time and type are historically true, the first comes back alive, and Juba is herself and no other though there were many in her class." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 N 15 '42 450w

"It is as outstanding in matter as attractive in format. . . . It's a fine book for both boys and girls."

+ Cath World 156:377 D '42 160w

"A fine story of pioneer days in America, unusual because of its action, vitality and its courageous heroine." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 24 '42 140w

Horn Bk 19:38 Ja '43 110w

Reviewed by S. J. Johnson

Library J 67:1069 D 1 '42 70w

"The loyalty and courage of Juba is a tribute to all Negro nurses. The children have individual caliber. Occasionally the style is self-conscious, but the story maintains its power to the end. It deserves a long popularity with older boys and girls." I. S.

+ N Y Times p32 N 15 '42 260w

New Yorker 18:108 D 12 '42 60w

MCNAUGHTON, WAYNE LESLIE. Development of labor relations law. 197p $3; pa $2.50 Am. council on public affairs

331.1 Labor laws and legislation—U.S. Labor contract. U.S. National labor relations board. Arbitration, Industrial 41-17668

In the preface of this book the author states that "the field of labor relations and the law concerning rules of collective bargaining and closely related activities are the subject matter of the present study. Its major aim is to appraise the contributions of the decade of the 'thirties, a decade which has seen many changes take place in the field of labor law."

"In his findings and conclusions, the author has relied heavily upon what the courts have said, and upon what other students think about what the courts have said. The result is that there is very little original evaluation either of specific trends or of instances of reasoning." G. H. Hildebrand, Jr.

Am Econ R 32:185 Mr '42 330w

"This work is largely descriptive rather than theoretical or critical, and is offered in simple, direct, and readable language. The author has accomplished his purpose by presenting a clear picture of the legal relationships in industry under the Roosevelt Administration in contrast with those which existed before. Dr. McNaughton's wide knowledge of cases and source material bearing upon his thesis is evidenced by his choice of documentary proof for his statements." A. G. Taylor

+ Ann Am Acad 218:235 N '41 360w

Harvard Law R 55:178 N '41 300w

MACNEIL, MARION GILL. Sailor Jack; il. by Robert MacNeil. [48p] $1 Oxford

42-17475

Sailor Jack was a very small boy with a knowledge of the sea and ships, because his father was also a sailor. Jack ran away from home one day, and was scolded for it, but everyone had to admit it was lucky he did, because his knowledge saved his father's ship.

"Very slight and not as appealing to small children as Soldier Sammy because of their unfamiliarity with navy boats." Gertrude Andrus

Library J 67:796 S 15 '42 50w

"A pleasant little story of absorbing interest for the 4 to 6 year olds, who enjoy the surprise at the end. The large type, the simple sentences, arranged in short lines on the page and the many pictures make this a useful book for beginners in reading."

+ N Y Times p31 N 22 '42 180w

MACNEIL, MARION GILL. Soldier Sammy; il. by Pelagie Doane. [48p] $1 Oxford

42-7640

Story for four year olds about a small boy who lived with his father and mother at a military barracks, and longed to march with the real soldiers in the parades.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 Mr 29 '42 150w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 27 '42 130w

"Plenty of action and a surprise at the end that will delight young listeners. Illustrations by Pelagie Doane. May be used in pre-school collections and will be equally useful with beginning readers because of the large type." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 67:269 Mr 15 '42 110w

MACPHERSON, MARGARET L. (MRS W. T. ALBERT). I heard the Anzacs singing. 354p $2 Creative age

919.4 Australia—Description and travel. New Zealand—Description and travel

(W) 42-14800

"Author was for many years the only woman newspaper editor in New Zealand. Not a travel book. Gives information on public health, child welfare, architecture, art, literature, politics, and life of Australia and New Zealand." Library J

Booklist 38:424 Jl 1 '42

"Although not in the realm of folklore or legend, this is the stuff that appeals to Americans and gives them a far better idea of the 'down under' Allies than any amount of poetry or art criticism." Beach Conger

Books p15 Jl 12 '42 650w

Boston Globe p19 Je 3 '42 420w

"Here is a travelogue, panoramic in scope, vivid and detailed in human interest. A good Baedeker for soldiers bound for the Land Down Under; and as such full of pith and moment for their families." Margaret Davis

+ Cath World 155:500 Jl '42 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '42

Library J 67:476 My 15 '42 40w

New Repub 106:838 Je 15 '42 60w

"It is an informal introduction, this, but a singularly pleasant one. And it will be a dull reader who does not find it effective, as it is engaging, witty and alive."

+ N Y Times p4 Je 14 '42 550w

"Not much more than skin-deep, but cheerful and friendly."

New Yorker 18:80 Je 6 '42 20w

Reviewed by C. H. Grattan

Sat R of Lit 25:12 Je 27 '42 360w

"Anecdotal, conversational, friendly—these are a few of the adjectives that may be applied to this gay, frank book about Australia and New Zealand."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:3 Je '42 420w

MACQUEEN, JAMES WILLIAM (JAMES G. EDWARDS, pseud). Death among doctors. 272p $2 Doubleday

42-15041

Detective story.

"This offering boasts no great narrative skill, but it has its excitement and the secret struck us as well kept." Will Cuppy

Books p15 Je 7 '42 300w

"It is odd that Dr. Edwards, himself a medical man, has chosen to picture members of his profession in such an unfavorable light. The most charitable explanation is that he has made use of the hospital background because he is familiar with it and that, having so chosen, the doctors and nurses naturally become the chief characters in his story. Even so, he is open to the criticism of fouling his own nest." Isaac Anderson

— N Y Times p23 Je 7 '42 200w

"Fair."

Sat R of Lit 25:19 Je 13 '42 30w

MCSWIGAN, MARIE. Snow treasure; il. by Mary Reardon. 179p il $2 Dutton

(W) 42-2896

In June 1940 a Norwegian freighter docked at Baltimore and unloaded $9,000,000 worth of gold bullion from Norway. The gold had been carried down the mountain by children riding their sleds under the very noses of the Nazis, and hiding the bullion under snowmen, where it was found and removed at night by willing grownups and loaded onto the freighter. This story is based on that fact, and tells the part played in the adventure by a twelve-year-old boy.

MCSWIGAN, MARIE—Continued

Booklist 38:253 Mr 15 '42

"They say this is a true story, or at least firmly founded on fact. Certainly it is timely, good for stiffening morale. If a little group of Norwegian children can so rise to the occasion in a country under occupation, the backbone of any child straightens to read about it."

+ Books p18 My 10 '42 350w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 31 '42 140w

"Lively action and narrow escapes from discovery give plenty of excitement to the story."

A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:179 My '42 70w

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus

Library J 67:269 Mr 15 '42 80w

"It is a story of courage and wits and grim determination, and though the most tragic aspects of the invasion have no place in it, it makes plain to readers of 9 to 12 the treachery and arrogance with which the enemies of three-quarters of the world are trying to stamp out freedom." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 15 '42 310w

"Intense reading for any child from nine to twelve years old."

New Yorker 18:74 My 23 '42 70w

MCWILLIAMS, CAREY. Ill fares the land; migrants and migratory labor in the United States. 419p $3 Little 331.763 Agricultural labor. Migration of workers. Agriculture—Economic aspects. U.S.—Economic conditions (W) 42-5664

"The author of 'Factories in the Field' [Book Review Digest, 1939] points out the great changes taking place in our agriculture: the more or less definite shift toward large-scale industrialized farming and the dislocation of an increasing army of Joads all over the country." (New Yorker) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:268 Ap 1 '42

Bookmark 3:5 Mr '42

Reviewed by P. M. Wagner

Books p1 Mr 22 '42 2350w

"There are armchair agriculturists who are primarily interested in the social side of the problem. For them the diagnosis in 'Ill Fares the Land' is highly recommended. Carey McWilliams's latest book makes disturbing reading. The farm picture resulting from 'factories in the fields,' as he puts it, cries for readjustment, and his evidence is weightily documented." Edward Skillin, Jr.

+ Commonweal 35:556 Mr 27 '42 900w

"Probably the most comprehensive survey to date of the problem of migratory labor throughout the United States. Fully documented, with copious extracts from the testimony before the Tolan and LaFollette investigating committees, it makes The Grapes of Wrath seem like a minor incident in the tragic record of poverty and want, squalor and insecurity. . . The book is well-written—simple, concise, always interesting. Highly recommended." M. A. Gray

+ Library J 67:223 Mr 1 '42 80w

Reviewed by Russell Lord

Nation 154:440 Ap 11 '42 550w

Reviewed by P. B. Sears

New Repub 106:547 Ap 20 '42 900w

Reviewed by Francis Brown

N Y Times p3 Mr 29 '42 1250w

"A startling book, well done and solidly documented."

+ New Yorker 18:79 Mr 14 '42 50w

Pratt p21 O '42

"'Ill Fares the Land' is terrifying. The style is quiet, sharp, and angry. The story is of vast stretches of rich land and countless human lives laid to desolation by headlong grab. . . The author's analysis of what has caused all this, and what causes them even now to happen harder and faster, over more and more of our country—that, to me is the really horrifying thing about this book. His analysis gets going in the very first chapter and keeps going deeper throughout." Russell Lord

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 Mr 28 '42 800w

Wis Lib Bul 38:83 My '42

MCWILLIAMS, JAMES ALOYSIUS. Philosophy for the millions. 206p $2 Macmillan

110 Philosophy 42-21657

"This is an introductory book in philosophy written from the point of view of scholasticism or, in other words, the orthodox teachings of the Catholic Church. The author, who is head of the department of philosophy at St. Louis University, believes that the essential problems of philosophy are necessarily involved in the actual decisions which average men and women are called upon to make in dealing with the concrete situations which arise in the everyday experiences of life. His main purpose in writing the book is to clarify some of these issues and to provide proper guidance toward their correct solution. . . Philosophy for the Millions is nothing more than straight thinking about important questions expressed in terms that are intelligible to the masses of people." Christian Century

Cath World 156:638 F '43 300w

"The problems selected for discussion have been well chosen. The reader will have no difficulty in seeing that these problems are relevant to his own individual and social experiences. . . One of the chief merits of the book is the simplicity and clarity with which the author presents some of the most important issues involved in our contemporary living. . . There are many places in the book in which he appears to be unduly dogmatic as, for example, when he charges that Dewey does not believe in free will, and when he maintains that Hegel is a thoroughgoing determinist and denies that he believes in the rights of the individual." C. H. Patterson

+ Christian Century 59:1492 D 2 '42 650w

"It is an expression of Roman Catholic thought at its best." R. C. M.

+ Churchman 156:19 D 15 '42 70w

Reviewed by A. W. Levi

Ethics 53:153 Ja '43 60w

MADARIAGA, SALVADOR DE. Hernán Cortés, conqueror of Mexico. 554p maps $4 Macmillan [21s Hodder]

B or 92 Cortés, Hernando. Mexico—History (W) 41-21811

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

Reviewed by H. R. Wagner

Am Hist R 47:911 Jl '42 1150w

Bookmark 3:12 Ja '42

Reviewed by John Masefield

Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 27 '42 1000w

"This book is rich in scholarship and superior writing. It would be still better if Senor de Madariaga had been able to make up his mind whether he was writing as a man of faith or a man of wit. Writing as a man of faith he would have us believe that the Spanish conquerors and discoverers actually believed what they said, that they subjected the Indian lands mainly to implant the Catholic religion. But writing as a man of wit he slyly slashes at this thesis until it is in tatters. The man of wit is the victor, not only because his wit is generally of a high order, but also because it lies much closer to the truth of history." C. C. Munz

+ Nation 154:172 F 7 '42 420w

"Madariaga has produced an enduring work to be ranged alongside theirs [Prescott and Bernal Diaz], which is high praise indeed. But for a complete picture of this mighty clash of cultures Vaillant's magnificent 'Aztecs of Mexico' and Salvador de Madariaga's 'Hernán Cortes' will have to be taken together." B. D. Wolfe

+ New Repub 106:211 F 9 '42 480w

"Professor Madariaga is doing us a service in making the grand figures of Spain's greatest age clear to us; first with his biography of Columbus and now with Cortes. Only a Spaniard could do this for us, and Madariaga is becoming a historian in the process: more remunerative, in the better senses of the word, than politics anyway. His approach to the subject is quite right: he sees Cortes neither as the lucky hearty of Romance, who won an Empire by a fortunate accident, nor as the brutal Conquistador of sentimentalists on the subject of Imperialism. He treats Cortes as a historian should—with profound respect for a great man, the attempt at every point to understand him in the background of his age and so to interpret his impulses and actions, the movements of his mind. . . . Also the book is rather too long-winded; but then, the American public, for which it is primarily intended, apparently likes its books long-winded." A. L. Rowse

+ — New Statesman & Nation 23:276 Ap 25 '42 1100w

"This is the fullest and soundest biography of Cortés which has yet appeared in the English language, but it leaves the essential question unanswered. Cortés the man stands out clearly and alone, but he is still, so to speak, upon his peak in Darien. Where he stands in history, and whether he fought, in the long run, for light or for darkness, we do not know." C. V. Wedgwood

+ Spec 168:559 Je 12 '42 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p186 Ap 11 '42 2550w

Wis Lib Bul 38:30 F '42

MADDOX, GAYNOR. Eat well for less money. 219p $2 Dutton

641.1 Nutrition. Food. Menus (W) 42-23277

"The American guide to modern nutrition, a practical handbook of basic foods for everyday living." (Subtitle) Meal planning and food buying according to the government's plans for an adequate diet explained. Includes some recipes a bibliography, and an index.

Booklist 39:179 Ja 1 '43

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '42

"As a whole, the foods are presented accurately. In no sense is the book that of a fadist." Grace Steininger

J Home Econ 35:113 F '43 130w

"It discusses the food problem from every angle and should prove invaluable to all who feel that they are being forced to choose between wrecking the budget and outraging the family by what they set before it."

+ Springfield Republican p7e D 20 '42 390w

MAESTRO, MARCELLO T. Voltaire and Beccaria as reformers of criminal law. 177p $2 Columbia Univ. press

343 Criminal law. Voltaire, François Marie Aroutet de. Beccaria, Cesare Bonesana, marchese di 42-8250

"In this short study the state of the law, in theory and practice, in the major European countries at the time of Beccaria's Treatise on Crimes and Punishments (1764), is quickly surveyed, followed by analyses of the changing climate of public opinion and of specific acts mitigating legal severities. The thesis of the book is that Voltaire, as the leading eighteenth century political philosopher, prepared a favorable ground for the development of the reform movement' (p.157), while Beccaria furnished the basic ideas and arguments." (Am Hist R) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by F. J. Klingberg

Am Hist R 48:95 O '42 420w

Christian Century 59:1358 N '42 260w

Reviewed by H. E. Jensen

Social Forces 21:122 O '42 400w

Social Studies 33:240 My '42 20w

MAGNER, JAMES ALOYSIUS. Men of Mexico. 614p il map $4 Bruce pub.

920 Mexico—Biography. Mexico—History 42-23984

"A series of biographical sketches. A first-rate preface outlines the various epochs in the history of Mexico." (Cath World) Contents: Moctezuma II; Hernando Cortés; Bartolomé de Las Casas; Juan de Zumárraga; Don Vasco de Quiroga; Antonio de Mendoza; Count Revilla Gígedo II; Miguel Hidalgo; José María Morelos; Agustín de Iturbide; Antonio López de Santa Anna; Benito Juárez; Maximilian; Porfirio Díaz; Venustiano Carranza; Plutarco Elías Calles; Lazaro Cárdenas.

"The footnotes throughout the book are of very unequal value. Many of them are quite informative. . . . When, however, they seem to support the narrative as primary materials, one notices an absence of criticism that cannot fail to meet a cool reception. . . . The book is written in a clear and pleasant style. The generosity and fairness of the author, and his effort at completeness, indicate a happy future for his volume." W. E. Shiels

+ — Cath World 156:363 D '42 550w

"The book is written for the general reader but will come in handy to teachers and scholars who have not until now been able to find a quick biographical reference to the majority of the men presented here. Public and school libraries should be glad to have a volume which sheds new light on Mexican history. . . . Fr. Magner has written his book in what we might call the 'newer tradition' in Hispanic American affairs, i.e., the good and bad points of Spanish control are noted, with the final balance favorable to Spain; and also with an approach to nineteenth-century history which condemns anticlerical Liberalism and Masonry while presenting material on Church activities which older authorities either ignored or suppressed." P. V. Murray

+ Commonweal 37:211 D 11 '42 850w

MAGOON, MRS MARIAN AUSTIN (WAITE).

The Emperor's nephew; a story of Charlemagne; il. by Elinore Blaisdell. 181p $2 Farrar (W) 42-28399

Account of life in the time of Charlemagne, based upon the chronicle of the Monk of St Gall. It is the story of the boy Hugo, his mother, the Lady Adele, and his little sister, who had been dispossessed by Count Stephen, and were living in poverty. Then Hugo did a service for one of the Emperor's messengers, and presently found himself adopted as the Emperor's nephew, made a member of his household, and sent to school to Alcuin. For ages ten to twelve.

"As it was a time not only of marvels but of hand-to-hand conflict where physical prowess counts, there is plenty of fighting with engines of war described. The world's trade comes to the Fair of St. Denis, new luxury and new learning to the court. In all this the personalities of Hugo and every one else get lost in the crowd, but it is a picturesque crowd. Elinore Blaisdell's drawings are decorative and trustworthy." M. L. Becker

Books p8 My 31 '42 360w

Cath World 156:379 D '42 90w

Horn Bk M 18:109 Mr '42 140w

"The book gives an excellent background of medieval life a thousand years ago." Elizabeth Babcock

+ Library J 67:183 F 15 '42 60w

"Although the narrative lacks the strength of a well-sustained plot, there are incidents and details aplenty to feed the imaginations of 9 to 12 year old readers, and to bring that dim period vividly to life." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 29 '42 320w

Wis Lib Bul 38:100 Je '42

MAGUIRE, WILLIAM AUGUSTUS. Rig for church. 251p $2 Macmillan B or 92 42-13945

"The pleasant autobiography of the fleet chaplain of the Pacific fleet. After a brief description of his education for priesthood, the author describes his experiences as a United States Navy chaplain from the first World war down to Pearl Harbor." (Booklist) Index.

MAGUIRE, W. A.—Continued

Booklist 38:440 J1 15 '42

"An alert and modest chronicler, Captain Maguire tells the story of his life engagingly. A chaplain's desk in his cabin at sea is rather like a table in front of a boulevard cafe, he says, where officers and men pause 'on their lawful occasions' for a moment of relaxation or a word of encouragement."

+ Books p23 S 20 '42 130v

"His story is more interesting than a movie or novel because it deals with people and places and events that are meaningful to us at present, and it deals with them with a dash of style and a dignified reverence for the Christian religion which to Chaplain Maguire is or ought to be every man's first love." A. L. Murray

+ Churchman 156:17 J1 1 '42 180w

MAINWARING, DANIEL (GEOFFREY HOMES, pseud). Street of the crying woman. 248p $2 Morrow

42-16838

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p11 Ag 2 '42 280w

"Geoffrey Homes evidently knows Mexico well and loves it, and this, coupled with his skill as a mystery writer, makes the book doubly attractive. Madero proves to be a detective of great ability and one who keeps an open mind until all the evidence is before him. We hope to hear more of this investigator." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p15 J1 26 '42 250w

"Slow start, but brisk enough at the end." New Yorker 17:59 J1 25 '42 70w

"Attractive and veracious atmosphere, a well-muddled plot—with buried treasure angle—and some pleasant characterizations."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 Ag 1 '42 30w

MAKHALI-PHAL. Young concubine; tr. from the French by Edward Weismiller. 282p $2 Random house

42-8908

This novel, laid in twentieth century Cambodia and later in France, follows the life story of the daughter of the king of Cambodia from her sixth year to her death at eighteen. Much of the story is mystical and symbolic but among the events recorded are Atman's early education in Brahminism and Buddhism, the love of her father for a ten-year-old concubine whom he kills in a nightmare, Atman's journey to France and her education there, her love for her French uncle, her return and death in her native land.

"The Young Concubine' is exquisitely, superbly wrought and the translation bears lightly the fragile, elaborate writing which suits the matter of the novel so perfectly. Line after line, word after word, falls into place to express precisely the extravagantly exotic materials with which the author deals. For what it says and for what it is 'The Young Concubine' is a remarkable piece of work." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p7 Mr 15 '42 750w

"The author, of Cambodian and French parentage, reveals the intellectual and psychic conflicts of a cultivated Eurasian of high social rank torn by the conflicting claims of a mixed heritage. One feels that only one in whose veins flowed the mixed blood of Europe and Asia could have written this tragic tale of Atman, daughter of King Içavarman of Cambodia. . . Delivers in the esoteric will no doubt find much to interest them in speculations which have a meager appeal for the general reader. The latter must find his compensation in occasional dramatic moments and in the descriptions of Cambodian life." Drake De Kay

N Y Times p27 Mr 29 '42 850w

"The writing of Makhali-Phal (the pseudonym of Pierrette Guesde) is vivid, sensitive, and at times, beautiful, but most of the book is beyond credence by the average American. The setting is too lavish and the theme too full of decadent Oriental mysticism to be popular in the ration-conscious and vitally alive world of today." F. G. Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 Mr 14 '42 750w

MALKUS, MRS ALIDA SIMS. Citadel of a hundred stairways; il. by Henry C. Pitz. 234p $2 Winston

(W) 41-24408

Two boys of different Americas: Tony, whose father was an American engineer mining for gold in the Andes, and Titu, a Peruvian Indian, form a fast friendship, which leads to a dangerous trip into the mountains, and the discovery of much ancient Inca lore and some treasure.

Booklist 38:162 Ja 1 '42

"It is a story in which boys of two Americas prepare to be men of the future, on the mountain of a mysterious past." M. L. Becker

Books p8 Ja 25 '42 320w

"Dramatic pictures make vivid the scene of this fine story. . . Mrs. Malkus writes from personal knowledge of the waterways and peaks among the Peruvian mountains, and the Quechian shepherds and farmers who look up from the valleys to the city of the rocks. She has plainly felt the dignity and character of many of these Indians of ancient lineage described in this absorbing story."

+ Horn Bk M 18:110 Mr '42 100w

"A well-written book that will stimulate interest in Peru, mining, and the archeology of the Andes." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 67:86 Ja 15 '42 100w

"This well written book is considerably above the average tale about the American boy who visits strange places, for the author knows at first hand the country of which she writes, and because this country has thoroughly captured her own imagination she is able to make her readers feel its charm and interest. . . The book will satisfy readers from 12 on as a story and will arouse interest in the archaeology of Peru and gold mining in the Andes." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 F 8 '42 340w

MALLESON, LUCY BEATRICE (ANTHONY GILBERT, ANNE MEREDITH, pseud). Family man; a Victorian novel. 313p $2.50 Howell, Soskin [8s 6d Faber]

42-22717

A family portrait of the 1890s. The chief figure is the head of the family—a man described by his eldest daughter as "always acting to the top of his bent. As son, husband, father. Never a genuine impulse, never an atom of sincerity, but like a polished nut whose heart is rotten with mold."

"The Family Man' has the same grace and subtlety of portraiture that distinguished 'Home Is the Heart,' and is a more solidly constructed book. It should widen Miss Meredith's circle of delighted readers." Page Cooper

+ Books p4 S 27 '42 700w

"Characters, well depicted through the ten years of the children's growing up, all have distinctly different personalities. The mother's quiet understanding and the father's natural instinct of a theatrical manager finally preserve the family ties, as each child goes his or her way. Pleasing source of relief for a few hours from the war reading of the day." Margaret Winning

+ Library J 67:795 S 15 '42 90w

"The book is brightly and amusingly written, and if some of the characters are a little over-romanticised we may persuade ourselves that fifty years ago there were, perhaps, still a few survivals from the days of Charles Dickens." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 24 '42 130w

Reviewed by Philip Toynbee

New Statesman & Nation 23:409 Je 20 '42 140w

"As a matter of fact, though described so, this isn't a Victorian novel at all; for no Victorian novelist, not even those of the Eighteen Nineties, could quite establish that over-all irony, gentle but perceptible, that plays so great a part in Anne Meredith's 'The Family Man.' That touch is twentieth century. It is clever, sometimes frankly comical, but more often profoundly touching. Even humor has its sad nuances." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p22 O 11 '42 850w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 10 '43 300w

"Miss Meredith writes very brightly and agreeably, but in this novel she has essayed a task that seems, as yet, a little beyond her ability."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p197 Ap 18 '42 300w

MALLESON, LUCY BEATRICE (ANTHONY GILBERT, ANNE MEREDITH, pseud.). Home is the heart [Eng title: There's always tomorrow]. 287p $2.50 Howell, Soskin [7s 6d Faber]

42-36097

England on the verge and in the throes of the present war is the scene of this story of an English country house and the Ross family, owners for nine generations. The effects of dwindling finances on the various members of the family, as well as a murder in their midst, provide the central themes.

Booklist 38:251 Mr 15 '41

"Anne Meredith is adept in creating the quiet, wistful, futile but pleasant atmosphere of gentle living that gives charm to so many minor English novels. Then, just as she has led the reader to expect a mild romance of the familiar pattern, she gathers power and speed. Although 'Home is the Heart' is for the most part slight and tenuous, it manages to raise the pulse beat and create a decided eagerness to see Miss Meredith's next novel." Page Cooper

+ Books p20 Mr 1 '42 300w

"The war might have been kept out, but always the firmness of the character-drawing is a satisfaction, and the colloquial, sometimes slangy, manner is apt and effective." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 7 '41 200w

"The jacket has forestalled us. This is a 'lovely' book, lovely as a beautiful face mirroring an exquisite spirit is lovely; or as an old-world garden can be lovely on a fresh, cool Summer morning... It is an England very different from the England of the last war that we see. Different, too, and necessarily so, from any remnant that events may still not have shaken out of complacency. It is a young England rediscovering, without shamefacedness, the value of the spiritual; and it is, at the same time, tougher and very coolly realistic." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p25 Mr 1 '42 550w

"Miss Meredith's characterisation is rather laborious, but does create its effect; and her oblique approach to the crime is not unjustified. For readers with a sweet tooth in fiction, There's Always Tomorrow will be acceptable." Nicholas Blake

+ Spec 166:454 Ap 25 '41 40w

"Miss Meredith's new novel is a spirited piece of work, thoughtful and amusing by turns, though at the same time a little too noticeably distended by a surfeit of untold death-do-us-part passion."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p101 Mr 1 '41 420w

MALLESON, LUCY BEATRICE (ANTHONY GILBERT, ANNE MEREDITH, pseud.). Mystery in the woodshed [Eng title: Something nasty in the woodshed]. 305p $2 Smith & Durrell [8s 6d Collins]

42-15548

Detective story.

"We read it with the pleasant feeling that the author wouldn't insist upon downright solemnity in the customer, however dark the deeds. It's sinister, shuddery, fairly cheerful in spots and slightly plish in others. Best of all, it keeps you goggle-eyed with suspense." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 My 31 '42 250w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hull

Boston Globe p17 Je 10 '42 180w

Reviewed by E. R. Punshon

Manchester Guardian p5 My 27 '42 10w

"The first few pages of this book make it perfectly plain who is the villain of the piece and what his plans are. All that remains is to see how his plans work out. Not much room for mystery here, one might say, but one would be wrong, for there are several startling surprises in store for the reader." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p17 My 31 '42 200w

Reviewed by John Fairfield

Spec 168:404 Ap 24 '42 20w

"Bluebeard is still the favorite. No other criminal can compare with the habitual bridegroom who showers attentions upon his latest bride while wondering how best to break her neck. 'Something Nasty in the Woodshed' does it well."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p185 Ap 11 '42 180w

MALLETTE, GERTRUDE ETHEL. Inside out. 278p $2 Doubleday

(W) 42-21969

"Linda Sherrill despaired of becoming an illustrator when her art teacher told her she never caught the inside of her subject and concentrated too much on detail. A long illness gave her the chance to practice swiftly sketching distant objects viewed through binoculars from her room, and, suddenly, she was in the midst of a spy plot. Linda's diligence and amazing gift for observation won her realization of her ambition." Library J

"In the course of a story for girls with art-study on their minds, a detective episode is involved so naturally that the snooping one scarcely likes to connect with youth does not enter the case. There is a trace of romance, the art-study is authentic, and so is the Hudson." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 O 18 '42 430w

"Good fast-moving story with an interesting vocational element. Recommended for girls twelve to sixteen." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 67:958 N 1 '42 90w

MALONE, TED, pseud. See Russell, F. A.

MALOY, MRS LOIS. Swift Thunder of the prairie; an American adventure [il. by the author]. 74p $1.75 Scribner

(W) 42-18440

Picture-story book of the early days of rail-roading across the prairies and the animosity of the Indians toward the destroyer of their game. Little Star-Brother, an Indian boy, who gave warning to the engineer of the little train when the elder tribesmen tried to wreck it, is the hero. For six to nine year olds.

"This is in large type with many colored pictures; the style is rapid and graceful." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 N 29 '42 330w

"With its many spirited colored pictures of engines and Indians this book appeals especially to younger boys." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:335 S '42 90w

"Well-told story. Recommended for children seven to ten." J. E. Wooster

+ Library J 67:736 S 15 '42 70w

"An exciting combination of engines and Indians." R. A. Hill

+ Library J 67:886 O 15 '42 40w

"Children of the 6-to-9 year-old group will like this primarily because it is a lively tale with a vivid background of Indian life. They won't necessarily recognize that it illustrates with clarity a dramatic phase of the building of America but they will understand on their own terms something of what the railroad meant to the pioneers and also, in spite of this particularly happy ending, something of the inevitable tragedy of the Indian. The pictures are full of action, interesting in detail and in design, but a little too blurry in outline to be entirely satisfactory." E. L. Buell

MALCOY, LOIS—Continued

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 16 '42 280w

"The very thing for six-to eight-year-old boys, since they usually admire both trains and Indians." K. S. W.

+ New Yorker 18:106 D 12 '42 50w

Wis Lib Bul 38:165 N '42

MALVERN, GLADYS. Dancing star; the story of Anna Pavlova; il. by Susanne Suba. 280p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Pavlova, Anna (W) 42-13486

Story of the life of Anna Pavlova beginning with the day in 1890 when she, aged eight, first saw a ballet at the theater in St Petersburg, and ending with that last sad dance in her own room in The Hague in 1931. For high school girls. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 Je 7 '42 350w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 11 '42 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '42

"Susanne Suba's lively drawings fit the text of a book which will engross older girls and adults interested in the dance." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:261 J1 '42 90w

Reviewed by Maude Adams
Library J 67:633 J1 '42 50w

Reviewed by E. A. Groves
Library J 67:633 J1 '42 60w

"A fictionalized but appealing life of Anna Pavlova." M. C. Scoggin

+ Library J 67:895 O 15 '42 10w

"Although she tries hard, the author doesn't quite catch the sensitivity and imaginative quality which must have been this most romantic of dancers'. The outlines of her portrait are sometimes blurred with too soft a touch, but the book as a whole is richly suggestive of the great traditions and the great names of the classic ballet. The illustrations are in Susanne Suba's characteristic and amusing style, but they fail sadly to convey anything of the grace and dignity of the dance." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Je 28 '42 360w

"This book is very readable and to many girls of high-school age may prove absorbing as a picture of the glorified, circumscribed, yet, in Pavlova's case, global world of stage and ballet. Delightful illustrations."

+ New Yorker 18:79 My 23 '42 70w

Wis Lib Bul 38:168 N '42

MAMMEN, EDWARD WILLIAM. Jim's the boy! il. by Jessie Robinson. [40p] $1.25 Harper (W) 42-19687

Story of a small boy, a lazy retired sea captain, and a determined woman, who brought the two together, with excellent results. For children five to eight.

"For large libraries that can afford it." J. E. Wooster

Library J 67:797 S 15 '42 40w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:883 O 15 '42 20w

"Slight in substance but friendly and spontaneous, the story owes much to the illustrations, which have humor and gaiety and convey a feeling of lively action. The artist, too, is eminently successful in indicating the moods and personalities of the characters she draws." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p30 N 22 '42 400w

Wis Lib Bul 38:165 N '42

MANDER, LINDEN A. Foundations of modern world society. 910p $4.25 Stanford univ. press 341 International cooperation. International law and relations 41-20983

"Professor Mander builds this volume upon the fact that the foundations of human life are broader than such terms as 'national power' imply. 'If we are sincere in proclaiming that welfare rather than power is the democratic goal, it would seem logical to begin by considering those things which minister to man's physical, economic, mental, and spiritual welfare. Sovereignty and political organizations enter the picture eventually.' Thus he begins with health and crime, as international problems, and develops gradually to political organization and the international problem of security." (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

"A great deal of reading and investigation was required to write this book. Its range is wide, and—as this reviewer knows by experience—the materials for one chapter must be gleaned from a thousand different sources. Probably no one book contains as much factual material concerning international administrative tasks and problems as does this one, though, of course, it does not pretend to give an exhaustive presentation of any of them. It is a very useful reference work for those who study international relations." Clyde Eagleton

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:153 F '42 550w

"There is not a book known to the reviewer which offers a more honest, a more serious, and a more revealing picture of what has been, what is, and what in the author's opinion will have to be if we want something better than what we have had. The author of this book is of the firm belief that something better can and will be built if what he proposes is done. Who would not wish to believe that Professor Mander will be found to be right?" Johannes Mattern

+ Ann Am Acad 220:212 Mr '42 850w

"As a text-book for classes in international politics and an encyclopedia for their teachers, Professor Mander's large book will take high rank. I have seen nothing which offers quite such a mass of material handled with quite such uniform competence. . . . Two or three small corrections I would suggest. I think Professor Mander has placed the wrong emphasis on freedom of innocent passage in the 1919 Convention on Air Navigation. . . . He states inaccurately the constitutional rule governing the submission of treaties to the British Parliament. . . . Again the author has omitted from his long chapter on international law and organization all mention of the revolutionary contribution of Kelsen to this important subject." P. E. Corbett

+ Pacific Affairs 15:253 Je '42 500w

"The teacher who is looking for the background of the latest war news will not be interested in Professor Mander's book. But those who wish to discern some of the elements which a more secure and decent international order must include will do well to read it. . . . In so comprehensive a treatment some minor flaws are inevitable." R. E. Keohane

+ Social Educ 6:186 Ap '42 470w

Reviewed by Phillips Bradley
Survey G 32:27 Ja '43 220w

MANN, EDWARD BEVERLY. Gunsmoke trail. 279p $2 Morrow

42-9582

Western story.

Booklist 38:369 Je 1 '42

"As you may know, E. B. Mann is one of the few really good purveyors of the kind of printed matter called Westerns. This author's stuff lacks the lowdown streak so familiar in the field and has plenty of sterling merit in all the main branches." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 My 31 '42 100w

"E. B. Mann knows the life of the cow country of the old days and he writes of it with gusto and skill, bringing to life a colorful lot of characters and holding the reader's interest in their doings. This is one of the best of the fourteen novels he has published." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p21 My 24 '42 180w

MANN, KLAUS. Turning point; thirty-five years in this century. 366p $3 Fischer, L.B. B or 92 42-23370

Autobiography of the oldest son of the German novelist, Thomas Mann, now living in the United States.

"There is something of Thomas Mann in the book; one sees the rich, mellow personality of this great literary master first in Munich, then in exile near Zurich, and later at Princeton. The reader leaves Klaus Mann preparing to enlist in the American Army, eager to fight for the return of the civilized Europe which he appreciated so keenly, and of which he is an attractive product." W. H. Chamberlin
+ Atlantic 170:161 D 42 240w

Booklist 39:70 N 1 '42

Reviewed by Milton Rugoff
Books p6 O 11 '42 1300w

"Klaus Mann's book is jagged and uneven, at times volcanic, at times boyish, a medley of pen portraits, of literary creeds and styles, of politics. It is sometimes redundant, and sometimes fantastic; but he is writing about an incredible, fantastic era, when the world was dancing in a time of crisis. By unmistakable inference the book is an urgent plea for political awareness on the part of today's young men." W. K. R.

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 2 '43 700w

"Klaus Mann, son of Thomas Mann, is an author in his own right. He certainly proves it in this book, which is in the nature of an autobiography. Mr. Mann is a penetrating observer and what he sets forth is not so much his own life as it is the life of his generation as he felt it and took part in it. The resulting story makes fascinating reading and that is because Mr. Mann knows how to write." W. C. Kernan
+ Churchman 156:17 N 1 '42 300w

Reviewed by Betsy Hutchison
Nation 156:64 Ja 9 '43 800w

"[There] are only minor flaws in an autobiography which is, in the best sense, original and charming, and which is the detailed account of Klaus Mann's quest for what was necessary to him and his own pattern." Charles Neider

+ New Repub 107:648 N 16 '42 1000w

"A sensitive, cultivated European looks at his world, his life, and describes them in apt and telling phrase. Toward both his attitude is not so strong as despair, but rather one of alienation. His book is a commentary upon the evil times that have come upon all the places, all the peoples of this earth." Lorine Pruette

N Y Times p4 O 4 '42 1000w

"The first or pre-Hitler half of this autobiography . . . is a delightful, modern-romantic group portrait of the Manns en famille—a bit overdone, perhaps, but sensitive and lively. After that the book becomes merely another record of events by an intellectual in exile."

+ New Yorker 18:67 O 3 '42 60w

"Klaus Mann proves his talent as a novelist once again in the first part of his autobiography. The portrait of the Mann family is excellent. Klaus Mann is at his best describing his childhood and the family life. Less successful are the chapters in which the author tries to give an interpretation of the political and social evolution of the period between the two wars and of the postwar generation." Leo Lania

+ Sat R of Lit 25:15 N 7 '42 500w

MANN, THOMAS. Order of the day. 280p $2.75 Knopf

834 Germany—Nazi movement. Democracy 42-23706

Collection of the author's major political addresses and essays covering the last two decades. Contents: The German republic; An appeal to reason; Europe beware; I stand with the Spanish people; "Mass und wert"; An exchange of letters; The coming victory of democracy; A brother; What I believe; This peace; This war; Culture and politics; The war and the future; Thinking and living; Address before the Emergency rescue committee; Niemöller.

Booklist 39:96 N 15 '42

"As a writer on public questions of great moment, Thomas Mann reminds me in many ways of Milton. It is no accident that both turned from great creative work to the grim business of politics, for each had the same stubborn conviction that the artist can, nay must, come into the arena and fight fiercely for what he believes. In both there is much the same high faith in reason and ideals, much the same lofty compulsion to raise every discussion of particulars to the level of universals. In both rich learning moves hand in hand with passionate convictions. In both, finally, there is a rare strain of genuine nobility." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p6 D 13 '42 1500w

"The author provides a preface which puts this series of political statements into useful chronological and ideological order. He points out, too, the importance of this kind of writing in his career as a whole and the part that it plays in his fiction, and he employs again that complacent and by now familiar view of himself as prophet which is no doubt the prophet's right but always threatens to make him seem a little absurd."

Boston Globe p21 N 11 '42 200w

Reviewed by Max Fischer
Commonweal 37:237 D 18 '42 360w

"Indispensable collection for those American readers who wish to understand the evolution of [the author's] political philosophy. At last, his two magnificent addresses, 'The German Republic' and 'An Appeal to Reason,' are now available in English; they are documents of enduring importance. The volume, which culminates in an appreciation of Niemöller, will bring Mann new admirers. Recommended for college and public libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 67:908 O 15 '42 110w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr
Nation 155:582 N 28 '42 700w

"The preface to this collection of essays by someone who is widely regarded as a Goethe in modern formal dress raises all manner of distressing questions. It is impossible to read the fantastically self-centered pages with which this book begins without wondering about many things. One of the things one wonders about is whether Thomas Mann is really the great thinker that a good many people besides himself have believed him to be." Irwin Edman

— New Repub 107:761 D 7 '42 1450w

Reviewed by A. E. Meyer
N Y Times p20 N 15 '42 1600w

"Sometimes turgid, sometimes thick with Germanisms of thought, but filled with that gravity and prophetic quality that give the author a firm place in the great European humanist tradition."

+ New Yorker 18:84 O 31 '42 50w

MANNON, M. M., pseud. Here lies blood. 306p $2 Bobbs

42-13733

Detective story.

"Whether you like the title or not, and we don't ourselves, this is a first-rate baffler of the literate school by a newcomer in the field. It's a meaty affair of mounting interest, with emphasis on the romantic insides of a nice heroine and quite lacking in beginners' goofiness—altogether a heartening job." Will Cuppy

+ Books p26 My 10 '42 230w

"Whoever M. M. Mannon may be, more books under that name will be eagerly awaited." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p17 My 3 '42 320w

MANOFF, ARNOLD. Telegram from heaven. 307p $2.50 Dial press

42-21514

Story of a young Jewish girl from the Bronx; her attempts to get a job and a "steady," and how the coming of war partially solved her problems.

MANOFF, ARNOLD—Continued

"Mr. Manoff was born in 1914 in that part of New York of which he writes. Some of his shorter fiction has appeared in 'Story,' and this is his debut as a novelist. Although his talent still has its undisciplined qualities, here is a narrative of vitality and freshness. The characters are alive, and there is an eloquence in their accurately unimaginative talk far more moving than any retouched versions of the Bronx vernacular." Lisle Bell

+ Books p8 Ag 30 '42 800w

"Mr. Manoff deals even more truthfully with his secondary characters and situations than he does with his hero and heroine, a sign of grace, certainly, in a beginning, or any, novelist." Diana Trilling

Nation 155:243 S 19 '42 450w

"The material is pure Kober, but the treatment is serious and, in spots, embarrassingly honest. At least one scene, beginning with a pick-up on a boat-ride, is more than impressive, and the whole thing stacks up as a promising, if not terribly distinguished, first job."

+ New Repub 107:358 S 21 '42 60w

"The problems of the poor are stated here without didacticism, but in terms of human beings who must endure and act courageously in the crises of existence. Mr. Manoff has written a readable book, pulsing with life and warmth." J. C.

+ N Y Times p30 S 27 '42 550w

MANSERGH, NICHOLAS. Ireland in the age of reform and revolution; a commentary on Anglo-Irish relations and on political forces in Ireland, 1840-1921. 272p $2.50 Macmillan [10s 6d Allen, G.]

941.5 Ireland—History A41-630

"An interpretation of the history of Anglo-Irish relations and the political development of Ireland from 1840 to 1921 by an authority on Irish affairs." Foreign Affairs

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:385 Ja '42 20w

"Mr. Nicholas Mansergh of Pembroke College, Oxford, is a distinguished scholar and political philosopher who writes neither as historian nor as controversialist. He deals rather with fundamental concepts, and discusses the problems of states and nations as, in medicine, a skillful diagnostician might comment objectively upon a particular malady or a given case." Albert Shaw

+ Sat R of Lit 25:14 F 28 '42 400w

MANTELL, CHARLES LETNAM, and others. Technology of natural resins. 506p il $7 Wiley 668.4 Gums and resins 42-11234

"Emphasis in the volume has been placed upon the technology of the resins, their industrial formulations, the properties of the resins and their combinations with other materials, and their place in commerce. The treatment is more practical than theoretical or even scientific. From the viewpoint of terminology, shellac and rosin are excluded. It is hoped that this volume will provide a technical background for the important commercial resins of natural origin." (Pref) Indexes.

"The title of this volume is a little misleading as two of our most important natural resins, common rosin and shellac, are not included... The volume contains much information not published elsewhere or found only in scattered special articles... Technical monographs on special subjects, bringing the subject matter up to date, are always welcome, particularly when well done as in this volume. The authors are naturally interested in promoting the use of the particular natural resins in which they are commercially interested. The book, however, is not less valuable on that account." B. T. Brooks

Am Chem Soc J 64:1491 Je '42 380w

Booklist 38:364 Je 1 '42

"Any technologist using natural resins should have a copy of this book in his library." J. V. Steinle

+ Chem & Eng N 20:874 J1 10 '42 360w
Chem & Met Eng 49:172 Ag '42 600w
N Y New Tech Bks 27:38 J1 '42

MANTLE, BURNS, ed. Best plays of 1941-42; and the Year book of the drama in America. v23 508p $3 Dodd

808.82 Dramas—Collections. American drama—Collections. Theater—Yearbooks (20-21432)

Contains in abbreviated form the following plays: Blithe Spirit; Junior Miss; In Time to Come; Letters to Lucerne; Candle in the Wind; Angel Street; The Moon is Down; Jason; Hope for a Harvest; Uncle Harry. Introductory chapters cover the theatrical seasons in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, and Southern California.

Booklist 39:118 D 1 '42

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p25 Ja 24 '43 250w

"Extremely valuable theater reference work. Highly recommended."

+ Library J 67:1013 N 15 '42 70w
Theatre Arts 27:65 Ja '43 250w

MARCHAND, ERNEST LEROY. Frank Norris; a study. 258p $3 Stanford univ. press

813 Norris, Frank 42-22108

Critical study of the works of an American novelist who died in 1902. It is the author's purpose "to place Norris against the wider background of his period—social and intellectual as well as purely literary—to examine the several aspects of his thought and of his work, and to take stock of critical opinion about him from his own day to the present." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Marchand's book is a real contribution toward clarifying our understanding of a novelist whose work has seemed contradictory and confused. Yet, lustily as Mr. Marchand lays about him in belaboring the critics whom gentility or conservatism blinded to Norris's merits, one does not, on the strength of the interpretation of Norris put forward in his book, altogether succumb to Mr. Marchand's fervent conviction that Norris was a major American novelist of the very first significance. There are many useful insights in the book, but a more proportioned view of the subject would have led, one feels, to a study at once more genuinely critical and more genuinely appreciative of Norris's work." Howard Doughty

+ Books p22 N 22 '42 350w

Reviewed by J. K. Paulding

Commonweal 37:49 O 30 '42 850w

"Although Mr. Marchand's 'Frank Norris—A Study' is not always an inspiring book, it is, on historical grounds alone, a sufficiently welcome one. Neither Norris's extraordinary talent nor stature was seen very clearly during his lifetime and it may be that a true appraisal still rests with the future, for today he is underrated, misunderstood and half forgot. His influence and pioneering, of course, are always praised, but very often at the expense of his own work, and if Mr. Marchand's book does nothing else it investigates Norris's art with sympathetic appreciation and acute understanding." T. Q. Curtiss

+ N Y Times p22 N 29 '42 850w

MARCUSE, HERBERT. Reason and revolution; Hegel and the rise of social theory. 431p $3.75 (16s) Oxford

301 Hegel, Georg Wilhelm Friedrich. Sociology—History. Dialectic. Positivism 41-8731

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"This volume is a valuable contribution to the history of social and political ideas and, in particular, to the interpretation of a philosopher whose name and aims have been more distorted than that of other great thinkers. . . The book is written in a lucid style, believe it or not, ye who have labored through the linguistic aridities of the controversies between German idealistic philosophers." J. H. Herz

+ Am Hist R 47:591 Ap '42 500w

Reviewed by G. H. Sabine
Am J Soc 48:258 S '42 390w

"Mr. Marcuse has given us a most useful and timely summary of Hegel's thought, although the writing is rather heavy and frequently lacks direction and a sense of pattern. His analysis of Stahl and von Stein should be of more than passing interest to English readers. He has done well to show us the limitations of sociology. . . At the same time, many will have difficulty in accepting the basic Hegelian doctrine, which seems to be fundamental to Mr. Marcuse's own thought: that 'contradiction is the root of all movement and life.' This is never proved nor is it self-evident. Nor will most readers find much meaning in the dialectic, as Mr. Marcuse is able to do, on the ground that it is so general that you can make it serve any content that you wish to pour in. . . Mr. Marcuse accepts without question Marx's analysis of labor and the labor theory of value, and the whole scaffolding of Marxian thought that rises from it. He shows little awareness of the criticisms that have been made of this analysis. As with most writers who have a deep sympathy with Hegel and Marx, the author frequently stands for absolutes, and is not averse to sweeping statements." B. E. Lippincott
+ — Am Pol Sci R 36:386 Ap '42 450w

Reviewed by Erich Franzen
Am Soc R 7:126 F '42 900w

"The value of this book is enhanced by an excellent Bibliography. The only omission we remark is that no mention is made of Emile Faguet's masterly studies of the French political thinkers of the last century." W. G. de Burgh

+ Hibbert J 40:299 Ap '42 1550w

Reviewed by V. J. McGill
J Philos 39:75 Ja 29 '42 2900w

Reviewed by J. G. Gray
Pol Sci Q 57:292 Je '42 600w

MARIELLA, SISTER, originally MARY MARGARET GABLE, comp. Great modern Catholic short stories. 372p $3 Sheed

Short stories—Collections. Roman Catholic literature—Collections (W) 42-24233

Twenty-six short stories by both Catholics and non-Catholics about nuns, monks, and priests. Partial contents: The sacrifice of the maidens, by E. M. Roberts; Sin, by Agnes Repplier; The surgeon and the nun, by Paul Horgan; Taking the veil, by Katherine Mansfield; The gambler, the nun and the radio, by Ernest Hemingway; Brother Leo, by Phyllis Bottomo; Monks die good, by Jack English; First confession, by Frank O'Connor; The young priest, by Morely Callaghan; A sick call, by Morley Callaghan. Index.

Booklist 39:121 D 1 '42

"Of these twenty-six stories several well deserve to be called both 'Catholic' and 'great,' whereas others are merely 'modern' and 'short'; but perhaps the title is sufficiently justified when at least two of its four adjectives apply to all the stories and all the adjectives to some. . . However, members of the impenitent older generation who still consider O. Henry a master storyteller, will raise their eyebrows at some of these selections."

+ — Cath World 156:508 Ja '43 150w

MARIO, QUEENA. Murder meets Mephisto. 244p $2 Dutton

Detective story.

42-1109

"A wow, complete with real for-sure atmosphere, a couple of diabolical killings, and a finish that should knock you out of your grand tier box. . . Don't miss this gala performance of 'cadenzas and corpses, violence and vocalizing' by one who knows whereof she speaks." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 F 8 '42 480w

"Queenia Mario was with the Metropolitan Opera Company through eighteen seasons and knows the opera and its people as no outsider could know them. She also knows how to tell a story." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p14 F 1 '42 190w

"Not so good."

Sat R of Lit 25:18 F 14 '42 30w

MARITAIN, JACQUES. Ransoming the time; tr. by Harry Lorin Binsse, 322p $3 Scribner
194.9 Roman Catholic church. Christianity—Philosophy 42-2994

A book of philosophical essays by a French neo-Thomist philosopher. In his foreword the author says: "The topics treated in this book seem extremely diverse. Yet the subject-matter is but one: man in his cultural life and in the complex patterns of his earthly destiny. And the essential theme also is one: human conflicts and antinomies can be overcome and reconciled only if first they are perceived in their full dimensions, and if they are viewed in the ontological perspectives of Christian wisdom." Index.

Booklist 38:267 Ap 1 '42

"It is not related to any real order based on the eternal fitness of things. We who are committed to a democratic way of life are bound to seek for a new order that is based on reason, not on force. And if the present chaos is to be superseded by a harmonious, peaceful world, it will result, under God, from the painstaking work of such men as Maritain, who is so wholeheartedly engaged in finding a way for the reconstruction of a Christian order." J. F. Coffey

+ Cath World 155:751 S '42 950w

"So perfect is the scholastic philosophy in the thought of its greatest living exponent, Jacques Maritain, that there is no area into which it does not throw light. . . Since scholasticism is essentially a Christian philosophy, and since, moreover, Maritain displays the qualities of Holiness as well as of wisdom, the illumination resulting from these studies is more than intellectual; it may be said that the non-scholastic who has the patience to try to understand him will find human subjects sanctified. That there is great need for such treatment by an intellectualist should need no proving." J. C. Petrie

+ Christian Century 59:147 F 4 '42 1300w

* Reviewed by R. C. Miller
Churchman 156:17 Mr 15 '42 200w

Reviewed by C. Bruehl
Commonweal 35:370 Ja 30 '42 750w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:775 Jl '42 20w

Reviewed by George Barker
New Repub 106:303 Mr 2 '42 1400w

Reviewed by Padraic Colum
N Y Times p14 My 24 '42 1000w

"Often eloquent and illuminating, but the mixt vocabulary—part scientific, part literary-philosophic—is difficult at times."

+ — New Yorker 17:56 Ja 3 '42 50w

MARITAIN, JACQUES. St Thomas and the problem of evil; under the auspices of the Aristotelian soc. of Marquette university. 46p $1.50 Marquette univ. press

233.2 Good and evil. Thomas Aquinas, Saint

"After reviewing briefly the metaphysical theme, common to SS. Augustine and Thomas, that evil, though real and very much present in things, is a defect or privation, M. Maritain undertakes to present the doctrine of St. Thomas on the meaning of evil in the world and on the cause of the freely willed, morally evil choice." Commonweal

MARITAIN, JACQUES—Continued

Reviewed by David Dalrymple

Commonweal 37:236 D 18 '42 280w

"As expounded by Maritain, with the touch of a seer and a poet rather than that of a syllogizer, this Christian clarification of the problem of evil is highly persuasive, at least in so far as it takes account of an aspect of the problem that could be unreal only to a man with an amputated soul." E. A. M.
J Philos 40:26 Ja 7 '43 210w

MARITAIN, RAISSA (MME JACQUES MARITAIN). We have been friends together; memoirs; tr. by Julie Kernan. (Golden measure bks) 208p il $2.50 Longmans

B or 92 Maritain, Jacques 42-6040

Chapters in the life of Jacques Maritain and his wife. The latter is of Jewish descent, was born in Russia, and went to France with her family when she was ten. At sixteen Raïssa entered the Sorbonne where she met her future husband, and his friends, among them Ernest Psichari, the grandson of Renan. From the Sorbonne professors the young Maritains turned to the teachings of Henri Bergson, but even his philosophy did not satisfy them intellectually. Later they came under the influence of Léon Bloy, and were converted to Catholicism. A final chapter deals with Jacques Maritain's studies at Heidelberg, the consequences of their conversion, and the death of Psichari in the first World war in 1914.

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster

Books p24 Ap 5 '42 750w

"The book is distinguished by reason of the author's style,—simple, self-revealing, sympathetic, calculated to provide precisely the aid needed by the spiritually undernourished class to which the author once belonged. She cannot of course convey more than an inadequate sense of all that was involved in the tremendous experiences of which she writes, but what she has given will be highly prized."

+ Cath World 155:125 Ap '42 270w

Christian Century 59:115 Ja 28 '42 90w

"This book is the beautifully ordered and sensitive account of [an] intellectual and spiritual journey to the very brink of despair and, beyond and through despair . . . to a free acceptance and understanding of the Catholic faith. . . Raïssa Maritain writes with rare serenity. She is, of course, a poet, and in many passages throughout her book there are sudden flashes of poetic insight, direct and immediate. . . In this English version Miss Julie Kernan's prose is faithful and clear." C. G. Paulding

+ Commonweal 35:395 F 6 '42 800w

"Raïssa Maritain found her final spiritual goal in the Catholic Church; and much of her book is especially interesting to those who share that communion. But neither her personal story nor her portrait-memories should be read in any sectarian spirit. Her book's reward is for those who read it with breadth and depth."

+ N Y Times p22 F 8 '42 800w

MARK, HERMANN FRANZ, and RAFF, RUDOLF AUGUST VICTOR. High polymeric reactions; their theory and practice; tr. from the ms. by Luise Harris Weissberger and I. [!] P. Itrany. (High polymers; a series of monographs) 476p il $6.50 Interscience

541.7 Polymerization 41-25165

"Third of the series on high polymers, this volume deals with theory and practice. It is divided into two parts. The first, or general part, includes general relationships and discusses quantitatively the structure of high polymers giving considerable data on experimental methods including physical and chemical tests, as well as methods of preparation and measurement of reaction rates. In the second part, the reported polymerization reactions of more than a hundred organic and inorganic compounds are reviewed and summarized."

Chem & Met Eng

"The general organization of the material is excellent and the subject matter is treated thoroughly and precisely. The seventeen full pages of author index (as well as an adequate subject index) indicate the extent of the literature surveyed, as does the fact that the volume contains well over a thousand references to the original literature." C. C. Price

+ Am Chem Soc J 64:1015 Ap '42 550w

"Chemical engineers concerned with the subject of polymerization will find this book a well organized summary of the work that has been done to date."

+ Chem & Met Eng 49:170 Ap '42 150w

"The pleasure of reading this book is marred somewhat by an abundance of faulty chemical names. . . In summary, the merits of the book far outweigh such demerits as these. The authors are to be commended in offering such a worthwhile presentation on so timely a theme."

C. D. Hurd

+ J Phys Chem 46:607 My '42 300w

"The book by Mark and Raff has added greatly to the coordinated literature on high polymers. It is a necessary addition to the library of those who would do research in the field of high polymers." C. S. Fuller

+ R of Scientific Instruments 13:185 Ap '42 600w

MARKHAM, BERYL. West with the night. 294p $3 Houghton916.76 Africa, British East. Aeronautics—
Flights (W) 42-16264

Autobiography of a young English woman who has spent much of her life in Africa. She made the first solo flight from England to the shores of North America and back, in 1936. She was the first woman to fly the mail in Africa, and the first woman to train race horses professionally in Africa. Stories of her childhood in British East Africa and of her eventful career as an aviator-scouter for big game comprise a large part of her story.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (13)
N Y Times (1) RB (1)

"This is a stimulating, well-written book."

John Cournos

+ Atlantic 170:138 S '42 200w

Booklist 38:440 JI 15 '42

Bookmark 4:14 N '42

"When a book like Beryl Markham's 'West With the Night' comes along it leaves a reviewer very humble. Words of praise used for other works seem trite and thin. For 'West With the Night' is more than autobiography; it is a poet's feeling for her land; an adventurer's response to life; a philosopher's evaluation of human beings and human destinies. To say that Beryl Markham captures the spirit of Africa would be presumptuous and ridiculous; Africa has captured hers, and she speaks with eloquence close to enchantment of the things it has meant to her." Rose Feld

+ Books p1 JI 5 '42 850w

"[Miss] Markham has made a real contribution to the literature of flight. Her background is more romantic than Anne Lindbergh's, her perception as delicate. Here are the jungles and excitement of Osa Johnson, plus a prose style that rivals St. Exupery. At a moment when our constant thought is of danger and destruction in the heavens it is good to read some of the poetry of flight, to experience secondhand the wide solitude of the sky." E. M.

+ Boston Globe p17 Je 17 '42 700w

"Here is more than a mere autobiographical work. Here is an interpretation of Africa—a scrutiny into its age-old secrets and a glance into its future. As for the stylist, he will find Miss Markham's writing distinguished. It has strength, it has the precious quality of unexpectedness; it is unfailingly intelligent, like the mind of the woman who shaped it. For her thinking is bold, original, and challenging as her life has been." M. W.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 8 '42 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '42
New Repub 107:126 J1 27 '42 60w

"A book quite unlike anything that has been written by any other woman or about Africa, its natives, its hunting and its future by anybody. It is written, as a book on such a subject should be, straight out of experienced knowledge. Its thought was born in long, wide-spaced African silences. Its opinions are those of a woman who had always, from childhood, been very much of a person both in her own right and by reason of a country where cut-to-pattern people do not belong. And it is written with exceptional, simple beauty in a style that, without aiming at distinction, achieves it unquestionably." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p4 Je 21 '42 1100w

"The chapters on flying over Africa are unusually fresh and even thrilling. . . Her descriptions of the strange country over which she travelled are sensitive, not unworthy of comparison with the books of Anne Morrow, and a little rapturous about the 'feel' of Africa." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:66 Je 20 '42 230w
Pratt p21 D '42

"Beryl Markham does more than tell of Africa. With admirable modesty, she offers us a thrilling as well as an appealing saga of a very valiant and very human woman, philosophically pitting her skill, bolstered by limitless faith in herself, against relentless Nature in all her multifarious disguises, in the dank jungles, the desert wastes, and the boundless skies." Linton Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 25:10 Je 27 '42 380w
Time 40:76 J1 20 '42 420w
Wis Lib Bul 38:119 J1 '42

MARKS, LIONEL SIMEON, ed. Mechanical engineers' handbook. 4th ed. 2274p il $7 McGraw

621.02 Mechanical engineering—Handbooks, manuals, etc. 41-15315

"A new edition of a well-known engineering handbook, with many of its sections completely rewritten. Additional new material includes the theory of models, plastic behavior of materials, stress concentration, creep, packings, wind pressure on structures, sound and noise, automatic process control, and powder metallurgy." (N Y New Tech Bks) For third edition see Book Review Digest, 1930.

Booklist 38:56 O 15 '41
Chem & Met Eng 49:185 F '42 200w
N Y New Tech Bks 26:54 O '41

MARKS, PERCY. Full flood. 306p $2.50 Reynal 42-19936

Character study of a sensitive young American, Terry Price, just out of Stanford. Terry was hump-backed, and rather frail in health, so welcomed the interest of a famous surgeon who lived nearby. The doctor's advice to build up his health before getting a job almost left a permanent hump on Terry's character, but he had the aid of two fine women—his grandmother and the girl to whom he was engaged. Added to that came the opportunity to help the F.B.I. because of his knowledge of Japanese, and Terry's danger of breakdown was past.

Reviewed by F. H. Block
Books p8 Ag 30 '42 450w

"More than one reader will wish that the author had skipped a few of Terry's trials and thrown in more about his contacts with the Japanese. At any rate, 'Full Flood' offers an interesting character study of Terry, with the egregiously athletic and rather insensitive doctor as a good foil and the stout-hearted grandmother as no mean runner-up, even in a minor role." Beatrice Sherman

+ — N Y Times p7 Ag 30 '42 600w

MARLETT, MELBA. Devil builds a chapel. 274p $2 Doubleday

Detective story. 42-7341

"Net result is a more than satisfactory package of puzzlement." Will Cuppy
+ Books p18 Mr 22 '42 130w

"Fantastic trappings of last two murders and unsuccessful attempt may agitate epidermis but solution is much too coincidental. Passable."

Sat R of Lit 25:15 Mr 21 '42 40w

MARQUAND, JOHN PHILLIPS. Last laugh, Mr Moto. 270p $2 Little

(W) 42-3381

A lonely island in the Caribbean is the scene of this tale of the search for an invaluable airplane secret. Three Americans and the Japanese agent, Mr Moto, fight it out for the secret. The time is previous to Japan's joining with the Axis powers.

Booklist 38:235 Mr 1 '42

"The author's mystery-adventure touch is as sure as ever, but there's no blinking the fact that for some readers the volume will not seem quite in touch with the time-spirit. Or then again, it may." Will Cuppy

Books p13 F 8 '42 170w

"A thrilling story told with all the artistry at Mr. Marquand's command." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p14 F 1 '42 230w

"Timely thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:18 Ja 31 '42 40w

MARSH, NGAIO. Enter a murderer. 287p $2 Sheridan [7s 6d; 2s 6d Bles]

(W)

Detective story.

Booklist 39:12 S '42

"Where Ngaio Marsh is concerned, seems that wonders will never cease. Here's a Grade A mystery said to be another of her earlier works, hitherto unpublished on this side, written before she burst out as Public Baffler No. 1 a few years ago. Whether or not this is positively the last of such, it's as fresh as a daisy and takes top ranking as easily as that." Will Cuppy

+ Books p12 J1 19 '42 250w

"It is all good Ngaio Marsh, and that is good enough to satisfy the most critical reader of detective stories." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p16 J1 19 '42 200w

Sat R of Lit 25:16 J1 11 '42 30w

MARSH, NGAIO. Man lay dead. 284p $2 Sheridan [7s 6d; 2s 6d Bles]

(W) 42-36026

Detective story.

Booklist 38:190 F 1 '42

"We'd call this perfect escape entertainment." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 Ja 11 '42 340w

Reviewed by Mort. Post

New Repub 106:125 Ja 26 '42 70w

"Incidentally, this book marks the first meeting of Alleyn and Nigel Bathgate, who are so closely associated in most of the Ngaio Marsh's stories. The conclusion is inevitable that this is an early Ngaio Marsh. Not that it makes any difference; any Ngaio Marsh story is certain to be Grade A, and this one is no exception." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 11 '42 240w

"Hackneyed plot, but well written."

+ New Yorker 17:60 Ja 10 '42 70w

"Marsh enthusiasts will find interest in reading about first meeting of Alleyn and Bathgate. Otherwise fair to middlin'. Readable."

Sat R of Lit 25:19 Ja 24 '42 40w

MARSH, NGAIO—Continued

"The sensitive and reasonably erudite Inspector Alleyn deserves a better vehicle for his ability from his creator, who has won considerable praise for previous tales."
Springf'd Republican p7e F 15 '42 160w

MARSHAK, IL'IA IAKOVLEVICH (M. ILIN, pseud), and SEGAL, E. How man became a giant; tr. by Beatrice Kinkad; il. by A. Komarov and E. A. Furman [foreword by Paul Radin]. 270p $2 Lippincott

573 Man, Prehistoric—Juvenile literature
(W) 42-2723

Study of evolution for juveniles and those grown-ups "who possess a child's sense of the realities." "Once a homeless wanderer, man is shown by archaeological remains as he was in the beginning, and then as a young giant learning the laws of nature and of his own life. The ice fields retreated, tribes migrated, man made a place for himself in a forest world. Artisans labored, agriculture came into existence, primitive religious rites were practiced. Prehistory was over, history was born. We see America at the time of Cortez, Europe under the clan system, nomads with their flocks, craftsmen at their work. Then science came and the world expanded. Man still grows. 'And the taller he gets, the wider becomes the horizon around him.'" (Scientific Bk Club R)

"All this is told as if talking and not talking down. . . There will be but one sort of person who will get no good from this rapid journey through our beginnings. This is the sort convinced that no good can come out of either evolution or Russia." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 F 8 '42 500w

"Style is colloquial, with irrelevant phrases, which may be due to translation from the Russian. Written like fiction and lacking an index, book's use is limited, though facts presented appear to be authentic. Not recommended, as there is better material available on subject." Dorothea Dawson
— Library J 67:322 Ap 1 '42 80w

"Recommended for large libraries, and for casual reading rather than serious study." J. L. Sauer

+ Library J 67:322 Ap 1 '42 130w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:390 O 15 '42 20w

Manchester Guardian p3 D 18 '42 20w

"This is a picture of an expanding world which will make thrilling reading for the child who is ready for it (and this may be anywhere from ten to fifteen) and also for the adult who wants a clear, concise account of the way in which anthropologists have figured out man's journey from primitive times to the present."
+ N Y Times p10 F 22 '42 360w

"In the foreword, Paul Radin, professor of anthropology at Black Mountain College, comments on the author's understanding of the young person's urge for essentials, for the proper intermingling of concrete detail with honest explanation and proper theory, and of how contemptuous is his attitude toward all subterfuge and evasion. He believes this understanding is the chief characteristic of 'How Man Became a Giant.'"

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:4 F '42 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p623 D 19 '42 120w

MARSHALL, DAVID. Model railroad engineering; a manual of design, construction and operation. 285p il $3.50 Harper

625 Railroads—Models (W) 42-16279

A manual of the design, construction and operation of model railroads, written for adult followers of the hobby. The author is Model Railway Editor of Popular Science. Index.

"Marshall has had to include a great deal which is sheer detail, and without which his book would not have practical value, but he has also included—under an equal compulsion—much which thrills the mind, satisfies the curiosity, moves the imagination. Perhaps it will startle some readers of this review to have me praise Mr. Marshall's style. And I must confess that this is the first manual for hobbyists of which I could ever dare do as much. There is a certain handsome conciseness and clarity to his writing, and even occasionally a touch of almost biblical poetry, altogether astonishing in a book of this sort."

H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 36:452 Ag 28 '42 320w

Wis Lib Bul 38:116 Jl '42

MARSHALL, DEAN. Long white month; il. by Theresa Kalab. 252p $2 Dutton

(W) 42-16186

Priscilla had been brought up by a correct aunt, in a correct New York apartment, with stated days and hours for all of her activities. When her aunt had to go to California for a rest, Priscilla went to live with an understanding young cousin, at her Connecticut cabin. Cousin Susan taught Priscilla more in one month than she had learned in all her life before, including the project of feeding the birds in the winter woods. After that the child's greatest desire in life was to live with Cousin Susan, and a way to grant her wish was found. For children eight to ten.

Booklist 39:17 S '42

"You might call this a bird book, as indeed it is, but it will also please those who swear by 'Understood Betsy.'" M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Jl 26 '42 400w

"Written by a social worker, this pleasant story brings out a little girl's need of understanding and her enjoyment of simple everyday living and the out-of-doors." Jean Stewart

+ Library J 67:687 Ag '42 110w

"There are excellent characterizations in this story and a beautiful feeling for the woods." R. A. Hill

+ Library J 67:886 O 15 '42 50w

"This is a fresh and endearing story written with a grace and a twinkling humor and appreciation of the good things that are important in a little girl's world." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 23 '42 360w

Wis Lib Bul 38:165 N '42

MARSHALL, MARGUERITE MOOERS (MRS S. W. DEAN). Arms and the girl. 285p $2 Macrae Smith co.

42-211

Romance of an army nurse, Rosemary Alden, who served with the rank of second lieutenant in an army camp. The difficulties which Rosemary ran into when an old friend came to the camp as a private make up the bulk of the story.

"Even if you try very hard, you are not going to find it very convincing." Lisle Bell

— Books p14 Ja 11 '42 130w

Wis Lib Bul 38:68 Ap '42

MARSHALL, MRS ROSAMOND VAN DER ZEE. None but the brave; a story of Holland; il. by Gregor Duncan. 184p $2 Houghton

(W) 42-7641

Sixteenth century Holland is the scene of this tale of romance and adventure for older boys and girls. Nele, the young granddaughter of Jonkheer van Doon, a Dutch patriot, becomes one of the Company of Beggars, the secret band serving Prince William of Orange against the Spaniards. At the risk of her life Nele goes for help during the Siege of Leyden, and succeeds in her mission.

Booklist 38:311 Ap 15 '42

"The telling has been done with proper restraint and in unaffected English. The pictures match the story. In such history can be found for the eager teens a source of moral courage for today." M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 My 10 '42 450w

"This is a splendid story of a brave people and their determination, at whatever cost, to win back their rights to live as free men." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 13 '42 140w

"Swift moving, dramatic, inspiring, this fine story re-creates a past no dictator can ever blot out." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:181 My '42 70w

"Stirring adventure story, full of excitement and dramatic appeal. Slight love interest." Elizabeth Babcock

+ Library J 67:369 Ap 15 '42 50w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:890 O 15 '42 20w

"The story is full of excitement and drama. While the characters are drawn clearly enough to hold the reader's attention and a thread of romance rounds out the tale its chief interest lies in the quick succession of adventurous happenings, rising to a fine climax when help comes to the besieged citizens at the eleventh hour, a thousand Sea Beggars skating to the city gates just in time to raise the siege of Leyden and save the life of the courageous Jonkheer von Doon. Gregor Duncan's fine drawings heighten the dramatic quality of the story." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 My 17 '42 360w

New Yorker 18:76 My 23 '42 70w

MARSMAN, JAN HENRIK. I escaped from Hong Kong. 249p $2.50 Reynal

940.542 World war, 1939—Hong Kong. World war, 1939—Prisoners and prisons. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American (W) 42-20389

The author is a business man, a Dutch-born United States citizen, with large interests in the East. When the Japanese struck at Pearl Harbor he was in Hong Kong, and so was an eye-witness of the wanton horrors of the siege and capture of that city. His account covers his experiences in Hong Kong, his escape, and his slow progress back to the United States, a period of nearly four months.

Booklist 39:30 O 1 '42

"His is a story which will fill every civilized reader with loathing and disgust for the fanatical, semi-crazy and lust-filled souls of the twentieth-century samurai. It reads like a fantastic story about a fictional, barbaric people, but there was nothing fictional about the treatment to which Mr. Marsman and his fellow prisoners were subjected in Hongkong. An account of this kind is one which lends itself easily to exaggeration, especially in the hands of a professional writer. Mr. Marsman is not such a writer. His book is written simply in a forthright and direct manner which serves to enhance its authenticity." Joseph Newman

+ Books p1 Ag 9 '42 1700w

Christian Science Monitor p11 S 5 '42 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '42

"The escape story is monotonously similar to hundreds of others the war has brought forth (the fault is history's rather than Mr. Marsman's), but the description of the Greater East Asia Co-Prosperity Sphere as it tortures and rapes its merry way along is accurate, powerful, and infinitely horrible."

+ New Repub 107:262 Ag 31 '42 70w

"For those who may still doubt that this war is a total war, Mr. Marsman's description of life under fire with British soldiers and civilians of many nationalities and all ages, who occupied the famous Repulse Bay Hotel on the ocean side of Hong Kong for two weeks preceding the surrender, is recommended for particularly careful study. It is also particularly recommended to all who incline to the dangerous practice of underrating our enemy, Japan." R. G. Doyle

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 9 '42 1150w

"As a record of personal adventure it is no great shakes. As a first-hand report on Japanese atrocities, it is something else again." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 18:55 Ag 8 '42 160w

"Marsman's story does not make pleasant reading. It is a tale of cold-blooded murder of Chinese, Hindus, and Britons by the Japanese soldiery. . . . But the book is more than a book-length atrocity tale. It is a portrait of the Japanese army in action. . . . The only weak part of the book is the last two chapters, dealing with China at war. This section has a very remote relation to the rest of the book; in it, moreover, Marsman ceases to be a reporter and becomes a prophet. In this role, he does not star. But even with this weak, anticlimactic conclusion, Marsman's is a terrifying and impressive story." Mark Gayn

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:7 Ag 15 '42 390w

MARTIN, DAHRIS BUTTERWORTH. Wonder cat; with il. by Aldren A. Watson. 59p $1.75 Crowell

42-19434

A tale of Tunisia for young readers. Balla and his mother were very poor, after the death of Balla's father, and they moved from one poor home to another, until the advent of the wonder cat. At first the cat was thought to be an evil spirit, because he was so black, but Balla insisted that the five white hairs he possessed made him a wonder cat. And in time Balla was proved correct.

"A good story to give a child just as the fairy tale age approaches fact. Dahriss Martin, though she understands belief in djinns, does not share it, yet she can tell of those who do with such affection that they get their chance with a little reader. Incidentally, this is a good text on kindness to animals. The use of color in these decorations has been both discreet and effective." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ag 23 '42 380w

"Entertaining story for all who love cats, but it will have special appeal for eight- to ten-year-old readers. Plot develops against background of Arab village life that rings true. Illustrations by Aldren A. Watson are in keeping, and book of sixty pages is pleasant to hold. Worthwhile addition to children's library." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 67:687 Ag '42 120w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:892 O 15 '42 10w

"If you wish to cure a child of superstition this parable on cause and effect points the way to reason. Mrs. Martin hasn't quite woven the feel of legend with which one somehow expects this kind of a tale to be clothed, but it is vivid in its background of Oriental life and thought, heightened by Aldren Watson's decorations and pictures. If the moral is emphasized rather heavily it is pointed out in asides which give children the delightful superior feeling of being let in on a secret which the characters haven't guessed." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p9 Ag 23 '42 320w

MARTIN, FRANCES GARDINER (MCENTEE). Knuckles down! with pictures by Dorothy McEntee. 230p $1.50 Harper

42-36295

Dinwiddie Tyler was nicknamed Dinks because he was little; not because he was a marble champion as his grandfather thought, when Dinks went to spend a winter with him. And what scrapes Dinks got into that winter, trying to live up to that mistaken nickname. For boys in grades four to six.

Booklist 39:17 S '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p10 N 29 '42 500w

"A very successful boy's story. An amusing tone and a real insight into working of a boy's mind make this a natural story." R. W. Stewart

+ Library J 67:913 O 15 '42 80w

"Story starts off delightfully but seems slow in action. Doubt if it will be of sufficient appeal to warrant purchase except by libraries with ample funds for a variety of titles." J. E. Wooster

+ — Library J 67:913 O 15 '42 40w

MARTIN, GEORGE WINSTON. Come and get it! the compleat outdoor chef; chapter headings by Hamilton Greene; pen drawings by E. Modrakowska. 189p $2 Barnes, A.S.
641.578 Cookery, Outdoor. Camping
42-36177

This book is "written for those who want to rustle their own meals on a week-end hike or over longer periods in an auto-trailer, a hunting cabin or fishing shack as well as for the man or woman who wants to cook in his back yard or enjoy an outdoor picnic. The book is also intended as a guide for leaders of organized groups who must plan rations for a single meal up to a several days' camping trip." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 38:325 My 1 '42
Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '42
J Home Econ 34:387 Je '42 100w
Wis Lib Bul 39:94 Je '42

MARTIN, SEYMOUR GUY, and others. History of philosophy. 546p $3.25 Crofts
109 Philosophy—History 41-14181

The history of philosophy from the pre-Socratic philosophers thru Kant. The authors have attempted to give the essentials of various doctrines, and present each exponent in his relation to other philosophers, then in terms of his theory of ideas. "From ancient philosophy Mr. Clark has chosen the Pre-Socratics, Plato, Aristotle, the Stoics as a group, Sextus Empiricus, representing the sceptics, and Plotinus, as presenting Neo-Platonism. Of the medievals Mr. Clarke gives some background in Philo, Judaeus, and then discusses Origen, Augustine, and Dionysius for the patristic period, Erigena, Anselm, Abelard, and Bonaventure as Augustinians and Thomas, Scotus, Ockham as Aristotelians. Mr. Ruddick uses Copernicus, Bruno, and Montaigne as transitions to the modern period and then includes Descartes, Spinoza, and Leibniz as rationalists, Locke, Berkeley, and Hume as empiricists, concluding with a chapter on criticism and Kant." (J Philos) Index.

"The insistence that the book be brief and concise has given it its particular character and value." G. C. S.

+ J Philos 39:24 Ja 1 '42 420w

"Better adapted to the interests of the average educated reader than most of the other books in its field. . . Good for medium and larger libraries."

+ Wis Lib Bul 38:41 Mr '42

MARTINEAU, HARRIET. Retrospect of western travel. 2v 276;239p $4 Harper
917.3 U.S.—Description and travel

"A facsimile edition of the 1838 issue of a well-known travel book recording an English-woman's impressions of America." Booklist

"This reissue in facsimile is well justified and timely. The book is one of permanent interest and value." Horace Reynolds

+ Atlantic 170:162 D '42 210w

Booklist 39:106 N 15 '42

"Retrospect of Western Travel" is incomparably better reading than its predecessor 'Society in America'. . . It can still be read with enjoyment by anyone interested in that period of our past. If Harriet had but possessed the frankness of our modern writers of personal reminiscences and a greater sense of the dramatic possibilities of her material, she might have written a really great book. Even so, 'Retrospect' was a success." E. E. Calkins

+ Sat R of Lit 25:11 D 5 '42 2950w

Time 40:98 N 2 '42 1250w

Wis Lib Bul 38:188 D '42

MARX, GROUCHO. Many happy returns; an unofficial guide to your income-tax problems; il. by O. Soglow. 96p $1 Simon & Schuster 817 42-2120

The author, T.P., L.B. (tax payer, lower brackets) explains in giddy and haphazard fashion just what is expected of the tax payers in his and higher classes, and where the tax dollar really goes.

"The humor, like the income tax itself, has a broad base. 'Many Happy Returns' is not a cure-all, but it should help relieve the epidemic of writer's cramp which becomes nation-wide around the fifteenth of March."

Books p10 Ja 25 '42 110w

New Repub 106:374 Mr 16 '42 90w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 25 '42 160w

MARX, WALTER JOHN. Mechanization and culture; the social and cultural implications of a mechanized society. 243p $2 Herder

601 Social problems. Technology. Machinery 42-970

"The bulk of this book is as damning a social criticism of man's use of the machine as this reviewer has encountered. Dr. Marx accomplishes this by piling up the evidence, citing dozens of authorities of widely varying weights, summarizing first-hand studies of specific situations." Commonweal

"The book may serve some propaganda purpose in the colleges of the author's sect, but we cannot think of any use a scientist could find in it, unless for the brief bibliography." S. C. Gilfillan

— Am Soc R 7:443 Je '42 550w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin, Jr.

Commonweal 35:347 Ja 23 '42 650w

MASANI, MINOCHEHER RUSTOM. Our India; il. by C. H. G. Moorhouse. 166p $1.75 Oxford

330.954 India—Economic conditions. India—Industries and resources (W) 42-17543

Study of India, its people and resources, written by the president of the All-India congress socialist party. Intended for fifth and sixth grade children. Contains picture statistics.

Booklist 39:178 Ja 1 '43

"The illustrations are the best part of the book. The style is simple but pedagogically sound. The author, however, over-simplifies the problem of India. He does not take into account the historical, political and social situation (as 'My India, My America' does so well)." L. G. Ligutti

— + Commonweal 36:187 Je 12 '42 490w

"Very timely and interesting book on India.

While pictures will appeal to younger children, subject matter is for older group. Should be examined before purchase." A. L. Shea

+ — Library J 67:632 Jl '42 90w

"There are many adults who might do worse than take their first belated steps to up-to-date knowledge of that great land through this unusually well produced book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p394 Ag 8 '42 120w

MASEFIELD, JOHN. Gautama the enlightened, and other verse. 58p $1.60 Macmillan [5s Heinemann]

821

(W) 42-1325

Four poems by England's poet laureate, "two distinctly modern in theme, about England and contemporary life; and two presenting old legends."

Booklist 38:207 F 15 '42

"Smoothly written, thoroughly orthodox in theme and treatment. I do not know what a Buddhist would think of Mr. Masefield's conception of Gautama, but poetically it is thin fare. Neither dramatic nor convincing in its spiritual motivation, it reduces the life of the religious founder to a series of static episodes." Lloyd Frankenberg

+ — Books p17 Ja 18 '42 550w

"To readers for whom Masefield's poetry is 'exulting and eternal in its essence,' his four latest productions, Gautama, Shopping in Oxford, Mahdama's Quest, An Art Worker, may seem unusually soft-pedalled. Indeed, despite their varied voices, the quasi-unison of this quartet reaches a quieter than Masfieldian note of joy. . . . Quiet joy is the note that all four strike in common; all too, in style, are amiably simple." R. F.

+ Canadian Forum 21:379 Mr '42 430w

Reviewed by F. A. Boyle

Library J 66:999 N 15 '42 60w

"The narrative piece which gives Mr. Masfield's new volume its name seems rather to state than realise its high theme. The gem of this little collection is the fresh, ingenious character-study of 'The Art Worker'." Basil de Selincourt

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 16 '41 80w

"Mr. Masfield's poetry is not full; it wanders on, sustained by a single thread, a frail but sometimes charming thread." Edwin Muir
New Statesman & Nation 23:80 Ja 31 '42 250w

"For the reader to whom Masfield really appeals no other contemporary poet gives the same satisfaction. He can tell a story in verse with skill, charm, sympathy, swift movement and romantic overtone. Then what he writes seems to come out of an easy mind, unclouded by the tragic sense of life in spite of the catastrophes that sometimes come into his narratives. People in his poems are happy or at least have known happiness. If you hold with this you will like all in this book with the exception of dull bits in 'Shopping in Oxford.'" M. M. Colum

N Y Times p5 D 21 '41 420w

"Taking the volume on its own terms, the reader will have no difficulty in finding the same peace and touching purity of spirit in the last-mentioned poems as in the first. It is good to sense happiness and not bitterness in an old poet's heart." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 17:69 F 14 '42 150w

Poetry 60:109 My '42 550w

Springf'd Republican p6 F 10 '42 700w

Wis Lib Bul 38:66 Ap '42

MASEFIELD, JOHN. Natalie Maisie and Pavlastukay; two tales in verse. 69p $2.50 Macmillan [6s Heinemann]

821 (W) 42-17262

Two stories in verse. Natalie Maisie is about a beautiful young Russian girl who attracted the rapacious attentions of Czar Peter at a dance. She was saved by the Empress and escaped into the forest where she lived for a year before she was rescued by her sailor lover. The second tale is an allegory about the England which shall rise again after the war.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Drew

Atlantic 170:108 Ag '42 200w

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitter

Books p16 Ag 9 '42 430w

"Two bad! The critic who offered to back these two versified tales in any contest for the worst poems in the English language exaggerated their demerits. They are bad enough, especially the first, but perhaps no worse than a poet laureate has a right to write if he wants to. 'Natalie Maisie' is scarcely excusable. . . . 'Pavlastukay' is better."

+ Christian Century 59:1223 O 7 '42 260w

"The Poet Laureate is always royally at ease in narrative, and in the first of these two tales is happy all through; for it is a tale and no more. The second is really a Utopia; and just in that transition from the thing that was to the thing that should be, Mr. Masfield's words and thoughts fall somewhat to cross-purposes, with much loss of atmosphere in consequence." B. S.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 15 '42 150w

"In 'Natalie Maisie' Mr. Masfield indulges himself in writing one of the worst poems in the English language. . . . The other long poem in the book is a fantasy about a strange land where there is peace and happiness, and in that state again will England be. Both are written in the seven-line stanza Mr. Masfield learned from Chaucer. They are inferior, almost deliberately so, to his other published work, practically like a parody, and as funny as a poet-laureate can sometimes be." P. M. Jack

— N Y Times p16 Ag 23 '42 650w

New Yorker 18:64 Je 27 '42 20w

"In this volume the Poet Laureate slumps to a level of carelessness, sentimentality, and uselessness painful to report. Mr. Masfield's once supple seven-line Chaucerian stanza serves for both pieces, the second being a fantasy in which England is likened to a dream-land of hard-won peace, but it is perfunctory now, even absurd in many passages." John Holmes

— Poetry 61:514 D '42 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p200 Ap 18 '42 1100w

MASON, ALFRED EDWARD WOODLEY. Life of Francis Drake. 349p $3.75 Doubleday [12s 6d Hodder]

B or 92 Drake, Sir Francis (W) 42-10669

A new, full-length biography and character study of Elizabeth's great sea captain, written by a well-known English novelist who is also a lover of the sea. Index.

"Francis Drake unquestionably was the man who fired the first gun for British sea power, who first took the English mind and spirit around the world. . . . But all this gives no reason to indulge in another book of hero worship in the good old Victorian manner. The present panegyric rather goes the limit in this direction; it is uncritical to an extraordinary degree. . . . The best of the book is the narrative of the destruction of the Spanish Armada, in which Drake is not a primary figure. This story is so specific and engrossing that it flows by itself." Lincoln Colcord

+ Books p16 Ap 19 '42 1100w

Reviewed by F. E. Hirsch

Library J 67:317 Ap 1 '42 70w

"A. E. W. Mason is an expert story teller; Drake's career was crammed with good stories, and Mason tells them well. Scholars may be distressed by some of his casual assertions, but it is traditional for English naval histories to misconceive sixteenth-century diplomacy, and when Mason gets his hero on blue water the vigor and speed of his narrative more than make up for the occasional inaccuracies." Garrett Mattingly

+ New Repub 106:868 Je 22 '42 700w

"On general grounds I am opposed to eminent novelists and literary persons descending into the historical field hoping to carry off a plum with the biography of some very famous historical figure. . . . There may be exceptions to this; but Mr. A. E. W. Mason, with his Drake, is not one of them. His publishers, I note, hope that this will be considered 'the historical biography of the year.' That, of course, it is not. It is merely a good popular biography, of which nobody need be ashamed, but which adds nothing whatever to our knowledge of the subject. And there were many popular biographies of Drake before." A. L. Rowse

New Statesman & Nation 22:365 O 18 '41 850w

"It is fine, full biography, every sentence strongly stripped of latter-day sensation—stripped for action, salt in the hair, hunger in the belly, blood on the deck—action detailed by a Holbein, action reverberating around the world. Names may be but names, strategy may surpass the resources of narration, but the impulse of life will not be denied. As Drake's sailors rounded Cape Horn, muttering their misgivings, so do we read on, responding like schoolboys to their lust for loot." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 26 '42 1500w

"Though the story of Drake has often been told, and his character and campaigns analysed by more than one skilled writer since Sir Julian Corbett's monumental work of research on Drake and the Tudor Navy, it is a story without end, a story that will always stand retelling. Mr. Mason's manner of telling this noble story is worthy of its subject; it carries the interest through from the first to the last page. That interest lies not only in the romance of the adventurous voyages, in the valour of the men who captured cities with tiny forces, took ships, and defeated the prodigious attempt at invasion of this island. It lies, too, in the parallel between the situations of then and now." H. W. Richmond

MASON, A. E. W.—Continued
+ Spec 167:408 O 24 '41 750w

"A distinct disappointment. At no time does the author bring his spyglass to bear with sharp focus upon the figure of the circumnavigator, standing ageless in the sea mists of the Spanish Main. . . A welter of detail obscures the heroic course which Sir Francis plotted across the face of the Elizabethan age." G. W. B.

— Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 27 '42 330w

"There is always room for a reassessment of character in the retelling of the story of a great man's life. . . This is the justification for Mr. A. E. W. Mason's new full-length study of Drake. It may not add much to knowledge. Indeed there are indications that in one or two places Mr. Mason has not availed himself fully of the work of his predecessors. It is without reference to sources. But, if not a book for the specialist, it is a fine, glowing story of a great life, written with the practised hand of a novelist who apprehends the close connexion between character and events which is the stuff of good biography."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p506 O 11 '41 2700w

MASON, ALFRED EDWARD WOODLEY.
Musk and amber. 303p $2.50 Doubleday [8s 6d Hodder]

42-19563

A romantic novel of England and Italy in the early eighteenth century. A twelve-year old boy, Julian, Earl of Lincombe, with his older half-sister and their cousin, is traveling in Italy when he is kidnapped and another boy is buried in his name. Years pass, Julian is sent to a school for singers, becomes famous not only in Italy but thruout Europe and finally returns to England for his revenge.

Booklist 39:34 O 1 '42

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p20 S 20 '42 200w

"There are improbabilities in Musk and Amber but they are carried off with such a light hand that nobody will grumble. . . Mystery and suspense keep up the interest and the telling is efficient." Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 17 '42 280w

"Mr. Mason has given us an interesting story which is also a vivid picture of the eighteenth century, and, as the center of both, a most appealing portrait of a fine and lovable character, frustrated by human cruelty." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 23 '42 800w

"Mr. Mason has developed a plot that Balzac would have fancied, that some Jacobean might have borne in a frenzied nightmare. He has not, of course, wrought it into the psychological solidity that Balzac would laboriously have achieved, nor has he climbed the heights of dramatic horror that Webster or Tourneur would have scaled. He has just told a tale, but he has told it pleasantly, with lightness of touch and with dashes of humor that turn what might have been passionate tragedy into the most theatrical kind of melodrama." Charles David

+ Sat R of Lit 25:8 S 5 '42 500w

"The author is not only a first-class storyteller, but a literary writer who remains true to the graceful, careful, style which he made his own many years ago; and Musk and Amber recaptures the mood of The Broken Road and Miranda of the Balcony. . . There are no flashy effects, no tough descriptions; but a swiftly moving series of dramatic events that convince the imagination and hold the interest of the reader." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 168:386 Ap 17 '42 130w

"Mr. Mason has never handled narrative more swiftly and securely, or painted his background with a more dainty brush."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p197 Ap 18 '42 500w

MASON, MIRIAM EVANGELINE. Mark Twain, boy of old Missouri; il. by Paul Laune. 164p $1.50 Bobbs

B or 92 Clemens, Samuel Langhorne (Mark Twain, pseud)—Juvenile literature 42-21643

Story of Mark Twain's boyhood in the little village of Florida, Missouri, and in Hannibal. For young readers.

Cath World 156:380 D '42 100w

"A charmingly written and delightfully illustrated book." Cyril Clemens

+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 6 '42 300w

MASON, MIRIAM EVANGELINE. Matilda and her family; il. by Meg Wohlberg. 144p $1.50 Macmillan

(W) 42-25369

Matilda was a determined mother cat, with wise ideas on choosing a home and bringing up her kittens. When she chose the little log house where Tommy and his mother lived in summer she made no mistake. This illustrated story is for readers from six to nine.

Booklist 39:205 Ja 15 '43

"Ever since 'Smiling Farm' proved that school readers could successfully compete with story books for the affection of children, Miss Mason has kept her leadership as author in this new important field. 'Matilda,' [is the] latest of her funny, faithful stories of real life." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 N 15 '42 280w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 37:118 N 20 '42 10w

Horn Bk 19:36 Ja '43 60w

Reviewed by E. G. Mullan

Library J 68:38 Ja 1 '43 70w

MASON, VAN WYCK (GEOFFREY COFFIN, WARD WEAVER, pseud.). Oriental division, G-2. 3v in 1 300, 309, 298p $2.50 Reynal

42-21896

Omnibus volume containing three international-intrigue novels of the Far East: The Sulu Sea Murders (1933); The Fort Terror Murders (1931); The Shanghai Bund Murders (1933).

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker

N Y Times p15 Jl 5 '42 320w

Sat R of Lit 25:16 Ap 18 '42 30w

MASON, VAN WYCK (GEOFFREY COFFIN, WARD WEAVER, pseud.). Rivers of glory. 572p $2.75 Lippincott

(W) 42-25679

The third volume of the author's projected four historical novels, depicting the American Revolution and its effects upon the people of the thirteen colonies. The present volume follows the course of Lieutenant Andrew Warren from Boston, two years after the evacuation, to Tory New York, thence to Jamaica, and ends with the siege of Savannah.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (6) N Y Times (6) PW (1) RE (1)

Booklist 39:185 Ja 1 '43

"A tale which, it seems to me shows greater respect for the historical record than for the fictional probabilities. This is not Van Wyck Mason at his best; but it is unmistakably Van Wyck Mason." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p4 N 29 '42 850w

"High point of book involves siege of Savannah and death of Count Pulaski. Mason as a writer has well-known faults and virtues, and different types of reader reverse judgments on these." H. A. Wooster

Library J 67:1013 N 15 '42 70w

"For fully two-thirds of the way 'Rivers of Glory' is as swift and absorbing a tale as Van Wyck Mason has ever told, and he was never a storyteller to waste words. In the adventurous love story of Andy and Minga, events follow each other with dizzying rapidity and violence is heaped upon violence. When we leave Jamaica and shift to the scene of besieged Savannah there is a structural break in the novel, after which it never entirely recovers its earlier pace and momentum. This may be, and doubtless is, owing to haste and the extraordinary pressure of the times. But it represents something less than Mr. Mason's usual care and cunning at plot manipulation." Margaret Wallace

+ — N Y Times p6 N 29 '42 850w

MASSIE, CHRIS. Farewell, pretty ladies. 297p $2 Random house 42-7200

A psychological murder story of London in the twenties and the present. An exotic artist who "skims the cream off the past," and has a taste for Victorian clothes, and for painting portraits of young girls, garrots one of his victims, and pays for it by being hanged. Another woman, who had once been fascinated by him, tells the tale.

"Why plod along with the standard murder groceries when you can read something different—a veritable two-headed calf in criminous fiction if that isn't mixing metaphors. . . [The narrator's] trip to London, her visit to Madame Tussaud's, her abundant other horrors and her elucidation of the paper abhorrer's fate is a tale worth any fan's attention, though it contains no actual detection. As for Mifanwy's actual wordage and literary style it struck us as by turns quaint, naive, highflown, corny, non-descript and perfectly all right. Nevertheless, our considered advice is to read this item pronto. Get right in there and try to guess what on earth ailed this fellow Doug and all about it. Ten to one you'll read it at one sitting, bug-eyed and blissful." Will Cuppy Books p13 F 8 '42 480w

Reviewed by Mort. Post

New Repub 106:470 Ap 6 '42 30w

"This is an odd sort of book to come out of an age which some men have called apocalyptic. Indeed, it reads as though it were produced in the Yellow Nineties. A Paterish, and at times Wildish, atmosphere hangs over the tale, in which the murder that takes place is only an irrelevant episode. Written in exquisite English, which it is a pleasure to read, it describes attitudes rather than persons, for Douglas Mangin, who is the chief character of this strange book, cannot be and is not intended to be real in any ordinary sense of the word." John Cournos

N Y Times p21 F 8 '42 700w

"May stun you in spots, but the heroine, Mifanwy, who tells the story, is pretty hard to take."

New Yorker 17:64 F 7 '42 60w

"Morbidly horrific and entirely engrossing adventure in abnormality and its fatal consequences. Herr Krafft-Ebing would have loved it. Exotic."

Sat R of Lit 25:17 F 7 '42 40w

MASTERS, EDGAR LEE. Sangamon; il. by Lynd Ward. (Rivers of America) 258p $2.50 Farrar

917.73 Sangamon river. Illinois (W) 42-15541

History and a study of the life and customs of the Illinois countryside thru which flows the Sangamon river. As Mr Masters describes it the Sangamon is a river "not distinguished for majestic scenery, nor for a battle, nor for a single historic event, a river distinguished for nothing but good and useful lives lived along its shores, for the beauty of its prairies that sleep and bloom and wave their grasses to the passing winds." Index.

Booklist 38:424 J1 1 '42

"Masters has attempted only the vaguest sort of history of the river itself, and wisely so, for it has never been navigable, never famous for imposing scenery, nor for commerce, nor the bloody battles on its banks. The Sangamon's place in the rivers series is, as Masters has seen it, only a dream, a remembrance of a few short years when it held Lincoln and the amazingly capable and colorful pioneers whose dying footsteps put lasting echoes in young Masters' ears. Those echoes sound well on paper. Masters has some beautifully pitched tone-poems of old settlers." Lloyd Lewis

+ Books p4 Je 21 '42 750w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p3 Je 14 '42 1250w

"Meanders now and then, like the river itself, and is almost too local in spots, but it is really evocative writing, touched with a deep, filial devotion to the prairie neighborhood and its people."

+ — New Yorker 18:80 Je 6 '42 70w

Pratt p13 D '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:118 J1 '42

MATHIEWS, FRANKLIN K., ed. Boy scouts book of hobbies for fathers and sons; pub. for the Boy scouts of America. 245p il $2.50 Appleton-Century

790 Hobbies. Sports (W) 42-36158

Articles and stories about hobbies which can be enjoyed by men and boys, and are intended to promote understanding between fathers and sons. Partial contents: Fishing for the big ones, by Bob Becker; Trout fishing for boys, by E. W. Brockway; How to rig and handle an open paddling canoe, by W. H. Miller; Mountain climbing, by Joe Mills; Tales of dogs, by Archibald Rutledge; Bird walks, by B. P. Reed; Homing pigeons, by Mather Smith; Begin at the beginning in golf, by Walter Hagen; Tennis technique, by Sol Metzger; Skiing for the amateur, by G. L. Waldron; Magic tricks for amateurs, by W. H. Radcliffe; Stamp collecting, by O. W. Simons; How to build and fly a model glider, by F. A. Collins; How the handicraft hobby may help in the home, by Timothy Tinker.

Booklist 38:348 My 15 '42

"Perfect vacation book for any boy and excellent addition to story-teller's collection." J. E. Wooster

+ Library J 67:416 My 1 '42 90w

MATSCHAT, MRS CECILE (HULSE). American butterflies and moths; il. by Rudolph Freund. 70p $1 Random house

595.78 Butterflies—Juvenile literature. Moths —Juvenile literature (W) 42-36240

Introduction to familiar American moths and butterflies, including a few rare ones. Many drawings illustrate the book, which is suitable for children of eight or over. Index.

Booklist 38:386 Je 15 '42

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 29 '42 50w

"No mention is made of the tussocks, pandoras, tent caterpillars, and some other species of America; but an excellent book for beginners. Scientific names in phonetic spelling will encourage their use. Vocabulary of children above ten." Maude Adams

+ Library J 67:583 Je 15 '42 60w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:892 O 15 '42 10w

New Yorker 18:77 My 23 '42 30w

MATSCHAT, MRS CECILE (HULSE). Highway to heaven. 311p $2 Farrar 42-10939

A variation of the Cinderella story. True-love Carmer is a dreamy sort of girl, but when she learns that she can get millions if she complies with the provisions of a strange will, she works hard to qualify.

MATSCHAT, C. H.—Continued

"All in all, 'Highway to Heaven' has a cut-flower fragrance." Lisle Bell
Books p16 Je 7 '42 250w

"It seems a pity that Mrs. Matschat had to handicap her heroine with the name of True-love. It is always shortened to Love and makes for hard reading, especially at the beginning of a sentence. And what a name, anyhow." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p23 My 10 '42 200w

MATSCHAT, MRS CECILE (HULSE). Tavern in the town. 338p $2.50 Farrar

(W) 42-25504

A story of a Virginia Tidewater family in pre-Revolutionary days. The interest centers in Hope Hilton, one of the dark Hiltons, and her two fair sisters who are her rivals in love, Fay and Cherry.

Booklist 39:185 Ja 1 '43

"'Tavern in the Town' contains no more historical fact than can be found in a child's school history and does not pretend to recreate an atmosphere. . . However, those who look for excitement and suspense in a novel will not quarrel too much with such minor matters." R. Y. Williams

Books p26 D 6 '42 650w

"The author has a charming gift for making the sounds and fragrances of Spring or Autumn apparent, and she is offering a picture of one of the sweetest lands on earth. She has a graphic touch with handsome mansions or low, whitewashed cottages, and the pink hams, shining copper kettles, Creole crab simmering with bay leaves, spices, peppers and sherry are something to read about just before a good dinner of your own. There are anachronisms once in a while, both of fact and feeling." Charlotte Dean

+ — N Y Times p48 N 29 '42 360w

MATSUO, KINOAKI. How Japan plans to win; a tr. by Kilsoo K. Haan of the Japanese book The Three-power alliance and a United States-Japanese war. 323p $2.50 Little

952 Japan—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S.—
Foreign relations—Japan (W) 42-9930

"First published in Tokyo in October of 1940. . . The purpose of the book was twofold: to stiffen mass support for a Japanese showdown with the United States; and to bring mass pressure to bear upon those members of the Admiralty who still considered a war with the United States suicidal. The present book is an unabridged translation of that work." Translator's note

"Here is a book that by its title promises to reveal much, but actually it is what it was originally intended to be: a propaganda book published in Japan for the purpose presumably of arousing Japanese sentiment against the United States and stimulating a war spirit. . . The translator of this book . . . has an ax to grind, so that this book is the product of two sources with objectives of their own. It is first of all Japanese propaganda for Japanese consumption, and Mr. Haan has made it available to American readers, through his painstaking translation, no doubt, to serve the cause of the Sino-Corean League he represents." Wilfrid Fleisher

— Books p14 Ap 12 '42 1150w

"The book is of interest to readers in this country principally by reason of its ludicrous misrepresentations, the opportunity afforded for noting the peculiar quirks involved in Japanese reasoning, and of seeing ourselves, our institutions, motives, and ambitions as a creature of the Japanese Government would have his fellow countrymen see us. . . There is a startling array of accurate information concerning the material used by the United States Army, Navy, and Air Force. . . One striking feature of this book is the entire absence of any particular stress on the part that air power would be found to play in this war. Perhaps, in the light of the unsuspected air strength Japan has developed, this omission was intentional." F. L. O.

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 11 '42 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '42

Current Hist 2:465 Ag '42 550w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:785 Jl '42 30w

Manchester Guardian p3 S 11 '42 40w

Reviewed by M. S. Stewart

Nation 154:548 My 9 '42 240w

Reviewed by G. E. Taylor

New Repub 106:739 My 25 '42 150w

"In style and thought the book is typically Japanese. . . It reveals no Japanese military or naval secrets; its speculations on future military or naval operations are merely those in which any Japanese or American, equipped with map and a reasonable knowledge of the naval forces of the two sides might indulge. But it is interesting and worth reading as a specimen of how the extreme nationalist Japanese mind works. And the author's idea that man and material, not money, win wars is worth pondering. After all there has never been a case when even a hundred thousand dollar bill stopped a tank." W. H. Chamberlin

N Y Times p18 Ap 26 '42 1000w

"This kind of a book may appeal to a Japanese school boy. But the reviewer doubts that it will evoke much interest among adult Americans. A volume which seriously exposed the Nipponese plan of making war against us would serve a useful purpose. This work throws more light on the mentality of the author than on Japan's plan for waging war in the Pacific." H. C. Wolfe

— Sat R of Lit 25:6 Jl 25 '42 380w

Reviewed by Simon Harcourt-Smith

Spec 169:318 O 2 '42 130w

Time 39:90 My 25 '42 20w

"The book is full of confused writing and muddled thinking. At some points, for instance, Matsuo speaks as though the British Empire would hold aloof from the war, or at least be 'non-belligerent.' On another page he says it has already become a certainty that England will take part in the United States-Japanese war. The fault lies mainly, no doubt, with Matsuo, but he has been badly served by his translator."

Times [London] Lit Sup p423 Ag 29

'42 700w

Reviewed by H. S. Quigley

Yale R n s 31:858 summer '42 170w

MATTERN, JOHANNES. Geopolitik; doctrine of national self-sufficiency and empire. 139p $2; pa $1.50 Johns Hopkins press

320.1 Geography. International law and relations 42-19745

"It is with the National Socialist brand of Geopolitik that this study is almost exclusively concerned, but Matern is particularly interested to clarify the historical phenomenon which is encompassed by the almost mythical vagueness of Geopolitik. In respect to historical development, Matern discusses Geopolitik as a National Socialist version of Marxian dialect materialism, and the war as a struggle between the proletarian Axis and the capitalist democracies. Geopolitik is thus a national form of an international ideology." Ethics

Reviewed by H. W. Stoke

Am Pol Sci R 36:1172 D '42 150w

"Professor Matern's study of Geopolitik is a creditable and adequate performance, if one is willing to accept two serious and nearly nugatory limitations: (1) that it is desirable to know Geopolitik only from the doctrinal and theoretical point of view; and (2) that there is point, in the contemporary world, of knowing about Geopolitik only in the days before Karl Haushofer!" H. A. Steiner

Ann Am Acad 224:199 N '42 550w

Commonweal 36:572 O 2 '42 70w

"Matern has done a nice job of deflating the Geopolitik formula." Glenn Negley

+ Ethics 53:76 O '42 190w

"Professor Mattern offers a more exhaustive treatment of the historical background but his style is apt to discourage those whose interest is not primarily in the history of political theory. Because Dr. Strausz-Hupé writes vividly, he has managed to give his book a lively character that should appeal to a wider audience." N. J. Spykman

+ Pol Sci Q 57:600 D '42 260w

MATTHEWS, BLAYNEY F. Specter of sabotage. 256p $3 Lymanhouse

355.2 Sabotage (W) 41-28029

Addressing both the industrialist and the ordinary citizen the author explains what damage foreign agents could accomplish to our war production and how they can be prevented from doing so. Partial contents: Serpents in our industrial bosom; The peril to petroleum; Let the agriculturist beware! Violence from the skies; Sabotage by arson and explosives; Personnel; Safeguards—exterior and interior; Police administration; Fire administration; Suggested employment questionnaire; Industries vulnerable to sabotage. Index.

Booklist 38:246 Mr 15 '42

"Offers a number of useful suggestions, but some readers may find its alarmist tone irritating and some employers may feel that the personnel practices recommended—particularly use of the questionnaire—would make for poor employer-employee relationships."

Management R 31:151 Ap '42 90w

"The author is an ex-FBI investigator, familiar with the Nazi infiltration system, and gives concrete instructions in what to look out for and how. Industrial counter-espionage (for which this should be a primer, as well as a catalytic) is going to be a grim and rather nasty business if it is to be effective, as it must be."

New Repub 106:94 Ja 19 '42 80w

MATTHEWS, HAROLD. River-bottom boy. 354p $2.50 Crowell

42-25232

Story of a family of Louisiana Negro cotton-pickers who leave the plantation and go to the city. The story concerns chiefly the boy Burden and the events which finally lead him to a tragic end.

"Workmanship alone considered, 'River-Bottom Boy' is not a bad job. True, the dialect is on the quaint side, abounding in words like 'wuk,' 'sumpen,' 'mebbe,' 'goen,' 'bizness' and 'waggen,' all puzzling for one reason or another, but the dialogue is otherwise unforced. The narrative moves right along." Arna Bontemps

+ Books p14 O 25 '42 550w

"Negro poverty and high life are described in realistic, sordid detail, while the language is necessarily frank. Recommended for adult readers." H. G. Kelley

+ Library J 67:845 O 1 '42 100w

"Mr. Matthews writes clearly and vigorously and with a fine ear for the strange speech rhythms of the New Orleans and the river-bottom Negroes, but his novel would be more effective if he had left unrecorded a few of the family's misfortunes."

+ New Yorker 18:82 O 24 '42 100w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 22 '42 410w

"A moving and tragic social document." Alden Stevens

+ Survey G 31:602 D '42 100w

MATTIELLO, JOSEPH J., ed. Protective and decorative coatings; 4v; v1-2. 819;655p ea $6 Wiley

667.6 Paint. Varnish and varnishing (41-19399)

The first two volumes of a four volume set, aiming to "supply basic data and information pertaining to protective and decorative coatings. It is hoped that it will serve the needs of technically trained graduates who enter the industry and also that it will be of help to older and more experienced technologists." (Pref) Volume one covers oil, the resins, driers, thinners and solvents, natural minerals, and ethers; volume two covers raw materials, pigments, metallic powders, and metallic soaps. Index at end of each volume.

Booklist 39:97 N 15 '42 (Review of v2)

"While this volume is of primary interest to the coating industry its sphere of interest is much wider. Chemical engineers in other fields will find of value the chapters dealing with such subjects as drying oils, natural and synthetic resins, driers, thinners and solvents, and ethers for the authors have done a splendid job of bringing together all authoritative information and have covered the recent developments."

+ Chem & Met Eng 49:163 Ja '42 350w (Review of v 1)

Chem & Met Eng 49:175 Jl '42 200w (Review of v2)

Library J 68:36 Ja 1 '43 50w (Review of v2)

N Y New Tech Bks 27:10 Ja '42 (Review of v 1)

MAUGHAM, WILLIAM SOMERSET. Hour before the dawn. 307p $2.50 Doubleday

(W) 42-16456

Quietly told story of an aristocratic English family during the first few months of the World war. The oldest son is with the British intelligence service; the second son, a conscientious objector, marries a refugee. The other members of the family do their bit, unobtrusively. It is Jim, the conscientious objector, and his wife who bring things to an unfortunate close.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (13) B & T (1) N Y Times (2) PW (2) RB (1) W (1)

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 170:101 Ag '42 250w

"'The Hour Before the Dawn' is a baffling performance. It has stretches of good writing, spots of original characterization, but it goes completely berserk on plot. One gets the impression that Mr. Maugham felt he ought to write a war novel and made a list of all the things a war novel should contain. . . On the other side of the ledger there is some excellent characterization, mainly of two people who are fairly unimportant to the plot, Jane, the daughter of the Hendersons and Ian Foster, her husband. There are also some good bits of theater which carry dignity and integrity. But these alone do little to clarify the intention of Mr. Maugham."

Books p4 Je 21 '42 700w

Nation 155:18 Jl 4 '42 170w

"Mr. Maugham has written a quietly interesting novel of the war in England in his mildest manner. He has not attempted to make capital out of the hysteria, dramatics, whimsy or heroics that accompany most war novels. Those who have become accustomed to sensation had best let it alone. They will find it dull, no doubt. It is, though authentic in its unassuming way, written with a deliberation of thought as if to weigh the exact effect between a pleasant English family and its wartime tragedy. It carefully avoids being symbol, slogan or cinema sobstuff. It is a penny-plain novel." P. M. Jack

+ N Y Times p6 Je 21 '42 600w

"The tale is told deftly, except for a burst of melodrama at the end. It contains one first-rate set piece of pure narrative, an account of the escape from Flanders of a British colonel during the Dunkerque debacle. The other complications . . . are worked out with Mr. Maugham's usual cleanness of edge and only moderate warmth of conviction. At no point, interested as we may be in the evolution of the plot, do we become absorbed in the characters." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:65 Je 20 '42 500w

MAUGHAM, W. S.—Continued

"Here is a cross-section of England at war, given with understanding, wit, love, and a reserved passion that is the more effective because Mr. Maugham has not often allowed himself to be indignantly passionate." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 Je 27 '42 750w

MAULE, FRANCES. Girl with a pay check; how she lands it—holds it—makes it grow. 273p $2 Harper

396.5 Woman—Employment (W) 41-24066

Popular book of advice for girls and women who are looking for a job, or looking for advancement in a job they already hold. Contains material on preparation for work, attitudes, what employers expect of their assistants, etc.

Booklist 38:172 Ja 15 '42

Books p29 N 16 '41 80w

Wis Lib Bul 38:18 Ja '42

MAURICE, ARTHUR BARTLETT. Riddle of the Rovers. 247p $2 Dodd

42-1553

Detective story.

"This somewhat plush offering has a surprise at the end." Will Cuppy

Books p15 F 1 '42 110w

"Sad to say, this is a Rover Boy book which doesn't compare to the ones read when we were children. It starts with an interesting present, gets all tangled up in a complicated past and solves itself with no distinction."

— + Boston Globe p17 Mr 25 '42 40w

"It is not a pleasant story, nor is it particularly well told," Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p16 Ja 11 '42 140w

"Average."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 Ja 10 '42 40w

"The riddle is rooted in the tough crime wave of [an earlier] time, and concerns a certain gang, 'the Donovans.' Vignettes of key characters reveal the hatred involved, which also reflect recent crime history. Yet the tale even with such material does not keep the reader chewing his fingernails steadily, and many mystery fans may be less than satisfied by the denouement."

Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 11 '42 130w

MAUROIS, ANDRE. Frédéric Chopin; tr. by Ruth Green Harris; il. by Everett Shinn. 91p $1.75 Harper

B or 92 Chopin, Frederic François—Juvenile literature (W) 43-118

Short, illustrated biography of the Polish musician and composer. For young readers.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p20 N 15 '42 200w

"The writing of the brief biography is sensitive and beautiful. . . . It will be enjoyed by musical children over ten years old, and by many adults."

+ Horn Bk 19:32 Ja '43 90w

"Fine gift book. Recommended for children eight to ten," Emily Hutson

+ Library J 67:1107 D 15 '42 80w

MAUROIS, ANDRE. I remember, I remember; tr. from the French by Denver and Jane Lindley. 310p $3 Harper

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 42-23002

Autobiography of the French writer, who was born Émile Herzog, son of a textile manufacturer who after the war of 1870 migrated from Alsace to Elbeuf. Index.

Booklist 39:70 N 1 '42

"André Maurois' autobiography is written with honesty and a curious cool, almost critical detachment. He quotes a friend saying of Colonel Bramble 'It is not the whole truth, and just now it would be hard to tell that, but it is nothing but the truth. . . . That is a just comment on his own life also.'" Rosemary Benet

+ Books p4 O 18 '42 1350w

"The book is wise and magnanimous and true to the reconciling spirit which André Maurois has always wished to penetrate his work. Its final chapters, telling of the new life being built up by M. and Madame Maurois in this country, are even fuller of hopeful courage than of the inevitable sorrow which lay back of their migration." Katherine Brégy

+ Cath World 156:362 D '42 550w

"The book is rich, colorful, acutely personal, a little self-congratulatory, and a key to open some doors of understanding." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 N 21 '42 650w

Reviewed by E. L. Keyes

Commonweal 37:46 O 30 '42 500w

"Despite the official honors bestowed upon him a great component of André Maurois' wisdom is the very modesty which prevents him from thinking of himself as wise. Indeed, the charm of his memoirs comes chiefly from their admirable discretion. The biographer of Shelley, Byron, Disraeli, who began his literary career with a subtle and effervescent commentary upon the British during the First World War, allies a truly Anglo-Saxon discretion with a Gallic love of clarity." Justin O'Brien

+ Nation 155:390 O 17 '42 600w

"As it is the story of a man whose vocation would not let him go, so this charming and reflective book is the story also of a man whose life developed in accordance with a worthy design: the exigence not only of his work but of his absolute integrity, and of his right part in the life of his fellows, whether as scholar or employer, author or land owner, neighbor, cosmopolitan traveler, soldier or liberal and devoted patriot. And there is the searching mind's fine humility in the story's candor. Also, through it all there is France: the fine persistent inner pattern, the exigent need, the tragedy and hope." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p2 O 11 '42 1450w

Pratt p5 D '42

"I Remember, I Remember' presents a generous sampling of unusually shrewd judgments on men and events; its portrayal of family life is made with tender humor; its glimpses of famous people—and there are many—are given simply and without pretension. There is no whining, and no abuse, and no vanity in the heartrending pages which tell of France's fall; only a strong belief that, in spite of all, essential France will recover and again be ready to teach, to those who can listen, the lessons of her history and her incomparable civilization." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 O 17 '42 1100w

MAUROIS, ANDRE. Time for silence; tr. by Edith Johannsen. 203p $2 Appleton-Century (W) 42-4613

This is the first English translation of an early novel which had considerable popularity in France. It concerns the reasons for silence about the past in a certain bourgeois family living in Périgord, a family consisting of Gaston Romilly, his wife, Valentine, and Valentine's daughter Colette.

Booklist 38:275 Ap 1 '42

Bookmark 3:17 Mr '42

"The finely balanced structure of the story, the precision of its prose, its tempered dynamics, make 'Time for Silence' an esthetic delight. But there is a lesson here, too. . . . Mr. Maurois's world is one of high susceptibility, one too easily silenced by the sounds of guns and warcraft, the outcries of cruder passions and desires. Yet only worlds like his contain the seeds of a better, fairer, more civilized society than we know at this moment." Felizia Seyd

+ Books p4 F 22 '42 850w

"The neatness and ingenuity of the plot must not be disclosed. The success of the story is the way in which Valentine is kept consistently within the sympathies of the reader and the dry humour with which the views of the younger generation, André and Colette, who know a lot more than they are supposed to know, are put forward." Charles Marriott

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 2 '42 230w

"The sheer skill and intelligence of the book make it internally unassailable. There are no contradictions, no false emphases, no mistakes." Philip Toynbee

+ New Statesman & Nation 24:359 N 28 '42 180w

"'A Time for Silence' is a comedy of manners, in a social idiom completely French; it is also a novel with a 'moral' of wisdom and generosity, not in a self-contained local society only, but for men and women everywhere. But the French scene is entrancing in its reality, against this lovely background before the war. And André Maurois, who lived in Périgord, re-creates it with a happy intimacy." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p6 F 22 '42 1250w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien

Spec 169:368 O 16 '42 120w

"The only regret on closing M. Maurois's book is that he should have chosen for subject a story so often told and one in which he indicates, in spite of the distinction and purity of his style, no new angle or any outstanding penetrative insight."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p533 O 31 '42 270w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 31:x spring '42 120w

MAURY, MRS ANNE FONTAINE (MAURY), ed. Intimate Virginiana; a century of Maury travels by land and sea. 342p il $3.50 Dietz

929.2 Maury family

"From 'almost a thousand letters' contained in 'a Little Black Trunk' in a corner of the family storeroom, Anne Fontaine Maury, great-great-granddaughter of James Maury (1746-1840), first United States consul to Liverpool, has selected excerpts illustrative of life in England and America from about 1796 to 1876. The letters, which are published 'to glorify the idea of families,' (p.v.) are arranged in chapters according to the name of the author. There are chapters on James Maury Esq., Margaret Ruston Maury, Young James, William, Matthew, and Ann. There is also a chapter giving excerpts from Ann Maury's diary of a tour in Europe; two chapters on the Civil War and a chapter on Reconstruction." (Social Forces) Short bibliography.

"This volume is not for general readers, except Virginians, but historians and biographers will find it worth delving into for historical sidelights on the nineteenth century from Jefferson's day to Reconstruction."

+ Nation 154:579 My 16 '42 100w

Reviewed by G. G. Johnson

Social Forces 21:114 O '42 300w

MAYER, JOSEPH. Social science principles in the light of scientific method; with particular application to modern economic thought. 573p $4 Duke Univ. [24s Cambridge]

308.1 Social sciences—Methodology. Economics 41-8591

"Presents an analysis of social science principles and particularly of classical and neo-classical economic doctrine, in terms of modern science and sociology." (Social Studies) Index.

Reviewed by F. N. House

Am J Soc 47:999 My '42 300w

"The work is a criticism of what the author regards as 'traditional' economics; and in this connection criticism means destructive attack, and the substance fits tolerably well the dictionary definition of a 'tirade.' Such terms as 'pseudo-science' and 'sophistry' recur with extraordinary frequency." F. H. Knight

— Ann Am Acad 219:199 Ja '42 440w

"It is sufficient to say that the volume's title is not warranted by the main content of the volume, and that examination of these pages devoted to economics leads to the conclusion that the author's desire to make this a concrete application of his discussion on social science principles is not satisfactorily fulfilled, for there is little observable connection between the two." Earle Eubank

— Social Forces 20:403 Mr '42 320w

Social Studies 32:335 N '41 40w

MAYER-DAXLANDEN, HANS. Handbook for civilian defense. 88p il pa $1 Civilian advisory service, 41 Park row, N.Y.

623.38 Civilian defense 41-23105

"An elementary book for civilian defense workers covering every phase of the subject, including blackouts, air raid psychology, care of vagrant children, training of wardens, community feeding, food protection, and private and public shelters." Cleveland Open Shelf

Reviewed by Huntington Williams

Am J Pub Health 32:546 My '42 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p1 Ja '42

MAYNARD, HAROLD BRIGHT, and others, eds. Effective foremanship. 263p $2.50 McGraw 653.3 Foremen. Factory management

41-21632

"The purpose of this volume on foremanship is to provide an up-to-date book written by practical men on the problems faced by today's foremen. The book has been written by the cooperative efforts of a number of men, men who are experts in their fields. They have contributed to the book in brief chapters a condensed discussion of those parts of their work which they feel it is essential for the modern foreman to understand." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 38:126 D 15 '41

"There are, naturally, many points in regard to the book on which it would be impossible to obtain unanimous agreement from any group of men active in the training field. Many of us will differ strongly on the approach made in some of the sections. But it would seem fair to say that the average personnel man (if there is such an animal) will find a very high percentage of the content in harmony with his own ideas." M. S. Firth

+ Management R 31:69 F '42 750w

Pratt p19 My '42

MAYNARD, SARAH KATHERINE (CASEY) (MRS THEODORE MAYNARD). Princess Poverty; il. by B. Da Osimo. 157p $2 Longmans

922.2 Francis of Assisi, Saint—Juvenile literature. Clara of Assisi, Saint—Juvenile literature 41-25931

Combined biography of two saints: St Francis and St Clara of Assisi, written for readers of twelve to fourteen.

"The intense conviction of the writer, expressed with limpid sincerity, is more convincing than fine writing. A sense of values altogether unsuspected may perhaps come to those who read this story, which is in terms a twelve-year-old can understand, while an older person, confronting today's necessity of changing the price tags on his desires, may find something stabilizing in this story of changeless values. The book is printed with appropriate beauty." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 F 8 '42 220w

MAYNARD, S. K. C.—Continued
Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt
Cath World 154:382 D '41 60w

"Well written and heavy with miracle... A charming and edifying idyl for young readers."
+ Christian Century 58:1514 D 3 '41 40w

MAYNARD, THEODORE. Not even death; a book of poems. 61p $1.25 St Anthony guild 811 41-25391

"Theodore Maynard was born English, is a Roman Catholic, has written criticism as well as poetry, and also a book on the Catholic Church in America. He has taught and lectured at Catholic schools and colleges in this country. His religious verse is in a great tradition." Sat R of Lit

"The Fear,' 'Good Friday,' 'At Communion' (which Alice Meynell would have applauded), 'Changes in Love' In Memoriam E. A. M., and a dozen others lend distinction to Maynard's latest volume of verse and sustain his reputation as one of our foremost poets." J. J. Reilly

+ Cath World 155:626 Ag '42 500w
Sat R of Lit 25:7 My 2 '42 230w

MAYNARD, THEODORE. The reed and the rock; portrait of Simon Bruté. 273p $2.75 Longmans

B or 92 Bruté de Rémur, Simon Guillaume Gabriel, bp. 42-19310

"An appreciative and somewhat lyrical account of the life and character of Simon Bruté who, born and educated for medicine in France, became a priest, came to America about 1810, was closely associated with Mother Seton and her work, and became Bishop of Vincennes." Christian Century

Reviewed by Edna Kenton
Books p16 S 20 '42 1050w

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
Cath World 156:119 O '42 550w
Christian Century 59:1006 Ag 19 '42 100w

Reviewed by D. H. Moseley
Commonweal 36:401 Ag 14 '42 900w

Reviewed by A. H. Campbell
Library J 67:681 Ag '42 100w

"It seems to me that 'The Reed and the Rock' is Mr. Maynard's best work to date, both because the person with whom it is concerned is interesting and because the style is calmer and less lusted with the zest for controversy." G. N. Shuster

+ Sat R of Lit 25:7 Ag 22 '42 550w

MAYO, BERNARD, ed. See Jefferson, T. Jefferson himself

MAYORGA, MARGARET GARDNER, ed. Best one-act plays of 1941. 278p $2.50 Dodd 812.08 Dramas—Collections (W) (38-8006)

Contents: The states talking, by Archibald MacLeish; Until Charlot comes home, by Rachel Reynolds; All-American ape, by W. M. Kephart; Equinox, by Arnold Sundgaard; The lady of Larkspur lotion, by Tennessee Williams; The miracle of the Danube, by Maxwell Anderson; The love of Annunziata, by Pietro di Donato; The doctor from Dunmore, by T. P. Dillon and Nolan Leary; Hello out there, by William Saroyan; It's fun to be free, by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur; Bibliographies.

Booklist 38:248 Mr 15 '42

"Miss Mayorga's collection is a bit on the arty side all along the line and less help to the amateurs seeking producible one-act material than her collections in years past." W. P. Eaton

Books p17 Mr 22 '42 250w
Boston Globe p19 My 27 '42 100w

MAYR, ERNST. Systematics and the origin of species; from the viewpoint of a zoologist. 334p maps $4 Columbia univ. press

590.12 Zoology—Classification. Species, 43-1098
Origin of

"Excluding the wider concepts of evolution, such as palaeontology and embryology, Dr. Mayr has bravely tackled one of the most difficult of problems, concerning himself with a study of species and its subdivisions. He reviews the various concepts: Practical, or depending on the opinion of the worker; Morphological, or so-called old-fashioned or Linnaean special; Genetic, which carried to the ultimate would make a species of every living individual; Sterility species, of value only where actual crosses occur. His own definition combines several such concepts. He deals at length with the naming of species and the diversity of characters which influence the position of these human delimited phenomena in the general scheme of life on the earth." (N Y Times) Index.

"This is a scientific book for scientists, yet there is not a word in it which cannot be understood by an intelligent, interested layman. The material is so fundamental and inclusive that it may be considered a source book upon its subject. As such it will be of lasting value long after the present temporary whirlpool in the evolution of human beings has passed into history." William Beebe

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 17 '43 450w
School & Society 57:28 Ja 2 '43 30w

MAZZEI, FILIPPO. Memoirs of the life and peregrinations of the Florentine, Philip Mazzei, 1730-1816; tr. by Howard R. Marraro. 447p $4 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 42-12134

"These memoirs, first printed in Italy in 1845 and long out of print there, are here presented for the first time in English dress by Howard R. Marraro, assistant professor of Italian at Columbia University. Their author, Mazzei (1730-1816), business man, scientific farmer, medieval student, diplomat, democrat (although a counselor to kings), was really a citizen of the world, although claiming America as his adopted country. His sterling integrity of character, unaffected modesty, and admirable common-sense made him the intimate of many of the leading men of his day both here and in Europe, and the reliability of his transcriptions of his relations with them has been attested by the Italian philosopher and historian, Benedetto Croce." (Commonweal) Bibliography. Index.

"The Memoirs, long out of print in Italian and never before translated into English, are garrulous and discursive, mingling details of his many business transactions with sound (though not very profound) comments on the most momentous public affairs. His warnings against inflation, applied to America, France and Poland, have validity now. It may be doubted whether the Memoirs have the historical value that Jefferson predicted they would have, but they are interesting footnotes to the history of his period."

Christian Century 59:1060 S 2 '42 330w

Reviewed by J. K. Paulding
Commonweal 36:377 Ag 7 '42 1000w

"Mazzei has little gift for narrative; in fact, one can hardly imagine an interesting story told in a less effective way—shapeless, rambling, long-winded. But he saw so much, knew so many of the greatest men of his time, that his very artlessness creates, perhaps, a picture more truly convincing of the great era of philosophy and liberalism." A. J. P. T.

Manchester Guardian p3 D 23 '42 200w

MEAD, MARGARET (MRS GREGORY BATESON). And keep your powder dry. 274p $2.50 Morrow

917.3 National characteristics, American. U.S.—Civilization (W) 42-25037

"Subtitled: An Anthropologist Looks at America. Thoughtful discussion of what anthropology as a science can offer to implement fight for brighter future. American character outlined against background of seven other cultures author has studied. If we are to win this fight, we must have a goal, phrased in Americans' terms, based on mixture of faith in the right and faith in power of science. Dr. Mead, author of Coming of Age in Samoa, who is curator, department of anthropology, American Museum of Natural History, and a member of National Research Council, has traveled over America for three years to gather material for this study." (Library J) Bibliographical appendix.

Booklist 39:132 D 15 '42

"Miss Mead defends [her thesis] with great cheerfulness. She has a delightful facility in illuminating a completely serious argument with an occasional spark of wit, and she writes with a lucidity that cannot be too much praised. Above all, she is not in the least afraid. She knows that the menace is great, that the time is short, that losses are bound to be heavy at best, but still she is not afraid. Her estimate of the situation convinces her that the American people, although they may be badly battered, are not going to be destroyed. What she urges is not a program to save the nation, because the nation is already saved, but a program for exploiting its moral and intellectual resources efficiently for the benefit of the world and therefore for the benefit of the United States." G. W. Johnson

+ Books p1 N 22 '42 1850w

"Here is a challenging book. To read it is a mentally exciting experience. Free from scientific jargon, simply, clearly, and dispassionately written, it squarely poses three pertinent questions, at least one of which is now having its answer on the field of world conflict. What are the qualities comprising the American character? Do these characteristics render us capable of winning the present war? If so, will they contribute to our winning a permanent peace in successfully reorganizing a postwar world?" H. A. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 D 26 '42 650w

"Very readable. Recommended." J. B. Fogg

+ Library J 67:950 N 1 '42 110w

Reviewed by John Storck

New Repub 108:28 Ja 4 '43 850w

"This is a challenging book, whose implications, if understood, would shock those who take it for granted that when this war is over we shall pick up where we left off on Dec. 7, 1941, or at the end of August, 1939. It is an eloquent plea of a sort that has often before been made by social scientists, but never, except in moments of stress, listened to. Maybe it will be listened to now. It should be." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p2 D 20 '42 1450w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 18:77 N 14 '42 290w

School & Society 56:532 N 28 '42 50w

Reviewed by Marshall Bragdon

Springf'd Republican p6 N 21 '42 1000w

Time 40:106 N 30 '42 650w

Wis Lib Bul 38:186 D '42

MEADER, STEPHEN WARREN. Shadow in the pines; il. by Edward Shenton. 281p $2 Harcourt

(W) 42-36279

The hero is a fifteen year old boy living near Fort Dix, New Jersey. With courage beyond his years Ted helps an army intelligence officer round up a gang of Nazi fifth columnists operating nearby. For grades six to nine.

Booklist 39:17 S '42

"Not only is the plot very exciting and the tale well told, but the background of the pine forests and swamps is interesting and reminds us that we have some backwoods very near home."

+ Cath World 156:382 D '42 90w

"Stephen H. Meader's latest book . . . will not disappoint his ardent readers. At a rapid pace he tells a good story filled to the brim with adventure, thrills and danger." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 O 7 '42 180w

Churchman 156:16 N 15 '42 10w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '42

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 18:431 N '42 70w

"Characterization is somewhat sacrificed to plot, but Ted himself is all right, and background is well done. Recommended for public and school libraries." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 67:741 S 1 '42 70w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:896 O 15 '42 10w

"In his books Stephen Meador always contrives to put into a natural and authentic setting the elements of suspense and excitement which young readers from 12 to 15 find highly satisfactory. . . Spy stories are often thin in substance, but Mr. Meador has filled in his tale not only with fascinating bits of local history and legend but with a fine outdoor background." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p35 O 4 '42 350w

New Yorker 18:112 D 12 '42 70w

MEADOWCROFT, MRS ENID (LAMONTE).

Abraham Lincoln; il. by Kurt Wiese. 191p

$2 Crowell

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham—Juvenile literature (W)

Story of Abraham Lincoln from the time when his family moved to Indiana, to his death. Written for children in grades six to eight. Bibliography.

Booklist 39:205 Ja 15 '43

"It is an introduction to later acquaintance, in the right spirit, with Father Abraham. For though it leaves the young reader 'as the earth was filled with the sound of weeping,' it is with the conviction that the ideals he struggled to save shine on like stars in a dark sky, to guide all men and women everywhere who are resolved that freedom and democracy shall not perish from this earth." M. L. Becker

+ Books p20 N 15 '42 350w

"Incidents well selected. Excellent addition to Lincoln shelf for sixth to eighth graders." A. L. Shea

+ Library J 68:84 Ja 15 '43 40w

MEADOWCROFT, MRS ENID (LAMONTE).

Ship boy with Columbus; il. by Jessie Robinson. 129p $1.50 Crowell

(W) 42-14387

The story of the boy Pedro who sailed with Columbus on his first voyage to the New World. For young readers.

"There is room and reason for such a book: Columbus has not been overwritten for children, and by pausing on the crest of the wave, before sadness set in again for the great admiral, the story can be one of fulfillment after long waiting, of a great dream come true."

+ Books p21 My 10 '42 250w

Christian Century 59:665 My 20 '42 30w

"Each successive generation of American children finds Columbus a favorite hero, so this retelling for the lower school grades will find a real welcome." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:262 J1 '42 80w

Reviewed by Marguerite Nahigian

Library J 67:583 Je 15 '42 60w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:890 O 15 '42 20w

"Plenty of conversation, large clear type and an inviting page will make this an attractive book for the not-too-expert reader." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 My 31 '42 240w

Wis Lib Bul 38:140 O '42

MEANS, MRS FLORENCE (CRANNELL).
Shadow over Wide Ruin; il. by Lorence F.
Bjorklund. 227p $2 Houghton

(W) 42-22718

Hepzibah Plumb went from Denver to visit her uncle at his New Mexican trading post in 1885. Hepzy was fair and frail looking, but she was a good shot, and of fearless courage. Arrived in New Mexico Hepzy soon solved the mystery of her uncle's trouble with the Navaho traders, and found romance for herself. For junior and senior high schools.

Booklist 39:108 N 15 '42

Horn Bk 19:38 Ja '43 100w

"Real story of adventure and romance for girls of twelve to sixteen. Illustrated with full-page water colors by Lorence Bjorklund, who knows the Navaho." E. T. Dobbins
+ Library J 67:1015 N 15 '42 100w

"There is much more to this story than the adventure which Hepzibah sought, for there is her own growth of character, and through her discovery and understanding of the Navajos there is made clear, with the skill of a fine novelist, the richness of their heritage and the problems of transition which they were just beginning to face as they stood between two civilizations. Mrs. Means has written excellent novels for older girls; this one, with its perception, its depth of feeling accented by humor, is one of her finest." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p8 D 27 '42 280w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 3 '43 180w

MEANS, PHILIP AINSWORTH. Newport tower. 344p $5 Holt

974.57 Newport, Rhode Island. Old stone mill 42-14829

"There are two chief theories concerning the ancient ruined tower at Newport: that it was built by Gov. Arnold in the 17th century as a windmill or that it is the remains of a Norse 'round church' built from about 1125 to 1400. Mr. Means espouses—and in my opinion proves—the second theory to be true." (Boston Globe) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:439 J1 15 '42

"Mr. Means' scholarship is enormous, but he carries it lightly. The book, in consequence, is recommended to the general reader in every confidence that he will learn much and at the same time enjoy a treasure hunt through clues as interesting as a detective story." Robert Hillyer

+ Boston Globe p17 Je 17 '42 200w

"Discriminating readers will enjoy the scholarship of Mr. Means for his style breathes his own distinguished mind and personality." Sister Monica

+ Cath World 156:118 O '42 600w

"The whole story of the evidence and its finding is presented as a sort of detective story which makes fascinating reading for anyone capable of interest in such a first-class puzzle as this one."

+ Nation 155:57 J1 18 '42 390w

"The book is an able and scholarly presentation of the 'Norse theory,' the best so far written; and even if Mr. Means's arguments are not convincing, he must be congratulated for his great research into the subject, covering both European and American sources, and for the vivid and able manner in which he has presented his case, which is sure to give rise to a lively controversy." G. A. Moriarty

+ New Eng Q 15:523 S '42 2200w

"Mr. Means writes with clarity in all his vast gathering of detail and with the charm also of occasionally yielding to the human temptations of ardor and wit. The book's illustrations are admirably informative; the bibliography fills twenty-eight pages." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p5 Je 21 '42 1450w

Wis Lib Bul 38:118 J1 '42

MEANS, PHILIP AINSWORTH. Tupak of the Incas; with editorial assistance from Alice Dalglish; il. by H. M. Herget. 136p $2 Scribner

(W) 42-4726

Story of a young Inca prince in the days before the Spaniards came to Peru. Prince Tupak was compelled to forfeit his rank when his father disgraced the family name, and so the boy grew up lonely and neglected until he was befriended by a visiting princess from Quito. When the young girl departed, Tupak followed her, and underwent a stiff regime of training before he was able to reclaim his rank. For boys and girls from ten to fourteen.

Booklist 38:334 My 1 '42

"The sense of looking into another world is heightened by large pictures full of action. It gives any young reader with the least interest in a pre-American past a series of lively experiences as part of that past, brought back alive." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Mr 22 '42 400w

"It is not only a distinguished book by reason of its accurate and beautiful pictures and well-grounded history but an absorbing story as well... Such a vigorous and compelling story, told with sound knowledge of old Peruvian life, is bound to kindle a lively curiosity about the great period of Inca glory before the white man blighted it."

+ Horn Bk M 18:108 Mr '42 100w

"Book is valuable for its insight into Inca culture. Recommended for libraries specializing in Latin-American collections and for boys and girls of ten to fourteen who are interested in the Incas." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 67:269 Mr 15 '42 90w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:890 O 15 '42 20w

"Unfortunately, the background and setting rather get the better of the story; the latter moves languidly, Tupak and his friends never succeed in becoming more than shadowy figures with names attached and in general the book has the air of having been put together too hastily. Mr. Means is so well equipped to enlarge young people's knowledge of a period which they find a fascinating one that it is to be hoped that he will some day provide for boys and girls from 10 to 14, who are not yet ready for Prescott, a book describing in even more detail ancient Inca life, without hampering himself by trying to tell a story at the same time. The many full-page pictures are full of action and detail and add value and interest to the book." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 22 '42 440w

New Yorker 18:74 My 23 '42 90w

Wis Lib Bul 38:165 N '42

MEARS, HELEN. Year of the wild boar; an American woman in Japan. 346p $2.75 Lippincott

915.2 Japan—Description and travel

(W) 42-18652

In Japanese terminology 1935 was the "year of the boar." During that year Miss Mears, an American journalist, lived in Tokyo with an English friend. Her observations on the ways of life among the Japanese middle and lower classes are here recorded.

Booklist 39:10 S '42

"Miss Mears's book is good reading for those interested enough to look beneath the surface of Japanese life. It will be a profitable guide to the mind of the average Japanese." Wilfrid Fleisher

+ Books p5 Ag 9 '42 1150w

"On one point Miss Mears goes one better than the Japanese reporter. He would consider religion and the supernatural unworthy of notice, whereas she devotes a great deal of attention to the various manifestations of Buddhism and Shintoism, to the pilgrimages, the gay religious festivals, the mythology, and the holy legends that are taught to children. By doing so, she strikes an original note which greatly enhances the value of her interesting book." Francis McCullagh

+ Cath World 156:248 N '42 600w

"In spite of a pretty dreadful jacket, this is a good book. It is straightforwardly written in simple and rather vivid English, and it really seems to tell you something about the Japanese which helps to explain that difficult nation; the explanation may perhaps be too simple, but it fits in well with the facts. That is—the facts as one can gather them from reading and hearing, for I can claim no intimate, immediate knowledge."

+ Commonweal 36:428 Ag 21 '42 600w

"Well written, informative, and entertaining. Recommended for adult and adolescent readers." H. P. Bolman

+ Library J 67:681 Ag '42 90w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:895 O 15 '42 60w

New Repub 107:358 S 21 '42 90w

"Amid the flood of 'quickies' about the Far East in general and Japan in particular that was loosed by Pearl Harbor it is refreshing to find a book about Japan of which not a line has apparently been added or changed because of recent events. . . . There are a few mistakes of detail. . . . But in general Miss Mears has given, without malice and without sentimentality, an excellent portrait of Japan and the Japanese." W. H. Chamberlin

+ N Y Times p13 Ag 9 '42 1000w

"Miss Mears is not out to make us like or dislike the Japanese. She does succeed in making us understand them, at least roughly. The average sensible American who reads her book will get an impression of a people living within the shifting walls of a gigantic dream. It is in a sense impossible to have any feeling of hatred toward them (or the slightest feeling of sympathy either), any more than you can hate or like a somnambulist." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:54 Ag 1 '42 650w

Pratt p21 D '42

"'Year of the Wild Boar' is worthwhile and delightful reading, humorous and full of incident. It recaptures the sound and smell of Japan so well that you almost hear the clatter of geta in the narrow streets so crowded with well-washed humanity." Nym Wales

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 Ag 1 '42 450w

Reviewed by Bruno Lasker

Survey G 31:392 S '42 500w

MECHEM, PHILIP. And not for love. 314p $2 Duell

42-24769

Mystery story.

Booklist 39:225 F 1 '43

"Cynthia Coveney, narrator, is the main attraction in this unusual hullabaloo. Her general manner, a bit on the outspoken side, lends novelty to the telling, though her method isn't always clear as crystal. . . . This is different in mood, written in good tough-minded English, with more than a touch of smoke on the ball." Will Cuppy

Books p26 O 25 '42 180w

"There are so many complications in this case that it is difficult to make head or tail of what has happened, and the narrator makes things worse by her manner of telling the story. For one thing, she has a bad habit of using commas where full stops are indicated, and that does not make for easy reading." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p16 N 8 '42 220w

"Drinking, lovemaking, and murder in this too slick effort. Reminiscent of the twenties."

— New Yorker 18:84 O 31 '42 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 15 '42 170w

MEDEARIS, MARY. Big Doc's girl. (Story press bk) 271p $2 Lippincott

(W) 42-19133

Big Doc was an Arkansas doctor; Mary was his oldest daughter. The story is of the difficulties which beset the family when the mother had to go to a sanatorium and Mary tried to run the house for Big Doc and her brother and two small sisters. When the family fortunes were changed again at Big Doc's death, Mary had to choose between marriage and music teaching, and the teaching won—for the time.

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Atlantic 170:149 D '42 40w

Booklist 39:49 O 15 '42

Bookmark 4:17 N '42

"It's a simple story Miss Medearis tells but it has the structural beauty of something hewn out of granite that is rooted in native soil. She has created a portrait of an American family which has grandeur and humility." Rose Feld

+ Books p4 S 13 '42 850w

"Recommended." Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 67:682 Ag '42 90w

"This is not a spectacular first novel, but it is a sound one. There is in it a freshness and at the same time a mellowness, uncorroded by nostalgia, and a sense of goodness which warm the heart." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p7 S 13 '42 600w

"This short novel is well written, warm and moving in its sincerity; and it successfully avoids the too highly mannered simplicity of some young writers of the Story school." R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R of Lit 25:20 S 19 '42 450w

Wis Lib Bul 38:163 N '42

MEEHAN, FRANCIS. Living upstairs; reading for profit and pleasure. 256p $2.50 Dutton

028 Books and reading 42-15942

Informal essays about books and the joys of reading both old books and new. Contains suggestions for reading, but no lists. The author is a former college professor and lecturer, living in California. Index.

Books p22 Ag 23 '42 160w

"In an age when novelty is the feverishly sought objective of so many authors and sensationalism the boast of so many publishers, it is refreshing to come upon a book which depends for its interest on ancient, unalterable things such as the high thinking whose fruit is wisdom, that wisdom which is of old and of all time, the supreme achievement of the human spirit whose expression constitutes the literary treasure of the world." B. M. Kelly

+ Cath World 155:753 S '42 700w

"The early chapters also contain too many famous names and too few reasons for alluding to each one to be very useful. But Francis Meehan before long warms up to his subject. The reader who perseveres and who brushes aside the irritating bric à brac will be rewarded. The author is a man of truly catholic tastes. When he gets around to discussing Horace or Montaigne or a Kempis he has things to say and says them well. At such moments he is at his persuasive best." Edward Skillin, Jr.

+ — Commonweal 36:402 Ag 14 '42 420w

"For bookish person rather than novice bent on self-improvement. Humor, common sense, and devotion to the best in literature." Emily Garnett

+ Library J 67:628 Jl '42 60w

"The author quotes Abbé Dimnet: 'Downstairs goes on what has too evident a claim to the painful label; ordinary. Upstairs we have a different outlook and associate with better company.' . . . It is clear that Mr. Meehan has written his book to convert people from the downstairs existence to the upstairs existence. And it must be admitted that he has done an excellent and much-needed job." John Cournois

+ N Y Times p2 Ag 2 '42 600w

"It is a pleasure to pick up a book of this year, find in the index 'Ulysses,' and then discover that the reference is to Tennyson's poem not to James Joyce's Work. . . . He is often rather superficial and throws epithets around with too little discrimination. . . . There is no great depth in these essays, and Mr. Meehan is too lenient in his admirations, but his volume would be an excellent gift for a generous boy in his 'teens." R. E. Roberts

MEEHAN, FRANCIS—Continued
+ — Sat R of Lit 25:16 J 18 '42 360w
Special Libraries 33:262 S '42
Wis Lib Bul 38:132 O '42

MEIGH, C. H. Practical application of aluminum bronze. 112p $4 McGraw 673 Aluminum bronze 42-6226
"Aluminum bronzes have high tensile strength as an outstanding advantage and they also exhibit satisfactory resistance to attack by seawater. Among other advantages are resistance to fatigue, wear and abrasion. Among numerous recommended applications are evaporator bodies, condenser tubes and water pumps, valves, crusher rolls and marine uses such as deck fittings, binnacle bodies and propellers. The book's seven chapters cover properties and uses, microstructure, mechanical and physical properties, foundry practice, wrought aluminum bronze, workshop practice, and faults and failures." Chem & Met Eng

Chem & Met Eng 48:181 N '41 180w
Nature 148:300 S 13 '41 230w

MEIKLEJOHN, ALEXANDER. Education between two worlds. 303p $3 Harper 370.1 Education—Philosophy 42-22126
"Discussion of the philosophy of education and of the transition from education as a function of the church to function of the state. Reviews principles of Comenius, Locke, Arnold, Rousseau; John Dewey and pragmatism; and the social contract as a basis of education." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 39:132 D 15 '42

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster
Books p26 N 22 '42 1150w

"There are interpretations in this book with which it may be possible to disagree. There may be assertions of value which remain undemonstrated. But on every page there is evidence of the moral earnestness and integrity of its author." A. W. Levi
+ Ethics 53:152 Ja '43 550w

Reviewed by H. W. Schneider
J Philos 39:689 D 3 '42 2400w

Reviewed by J. A. Sohon
Library J 67:794 S 15 '42 80w

"Most readers are already aware that Mr. Meiklejohn is a liberal; that he is chiefly concerned with education; and that, both in his writings and in his acts, he has had the knack of following through and taking the consequences, a knack which one associates more with the great liberals of the last century than with those who lived to denounce Hitler. Mr. Meiklejohn also has the knack of locating basic issues. It is therefore not surprising that his latest book, 'Education Between Two Worlds,' should be a wise and courageous book. I do not know how anybody concerned with education in our times can ignore it." Stringfellow Barr

+ New Repub 107:615 N 9 '42 1400w

"An interesting and provocative tract on education."

+ School & Society 56:336 O 10 '42 30w

Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman
Survey G 32:28 Ja '43 900w
Wis Lib Bul 38:182 D '42

MELISH, JOHN HOWARD. Paul Jones, minister of reconciliation; with a foreword by John Nevin Sayre. 61p 50c Fellowship of reconciliation, 2929 Broadway, N.Y.

B or 92 Jones, Paul 43-2452

"A sympathetic study of the life and ideals of Bishop Paul Jones, formerly Episcopal bishop of Utah, then for several years a bishop without a diocese. For ten years he was executive secretary of the F.O.R." Christian Century

Christian Century 59:1359 N 4 '42 40w
Reviewed by A. L. Byron-Curtiss
Churchman 156:17 N 1 '42 160w

MELLEN, IDA M. Twenty little fishes; il. by Else Bostelmann. 53p $2 Messner
597 Fishes—Juvenile literature (W) 42-8929
Pictures and brief descriptive text about twenty fishes: In the big aquarium: Sea horses, the puffers, the hog-choker, the mouse-fish, baby eels, young salmon; In the pond: Catfishes, the sunfish, the bitterling, the mud minnow; At Mr Fishan's house: The archer fish, guppies, the fighting fish, Brazilian half moons, the weatherfish, the lionhead; Little fishes at the seashore: Sticklebacks, the sheephead minnow, the sally growler, the red-winged sea robin, For intermediate grades.

Booklist 38:348 My 15 '42

"There is just enough about each fish to make a seven-year-old interested in him. The scheme of the book is uncommonly pretty. Each fish has two facing pages of large-type text: each group has the same picture spreading across the lower margins of both pages, while the upper half of the left-hand page has a portrait of the fish at home. All this is in soft, under-water colors; repeated designs hold the book together and the portraits prevent monotony." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ap 19 '42 830w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 18:174 My '42 70w

Reviewed by A. E. Brown
Library J 67:476 My 15 '42 50w

"Ida Mellen, who was formerly Chief Aquarist of New York Aquarium has not let scientific knowledge dull her humor and so she presents the characteristics, often startling, of her subjects in lively fashion. Her book for children of 7 and up will be a provocative experience for those who think of fishes only in terms of goldfish bowl and the market stall. Else Bostelmann's pastel-colored illustrations supplement the text, and add considerably to the attractiveness of a pleasingly designed book." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Je 28 '42 240w
New Yorker 18:77 My 23 '42 50w

MELLQUIST, JEROME. Emergence of an American art. 421p il $3.75 Scribner 709.73 Art, American (W) 42-12875

Traces the art of the United States from the time of Whistler and Chase to date. It is the author's thesis that the contemporary art of the United States has outstripped that of other countries, both in quantity and quality. Index.

"Mr. Mellquist's is an imposing and handsome volume, and it will be welcomed as covering one portion of the field more thoroughly than any earlier work." Sheldon Cheney

+ Books p8 Je 21 '42 1350w

"This is a paradoxical book. It strikes one as coming from a person to whom phrases come easily—Mr. Mellquist writes well—but from one to whom surfaces have more importance than background, although surely an earnest attempt has been made to supply one from newspaper and magazine files. There are good things, like the first chapter on Whistler, which, except for the statement that 'Whistler focussed'—Whistler soft-focussed—is well-nigh perfect. Then there are bad things, like the one-line dismissal of Rockwell Kent's paintings." J. W. Lane

+ — Commonweal 36:90 My 15 '42 650w

"His criticisms are spiced with delightful acidity. And, although he seems mesmerized by the preciosity of Dove and O'Keefe, generally his estimates are reliable. Sculpture is badly handled. Studies of photography, illustrating, cartooning, and art criticism are included. Recommended." Rice Estes

+ — Library J 67:223 Mr 1 '42 120w

Reviewed by Clement Greenberg
New Repub 106:835 Je 15 '42 950w

"Despite a valiant effort to keep the book all of a piece, the treatment of the concluding section appears, however, in contrast to what has preceded, scrappy and unorganized. It might be miscellaneous comment pasted together in haste. . . There are important phases of the more recent American panorama that seem skimmed, when—as in the instance of government participation—they are not brusquely dismissed. As a survey this book must therefore be deemed deficient in balance and by no means complete. To some extent these appear defects in the handling of the proffered theme itself, 'emergence.' On the other hand it would be manifestly unjust to scold an author for not writing the kind of book he had no intention of writing." E. A. Jewell

N Y Times p8 J1 12 '42 1200w

"His book is well rounded, deeply studied, and agreeably readable."

+ New Yorker 18:76 My 16 '42 50w

"Even artists like Benton for whom the author has little enthusiasm he estimates shrewdly and with fairness, but his best pages are those given to 'the more level minds,' the rare personalities of Stieglitz, O'Keefe, Demuth, Lachaise, Marin. Mr. Mellquist succeeds in the not too easy task of conveying to the reader their exquisite, fresh perceptions and their perfect craft." Oliver Larkin

+ Sat R of Lit 25:11 Ag 22 '42 380w

Wis Lib Bul 38:159 N '42

MENCKEN, AUGUST, ed. By the neck; a book of hangings; selected from contemporary accounts; foreword by H. L. Mencken. 264p il $2.50 Hastings house

343.2 Hanging. Crime and criminals 42-13448

A collection of contemporary accounts of executions by hanging, culled from American and English newspapers and magazines. The most of the hangings are of fairly recent dates, a few date back to the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries. The editor has provided a brief introduction to each narrative, giving the nature of the crime for which punishment was decreed.

"The book contains a surprising amount of material that is bound to be new and interesting to the lay reader—odd asides and unimportant but entertaining events in connection with the main business. It is illustrated from contemporary prints of exactly the right flavor, and has an unusually sober treatise on the technique of hanging by H. L. Mencken. The proofreading could have been much better, and the pied type on one page (164), just when the black cap is being drawn over Lord Gordon's head, is likely to have a startling effect on the reader." Stewart Holbrook

Books p14 Je 7 '42 700w

Boston Globe p17 Je 17 '42 220w

Reviewed by H. A. Stevens

N Y Times p14 Je 14 '42 550w

New Yorker 18:80 Je 6 '42 90w

Time 39:80 Je 1 '42 600w

MENCKEN, HENRY LOUIS, ed. New dictionary of quotations on historical principles from ancient and modern sources. 1347p $7.50 Knopf

808.8 Quotations (W) 42-8343

"This book is based upon a collection of quotations begun in 1918 or thereabout for my own use. Its purpose was to keep track of sayings that, for one reason or another, interested me and seemed worth remembering, but that, also for one reason or another, were not in the existing quotation-books. . . It is planned on strictly historical principles, with the quotations dated whenever possible." (Pref) Arrangement is alphabetical under many subject headings. No index.

Reviewed by Wilson Follett

Atlantic J1 '42 280w

Booklist 38:327 My 1 '42

Bookmark 3:3 My '42

"Since Mr. Mencken gives no index of authors quoted, it is impossible to look for a given author's opinions unless you already know what they are in something like his own words. Mr. Mencken thinks, he says in his preface, this want of an index will cause only 'obvious inconveniences.' I believe it will be a serious inconvenience for readers of the ransacking kind. But for the nibblers and lingerers it will perhaps not matter. I have spent more hours than I will admit—the number is a trade secret—among Mr. Mencken's quotations, reasonably edified and perpetually, immensely entertained. As Dryden said of Chaucer, though Mr. Mencken does not quote it, 'here is God's plenty.'" Carl Van Doren

+ — Books p4 Ap 19 '42 1850w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 29 '42 750w

Reviewed by David Burnham

Commonweal 36:233 Je 26 '42 550w

"For practical everyday purposes as well as for the delight all bookish folk take in dipping into dictionaries, Mencken's selection of 30,000 quotations provides a volume without which the reference shelf would already look incomplete. At the same time, there is hardly a page that does not convey some hint of the editor and compiler's irrepressible intelligence as well as of his industry."

+ — Current Hist 2:303 Je '42 440w

"While Mencken may have produced no infallible vade mecum for journalists and banquet speakers or God's gift to librarians, he has achieved a time-killer and wits' treasury to delight men, gods, and librarians alike, a work of literary and popular ethnology that is a worthy successor to 'The American Language,' a survey of human wit, prejudice, wisdom, and scurrility whose contempt for the human species is equaled only by the love and zest for it that inform every page, and a volume that immediately wins a classic rank by being the first and only readable book of its kind." M. D. Zabel

+ Nation 155:390 O 17 '42 1450w

Reviewed by J. A. W. Bennett

New Repub 106:771 Je 1 '42 1250w

"Probably less useful than Bartlett, it is a dozen times as entertaining and contains far more true wit, true wisdom, and salutary nonsense." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:76 Ap 25 '42 220w

Pratt p8 D '42

"Your book is full of plums—no mistake about that. And that is why it shall be a valued vol. up on my shelf. But I shan't use it to look up things in a hurry. I shall keep it to burrow in, for the mess of words that is sure to startle and waylay. (How do I look that up?) Maybe the more I get used to your cross-reference system the nimbler I will become. But I am pretty old now. Well, Henry, that's all. You have compiled a very interesting book." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 25:7 My 2 '42 700w

Time 39:98 My 11 '42 600w

Reviewed by F. P. Adams

Yale R n s 31:321 summer '42 1000w

MENENDEZ, MIGUEL ANGEL. Nayar; tr. from the Spanish by Angel Flores. 277p $2.50 Farrar

(W) 41-26005

"Nayarit is a province on the western coast of Mexico, smaller than most of the others and covered largely by dense jungle. This novel is the story of the flight of two men through the jungles of Nayarit, a flight that has as its goal rest and retribution." Publisher's note

Booklist 38:252 Mr 15 '42

"'Nayar,' second-prize winner in the Latin-American novel contest of 1941, will seem unfamiliar to the average American reader, so little prepared to savor its poetic overtones and comparative absence of plot. Yet it is a fine novel and one rooted in the Mexican and Latin-American tradition." B. D. Wolfe

+ Books p3 Ja 11 '42 800w

MENENDEZ, M. A.—Continued

"'Nayar' is derivative in more than one sense. For its theme and philosophy it goes to the indigenous parti-pris so widespread in contemporary Latin American literature. What startles the reader is to find the rhetorical and highly sophisticated devices developed in the twenties employed here in the presentation of a social problem. If the author's flamboyant style is inappropriate for action and conflict, it is most felicitous for the creation of moods." M. J. Benardete

Nation 154:70 Ja 17 '42 700w

"Mr. Menéndez writes, I think, too much like the poet which I understand he is. His powers of description are superior to his gifts for clear and telling narrative. Nevertheless, 'Nayar' is an unusual novel and in some ways a distinguished one. Whatever its deficiencies as a story, it gives a sharp-toned picture of a background and a culture that are both colorful and hauntingly strange." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p8 Ja 11 '42 850w

"A simple and sharply observed account of a primitive country and people, agreeably instructive."

+ New Yorker 17:59 Ja 10 '42 80w

"The language of 'Nayar' is exquisite. We understand that Miguel Menéndez is primarily a poet. His similes are lyrical and striking. It should be emphasized that the translation by Angel Flores is beautifully written. Many foreign words are left in the English text, a technique which guarantees an authentic flavor but puts obstacles in the reader's way. It may be, however, that there was no way of conveying their meaning to an American reader—another proof that we have much to learn before we can understand our Latin American neighbors and an obstacle which translators would do well to bestow pains to overcome." R. R. Plant

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:6 Ja 17 '42 410w

MENNINGER, KARL AUGUSTUS, and MENNINGER, MRS JEANETTA (LYLE). Love against hate. 31p $3.50 Harcourt

131.341 Sex. Psychoanalysis. Instinct. Love 42-50183

"Collaborating with his wife, the distinguished neuropsychiatrist follows his preface in setting forth 'simply and specifically the basic conflict of human life and of our civilization.' He chooses 'a form understandable to any intelligent person, professional or non-professional,' even at risk of having work regarded as 'mere "popular science"'. . . Chapters headed 'Work,' 'Play,' 'Hope,' 'Faith,' 'Love.' " (Library J) Index.

"Most of the problems of daily living come under Dr. Menninger's vigorous and penetrating analysis, from the depreciation of femininity to the values of religion. His forthright treatment of some subjects may arouse criticism in certain circles, but happily he has not pulled his punches. This is how human beings seem to a man who has been listening to human woes and observing human disasters for a long time, and we can take it or leave it. I think we had better take it and ponder it, for the sake of the day when the guns will stop and the job must be done to bring up a new generation of all peoples so that it will not be facing another war in another twenty years." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p8 D 27 '42 650w

"It seems to the reviewer that this last effort from the pen of a distinguished psychoanalyst, will do little to clarify anyone's ideas on love or hate. The book is wordy and inconclusive." A. C. Washburne, M.D.

— Commonwealth 37:306 Ja 8 '43 420w

"Recommended." Catherine Van Dyne

+ Library J 67:1065 D 1 '42 110w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Nation 155:654 D 12 '42 1000w

"To think that Dr. Menninger has merely rewritten the conventional ethics would be erroneous. For the case material, of which he presents much, shows how difficult it is to see evil, and ordinary conscience will not do it. In fact, what Dr. Menninger seems to suggest is that conscience as we know it needs supplanting by scientific insight. As in his previous books many instructive clinical examples are given. As a collector and expositor of hate in human affairs, Dr. Menninger is coming to occupy the role played by Havelock Ellis with respect to the erotic life. The book, thus, is valuable for its train of ethical thought and for its empirical contribution." B. D. Lewin, M. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 D 19 '42 500w

Wis Lib Bul 38:182 D '42

MEREDITH, ANNE, pseud. See Malleson, L. B.

MERRIAM, CHARLES EDWARD. On the agenda of democracy. 135p $1.50 Harvard univ. press

321.8 Democracy. U.S.—Politics and government A 41-4752

"The 'agenda' by which democracy can fulfill itself include first of all a 'streamlining' of the administrative process, with full power entrusted to a responsible and accountable executive, using the latest methods of scientific management. They include a modernizing of the legislative process, with legislators avoiding technical detail, but relying on technical advice, while airing principles and policies in constant deliberation, and keeping a watchful eye on administration. They include a new world order, since war violates the basic assumptions of democracy. They include planning, since that is at the core of rational behavior. And they include a social program that will not call a halt till every member of society is assured, not merely the material basis of a good life, but a chance at the 'adventures of civilization' as well." Sat R of Lit

"The volume will repay study by students of government, however old or young they may be. It is fortunate for us in these days that our elder statesmen, of whom Professor Merriam is one, are still active in the practical affairs of the nation. Long may they and their kind endure!" P. H. Odegard

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:346 Ap '42 1000w

"In general, the book is a mixture of the concrete and the ideal, and the reader must be ready to jump from one to the other and back without warning. Consequently one is left with a certain uneasiness that wishful thinking has tended to minimize difficulties. Nevertheless the Godkin Lectures (which evoked the book) have seldom if ever enjoyed a more trenchant presentation of a more timely subject." E. S. Griffith

+ — Ann Am Acad 221:194 My '42 400w

"The relation of authority to liberty is a perennial issue in all forms of political organization. The conflict inherent in these two facets of democracy is not fully comprehended in this otherwise excellent treatise." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ — Nation 154:347 Mr 21 '42 300w

Reviewed by A. M. Bingham

Sat R of Lit 24:30 D 6 '41 500w

Reviewed by Marshall Bragdon

Spring'd Republican p6 D 13 '41 850w

MERRICK, ELLIOTT. Northern nurse. 311p $2.75 Scribner

B or 92 Merrick, Kate (Austen) (Mrs Elliott Merrick). Labrador. Nurses and nursing (W) 42-9011

An Australian nurse, searching for a "real" assignment, signed up for two years' service with one of the Grenfell hospitals in Labrador. During the illness and absence of the doctor in charge, she found herself in the role of doctor, dentist, nurse, surgeon, dressmaker, bookkeeper and church soloist, among other activities. The story of her struggles to fill so many roles is written by the school teacher at North West river, who became her husband.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: ALA (1) Books (7) RB (1) W (1)

"Northern Nurse is a pioneer story—with a decided difference. Elliott Merrick's account of his wife's work as a nurse in Labrador is written with charm, humor, and no self-consciousness—attributes unusual in a pioneer book." H. D. Boylston

+ Atlantic Jc '42 250w

Booklist 38:308 Ap 15 '42

Bookmark 3:14 My '42

"There are good stories of trips across the frozen snow in dog sleds in response to a message of sickness, stories of fishing trips, of a Christmas celebration, of the importance of the arrival of the mail. . . But more than telling stories that bring a chuckle or the tingle of excitement, she succeeds admirably in portraying the simple, hard life of Labrador and the simple, rugged people who prefer it to any other kind. Her enthusiasm for both is infectious, probably the only infection that she has ever carried." Rose Feld

+ Books p5 Mr 29 '42 900w

"Well told tale of special interest to nurses and other women and girls." A. M. Colt

+ Library J 67:223 Mr 1 '42 50w

"Medical details are frank but never revolting and through it all is a warm current of human interest and sympathy." M. C. Scoggin

+ Library J 67:895 O 15 '42 30w

"A book which is vigorous, intensely interesting, and rich with living. . . In its scene and spirit, its characters and events, this is a kind of 'escape reading' that we can well be turning to just now." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 22 '42 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 38:67 Ap '42

MERRILL, FREDERICK THAYER. Japan and the opium menace. 170p pa $1.50 Inst. of Pacific relations; Foreign policy

178.8 Opium trade 42-15379

"[This work] was on press at the outbreak of the war, and is concerned with the description of the conditions respecting opium and narcotic drugs only in those areas of the Far East which were then under the jurisdiction of the Chinese and Japanese Governments. A second volume is contemplated dealing with the smoking-opium problem under government monopoly systems. The present volume is the outgrowth of suggestions made by the International Research Committee of the Institute of Pacific Relations at its Princeton meeting in January 1939." Ann Am Acad

"The book is important for those who are concerned with the opium problem in its historical and non-governmental aspects. In spite of the title, the author did not succumb to the temptation to minimize Chinese responsibility for conditions in China, although he does make it clear that the Japanese must bear the major share of responsibility for the increase in addiction within the last two decades." H. M. Vinacke

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:791 Ag '42 380w

Reviewed by W. L. Treadway

Ann Am Acad 224:206 N '42 500w

MERRILL, GILBERT R.; MACORMAC, ALFRED RIDNER, and MAUERSBERGER, HERBERT RICHARD. American cotton handbook; a practical reference book for the entire cotton industry. 1024p il $4.80; outside U.S. & Canada $6 Am. cotton handbook co, 303 5th av, N.Y.

677.2 Cotton goods industry 41-22049

"A reference tool bringing together specific, up-to-date information on the history of the industry as well as the economic, social, technical and chemical, phases of cotton growing, manufacturing, and processing." Booklist

Booklist 38:228 Mr 1 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:6 Ja '42

MERRILL, MARION. Young Billings of Buckhorn; il. by Sandra James. 72p $2 Morrow

42-17986

Story of the brave fight of six motherless children to save their home when the constable and his rascal brother try to sell their farm for taxes. The scene is the highland region of Ontario.

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins

Library J 67:742 S 1 '42 50w

"Fair family picture and new setting, the highlands of Canadian Divide. Would be of very limited appeal, however. Do not recommend." M. N. Miller

Library J 67:742 S 1 '42 50w

"This story of a united family front bravely facing catastrophe has a tonic quality, much of which is drawn from the sturdy Canadian farming people. Although the writing is uneven and sometimes abrupt, style is forgotten in the suspense which carries the reader of middle years swiftly through the pages." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p9 Ag 16 '42 320w

MERRIMAN, GAYLORD MAISH. To discover mathematics. 435p $3 Wiley

510 Mathematics

42-2613

"To relieve mathematics of the mystery surrounding it because its aims and methods are so seldom appreciated; to expose its utility, philosophy, and beauty; to accomplish these ends with elementary but significant material, available to all who, regardless of previous mathematical experience, are willing to cultivate the ability to reason; to present that material in interesting and stimulating style—these are the purposes of this book." (Pref) Indexes.

Booklist 38:304 Ap 15 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:41 Jl '42

METZGER, BERTA. Picture tales from India; il. by Mina Buchanan. 87p $1.35 Stokes

Folklore—India (W) 42-22997

Twenty folk tales and fables retold from the Indian folklore. Could be used for storytelling. Grades three to five.

Booklist 39:124 D 1 '42

Churchman 156:15 N 15 '42 10w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:884 O 15 '42 10w

"Similar to others in series; convenient, usable folk tales, many familiar." Sonja Wenerblad

+ Library J 67:1069 D 1 '42 30w

MEYER, DICKEY, pseud. See Chapelle, G. L. M.

MEYER, KURT HEINRICH. Natural and synthetic high polymers; a textbook and reference bk. for chemists and biologists; tr. by L. E. R. Picken. (High polymers; a series of monographs) 690p 180 il $11 Interscience

541.7 Polymerization 42-22091

"Volume IV of the High Polymers Monographs, written by a professor of organic chemistry at the University of Geneva, is subtitled as a textbook and reference book for chemists and biologists. It is an attempt made for the first time to give a systematic account of the entire field of natural and synthetic, inorganic and organic high polymers. . . . The discussions range from polymerized sulphur and other inorganics through hydrocarbons, cellulose, starch, and proteins to animal and plant tissues." Chem & Met Eng

Chem & Met Eng 49:184 O '42 130w

Library J 68:36 Ja 1 '43 60w

MICHAEL, FRANZ. Origin of Manchu rule in China; frontier and bureaucracy as interacting forces in the Chinese empire. 127p $2
Johns Hopkins press

951 Manchus. China—History 42-8184

"[This work] is in its conclusions, although not in its contents, a support and further development of Owen Lattimore's recent work on the Chinese frontier. Dr. Michael shows that the Chinese frontier is no mere static limit, but is itself a dynamic political force in China, and illustrates his thesis with the Manchu rise to power, 1583-1644." Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by P. M. A. Linebarger
Am Pol Sci R 36:594 Je '42 300w

"Those in the field of Far Eastern studies who are acquainted with Owen Lattimore's Inner Asian Frontiers of China [Book Review Digest, 1940] will, on reading the title of Dr. Michael's monograph, immediately perceive the apparent connection between the two works, and are likely to give way to an urge to master the contents of the latter. Those in the field of learning mentioned who are as yet unacquainted with these studies had best lose no time in remedying their ignorance." H. F. MacNair

+ Ann Am Acad 222:211 Jl '42 750w

"Taken as a whole, this book is a sound piece of work. It provides a starting point for further approaches to the study of early Manchu history. In the reviewer's hope, Dr. Michael with his scientific methodology would contribute more, both quantitatively and qualitatively, if he made fuller use of the available original sources and the Chinese and Japanese monographs on the early Manchu period." Feng Chia-sheng

+ — Pacific Affairs 15:371 S '42 700w

MICHEL, M. SCOTT. X-ray murders. 250p $2
Coward-McCann
Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p24 D 13 '42 180w

"The outstanding feature of this book is that there is not a single character in it with whom one can feel any sympathy. That goes for the victims, the suspects, the police, and most of all for Wood Jaxon. The author belongs in the Dashiell Hammett school of detective story writing, but down at the foot of the class." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 D 6 '42 120w

"This is another 'tough' whodunit, and not a particularly clever one."

— Springf'd Republican p7e D 13 '42 70w

MICHELON, LENO C. Industrial inspection methods. 389p il $3.50 Harper 621.9 Testing. Machinery—Inspection 42-25032

"Textbook for course in inspection of materials. Late methods and devices in use by industrial concerns and army ordnance services. Author is instructor in ordnance inspection in War Training Division of Illinois Institute of Technology." Library J

Booklist 39:179 Ja 1 '43

"In teaching these inspection methods so clearly this book is an important contribution to the war-production program." James Stokley

+ Books p17 Ja 31 '43 180w

Library J 67:953 N 1 '42 40w

MICHIE, ALLAN ANDREW. Retreat to victory. 498p il map $3 Alliance bk.

940.542 World war, 1939—Campaigns and battles. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American (W) 42-19402

"Mr. Michie, as correspondent for Time, Life and Fortune magazines, saw the 'Stuka-stupid Tommies come back across the Channel from the hell of Dunkerque,' followed the fortunes of the British in Greece, Crete and Libya, watched the campaigns in Iraq, Syria and Iran and toured India and the Far East just before Pearl Harbor. Thus he became something of a specialist on retreats, which, he says, 'are not pleasant spectacles.' He sees them, however, all as contributions to victory when the tide turns, reasoning that in every case they deprived the enemy of men, matériel and time; that, in many cases—such as Crete, where, he says, British troops are still fighting and still being reinforced and supplied—they were not actual defeats because they did not leave the enemy in undisputed possession of the battlefield." (N Y Times) Map on end papers. Index.

Reviewed by T. H. Thomas
Atlantic 170:140 O '42 160w
Booklist 39:8 S '42

"Retreat to Victory' is balanced, illuminating and readable. It suffers, however, from an occupational malady of Mr. Michie's kind of journalism. Having been trained to offer 'Inside information'—whatever that is—on bug-eyed and wart-nosed headliners, Mr. Michie overlooks the older rule that sources of information should be indicated. Consequently, he cites no authority for certain flat statements which must remain matters of opinion or conjecture until history is written. But this does not destroy the essential value of what he reports. If a million Americans could read this book Goebbels would fail to turn us against our British and our Russian allies." J. T. Whitaker

+ — Books p4 S 13 '42 1350w

"Knocking out style as a quality of both good and bad books of this sort, grasp of historical process and an abundance of useful information are the two characteristics that alone should put a war correspondent's manuscript between stiff covers. On the first count Mr. Michie scores about fifty out of a hundred, and on the second about seventy-five or seventy-five plus. For the rest, 'Retreat to Victory' is a streamlined, high-powered job of journalism in the Lucian school, superb in its sort, lean, swift, and graphic, though a little too much given to thumbnail portraits of everyone above the rank of major." Ralph Bates

+ — Nation 155:241 S 19 '42 800w

New Repub 107:326 S 14 '42 120w

"There are detailed studies of the leading military commanders involved which are as thorough and as revealing as any this reviewer has yet seen. Thus Mr. Michie has presented a book which is not, as its title and opening pages, might imply, another formula for our eventual success in this war, but a valuable contribution to a better understanding of what has gone before and what we are still up against." Percival Knauth

+ N Y Times p1 Ag 16 '42 1500w

"A few good ideas and a certain amount of fresh background material."

+ New Yorker 18:59 Ag 22 '42 110w

"It is a refreshing experience to watch a correspondent at work who does not seek to convey the impression that he himself is the central figure in the momentous events he witnessed and is describing. Mr. Michie has had an amazing career, and he has come through the most bitterly contested campaigns of the Second World War with his faith in our ultimate triumph intact and confirmed. He records his findings with exactitude and in an almost breathless and crisp style which harmonizes perfectly with the speed of his travels and his almost lightninglike shifts from one battlefield to the other." Pierre Van Paassen

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 Ag 15 '42 1100w

"Some of the best chapters in this admirable, though in places rather disturbing, book are those devoted to sketches of the leading British soldiers and sailors."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p592 D 5 '42 1000w

MICKLEM, NATHANIEL. Theology of politics. 163p $2.50 (7s 6d) Oxford

261.7 Christianity and politics. Totalitarianism 42-9221

"This is a collection of essays, 'homogeneous but unsystematic', all of them based upon the conviction that 'every conceivable political theory rests upon an implicit anthropology, a theological or anti-theological estimate of man as related to his God, to his fellows, and to machines.' In the light of this conviction the author discusses Communism and Fascism, the conflicting influence of Hobbes and Rousseau, of Luther and Calvin upon the modern world—the former of each pair, protagonists of totalitarianism, the latter of democracy." Churchman

"The book, although perhaps bordering at times on the dogmatic, makes an important contribution at this time, when if civilization is to survive, morality and religion in the true sense must take their proper places in the life and thought of man." E. D. Ellis

+ — Am Pol Sci R 36:387 Ap '42 450w

Reviewed by Erdmann Smith

Christian Century 59:385 Mr 25 '42 700w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 11 '42 700w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 156:17 F 1 '42 200w

Ethics 52:387 Ap '42 280w

"Without claiming to put forth any views of startling novelty, Dr Micklem seems to me a guide of fine spiritual sense and power of expression through a field obscured by many extravagancies, fanaticism and ignorant fallacies. To me he appears to be nearly always right, and I should give his book as a beautiful example of mitis sapientia." Edwyn Bevan

+ Hibbert J 40:292 Ap '42 1350w

Reviewed by E. E. Aubrey

J Religion 22:313 Jl '42 1300w

Manchester Guardian p3 O 17 '41 200w

"The book has serious weaknesses. It is composed of reprinted articles which are not all of equal merit. Marx cannot be wisely discussed as quickly as is done here. . . The role of risk in economic life, as in moral life, needs more study than it gets here. But this is an admirable statement of the view that unless we have faith comparable to the faith that animates our enemies and our new allies, our humane natural religion of all sensible men, an inheritance of the Jewish, classical and Christian past, will prove a poor shield." D. W. Brogan

+ — Spec 167:286 S 19 '41 750w

"Mr. Micklem's ability to write clear-cut and forcible prose matches the keenness of his perception of the fundamental issues."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p468 S 20 '41 750w

MIDDLETON, WILLIAM EDGAR KNOWLES. Visibility in meteorology; the theory and practice of the measurement of the visual range. 2d ed rev & enl 165p il $2.50 Univ. of Toronto press [11s 6d Oxford]

551.5 Meteorological optics. Atmospheric transparency 41-24832

"A monograph discussing the behavior of light in the atmosphere, the appearance of objects seen through the lower atmosphere, the appearance of light-sources seen through the lower atmosphere, the applications to the calculation of the visual range, experimental researches relating to visual range and visibility, instruments for the measurement of the visual range, the visual range in practice, the dependence of visual range on the other meteorological elements, and forecasting the visual range. The book concludes with an appendix covering the visual range of colored objects and includes a bibliography of 342 references." N Y New Tech Bks

"In this second edition the author reverses some of his opinions in the first edition, especially concerning the value of many visibility meters and of the visual range as a conservative property for air-mass analysis, about which he is no longer so enthusiastic. In general this edition gives much more attention to the practical problem of estimating the horizontal visual range in the lower atmosphere. The treatment is naturally technical and requires some acquaintance with physics, mathematics and meteorology." R. G. Stone

Geog R 32:347 Ap '42 500w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:26 Ap '42

"It is an excellent and authoritative presentation of all important work on the topics with which it deals. Throughout theory and experiment are outlined in proper balance, and original sources are fully documented." E. O. Hulburt

+ R of Scientific Instruments 12:504 O '41 360w

MIERS, EARL SCHENCK. Big Ben. 238p il $2.50 Presbyterian bd.

Robeson, Paul—Fiction

(W) 42-36135

A novel "inspired" by the life story of the American Negro singer, Paul Robeson. The story is mainly concerned with Ben Jackson's years at a white university where he wins fame as a football player.

Booklist 38:275 Ap 1 '42

"In spite of provocative interesting material and an easy, unpretentious style, 'Big Ben' deserves to be classed as a fine tribute to an outstanding figure rather than as a fine novel." M. L. Rossbach

+ — Books p10 Je 14 '42 400w

"Mr. Miers has written a fascinating and understanding book, and has presented from a happier and more optimistic viewpoint the struggles and achievements of another 'Native Son.'" L. E. Cannon

+ Christian Century 59:1056 S 2 '42 130w

"Mr. Miers brings home clearly, simply, and without subtlety the problem confronting even a marvelously gifted Negro in a society which assumes that the main thing is for him 'to know his place.' The true problem for the Big Ben of this story, however, lay in trying to understand and maintain the delicate balance between what was allowed and what was withheld. That Big Ben learned it, that he never stooped to the meanness of the prejudices confronting him, and that he emerged from his experience a character and a figure of whom any civilization can be proud make him a fit hero for such a book." H. M. Bess

+ Sat R of Lit 25:13 F 21 '42 250w

MIERS, EARL SCHENCK, and ELLIS, RICHARD, eds. Bookmaking and kindred amenities. 147p $3.50 Rutgers univ. press 655 Books 42-19794

"Being a collection of essays [on various subjects] by Beatrice Warde, Richard Ellis, Carl Purington Rollins, Bennett A. Cerf, George Stevens, Philip Van Doren Stern, Earl Schenck Miers, Lewis Gannett, Lawrance Thompson, Laurence Gomme, Arthur W. Rushmore. Edited with an introduction and notes by Earl Schenck Miers and Richard Ellis." Subtitle

"This book will provide librarians with a short cut to a lot of things they ought to know. It is a symposium by eleven authors who are forever crossing and recrossing that vague line which, in the world of good books, divides literature from fine printing. If we get better books, both in substance and in format, it will be because of authors like these. . . This reviewer is not trying to get any favors from the Rutgers Press when he selects Earl Schenck Miers' 'Academic midwifery: reflections of a rake among scholars' as his favorite in this whole volume. It ought to be compulsory reading for those solemn owls who sometimes compose the 'faculty advisory committees' of our university presses. (Librarians too often sit on such committees.) When Americans finally get around to learning that wars can be lost by waste, something may be done about excessive 'author's corrections' and remainders which cost demurrage insurance, and storage." R. G. Adams

+ Library Q 12:353 O '42 1050w

"It is all pleasant and amiable and informative and entertaining, but it is not worth the price." J. T. Winterich

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:14 Ag 22 '42 110w

MIKSCHKE, FERDINAND OTTO. Attack [Eng title: Blitzkrieg] introd. by Tom Wintringham. 267p il maps $2.50 Random house [12s 6d Faber]

355.4 Tactics 42-19068

A technical treatise on the art of war as practiced by Germany at the present time. The author is a Czech who served in the Czech army for twelve years, then joined the International Brigade fighting on the Loyalist side in Spain's Civil war. Index.

Booklist 39:2 S '42

"A most interesting detailed study." P. C. Raborg

+ Books p18 J1 19 '42 550w

Reviewed by Carlyle Holt
Boston Globe p19 J1 22 '42 500w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn
Library J 67:628 J1 '42 70w

"To understand and fully appreciate this book considerable strategical and tactical knowledge is necessary. Major Miksche's interpretation of certain German technical terms, such as 'thrust-point' and 'rolling-out,' is required for an understanding of Panzer warfare, but their use may not be easily followed by the general public. His survey helps to give us a conception of the skilful defence plans which the Russian High Command is employing in the present campaign." W. E. A.

Manchester Guardian p3 D 12 '41 250w

Reviewed by H. S. Sewell
Nation 155:76 J1 25 '42 700w

Reviewed by J. I. Greene
New Repub 107:124 J1 27 '42 800w

"Tom Wintringham contributes a racy and informative Introduction to a book written with verve and a deep comprehension of its subject." Clive Garsia

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:530 D 27 '41 360w

Reviewed by A. M. Nikolaieff
N Y Times p17 Ag 23 '42 1550w

"Rather arbitrary or dated on occasion, but evidently a sound, reasonably technical discussion."

+ New Yorker 18:59 J1 18 '42 110w

"This book is a practical guide, written by a professional soldier whose audience might be considered just a bit uncertain. It is hardly a volume for the amateurs and armchair critics, for it is totally lacking in glamour and 'personal' interest. On the other hand, much of it is already well-known to professionals like Major Miksche, the author." Roger Shaw

Sat R of Lit 25:9 Ag 1 '42 550w

"This is the best work on modern tactics which the present war has produced. . . With some faults, some obscurities, and a habit, confusing to the British soldier, of using for examples continental terms, formations, and calibres, this is a brilliant exposition of modern tactics which should be widely studied by the Arm of to-day."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p539 N 1 '41 850w

MILES, ARTHUR PARKER. Federal aid and public assistance in Illinois. [ed. by S. P. Breckinridge]. 259p pa $1.50 Univ. of Chicago press [9s Cambridge]

361.6 Charities—Illinois. Charity organization 41-8601

"Assesses the significance of federal grants-in-aid to Illinois for unemployment relief and public assistance for the period, July, 1932, to November 1, 1939. The author presents a factual, critical analysis of the cooperative endeavor of the federal and one state government to raise and administer funds for relief and assistance for the needy. The study focuses on distribution of federal aid by several federal agencies from R. F. C. to W. P. A. and Social Security Board, and on the impact of federal aid upon state and local welfare administration. It also presents examples of disturbances to state tax structures resulting from financing such programs." Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by H. C. Cook
Am Pol Sci R 36:169 F '42 220w

Reviewed by Francis Bardwell
Ann Am Acad 218:245 N '41 360w

MILHOUS, KATHERINE. Herodia, the lovely puppet; pictures by [the author]. 193p $2 Scribner

42-24592

Herodia was a real little girl who traveled with a marionette show in Pennsylvania in the eighteen seventies. But Herodia was supposed to be a puppet and danced with the other inanimate members of the cast, and thereby hangs this tale for the ten to fourteen year old girls.

Booklist 39:206 Ja 15 '43

"They say the state archivist of Pennsylvania gave Miss Milhous, whose knowledge of the state is like Sam Weller's of London, the outlines of this lovable story. But they have been filled out with colors so warm and bright, both in incident and illustration, that the tale is really all hers. . . The pictures are in Miss Milhous's best vein, true to period, decorative in color and design, yet never losing the sympathetic, childlike quality of the story." M. L. Becker

+ Books p14 N 15 '42 550w

"An unusual, romantic story for children of all ages."

+ Churchman 156:15 N 15 '42 10w

Horn Bk 19:40 Ja '43 80w

"A story for girls which is as appealing as it is unusual and picturesque." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 D 13 '42 300w

"A charming and satisfying book which is all of a piece in its pictures, typography, and quaintly romantic story." K. S. W.

+ New Yorker 18:108 D 12 '42 70w

MILIUKOV, PAVEL NIKOLAEVICH. Outlines of Russian culture; ed. by Michael Karpovich; tr. by Valentine Ughet and Eleanor Davis. 3 pts 220:130:159p il pt 1 $2.50 pt2 $1.50; pt3 $2; set $5 Univ of Pa. press

914.7 Russia—Civilization 42-6909

"An authorized abridged version of the original, specially prepared for the American edition. (Editor's foreword) The three volumes provide a cultural history of Russia, beginning with the pre-Mongol period to the Soviet regime. Volume one is devoted to Religion and the Church; volume two to Literature; and volume three to Architecture, Painting, and Music. Bibliographies and indexes at ends of each volume."

Reviewed by Avraham Yarmolinsky
Am Hist R 48:312 Ja '43 550w

Reviewed by S. N. Harper
Am J Soc 48:515 Ja '43 800w

Reviewed by B. E. Nelson
Ann Am Acad 223:229 S '42 650w

"Whatever its shortcomings, the work is in no wise inferior to the other solid and often distinguished contributions of Professor Miliukov to Russian cultural and general history. It shares the weakness in general interpretive ideas that have prevented him in the past from taking a place in the front rank of the great Russian historiographers. But it is the ripest fruit of a long lifetime of scholarship and represents an amazing evidence of the intellectual vigor and courage of this octogenarian who, under the conditions of war and exile in unoccupied France, continues his efforts to complete a work of this scope and magnitude."

B. D. Wolfe

+ Books p10 J1 12 '42 1000w

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
Cath World 156:365 D '42 450w

"The three volumes of the 'Outlines' are not only a valuable contribution to Russian History in so far as factual information is concerned. They present an analysis of the great spiritual, moral, intellectual and esthetic currents which set in motion Russia's creative energies. A fine musician, Mr. Miliukov has written some excellent pages on Russian music. He shows how this music, whose inspiration is national, gradually acquired a 'cosmopolitan' meaning, in so far as it conveys a message to the entire world. Thus 'Tchaikovsky's Russian soul,' became, according to Mr. Millukov, a 'human one understood by all mankind.' These words can be applied to all that is best in Russian culture." Helen Iswolsky

+ Commonweal 36:16 Ap 24 '42 1600w

"The longest and most ambitious, the most erudite and yet the weakest, of the three volumes is that on religion. These three well presented volumes represent a ground-breaking job in a still largely unworked and difficult field; they are valuable as a patient labor of scholarship and erudition, but the reader will have to bring to them, along with his own knowledge of Russian history, his own feeling for interpretative historical method. Finally, they are remarkable for the high degree of objectivity with which both author and editor have approached the task of recording the history of religion, literature and the other arts under the Soviet regime." B. D. Wolfe

+ — New Repub 106:610 My 4 '42 900w

Reviewed by John Cournos

N Y Times p26 O 18 '42 850w

"The editor of Millukov's 'Outlines,' Professor M. Karpovich of Harvard, has done admirable work, fully approved by the author. His few explanatory notes are painstakingly accurate and to the point, his additions short and unbiased. His bibliographical references at the end of each volume will be welcomed by scholars and more serious readers. His abridgements of the original text are tactful and sensible, though sometimes misleading. . . The translation has been made with care and skill. I have noticed no mistakes or misunderstandings. The English style, so far as I am able to judge is good." M. Rostovtzeff

+ Sat R of Lit 25:8 Je 13 '42 750w

Reviewed by Alexander Kaun

Survey G 31:433 O '42 500w

MILLAR, MARGARET. Devil loves me. 304p $2
Doubleday

42-18956

Detective story.

Booklist 39:202 Ja 15 '43

"Margaret Millar rings the bell again. She just gives rein to her far from soft-boiled outlook on things in general, and the result is a humdinger patrician item, ranging in mood from the slightly screwball to downright horror. . . Miss Millar is a Canadian. She is certainly a triple threat to some of our own high-ranking batters." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 Ag 9 '42 180w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p17 Ag 16 '42 160w

"Swell plot, swell dialogue."

+ New Yorker 18:56 Ag 8 '42 30w

"Satisfactory."

Sat R of Lit 25:17 Ag 8 '42 40w

MILLAR, MARGARET. Weak-eyed bat. 280p
$2 Doubleday

42-7501

Detective story.

Booklist 38:276 Ap 1 '42

Bookmark 3:18 My '42

"Now is the time for all good fans to realize that Margaret Millar is a humdinger, right up in the top rank of bafflers, including the British. . . As pretty a puzzle as you'll be meeting. Miss Millar has a line of elegant semiwacky fun, and it doesn't interfere with the excitement for one moment." Will Cuppy

+ Books p18 F 22 '42 340w

"Young Dr. Paul Prye solves the mystery and finds romance for himself as well. But three violent deaths disrupt the little community before an ingenious thriller is followed through its maze of suspense to a logical end."

Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 1 '42 160w

"A blonde kleptomaniac and, strangely enough, a schizophrenic help to make this a pleasant evening's reading."

+ New Yorker 18:72 F 21 '42 50w

"Murderer well concealed, and doctor detective's methods interesting but elimination of thoroughly unpleasant trio leaves reader rather cold. Fair."

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:18 F 23 '42 40w

MILLAY, EDNA ST VINCENT (MRS. E. J. BOISSEVAIN). Murder of Lidice. 32p pa 60c
Harper

811 World war, 1939—Poetry. Lidice, Czechoslovakia (W) 42-25700

A poem written to commemorate Germany's crime against the little village of Lidice in Czechoslovakia. The poem was written at the request of the Writers' War Board.

"This poem is more of a ballad than a work of art. It is war propaganda of the right kind, and the radio audience which first received it must have been deeply stirred by that appalling Nazi crime." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 14 '42

140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '42

Reviewed by A. M. Jakeman

Springf'd Republican p6 N 19 '42 390w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 31:599 D '42 500w

MILLER, CHARLES CONSTANT. Black Borneo. 278p il maps $2.75 Modern age

919.11 Borneo—Description and travel

(W) 42-8183

"Charles C. Miller (it is insistently explained that the 'C' stands for 'Cannibal') was born in Java, and after an adventurous career in aviation returned as a photographer-explorer to the Dutch East Indies, where several expeditions have taken him to wild and virtually unknown native districts. This book records one such expedition: from Samarinda on Macassar Strait, up the Mahakam River ('the Mississippi of Borneo') and through the Rain Forest to the primeval valley of the Apokajan, practically in the center of the island." N Y Times

"An excellent picture of the storehouse of trouble and wealth the Japs have acquired in the southern half of the fabled island, the portion formerly owned by the Dutch." Thomas Sugrue

+ Books p22 Je 7 '42 750w

"It is possible that some people might enjoy Mr. Miller's writing more if he were not trying so hard, and so constantly, to be funny. On the other hand, the book's appeal is not to the serious student. And for the reader in search of exotic diversion it offers a good deal that is interesting."

+ — N Y Times p2 Mr 22 '42 480w

"Told with masterly anticlimax and devastating understatement, this delightful yarn ought to be on the must list." W. L. Tipton

+ Sat R of Lit 25:28 Ap 11 '42 750w

MILLER, DENNING DUER. Popular mathematics; the understanding and enjoyment of mathematics. 616p $3.75 Coward-McCann

510 Mathematics (W) 42-51156

A popularly written book intended to help the ordinary intelligent layman to understand the history and technique of mathematics. Begins with simple arithmetic and ends with calculus.

"Mr. Miller challenges comparison with Lancelot Hogben's sensationally successful 'Mathematics for the Million.' [He] shares Hogben's enthusiasm for rescuing an essentially beautiful and fascinating creation of the human mind—and one basic to our technical age—from the difficulties in which it has been enshrouded, but his approach is quite different. If he is less brilliant than Hogben and less skillful in conveying sudden insights, he is also much simpler and takes much greater pains with the reader." Walter Millis

MILLER, D. D.—Continued
+ Books p5 N 29 '42 950w

Reviewed by Robert Legget
Canadian Forum 22:334 F '43 450w
Library J 67:1067 D 1 '42 20w

"The latest try, and a quite effective one at making your highschool and college math pleasanter, more diverting, clearer and more useful than you remember its having been."
+ New Yorker 18:99 N 21 '42 30w

"Many a harassed parent to whom a youngster appeals for aid in doing his 'home-work' will be grateful to Mr. Miller. Many a 'math teacher' will do well to have this book handy for his study or his classroom. Many a youth impelled by suggestions from Army, Navy and Selective Service headquarters to include mathematics in his preparation for military service will find his progress greatly accelerated by delving deep into its pages."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:3 D '42 390w

MILLER, EUGENE HERBERT. Strategy at Singapore; introd. by W. D. Puleston [pub. in collaboration with the Am. council on public affairs]. 153p maps $2.50 Macmillan 959.5 Singapore 42-25170

"A thorough, scholarly study of the history and significance of Britain's former base, sponsored by the American Council on Public Affairs." New Repub

Reviewed by W. P. Hall
Am Hist R 48:410 Ja '43 470w

"The author has presented the subject matter most objectively in a well-indexed and -documented small book. It is highly recommended for all students of Far Eastern affairs as well as those who are studying the strategy of the Pacific. The book is of definite historical value." L. P. Lovette
+ Ann Am Acad 225:228 Ja '43 500w

"Dr. Miller in his concisely written and thoroughly documented essay, though not neglecting strategical considerations, is primarily concerned with the political effect of the Singapore base upon the British Empire and Japan. From this viewpoint the book will be of more interest to the scholar or statesman than to the general public, especially in the light of recent Singapore history." F. J. Searles
+ Books p20 S 27 '42 450w

Current Hist 3:254 N '42 470w

"This is a good, sound book to have when so many 'quickies' are being written on the Far East."

+ New Repub 107:293 S 7 '42 70w

MILLER, FRANCIS TREVELYAN. General Douglas MacArthur, fighter for freedom; introd. by Lowell Thomas. 280p pl maps $1.35 Winston

B or 92 MacArthur, Douglas (W) 42-10175

Biography of America's "hero of Luzon" recording his education at West Point, his early services, service in World War I, as superintendent of West Point, and finally his service to date in World War II.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (14)
PW(1) RB (1) W (1)

"Mr. Miller, whose achievements as Civil War historian were crowned by the publication of the famous Brady photographs, thumps out this 'authentic life story' of General MacArthur with gusto and enthusiasm. The book comes under the wire first in what doubtless will be a long line of MacArthur biographies. It has dash and spirit, and probably will make interesting reading for boys of high school age, but the definitive story of MacArthur's early life and career must wait a quieter time and a more thoughtful, mature approach." Emmet Crozier

Books p17 Ap 19 '42 400w

"This story was prepared from newspaper reports and war communiqués, and bears the vivid touch of immediate events." F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 19 '42 50w

"Disappointingly gushy and amateurish writing, but the author seems to have done some original research."

+ New Yorker 18:76 Ap 18 '42 70w

MILLER, HAROLD BLAINE. Navy wings. new and rev ed 364p il $3 Dodd

623.74 U.S.—Navy—Air service, Aeronautics, Military (W) 42-23605

New edition of a brief history of naval aviation, first published in 1937 (Book Review Digest, 1937) and brought up-to-date with new material covering events down to Pearl Harbor. Index.

Booklist 39:106 N 15 '42

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 67:844 O 1 '42 110w

MILLER, MRS HELEN (TOPPING). Sheridan road. 228p $2 Appleton-Century

42-18365

An up-to-the-minute love story. The heroine is a young American business girl who is involved in a spy and murder case because she resembles someone else. The hero is a news photographer, working with the police, who helps the girl out of her predicament and aids the police in rounding up several saboteurs.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p13 Jl 26 '42 180w

N Y Times p13 Ag 2 '42 160w

MILLER, MARGARET (RIPLEY) (MRS MAX MILLER). Along our coast; stories of sea creatures of the Pacific ocean; il. with photographs. 60p $1.50 Dodd

591.92 Marine fauna—Juvenile literature (W) 42-18396

Stories of personal experiences with sea lions, killer whales, Garibaldis, stingrays, grunions, and other sea creatures found near the author's California home.

"I am continually amazed by the diversity and novelty of natural-history books for children as they come from the press with new treatments of what one might think old subjects. The bubbling newness of this book is due as much to the writer's personal approach as to the excitement, always new, that natural history seems always to arouse in its devotees." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ag 2 '42 280w

"The whole family will listen to Mrs. Miller's tales. . . Recommended." A. E. Brown

+ Library J 67:687 Ag '42 70w

MILLER, RANDOLPH CRUMP. What we can believe. 240p $2 Scribner

230 Christianity 41-26890

"Dr. Miller, a theological professor, deals with profound questions; his work is undisguisedly a theological treatise. But he keeps in mind constantly the needs of the great mass of average people who make up the bulk of the church. He desires to close up the 'tremendous gap' which exists between their ideas and 'the thinking of the leaders among our clergy and laity' on religious questions. So he attempts to interpret in simple language 'what a man can believe in these days.'" Books

Bookmark 3:4 My '42

"This is the best as it is the latest handbook on an intelligent and intelligible faith for the modern man. An appendix on how we may test our beliefs, a selective bibliography and a good index combine to complete a thoroughly workmanlike job." J. H. Holmes
+ Books p19 F 1 '42 480w

"Dr. Miller's book does have some passages brilliantly written, some original ideas and some constructive suggestions. The discussion of how God works is clear and forceful. The same may be said, though with more reservation, of the sections dealing with what can be believed about the Bible, about Jesus Christ and about the nature and destiny of man. But the treatments of the church, of prayer and of the Kingdom of God are very inadequate. The inadequacy at these points probably stems from that vagueness about the nature of God which the author shares with his fellow empiricists." T. C. Johnson

+ — Christian Century 59:20 Ja 7 '42 550w

"All those who believe that we must not throw overboard the tremendous contributions of science to our understanding of religion, that 'we must walk by sight as far as we can see', and that we can commend our Gospel to the modern mind only by translating it into the language of that mind—following the example of the compilers of the Creeds—will heartily welcome this book. The followers of Barthianism will of course reject the very principles upon which the author builds his case." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 156:17 F 1 '42 360w

"The author has an attractive style, and is apt in coining striking sentences. . . . A bibliography of nearly a hundred titles and a carefully prepared index add to the value of the book. The writer seems to have a not unreasonable assurance that he who stops to dip into his work will tarry to study it." Rittenhouse Neisser

+ Crozer Q 19:162 Ap '42 500w

"Mr. Miller's book is not a creative contribution to religious thought, but it will be an interesting and not too difficult survey of the problems for the beginning student. This is not a negative judgment on the book. On the contrary, he has to an unusual degree accomplished his stated purpose. It is a book that had a real excuse for being written." E. R. Walker

+ J Religion 23:75 Ja '43 350w

Wis Lib Bul 38:26 F '42

MILLER, WARD IRA. Democracy in educational administration; an analysis of principles and practices. 117p $1.75 Teachers college

371.2 School administration and organization 42-21388

"A discussion of the means of developing more efficient organization among school administrators with emphasis on the application of democratic principles." (School & Society) Selected bibliography. Index.

"The principles presented as the hallmarks of democratic administration are said to be 'found in professional literature' and 'evaluated in the light of the criteria' (p. 39). However, except for an excellent bibliography at the end of the book, no data are presented to show the reader just how this was done. . . . Regardless of this lack of presentation of evidence at some points, the book is a major contribution to the literature of this relatively new field—a field that is particularly critical at the present time, yet as timeless as our national life. The book does not, however, give us all the specific techniques we shall need." D. H. Cooper

+ — EI School J 43:188 N '42 900w

School & Society 56:104 Ag 1 '42 20w

MILLIGAN, MRS LUCY (RICHARDSON), and MILLIGAN, HAROLD VINCENT. Club member's handbook. 300p 69c Garden City pub. co.

367 Clubs (W) 42-19478

Covers all subjects related to club organization, in both men's and women's clubs. Partial contents: How clubs are organized; How meetings are conducted; Constitution and by-laws; How motions are made and amended; How minutes are kept; How votes are taken and counted; How finances are handled; How committees work; How programs are conducted; How to get the right publicity; The Club House; Customs and etiquette in women's clubs; Customs in men's clubs. Index.

"The book is not only for clubwomen but also a present help to members of any of the citizens' organizations now functioning to such effect, and a copy of it at the disposal of a new member can be put to practical uses. The advice is also good for long-term usage."

+ Books p25 O 13 '42 100w

"Will be useful in any library."

+ Wis Lib Bul 38:158 N '42

MILLMAN, JACOB, and SEELY, SAMUEL. Electronics. 721p il $5 McGraw

537.53 Electrone. Vacuum tubes 41-19652

"This book is the outgrowth of a course in electronics that the authors have been giving for more than five years to electrical engineering students. The scope of the material is so broad as to make the textbook suitable for courses in which the emphasis is to be placed on fundamental theory and the physics of electronic devices as well as those courses in which the principal objective is to study the technical and engineering applications of these devices." (Pref) Indexes.

Booklist 38:126 D 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 27:7 Ja '42

MILLS, CLARENCE ALONZO. Climate makes the man. 320p il $3 Harper

614.42 Climatology, Medical. Weather—Mental and physiological effects, Man—Influence of environment (W) 42-22231

An expert in the field of experimental medicine has written this study of the relation of climate to the energies, longevity, and diseases of man. The effect of climate on tuberculosis, cancer, rheumatism, hardening of the arteries, etc. is discussed, and the probable effect of gradual changes in climate upon man. No index.

Booklist 39:44 O 15 '42

"The book itself is rich, sound, and provocative. It is entertaining, too. In manner it recalls the sagacity and experience of a veteran family physician who never forgets that patients are people. Dr. Mills draws liberally upon his personal reminiscences, always to the point. His ideas upon air conditioning are authentic and novel, and his discussion of stimulants and personal hygiene makes sense. But the best thing about the book I leave to the last. It knocks skyhigh the idea that man, through science or otherwise, controls nature. He merely has the chance, through greater knowledge, to control himself, and so get on within the frame of nature." P. B. Sears

+ Books p4 O 25 '42 1000w

Library J 67:795 S 15 '42 30w

New Repub 108:61 Ja 11 '43 90w

"This is an interesting and stimulating book, interesting because of its content and the myths which its author holds are no longer tenable and stimulating because of the vistas it opens in the fields of political science and history. . . . I would quarrel with Dr. Mills on one or two points of scientific deduction." Louis Bromfield

+ — N Y Times p12 O 4 '42 1600w

"Dr. Mills is an ardent crusader in a campaign whose object is to make the world realize that physical environment is just as important as either heredity or culture. Therefore, his book has the qualities which one expects in propaganda of the good sort. It is also a chatty, personal book that can be read rapidly and with pleasure. Incidentally, it gives a good deal of information about the author's own life." Ellsworth Huntingdon

+ Sat R of Lit 25:7 O 10 '42 1100w

"Dr. Mills has had unusual opportunities for observing the physical condition and psychological reactions of people in China, the Philippines, tropical America, as well as in the United States and Europe. He approaches the all-important and ever-fascinating problem of the interaction between man and environment from the point of view of the physician rather than from that of the meteorologist or climatologist. Doubtless the cautious expert in the latter fields would criticize many of his statements as too dogmatic and highly speculative. Nevertheless his conclusions are of great significance and err more in the exaggeration of their popular presentation than in their fundamental validity."

MILLS, C. A.—Continued

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:4 D '42 380w
Wis Lib Bul 38:158 N '42

MILLS, LENNOX ALGERNON. British rule in eastern Asia; a study of contemporary government and economic development in British Malaya and Hong Kong. (Inst. of Pacific relations. Int. research ser) 581p maps $5 Univ. of Minn. [25s Oxford]

325.342 Great Britain—Colonies. Hong Kong. Malaya, British [A42-5310]

"Professor Mills' study provides [an] objective record of British colonial administration in Malaya and Hongkong. . . Part I of the book is devoted to Malaya. Professor Mills treats of its government, finance, trade, labor conditions, agriculture, hygiene and education, in that order. . . The second part of the book, dealing with Hongkong, follows the same plan as the first." (Pacific Affairs) Index.

Reviewed by Amry Vandenbosch
Am Hist R 48:339 Ja '43 490w

"Professor Mills has rendered a valuable service by making this study of the British record in Malaya and Hong Kong. Unfortunately the style is heavy, and the reader often discovers that a paragraph approximates a closely printed page. He will find the author's references and footnotes difficult to identify with statements and quotations in the text. In these and other respects the volume suffers by comparison with Rupert Emerson's Malaysia, a somewhat differently planned but livelier and more penetrating volume published in 1937." G. L. LaFuze

+ Ann Am Acad 224:207 N '42 550w

"The story of the gradual adjustments and developments in politics, trade, medicine and hygiene in these Asiatic states makes interesting reading. The book abounds in careful tables and statistics of trade and commerce, and draws many comparisons between British East Asia and the Philippines and the Dutch Asiatic Empire." C. B. C.

+ Canadian Forum 22:222 O '42 550w

Reviewed by G. L. LaFuze
Current Hist 3:452 Ja '43 500w

"Much of Professor Lennox Mills's book necessarily consists of facts and figures, but they are collated, they speak for themselves, and if they are at times disquieting that is because reality is often disquieting." G. E. H.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 29 '42 350w

"Professor Mills based his work upon a meticulous study of official documents, and a year's tour in the Far East, where his contacts were bound to be with officials and European residents, in the main, so that he writes from their angle. The account of the administrative system is very well done." Freda White

+ New Statesman & Nation 23:213 Mr 28 '42 500w

Reviewed by Sir G. B. Sansom
Pacific Affairs 15:362 S '42 900w

MILLSPAUGH, ARTHUR CHESTER. Democracy, efficiency, stability; an appraisal of American government. (Inst. for gov. research. Studies in administration) 522p $4 Brookings

973 U.S.—Politics and government. Democracy 42-15051

"Mr. Millspaugh here seeks to determine how responsive our government is to popular control; how effectively it functions, particularly in matters relating to national security; and whether or not a smooth evolutionary process of political adjustment has been achieved. The book answers such questions as: Have we been advancing toward or drifting away from democracy? Have our institutions been gaining or losing stability? Can we achieve efficiency while realizing democracy? Do we need post-war political reconstruction?" Management R

"The work evidences prodigious reading, wide familiarity with both contemporary and classical literature, combined with a pragmatic, indigenous feeling for things American. The conclusions reached seem to be, in general, those which might very well emanate from the majority of political science scholars. The general tone is dispassionate, and if there is any motivation at all, it leans toward the liberal and progressive." J. M. Pfiffner

+ Ann Am Acad 223:222 S '42 400w

Management R 31:224 Je '42 80w

"Mr. Millspaugh's book sets up a more meaningful scheme of analysis than most of the standard texts on American government. If it does not quite measure up in execution to conception it is because the latter is too ambitious. The author ranges so widely in the fields of history, political science, economics and sociology that his terms of reference sometimes become blurred and his work loses direction and synthesis. His style is often abstract to the point of obscurity and some of his judgments so cautious as to seem evasive—faults which should, perhaps, be more appropriately charged against his institutional sponsors than against the author himself. Nevertheless, he has brought together in one volume the dynamic political trends of our times and measured them by standards of genuine significance to the United States of 1942." A. W. Griswold

+ Yale Law J 51:1412 Je '42 850w

MILTON, GEORGE FORT. Abraham Lincoln and the fifth column. 364p il $3.50 Vanguard

973.71 U.S.—History—Civil war. Lincoln, Abraham. U.S.—Politics and government—Civil war 42-23235

The author writes of the various groups in the North which opposed Lincoln's policies—the radical Republicans, the loyal Democrats, southern sympathizers, copperheads, the Knights of the Golden Circle, etc. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. E. Danielson
Atlantic 170:166 D '42 240w
Booklist 39:136 D 15 '42

Reviewed by Lloyd Lewis
+ Books p5 O 18 '42 1150w

"Based largely on letter books of the War Department and reports of secret service agents, reported in considerable detail, this book will interest the many students of the Lincoln period and many who will draw analogies to present war." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 67:794 S 15 '42 130w

Reviewed by Margaret Leech
Nation 155:551 N 21 '42 240w

Reviewed by Richard Hofstadter

New Repub 107:517 O 19 '42 550w

"It is difficult to summarize Mr. Milton's story but equally easy to read it. It is brilliantly put together out of meticulously gathered facts." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p5 O 11 '42 1250w

"Absorbing stuff, much of it fresh from the archives. Rather loose writing, however."

+ New Yorker 18:91 O 17 '42 90w

"Mr. Sandburg is interested not in novelty of fact but of treatment, bringing out the commanding personalities, the crucial events, and the representative incidents in a bold and telling way; his style nervous and imaginative, his human sympathy always alert. Many sections of his larger work have been rewritten, while the arrangement and perspective are fresh. But the merit of the book lies in the skill with which he narrates 'the big moments dazzling with decisions at bloody crossroads,' the poetic insight which frequently marks his study of fateful actions, the penetrating interpretation which he occasionally gives to men who helped shape destiny." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 25:3 O 31 '42 1100w

MITCHELL, GEORGE ERIC. Modern sanitary engineering; for the use of architects, surveyors, engineers, medical officers of health, sanitation officers, builders and students. 169p il $5 Chemical pub. co. [12s 6d Newnes]

628 Sanitary engineering 42-8216

"A presentation of current British practice in the drainage and sanitation, ventilating, and heating of buildings from foundation to completion, and water supply. Although of use to municipal surveyors and architects, the entire field of sanitary engineering as usually treated in American books is not covered. Plumbing is discussed at some length as are British by-laws with respect to water supply." Am J Pub Health

Reviewed by A. P. Miller

Am J Pub Health 32:548 My '42 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 27:43 Jl '42

MITCHELL, GLADYS. When last I died. 243p $2 Knopf [8s Joseph, M]

42-9898

Detective story.

Booklist 38:427 Jl 1 '42

Bookmark 4:18 N '42

"'When Last I Died' should go on your list pronto. It's sure-fire entertainment, done to a turn." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 My 17 '42 200w

"Miss Mitchell has on occasion tried her readers a little highly by allowing mystery to become too much like confusion, but this time her narrative is clear, motives are distinct, complications are both bewildering and reasonable, and the tension of the pursuit ends in an exciting climax." E. R. Punshon

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 27 '42 170w

"It is a fascinating tale, even though it does, at times, make difficult reading." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p17 My 10 '42 200w

"Her delving into the past is resourceful and exciting, and a very cool murderess is arrested for a crime already supposedly solved. Substantial and psychologically reasonable."

+ New Yorker 18:76 My 16 '42 60w

"Top grade."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 My 23 '42 40w

Reviewed by John Fairfield

Spec 168:88 Ja 23 '42 90w

Time 39:84 Je 1 '42 60w

"Mrs. Bradley is a far better detective than some who have won world-wide fame."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p5 Ja 3 '42 120w

MITCHELL, KATE LOUISE. India without fable; a 1942 survey. 308p $2.50 Knopf

954 India—Politics and government. Great Britain—Colonies—India. World war, 1939—India (W) 42-21295

"Timely and factual account of India from time of first World War to the present, written in popular style. Deals with India today, with India before first World War, with India and that war, with India between wars, 1922-39, and with India and the second World War. Finishes with biased epilogue, which is a direct appeal to American people to favor India's independence." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 39:30 O 1 '42

Bookmark 4:11 N '42

"Most of the material of 'India Without Fable'—as well as the order of argument—has already appeared in recent, and I must add, better books on the topic of India. And yet what makes Miss Mitchell's book a welcome addition to our knowledge about India is the fact the earlier conclusions of the better type of Indian and English thinkers have now acquired a new dignity by having passed through the acid scrutiny of an impartial American researcher. . . . One would wish a wide circulation for such a book and, therefore, one would also wish the book had not suffered from frequent repetitions, from a lack of writing style, and from the polemic nature of approach which prevents the crystallization of a vivid impression of India. But the reader's wading through will not be in vain; he will learn a lot, and he will know what is more or less the truth about India." Krishnalal Shridharani

+ Books p2 S 20 '42 1000w

"Miss Mitchell's book is a piece of journalism, with the virtues and faults of journalism. A book on India was needed after the Cripps mission put India on the front page of all American newspapers. Miss Mitchell turned out the book. It is as up-to-date as this morning's newspaper. But all of 'India Without Fable' is second hand, as all journalism must be, and, even though it tries to be impersonal, is subject to all the possible prejudices of its sources. Its virtue is that it is full of exquisite sympathy." P. M. Buck, Jr.

+ Geog R 32:700 O '42 400w

"A MUST book for public libraries." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 67:737 S 1 '42 70w

"Much is to be said for a survey of India at this time which reads so easily as this one. In comparatively short space the author covers in the contemporary historical manner India's political and social institutions and problems. Except for the description of Gandhi as a reactionary figure, there is little in this survey with which the Congress Party would disagree. . . . Miss Mitchell's book would have been more valuable if its author had recognized the more 'elemental' facts of India's place in what was once a world economy, if she had seen the reactions of British and Indian leaders against that background, if she had recognized that Indian agrarian life, like that of China, presents tremendous obstacles to industrialization which did not exist in most European countries." G. E. Taylor

+ Nation 155:302 O 3 '42 800w

"Such things as an understandable discussion of India's leaders and parties make 'India without Fable' an invaluable handbook, and with India's present strategic importance and the great confusion that surround her, Miss Mitchell's book should be a godsend."

+ New Repub 107:389 S 28 '42 120w

"An eager and able representative of Americans who think it high time to discover the India that Americans are defending. Her contribution to an impressive symposium is as new wine poured into old bottles. Her enthusiasm and her indignation are effervescent with the vintage of war, the glad confidence of the enrolled crusader. . . . Miss Mitchell has rendered a service by her book. To press logic against her would be ungallant." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p5 O 4 '42 2400w

Reviewed by Eric Beecroft

Pacific Affairs 25:501 D '42 700w

Pratt p13 D '42

"Miss Mitchell has written just what was needed—a most intelligent and able survey of the Indian situation giving every aspect of the present crisis. Her desire to hold the scales even is evident on every page, but she does not withhold her criticisms. Her book is not only admirably arranged, with excellent workmanship, but is well and interestingly written and therefore should have wide recognition." O. G. Villard

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 O 5 '42 1200w

Time 40:103 O 12 '42 650w

MITCHELL, KATE LOUISE. Industrialization of the western Pacific. 322p. map $2.50 Inst. of Pacific relations. Am. council

330.95 East (Far East)—Industries and resources 42-6934

"The stated purpose of Miss Mitchell's study was 'to describe the extent and nature of industrial development in the countries of Eastern Asia and the Southern Pacific,' and this purpose has been most satisfactorily fulfilled. In a compactly written text of less than 300 pages, illustrated by 78 statistical tables, the author sets forth the development, and—so far as the available statistics permit—the present status, of industry in Japan, Formosa and Korea, Manchukuo, China, French Indo-China, Thailand, British Malaya, Burma, Netherlands Indies, the Philippines, Australia, New Zealand, and India." (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

MITCHELL, K. L.—Continued

Am Pol Sci R 36:590 Je '42 490w

Reviewed by E. B. Schumpeter

Ann Am Acad 223:218 S '42 800w

"Miss Mitchell's able marshalling of facts for such a heterogeneous collection of countries is remarkable; so also is her interpretation. Students of world politics will find here interesting guide posts to the further study of imperialistic experiments in the economic laboratories of the Western Pacific." H. D. Fong
+ Pacific Affairs 15:243 Je '42 2150w

MITCHELL, KATE LOUISE. Japan's industrial strength; prepared under the auspices of the International secretariat, Institute of Pacific relations. 149p $1.50 Knopf 338.0952 Japan—Industries and resources.

Japan—Economic conditions 42-3869

Study of the amounts of industrial backing which the Japanese army can expect from Japan itself, Formosa, Korea and Manchukuo. The author, who is associated with the Institute of Pacific relations, bases her figures on the period from 1931 to 1940. She considers not only statistics of materials, but also the powerful interests of the older financial rulers—the Mitsui, Noguchi, and Nissan, and governmental methods of control in production. Index.

Booklist 38:226 Mr 1 '42

Bookmark 3:5 Mr '42

"Useful for understanding Japan's economic capacity for war." Walter Hausdorfer
+ Library J 67:181 F 15 '42 80w

"The book is recommended to those needing an antidote to the newspaper accounts of unending Japanese military successes." M. S. Stewart

+ Nation 154:374 Mr 28 '42 120w

"Miss Mitchell tells this very important story competently and briefly; those who wish a more detailed picture would be well advised to turn to a massive piece of research that attracted less attention than it deserved when it appeared: 'The Industrialization of Japan and Manchukuo, 1930-1940,' by E. B. Schumpeter and associates." W. H. Chamberlin
+ N Y Times p3 F 22 '42 260w

"A valuable summary."

+ New Yorker 18:70 F 21 '42 30w

"Well done and rather monumental task." Linton Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 25:19 Mr 14 '42 190w

"There is some excellent material on the intervention of the government in industrial matters and its effect on production, on the conflict between private enterprise and the all-powerful army, and on the economic exploitation of conquered areas, especially Manchukuo. This book, which was prepared under the auspices of the Institute of Pacific Relations, is an altogether impressive thumbnail sketch of Japan's industrial front and, by implication, of her ability to last through a long war." E. O. Hauser

+ Survey G 31:256 My '42 130w

MITCHELL, MRS MINNIE BELLE (ALEXANDER). Hoosier boy, James Whitcomb Riley; il. by Syd Browne. 179p $1.50 Bobbs
B or 92 Riley, James Whitcomb—Juvenile literature 42-21963

Simply told story of the boyhood of James Whitcomb Riley in Greenfield, Indiana.

Cath World 156:380 D '42 100w

"Print is good, vocabulary simple, style direct, and the material interestingly presented. . . Recommended." J. E. Stromdahl

+ Library J 67:1014 N 15 '42 70w

MITCHELL, SUSANNA VALENTINE (MRS WILLIAM GAMMELL, Jr). No second spring. 344p $2.50 Harper

(W) 42-9122

Portrait of a brilliant but erratic family, the Dudleys. John Dudley, the father, is kindly, but weak; Helena, his wife, is a beautiful neurotic who rules the whole family by dint of possessiveness and scenes; Philip, more stable than the rest, is killed in the European war; and Jane is married while still in her teens. Cyntra, the musician of the family, always at loggerheads with Helena, is the central character. Her career as dispensary nurse, secretary in wartime Washington, and as accompanist to a famous violinist, and her love affairs and marriage form the main theme of the book.

"There is so much that is good in Susanna Valentine Mitchell's first novel, 'No Second Spring,' that one regrets that the book as a whole is not better. Her writing is smooth and imaginative, her characterizations of a family torn, and, at the same time, held together by temperament, highly interesting, but her story breaks down when she enters the world of artists. While she can portray a woman of good family bent on destruction of the people she loves, she blurs her portrait badly when she uses her brushes to paint the portrait of an ambitious musician. The first glows with the spark of life; the second dies with grotesque distortion." Rose Feld
+ — Books p12 Ap 5 '42 600w

"Well told." Catherine Van Dyne

+ Library J 67:182 F 15 '42 80w

"Rather brittle first novel. . . Somehow, the further Miss Mitchell takes the Dudleys from their native habitat, New York, the more unbelievable they tend to become. When, however, they are quarreling and arguing in their own fantastic home; submitting to the bullying of their ancient colored servants; or discussing, in family council, their most intimate affairs, they take on a new reality. In their comic moments they are more plausible than in their tragic and romantic ones—of which unfortunately there are all too many. . . Though it is clever and polished, has a certain smooth sophistication, 'No Second Spring' strikes me as a mannered, self-conscious and overwritten book which tries too hard to do too little." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p23 Ap 5 '42 850w

MITCHELL, WESLEY CLAIR, and others. Studies in economics and industrial relations. See Pennsylvania. University. Bicentennial conference

MIZWA, STEPHEN PAUL, ed. Great men and women of Poland. 397p il $4 Macmillan 920 Poland—Biography [41-26856]

Short biographies of thirty famous Polish men and women of contemporary and past times. Partial contents: Queen Jadwiga; Nicolas Copernicus; Jan Sobieski; Tadeusz Kosciuszko; Fryderyk Chopin; Helena Modjeska; Henryk Sienkiewicz; Joseph Conrad; Ignace Jan Paderewski; Marie Sklodowska Curie; Józef Pilsudski.

Booklist 38:208 F 15 '42

"This 'Polish Plutarch' is designed, like the ancient Plutarch, to instill in the new generation an admiration for heroic virtue, and is intended for the average intelligent reader, not for the scholar or the research student. There is something pathetic and at the same time inspiring about this work." Francis McCullagh

+ Cath World 154:760 Mr '42 500w

Christian Century 59:22 Ja 7 '42 80w

New Repub 106:213 F 9 '42 50w

Reviewed by Joseph Wittlin

Sat R of Lit 25:16 Ja 24 '42 750w

Social Studies 33:144 Mr '42 20w

"Each sketch is accompanied by a portrait of the subject which gives this 'Polish Hall of Fame' added value, while the freedom from an encyclopedic tone insures interesting reading without detracting from the reference value of the work."

+ Springfield Republican p8 F 19 '42 900w

MOCK, JAMES ROBERT. Censorship 1917. 250p $2.50 Princeton Univ. press

323.44 Censorship. European war, 1914-1918
—Censorship 41-23428

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"The volume tells an interesting story—one that every student of collective behavior will find helpful. The account, viewed just as a historical account, is frequently sketchy, anecdotal, incomplete, and occasionally somewhat impressionistic. Moreover, judged in terms of its usefulness to theory, the work would have been improved had the author cast his data into a different organizational framework. . . . But, as it stands, the work represents a needed addition to our body of known facts. And it does lend substantial support to one generalization of great significance—namely, that censorship in war carries a threat of lasting harm in the realm of personal liberty, for the attitudes and techniques tend to carry over into the era of peace, where they operate to stifle political, economic, and social reform and to prevent essential reconstruction." C. W. Hart

+ Am J Soc 48:429 N '42 650w

"It is a safe bet that Byron Price has a well-thumbed copy of Dr. Mock's book on his bedside table. It is even a better guess that college professors called suddenly to lecture on war-time public opinion, are even now scribbling notes from its pages; and if they have not already done so, Army and Navy public relations men should on the lessons spread out before them in Censorship 1917. This is by way of saying that the first thoroughly comprehensive picture of American censorship in World War I has appeared in print at a time when it could best serve a public purpose." R. D. Casey

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:356 Ap '42 550w

Reviewed by Eileen Holding

New Repub 106:212 F 9 '42 900w

"Mr. Mock should be read by private citizens with an eye, not to what happened in 1917, but to what may happen when the present war is over. Examined in that light, it may not inspire much optimism, but it should stiffen the resolution of every man who believes in liberty firmly to oppose any repetition of post-Armistice happenings." G. W. Johnson

Pol Sci Q 57:155 Mr '42 390w

Reviewed by E. L. Bernays

Sat R of Lit 25:4 Mr 7 '42 1700w

MODERN concise encyclopedia, a library of world knowledge; ed. by A. H. McDannald. 15v il maps ea 70c 1941 c1933, 1937, 1940 Unicorn press

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries

"This is a revised edition of the eight volume Concise Encyclopedia published by William H. Wise & co. in 1937 [Book Review Digest, 1937]. This edition follows very closely the earlier Concise Encyclopedia. It is the same size (21¼ cm.) and the subject matter covers the same space, 2516 pages. The earlier encyclopedia contained all its information in eight volumes, while the same number of pages is now stretched into twelve volumes; the other three volumes of the present encyclopedia consist of a two-volume chronology and one-volume index. The appendix in volume 12 contains population figures for states and towns of 2500 or more inhabitants, unfortunately from the fifteenth census, 1930. It also includes postal information, comparison of time in principal cities of the world, states' nicknames, names of presidents and vice-presidents of the United States, names of popes in chronological order." Subscription Bks Bul

"The type is legible and clear, the illustrations are adequate for a concise encyclopedia, but the lettering on maps is very difficult to read. The price of Modern Concise Encyclopedia is considerably higher than that of Concise Encyclopedia on which it is based. The amount of revision, additions and physical expansion fail to justify the price increase. As was the case with previous editions, this would not add to the information on hand in libraries or homes having more extensive encyclopedias. Modern Concise Encyclopedia is not recommended."

— + Subscription Bks Bul 13:6 Ja '42 500w

MOENNICH, MARTHA L. Pioneering for Christ in Xingu jungles; adventure in the heart of South America. 196p $1.50 Zondervan 918.1 Missions—Brazil. Indians of South America. Matto Grosso, Brazil (state) 42-16351

"The Xingu jungles are in one of the remotest and most inaccessible corners of Brazil, and its inhabitants are said to be among the most primitive of all South American Indians. 'Pioneering' is right." Christian Century

Christian Century 59:1006 Ag 19 '42 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p380 Ag 1 '42 850w

MOFFATT, JAMES, tr. See Bible. Whole. Shorter Moffatt Bible

MOLLOY, ANNE G. Coast guard to Greenland; il. by John L. Delano. 123p $2 Houghton

(W) 42-6007

The story of ten-year-old Greg who feared the sea, but learned to conquer his feeling on a trip to Greenland on the coast guard cutter Polarland, of which his father was captain.

Booklist 38:279 Ap 1 '42

"There are large, sketchy pictures in ice-blue, adding to the sense of reality; Greenland is brought home to ten-year-olds in all the details of daily life." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Mr 22 '42 290w

Boston Globe p17 Je 10 '42 20w

"A thrilling story that gives interesting pictures of Greenland, its icebergs, its people and their ways of living." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 31 '42 160w

"The story is a good one for the younger boys who like ships and sea adventure and have heard about the importance of Greenland in war time. The excellent pictures, printed in blue, give reality to the scene." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:177 My '42 100w

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus

Library J 67:321 Ap 1 '42 90w

"An invigorating tale of the growth of courage in a reluctant small hero, this will also interest the young for its details of life in the Coast Guard Service and for its account of a little-known country which is now very much in the public eye." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Je 28 '42 280w

"Almost any boy of eight to eleven ought to like this agreeably told story of ten-year-old Greg. . . . No war, no wild adventures, but plenty of interesting events and background, plus a convincingly drawn boy. Good pictures in blue crayon."

+ New Yorker 18:74 My 23 '42 80w

MOLNAR, FERENC. Blue-eyed lady; il. in color by Helen Sewell. 46p $2 Viking 42-50585

Story of two little New York orphans, and the beautiful blue-eyed window model who looked so much like their own mother. When they are lifted up into the window the unexpected happens.

MOLNAR, FERENC—Continued

"Whoever reads this Christmas story will think of it whenever Christmas shop-windows show him wax figures. It has the authentic thrill. Frankly romantic—I use that word because there is a curse on the word sentimental—it makes that unabashed attack upon the emotions to which we rightly look forward at Christmas. . . . It is one of those things so beautiful it doesn't need to be true. Any child's will-to-believe will make it true. I am glad to say, Helen Sewell's pictures are in full color, lovable and kind, the remoteness of the mannequins and the lively concern of the angels in human affairs being especially good." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 D 20 '42 430w

"Perhaps I am unduly sentimental, but this finely wrought story . . . appeals to me very deeply. Those who think children should know nothing of death had best avoid it." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 37:116 N 20 '42 50w

"In Ferenc Molnar's Blue-Eyed Lady we have an old-fashioned, sentimental story translated from the French, but it has a quaint charm and is full of tenderness." R. A. Hill

+ Library J 67:887 O 15 '42 60w

"The Blue-Eyed Lady" will take its place among the distinguished Christmas stories; in addition, this tale of a little miracle brought to pass by love and faith will find a place in the imaginative child's affection through all the year." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 3 '43 400w

MOLYNEUX, MAX. Peace now and forever; an introduction to homo-dynamics, the science of man in action. 162p $1.50 Silver-Tonsberg press, Superior, Wis.

172.4 Peace

42-17403

"The author, who teaches English in the Teachers College at Superior, Wis., thinks he is a heretic (in view of modern theorists) because he believes that man has a soul. In this book he inquires into the dynamic of human action. He finds that action leading toward peace requires the power of God, faith in Christ, and belief that man's life is from God. The geometrical progression by which he shows how the world could be won to Christ in less than two years—each Christian to win ten every ten weeks, new converts and their converts to do the same—goes even beyond the 'evangelization of the world in this generation' slogan and parallels the chain letter magic." Christian Century

"Despite the not too attractive get-up of this little book which at first glance looks like the work of a crack-pot, and despite its title which suggests Father Divine, or some such, it improves in parts on patient reading; Dr. Molyneux has something to say and for the most part says it fearlessly, if with little logic. . . . I fear the book will not go far, and can only hope that the author might try to set down what he has to say more simply, briefly and logically." J. F. Davidson

+ Canadian Forum 22:187 S '42 360w

Christian Century 59:862 J1 8 '42 100w

MOMENT, JOHN JAMES. We believe. 134p $1.25 Macmillan

238 Creeds

42-21859

"Discussion of 'our heritage of Christian faith and creed', with large use of the works of the church fathers as shedding light on the doctrinal controversies of the early centuries. The intention is to show the reasonableness of the affirmations embodied in the historic creeds." Christian Century

Christian Century 59:1090 S 9 '42 50w

"Dr. Moment is to be congratulated upon the way he has handled thorny themes. His book should make for humility of heart and tolerance of mind, and his scholarship serves to make increasingly clear the words of Brunner: 'By God alone can God be known.'" W. P. Lemon

+ Christian Century 59:1357 N 4 '42 500w

"Dr. Moment is never misleading; but there are some spots in this book which are rather heavy-going for the uninitiated. That said, this is an exposition of the Christian Faith and Creed that will reward the patient reader." F. J. M.

+ Churchman 156:19 D 15 '42 80w

MONRO, MARGARET THEODORA. Seeking for trouble; saints for Christian civilization. 216p pa $1.75 (pa 5s) Longmans

922 Saints

Sketches of the lives and ideals of a number of Christian saints: Agnes, Syncletica, Ignatius of Antioch, Polycarp, Antony the Hermit, Simeon Stylites, Benedict of Nursia, Thomas Aquinas.

Cath World 155:507 J1 '42 230w

"The British author believes that the ascetics 'show us how to handle our troubles constructively.' Had she culled and arranged all of her startlingly sane statements on asceticism, she would have made out a more convincing case; but her brilliant aphorisms fall pall-mall through chapters that are obvious attempts to write in a manner that will take with the man in the street, a manner evidently foreign to her. Her very title, 'Seeking for Trouble,' is too frivolous for the volume's contents." D. H. Moseley

+ Commonweal 36:234 Je 26 '42 450w

"A thoughtful and pleasingly written little book which, in the author's own words, is 'an amateur effort to bring the Saints within the range of twentieth-century people,' mediating between Christian scholarship and those who have lost touch with definite religious belief." + Times [London] Lit Sup p23 Ja 10 '42 40w

MONSELL, HELEN ALBEE. Paddy's Christmas; il. by Kurt Wiese. [48p] $1 Knopf

42-18463

Picture-story book about a jolly, persistent little bear who wanted to find the answer to the question, "What is Christmas?" Time and time again he woke his sleepy family to ask that question, and finally his mother found out what was lacking and Paddy's Christmas was complete.

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 D 14 '42 140w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:887 O 15 '42 40w

"A gay friendly little tale, with Kurt Wiese's inimitable drawings." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p7 D 20 '42 260w

MONSELL, HELEN ALBEE. Young Stonewall, Tom Jackson; il. by Charles John. 177p $1.50 Bobbs

B or 92 Jackson, Thomas Jonathan—Juvenile literature

42-21758

Stories of the boyhood and youth of Stonewall Jackson, ending with his entrance into West Point. For grades four and five.

Cath World 156:380 D '42 50w

"Pleasant reading for fourth and fifth grade boys and girls." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 67:911 O 15 '42 40w

MONTAGU, MONTAGUE FRANCIS ASHLEY. See Ashley-Montagu, M. F.

MONTGOMERY, MRS ELIZABETH RIDER. Bonnie's baby brother and how he grew; phot. by Ralph W. Berry; foreword by Clara Savage Littledale. 95p $2 Stokes

136.7 Infants—Care and hygiene—Juvenile literature. Photography of children 42-19000

Photographs and simple text describe the progress of a baby from the day he came home from the hospital until he was a year old. The book also shows how an older child may help in the care of an infant.

"Slightly more attention and emphasis than may be warranted is given to the older child's responsibility for helping with the baby's care. One gains the impression that the mother may be fearful that her daughter may not love the baby and so compensates by overdoing the matter of preparing the older child. In other respects the text is beautifully presented." G. S. Fraenkenberger

+ Am J Pub Health 33:88 Ja '43 360w

"Primary purpose of book is to help keep the older child from being jealous of attention the baby necessarily receives. Excellent for parents' use with children." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 67:847 O 1 '42 70w

School & Society 56:136 Ag 15 '42 70w

MONTGOMERY, RUTHERFORD GEORGE.
Ghost town adventure; with il. by Russell Sherman. 252p $2 Holt

42-4727

The ghost town was a deserted village in the Colorado mountains. When the three young Deans and their father coasted into the town in their old car and found no one but the mayor on hand and no way to fix the car, they decided to stay, at least until Professor Dean regained his health. That was the beginning of a new life for the Deans, old and young. For junior and senior high school.

"A wholesome outdoor family story of outdoor work and plenty of animals theoretically wild but on good terms with visitors." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 My 3 '42 330w

"A fresh, convincing story, told with a sense of humor and with a kindly, natural atmosphere. The Deans are a likable lot and the family relationships have a fine suggestion of friendliness and understanding." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 Ag 2 '42 550w

Wis Lib Bul 38:100 Je '42

MOODY, JOHN. Fast by the road. 308p $2.50
Macmillan

B or 92 Roman Catholic church—Converts
42-6190

A sequel to The Long Road Home (Book Review Digest, 1933) which told of the author's conversion to the Catholic faith. "Throughout the chapters of this book an attempt has been made to explain in simple language or by illustration, certain teachings and viewpoints to be found within the Church which are often misunderstood or misinterpreted by non-Catholics. All this is merely incidental to the general purpose, which is primarily to tell of some of the experiences of one convert during his first decade as a Catholic." (Foreword) Index.

"Prejudiced, ignorant and illogical non-Catholics will be helped greatly by the author's simple, kindly and clear-cut explanations of Catholic doctrine and practice." In the words of Father Gillis's Preface, "Mr. Moody 'has given us theology with chuckles.'" B. L. Conway

+ Cath World 155:370 Je '42 380w

Christian Century 59:355 Mr 18 '42 70w

"Catholics can learn from Mr. Moody a greater appreciation of the treasures that are theirs and a better understanding of how the Church appears to multitudes of men of good will who wander in perplexity outside the true fold. They can also learn how to persevere in the best of causes and how to be worthy and effective witnesses to the faith." F. D. Cohanlan

+ Commonweal 36:19 Ap 24 '42 380w

MOODY, MILDRED OLIVIA (MRS FRANK EAKIN), and EAKIN, FRANK. Your child's religion. 169p $1.75 Macmillan

268 Religious education 42-22602

Study of the child's religion, from the standpoint of the responsibility of the home. Partial contents: God; Prayer; Jesus; Death; The Bible; The church school; The church; The home; The community; Other religions and races and nations; The underprivileged; Reading suggestions. Index.

Booklist 39:217 F 1 '43

Christian Century 59:1359 N 4 '42 70w

"This book is frank, it is comprehensive in the ground it covers, and it never departs from a sane view of religion. . . [It] would help many a clergyman to understand some of the reasons for lack of interest among young and old in the church." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 156:14 N 15 '42 180w

Reviewed by Florence Justin

J Home Econ 35:113 F '43 130w

"This book has been written primarily for parents but contains a wholesome religious philosophy for all workers with children. . . All suggestions for helping children make better adjustments are given in a kindly, sympathetic way which either liberal or conservative parents should appreciate." E. J. Chave

+ J Religion 23:73 Ja '43 180w

"The authors have tackled a difficult job in a conscientious manner. The result is a valuable volume which can be read profitably by many provided that it is not the only book on the subject which is used." C. D. Kean

Spring'd Republican p7e D 13 '42 500w

MOON, GRACE (PURDIE) (MRS CARL MOON). Daughter of Thunder; il. by Carl Moon. 184p $2 Macmillan

42-21562

The story of a brave little Indian girl of the Navaho tribe, whose courage saved her people from a great wrong. For children ten to twelve.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 D 27 '42 380w

"Will be just as popular as others by this author, similar in style and subject. Same distinct atmosphere of life and fine characteristics of Navaho and Pueblo Indians of today and same rather sensational story." Sonja Wennerblad

Library J 67:911 O 15 '42 90w

MOORE, CLEMENT CLARKE. Night before Christmas [il. by Everett Shinn]. [25p] $1.25
Winston

811 Christmas poetry (W) 42-22824

Newly illustrated edition of a favorite Christmas poem.

Booklist 39:109 N 15 '42

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 D 14 '42
30w

"Attractive new edition of nursery classic takes its place beside many competitors. Everett Shinn, well-known illustrator, has been lavish with his pictures. . . Recommended wherever another edition is desired." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 67:1069 D 1 '42 70w

MOORE, DOUGLAS STUART. From madrigal to modern music; a guide to musical styles. 354p $3.75 Norton

781.5 Style, Musical. Musical form. Music—History and criticism (W) 42-6888

"Mr. Moore's book is addressed to the musical amateur who desires assistance in listening to a wide range of music and is willing to think about what he reads and hears. The book promises about the same liberal benefits, whether the reader is making himself ready for the classroom, or is traveling the musical road in his own self-propelled vehicle. . . [It] is planned so as to present each of five epochs from the fifteenth century to the present in a swift summary, the intent of which is to bring the period to life as vividly as possible. . . The grouping of the musical works of the given period is by types or species,

MOORE, D. S.—Continued
such as symphony, opera, and the like." Sat
R of Lit

Booklist 38:305 Ap 15 '42

Bookmark 3:9 My '42

"The book is potentially of great value, but only if the student is willing to do the listening. The text is far too brief to serve a useful purpose by itself, but we shouldn't try to use it alone. . . Douglas Moore's book is an admirable work, and properly used it will be helpful. I express here my wish that having disclaimed any attempt to write a history of music, he had freed himself entirely from the historical approach. I like students to escape if possible the impression that a book is the work not of a living man but of an older book, that music is created not by composers but by human beings acting as secretary to older music." John Erskine

+ Books p20 Ap 5 '42 1000w

"Professor Moore's writing is direct and energetic, tinged occasionally with an agreeable raciness. With this effective style as an instrument, he has filled his book with a remarkable amount of accurate and useful information, presented both economically and arrestingly. He has in fact conducted one of those skillful gathering expeditions, which bring to the general reader a planned array of essentials such as he could never find and arrange for himself. The treatment of the materials is clear and concise. It is sufficiently technical to be sound, but it is never forbiddingly technical." G. S. Dickinson

+ Sat R of Lit 25:30 Ap 11 '42 700w

MOORE, FREDERICK. With Japan's leaders; an intimate record of fourteen years as counsellor to the Japanese government, ending December 7, 1941. 365p $2.75 Scribner

327.52 Japan—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S.
—Foreign relations—Japan 42-17502

"Of great interest to all who are following current events. Mr. Moore, an American, was for many years special adviser to Japanese Foreign Office and to Japanese Embassy in Washington but severed his connections on December 7, 1941. The story of Japanese-American relations for last two decades, therefore, is told chronologically by one with intimate knowledge of men, events, and documents." (Library J) A final chapter is entitled What Will Be the Outcome? Index.

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Atlantic 170:148 O '42 200w

Booklist 39:43 O 15 '42

"A great effort is made to bring the reader into sympathy with Admiral Nomura; presumably to show why Frederick Moore, who was entirely out of sympathy with Japan's program on the Asiatic mainland . . . was bound by his own sympathies to hang on to the end. With me the effort fails. I was more out of patience with Admiral Nomura than in sympathy with him at the end. This does not mean that the whole book is tiresome by any means. Most of it is good reading, and Mr. Moore has opinions on Japan that are worth having on record." Rodney Gilbert

+ Books p4 Jl 19 '42 1600w

Reviewed by Francis McCullagh
Cath World 155:624 Ag '42 800w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson
Christian Century 59:958 Ag 5 '42 600w
Current Hist 3:256 N '42 1000w

Reviewed by F. L. D. Goodrich
Library J 67:628 Jl '42 100w

Reviewed by Joseph Newman
— Nation 155:116 Ag 8 '42 1000w

"The book is sprinkled with anecdotes. . . It is a little padded with unessential details, but it is a valuable contribution to the growing literature on the Great Pacific War." W. H. Chamberlin

+ — N Y Times p9 Jl 12 '42 1000w

"Interesting material, but the writing is rather old-school and you may find some of Mr. Moore's conclusions hard to take."

+ — New Yorker 18:59 Jl 18 '42 120w

"Mr. Moore by giving an informed and intimate story of American-Japanese relations, especially as viewed from the Japanese Embassy in Washington, has provided us with a vivid picture of the inexorable march of events in favor of those forces we must now destroy. The book is valuable for that reason. For those who wish to understand the political attitude which was in such large measure responsible for allowing the catastrophe of fascism to occur, an attitude which is best described by the much-used term appeasement, Mr. Moore's volume deserves close study." F. V. Field

+ Pacific Affairs 25:496 D '42 500w

"Moore's book lacks penetration. But it adds a useful eyewitness footnote to the yet unwritten story of the days which preceded Japan's attack on the Democracies. For this alone, it will beyond doubt be quoted for years to come. Appended to the book are the texts of the final notes exchanged by the two governments." Mark Gayn

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 S 5 '42 800w

Time 40:77 Ag 17 '42 1500w

Wis Lib Bul 38:133 O '42

MOORE, H. F. S. Murder goes rolling along.
273p $2 Doubleday
Detective story.

"This offering is smooth and professional for a first mystery, or even for a second. Its army background is authentic, for Miss Moore was brought up in it and knows whereof she speaks. . . This stands out pleasantly among December's slimmish mystery pickings." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 D 20 '42 220w

"Too much love interest mars what might have been a much better story." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p20 D 13 '42 160w

"Emotional tangles of officers and wives thoroughly ventilated. Army 'atmosphere' veracious, sleuthing adequate. Competent."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:21 D 12 '42 30w

MOORE, MRS ISABEL. Other woman. 306p
$2 Farrar

42-9307

At thirty-eight Lorna Benson was suddenly faced with the fact that her marriage—so comfortable and outwardly satisfactory—was in imminent danger from another woman. Lorna went to Reno but was called back before her time was up, to straighten out the tangled affairs of her children. Unsuccessful with them she nevertheless got a second chance for her own happiness.

Booklist 38:347 My 15 '42

"Can a straying husband be recaptured? Isabel Moore's answer to that question is perhaps more romantic than realistic, but the procedure in any case is an entertaining first novel." Lisle Bell

Books p16 My 3 '42 250w

"There is nothing especially penetrating or brilliant in the writing of this book . . . but it is above the average of its kind. The ending is happy and not at all far-fetched." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p18 My 3 '42 240w

MOORE, VIRGINIA. Virginia is a state of mind. 332p $3 Dutton 917.55 Virginia (W) 42-22360

An interpretative history of the state of Virginia which attempts to discover the basis for the charm which is Virginia. The author studies the architecture, the great men, the literature from John Smith to Ellen Glasgow, Virginia cooking, and her history to date, and has included many brief biographical sketches and anecdotes of Virginians of the past. Index.

"To a non-Virginian, this spirited book is delightful reading. It seems fair, is amusing and packed with curious and interesting lore, and contrives, while celebrating Virginia, to show in new lights and sidelights a good bit of the past which all the United States claims as its heritage." Mary Ross

+ Books p6 N 22 '42 1150w

"This book is a tour de force, a compendium of all that has gone into the making of Virginia; it is thoughtful and wise and yet exuberant, rich in classical allusion, redolent of a countryside where Jefferson's Scotch broom bushes spread their golden bloom before the apple trees break into pink and white flower; it is replete with vivid anecdote, especially of Jefferson, his family and contemporaries. . . Perhaps the approach to history is insufficiently critical; certainly nothing of the charm of the chronicle would have been lost had it been differently arranged and condensed; but it is a full and leisurely book, one to dally with and to savor." D. H. Moseley

+ Commonweal 39:51 O 30 '42 280w

"Author writes lovingly of her State, is eminently fair and discriminating in her opinions, and readers who appreciate the leisurely approach to history will enjoy this. Recommended." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 67:844 O 1 '42 110w

New Repub 107:553 O 26 '42 90w

"Mrs. Moore has done a deal of reading over a wide range of authors, including the old masters and the new. . . To standard anecdote and inquisitive quotation she has added hand-picked folklore and first-hand gossip. . . You do not have to accept always her version of the facts or agree with her findings in this field—or any other into which she ventures unafraid. But you will not often be bored—unless you are just naturally allergic to Virginians and the state of mind which is Virginia." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p8 O 18 '42 1050w

Reviewed by Virginus Dabney

Sat R of Lit 26:18 Ja 23 '43 1500w

"A book one will delight to pick up and read at random—but only after reading it through once without pause. The book is personal, the method of interpretation new, the style individual. The author warns in her preface that she intends to conduct her search in the spirit of liberty, tacking in and out among the queer craft of anecdote, forgotten sources and her own recollections, and so she does. The result is fascinating." L. B. Hill

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 3 '43 1100w

MOORE, WARD. Breathe the air again. 445p $2.75 Harper

42-3174

A picaresque novel of the nineteen twenties in which the central character is Simon Epstein. "The world of Simon Epstein is made of all the elements we know so well, America between Coolidge and Depression. Looking for a job, losing it, finding another, the factory, the strike: these are the known. But add to them the fresh catalytic element of a central personality with the vigor of life in him, and they seem now to rearrange themselves and to stir with immediacy." (Sat R of Lit)

"'Breathe the Air Again' is a slice-of-life as jagged as a chunk of bread hacked from a loaf. Amazingly uneven, it begins like the work of an undergraduate who has just read Joyce and Dos Passos, and yet ends like a narrative by one who knows how to write and has something to say. The progress from ineptitude to effectiveness promises well for the author's next novel but it calls for patience in the opening sections of the present one. It is a patience, however, that will be rewarded, because Mr. Moore manages, despite his lack of discipline, to pack a wealth of honest observation, realistic detail and sharp characterization into his long book." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p8 F 8 '42 600w

"A rambling narrative with a background of labor conflict in an era of prosperity in which the theme is involved; a style emphatic only for its scatological and salacious commonplaces; representation of little consistently convincing verisimilitude and no artistry, and people, in the story-telling sense, of little consequence. I miss both the gift of satire and touch of authority. The form and way of the tale, however, are as proper to the picaresque as the point of view—that of historical American democratic socialism and labor struggle—is defensible." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p26 F 15 '42 800w

"Simon is not a big character, not very imaginative or ambitious or articulate, no Gant. But he is none the less a unique and matchless atom of his society, partaking of its restlessness, cutting his swathe. His hungers are sharp and urge him forward, half way across the country, in search of a world to live in. . . The book rests upon Simon for its reality, upon what happens to him and inside of him. We shall look, in a next book, for an expansion of focus." N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 25:7 F 23 '42 360w

MOOREHEAD, ALAN. Mediterranean front. (Whittlesey house publication) 306p maps $2.75 McGraw [10s 6d Hamilton, HI]

940.542 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English. World war, 1939—Mediterranean sea 42-7467

History of events in the Mediterranean region from June 1940, to June 1941, written by a British war correspondent who wrote mostly from the scene of action. He covers Ethiopia, the first two Libyan campaigns, Greece, and Crete. Maps on end papers. Index.

"Mr. Moorehead would be the first to disclaim heroism on his part, but certainly his coverage of the British campaigns in Africa and the Middle East involved the hardships of desert and jungle, dangers by sea and land, and the constant preoccupations of the conscientious journalist. In spite of everything, he tells his story clearly and well. Thanks to air transport, he was able to cover the campaigns in North Africa and in Abyssinia as well as those in Greece and Crete. And his is the best description which I have read of those fluctuating battles and of the men who fought them." R. E. Danielson

+ Atlantic My '42 150w

Booklist 38:307 Ap 15 '42

"In spite of their chemically induced courage, Moorehead considers [the Germans] 'honest fighters' and doubts that any of them wore British uniforms. Here, I think, he errs, for some of us who were unfortunate enough to be in Athens after the occupation observed many German troops disembarking for Crete disguised as Australians and New Zealanders. But these and a few other minor errors and debatable opinions only slightly mar an otherwise excellent and absorbing book. 'Mediterranean Front,' I think, is easily the best example of military reporting yet to come out of the war." Leigh White

+ — Books p3 Mr 15 '42 1650w

Boston Globe p17 Ap 8 '42 230w

Christian Science Monitor p20 Ap 14 '42 400w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:777 Jl '42 40w

"Mr. Moorehead's story . . . is a fine piece of journalism. His quick eyes can size up a military weakness—we had only six light tanks in Crete, but they do not miss the ridiculous, as when the light failed at the signing of the Syrian capitulation, or the bizarre, as in the extreme luxury of the Italian Army stricken in Libya—each man had his own coffee-percolator in the desert." A. W. J.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 23 '42 200w

Reviewed by Peter Stevens

Nation 154:578 My 16 '42 700w

New Repub 106:582 Ap 27 '42 60w

"Sensitive and often exceptional writing."

+ New Yorker 18:71 Mr 21 '42 40w

Pratt p23 O '42

Reviewed by Linton Wells

Sat R of Lit 25:20 Ap 4 '42 450w

"In these days when the pattern is so much more highly regarded than the patterned this book is sure of a wide reading and for the nonce it is thoroughly justified. It never loses its interest, and yet, in dealing with a difficult and delicate phase of the war, it maintains an unusual measure and balance."

MOOREHEAD, ALAN—Continued

+ Spec 168:90 Ja 23 '42 250w

"The loose ends are all tidily tucked away; the comment on the broad strategy of the operations is apt and probably well-schooled. Mr. Moorehead, in short, has made a fine craftsman's job of it. His English is direct and clear, but hardly so correct that he is able, without sounding naive, to criticize General Wavell's writings on Allenby and on generalship on the score of their pedestrian style and lack of humour and 'sparkle.'"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p639 D 20 '41 1550w

MORAN, CHARLES. Sea of memories; the story of Mediterranean strife, past and present. 320p il maps $3.50 Scribner

940 Mediterranean sea 42-5299

Popularly written history of the Mediterranean and the lands bordering upon it, from the siege of Syracuse to the present. The author is an American, a retired naval officer. Maps on end papers. Index.

"As fascinating and illuminating a sketch of the Mediterranean as one could wish... Charles Moran is completely at home in his chosen subject. He can be scholarly. He can also present drama and romance with a solid background of fact. Sprinkled throughout are insight, penetration, learning, and delicious humor. A most entertaining book." P. J. Searles

+ Books p15 F 22 '42 550w

Reviewed by H. W. Harris
Boston Globe p17 Ap 8 '42 90w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:774 J1 '42 20w

"This book is intended to give the author a good time. It is rather like a stamp collection that is good fun as a symbol of human events... The stirring excitements that streamline these pages are on record. But however entertaining may be accidents on a railroad, there is also the traffic that goes on meanwhile—the argosies that, despite the Saracens, enrich the rialsos. In the end, the traffic will win." P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p25 Mr 8 '42 1000w

"This isn't a book to read in order to talk learnedly about grand strategy and the merits of torpedo planes. It is a book with which to escape on little sight-seeing tours of the past with a genial and unobtrusive guide." Garrett Mattingly

+ Sat R of Lit 25:10 Mr 14 '42 230w

Wis Lib Bul 38:67 Ap '42

MOREHOUSE, CLIFFORD PHELPS. Wartime pilgrimage; an American churchman's view of Britain in 1942; with introd. by James DeWolf Perry. 237p il $2 Morehouse

942.084 World war, 1939—Great Britain 42-50284

The editor of The Living Church was a member of the American delegation to the enthronement of Dr Temple as archbishop of Canterbury in April 1942. This narrative of Dr Morehouse's two months in England gives a picture of wartime England and its people, as he saw them. Illustrated with photographs, some showing war damage to cathedrals and smaller churches.

"His report is good journalism fortified by excellent photographic illustrations. It is one of the best factual accounts of conditions as a competent foreign observer sees them, with considerable detail concerning the author's and the delegation's experiences."

+ Christian Century 59:1625 D 30 '42 70w

"Mr. Morehouse has given the public a charming bit of writing, in simple, straightforward style—lit [up] with insights and interviews and touches of humor at once engaging and rewarding. The writer's interviews with distinguished churchmen and statesmen and publicists are graphic and concise and the whole story of his wartime pilgrimage to England makes fascinating reading." T. F. Opie

+ Churchman 157:16 Ja 1 '43 180w

MOREHOUSE, WARD. American reveille; the United States at war. 263p $2.50 Putnam

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel 42-18807

An account of America at war, written by a roving-reporter who drove over practically the whole of the country, observing, and putting on paper as much of his observations as were allowed. Map on end papers. Index.

"Whatever his shortcomings as a philosopher, Mr. Morehouse has that priceless reportorial quality—enormous zest. Even when what he reports is trivial, he reports it with the same wide-eyed freshness which he had when he first barged in on New York journalism more than twenty years ago... There is some excellent stuff here. The best parts of it have little to do with America at war... This is little more than a book of notes, but it is a good notebook. It is worth reading." Stanley Walker

+ — Books p15 Ag 16 '42 400w

"Parts of this spirited travel book sound as though Mr. Morehouse had been going around the United States too often and too fast, with the result that the United States is now going round in his head... When Mr. Morehouse thinks of it all he sounds like a catalogue. And essentially this is what he has written... Mr. Morehouse got around, but to this reviewer it seems that he did not see a country that had really waked up to what may be the most terrible war in its history. Much that he saw had the aspects of a boom." R. L. Duffus

+ — N Y Times p5 Ag 2 '42 1300w

"Superficial, if you like, and more or less diluted by the fact that the author seems to admire everybody, from Tom Girdler to a red-headed girl driving a truck in South Carolina."

New Yorker 18:55 Ag 1 '42 90w

MOREY, CHARLES RUFUS. Early Christian art. 282p il $7.50 Princeton univ. press

704 Christian art and symbolism 42-17962

"Professor Morey does not aim to present a complete history of early Christian art but announces the more limited objective of giving an analysis of its styles... In the evolution of style, emphasis is placed upon the continuity of early Christian art with pre-Christian Hellenistic art. The opening chapter depicts with considerable fullness this Hellenistic background... The influence of the Hellenistic styles on the iconography in manuscript illustrations is traced, though here the lapse of time between the models and the miniatures in extant manuscripts is considerable. The characteristics of Christian art in Egypt, in north Africa, in Ravenna and in the Near East are made the subject of careful study." Christian Century

"Outstanding monument of scholarship... The author's ability to condense a library of information within the limits of one volume—a rare endowment—is here admirably illustrated. In the difficult field of origins his exhaustive research places invaluable material at the service of specialist and student." A. McC. Sholl

+ Cath World 155:623 Ag '42 800w

"No one is better qualified to present the subject matter and discuss the problems of early Christian art than Professor Morey of Princeton. His previous writings have established his standing among the leading authorities in this field." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 59:910 J1 22 '42 600w

"Professor Charles Rufus Morey of Princeton University is one of America's ablest and most celebrated archeologists, and since his field of specialization is Christian art, whatever he produces should command the attention of any reader interested in religious history. He always writes with fine objectivity combined with sympathy toward religion—characteristics which do not always distinguish scholarship of the sort. . . . The book is beautifully printed and supplied with many plates; one could have wished that some of these were a little clearer, but better photographs are probably not available."

+ Commonweal 36:212 Je 19 '42 170w

MORGAN, ALFRED POWELL. First radio book for boys; il. by the author. 192p $2 Appleton-Century

621.384 Radio—Juvenile literature (W) 41-22665

"Describes in simple language the construction of radio receivers and how to get good results from their operation." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 38:135 D 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 27:43 Jl '42

MORGAN, ALFRED POWELL. Getting acquainted with chemistry; il. by the author. 271p $2.50 Appleton-Century

540 Chemistry (W) 42-24545

"A work designed for the layman without any previous grounding in the subject. . . . Chemistry is explained by Mr Morgan in terms of articles and products we use every day. Thus there are discussions of home cooking, coal, electric refrigerators, bleaching, salt, paper, fertilizers, cotton, water, air, starch, the various metals, ink, glass and plastics. In addition, there is practical advice on how to build a home laboratory together with some elementary experiments and directions how to perform them." (Springf'd Republican) Index.

Library J 67:1067 D 1 '42 10w

Springf'd Republican p6 N 30 '42 190w

MORGAN, ALFRED POWELL. Getting acquainted with electricity; il. by the author. 346p $3 Appleton-Century

537 Electricity (W) 42-13527

An attempt to explain in simple language for the young student or layman what electricity is and what it does. Partial contents: Static electricity and its phenomena; Electrical measurements; The phenomenon of electromagnetic induction; Condensers or capacitors; Alternating currents; Radio communication; Electrochemistry. Index.

Booklist 38:364 Je 1 '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:39 Jl '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:94 Je '42

MORGAN, MRS CAROL MCAFEE. Rim of the Caribbean. 182p il $1; pa 60c Friendship press
277.28 Missions—West Indies. Missions—Central America 42-17892

The author, whose husband has been an evangelical religious teacher in Puerto Rico and Santo Domingo for some time, revisited many sections of the West Indies and Central America before writing this book. The emphasis is on social conditions, and the part played by mission schools, churches, and hospitals in the development of these countries. Covers Puerto Rico, Dominican Republic, Haiti, Cuba, Panama, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Honduras, El Salvador, and Guatemala. Short reading list.

Christian Century 59:809 Je 24 '42 100w

"Descriptions of social conditions and some historical background, fairly well done. . . . One-sided picture but has some value. For use of church-society groups of high school age. Recommended for limited purchase." M. R. Lucas
Library J 67:687 Ag '42 100w

MORISON, ELTING ELMORE. Admiral Sims and the modern American navy. 548p il $5 Houghton

B or 92 Sims, William Sowden. U.S.—Navy (W) 42-21569

Full-length, appreciative biography of a famous American naval officer of the early twentieth century. Index.

"Mr. Morison has done a fine job in this splendid book." William McFee

+ Atlantic 170:130 O '42 700w

Booklist 39:32 O 1 '42

"If biography is to be judged by historicity, then Mr. Morison's work must rank very high indeed. His book bears every earmark of careful research and documentation; it is dispassionate without pussyfooting; it plays no favorites, either with its subject or his opponents. The writing is always competent—at times it attains distinction. 'Admiral Sims' is truly an historian's view of the life and services of an officer who 'on everything he touched left his own distinctive mark.' It lends understanding to a career too often misunderstood, even in the service, where Sims exercised 'a gift for overstatement which at times amounted to real genius.'" R. F. Armknecht

+ Books p7 S 20 '42 1450w

"An excellent book is Elting E. Morison's Admiral Sims and The Modern American Navy. It is an intimate, personal and highly successful biography of one of the most important and influential individuals ever to sail with the United States Navy. More significantly, it is also the story of American naval power at the period of its greatest development." J. G. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p22 O 14 '42 430w

Reviewed by M. J. Messler

Library J 67:681 Ag '42 100w

"In his Preface Mr. Morison apologizes for the imperfections attendant upon a military biography written by a civilian. Such apologies are quite needless in a piece of work which shows exhaustive research and which has been carefully checked by both naval officers and historians. A few errors can be found, but these are minor flaws in a volume that is certainly the best military biography to appear in many years." D. W. Mitchell

+ Nation 155:423 O 24 '42 900w

"This fine biography of Admiral William Sowden Sims is a record of unremitting struggle to give the United States a first-class fighting fleet. Its publication would be a notable literary event at any time. Its appearance at this particular moment is an event of national importance." Harold Sprout

+ New Repub 107:514 O 19 '42 1200w

"In reviewing the controversial phases of Sim's stormy life Mr. Morison displays, on the whole, a judicial temper, although he occasionally drops into the manner of the advocate and makes irrelevant comments, such as his fling at Smedley Butler. From time to time he even takes Sims severely to task for indiscretions and wrong judgments. Yet, despite Mr. Morison's tone of moderation, it is likely that several of his pages, especially on the conduct of the war in 1917-18, will evoke cries of protest." C. A. Beard

+ — N Y Times p3 S 27 '42 1500w

New Yorker 18:72 S 12 '42 50w

"Among the best features of the book is the clear and delightful picture of Sims the man. . . . The author's support of Sims's charges of naval maladministration in 1914-1917 is not too convincing. . . . This biography of a great American who did as much, at least, for the 'poor old Navy' as any other officer can be recommended without reservation to all who would understand our Navy." A. J. Marder

+ — Sat R of Lit 26:9 Ja 2 '43 900w

MORISON, SAMUEL ELIOT. Admiral of the ocean sea. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 680p il maps $3.50; 2v ed $10 Little

B or 92 Columbus, Christopher (W) 42-5477

Scholarly biography of Columbus, which emphasizes his ability as seaman and navigator.

MORISON, S. E.—Continued

The author, professor of history at Harvard, prepared for the writing of this book by following the routes of Columbus' voyages in small sailing vessels, comparable in size and rig to those used by Columbus. Index.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: ALA (1)
Books (9) PW (1) W (1)

Booklist 38:250 Mr 15 '42

Bookmark 3:14 My '42

"This is history in the grand old-fashioned manner, something wholly unusual in any day. It is not too much to call it a stupendous piece of work. Combining extreme erudition and the art of good writing in almost equal quantities, the narrative flows like a superb novel while all the facts and observations are buttressed and re-buttressed with four centuries of references until there is hardly anything left to say. . . Within the limits of a review it is impossible even to suggest the scope and power of 'Admiral of the Ocean Sea.' It is a must book, of course, for all those interested in history, as well, I believe, as for all those interested in the sea." Lincoln Colcord

+ Books p1 Mr 1 '42 1550w

Reviewed by J. P. Pritchett

Canadian Hist R 23:415 D '42 700w

Reviewed by E. Van R. Wyatt

Cath World 155:493 J1 '42 1000w

Christian Science Monitor p20 Mr 4 '42 550w

"Professor Morison is especially to be commended for his never-ending insistence that Columbus and his Andalusian shipmates were inheritors of the Judaeo-Christian tradition. . . Professor Morison, you, too, appreciate the Lord's wonders in the deep. And much learning doth make thee delightful." F. J. Thompson

+ Churchman 156:16 Ap 1 '42 200w

"Bluff and commonsensical, is his whole historical approach. He loves to tear aside the cobwebs of historic fantasy. Modern national pride could not endure the facts. Surely Columbus was not a simple artisan's son from Genoa. He must have been a Spaniard or a Portuguese or a Jew—or something more extraordinary. With all such notions Mr. Morison has no patience. He takes things as he finds them and tells history. And he tells it with reverence for the sacred and a proper grain of salt for the profane."

+ Commonweal 35:563 Mr 27 '42 2300w

Current Hist 2:227 My '42 230w

+ Geog R 32:682 O '42 1350w

"An authoritative, readable, and satisfactory biography of Columbus which is also decidedly original in its emphasis. . . A grand job, thoroughly documented. All libraries." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 67:181 F 15 '42 80w

"Professor Morison's scholarly, unpedantic prose is, to use an expression dear to British seamen, a fair treat. He is so completely master of his theme and his medium that he creates the impression of an amateur yachtsman chatting with good humor of his own experiences. It looks easy. No doubt, if one has Professor Morison's scholarship and historical sense, it is easy. It is certainly pleasant to read." William McFee

+ Nation 154:314 Mr 14 '42 1250w

"No one will ever write a 'definitive' biography of Columbus any more than anyone will ever write a definitive biography of Shakespeare or Abraham Lincoln, but this one quite definitely supersedes all of its predecessors. There is no danger at all in saying that it is the best book about Columbus so far printed; there is little danger in predicting that it will remain the best in its field for a long time." Garrett Mattingly

+ New Repub 106:337 Mr 9 '42 1100w

"With regard to debatable points, Dr. Morison may be justly described as 'academic.' That is, he upholds the plebeian birth in Genoa and the notion that Columbus and the Catholic sovereigns meant to find the Far East by going westward. Such views may be reasonably held; but they are not the only ones held with good reason. It is in this connection only that

Dr. Morison's work is unsatisfactory. He merely 'snoots' those whose opinions differ from his. . . It is well to get these adverse comments out of the way. The book as a whole is a splendid achievement and a lasting monument of American scholarship. The style is delightful and flowing, and the whole work is replete with beauty and humor. . . Altogether this is, if not a 'definitive,' at least a supremely valuable contribution to the literature on Columbus. It rests not only on rich marine experience, but also on wide knowledge of books and charts. So nearly complete is the documentation, and so varied, that one regrets that even the longer version is without a cumulative bibliography." P. A. Means

+ — N Y Times p1 Mr 1 '42 1100w

"In the preface to his 'Admiral of the Ocean Sea,' Professor Samuel Eliot Morison reminds us that when Francis Parkman decided to write his 'Pioneers of France in the New World' he prepared for it in a manner not generally expected of historians. 'He followed the routes of the French explorers, camped in the primeval forest, and lived among primitive Indians.' Professor Morison, mutatis mutandis, went and did likewise, the result being a book that I imagine will be ranked by scholars as the definitive life of Christopher Columbus. It will certainly be hailed as the only non-armchair biography of its subject ever written." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:57 F 28 '42 400w

"Professor Morison's monumental biography . . . is a work of historical clarification and of artistic reconstruction, equally distant from gushing exaltation and shattering scepticism, the scholarly and literary embodiment of that constructive common sense now so rare that it may rightly be considered a form of genius and the intellectual complement of decency and integrity." Leonard Olschki

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 F 28 '42 950w

"It seems to have taken Columbus 450 years to discover a definitive biographer. There is no nonsense about Professor Morison's book. It junks most of the legends that have grown up around the life of the great discoverer, and all of the artificial mystery that has been built up around him. It dismisses decisively all those fanciful speculations about the family and youth of Columbus that have engrossed so many biographers. . . 'Admiral of the Ocean Sea' is a work to be taken with all seriousness, but the idea occurs that it might reasonably be called a book for 'skippers.'" B. P. Adams

+ Survey G 31:266 My '42 390w

Time 39:76 Mr 2 '42 1650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p414 Ag 22 '42 3450w

Wis Lib Bul 38:67 Ap '42

Reviewed by J. B. Brebner

Yale R n s 31:606 spring '42 1000w

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON.
Thorofare. 469p $2.75 Harcourt

(W) 42-36384

This new novel by the author of Kitty Foyle follows its young hero, an English lad, from the time he is brought to America as a child of six or so, until he becomes a naturalized American citizen.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (8)
N Y Times (7) RB (1)

"It is never easy to hold the adult's attention to a novel which is centered in the juvenile years. Mr. Morley warns us that his story is to be read slowly. But for all its grace and sociability, is it not too discursive? And why could not the author himself have supplied the cutting and the emphasis which would have enabled us to read with a rising interest instead of at a monotone?" Edward Weeks

+ — Atlantic 170:144 D '42 600w

Booklist 39:121 D 1 '42

"A book so personal, so obviously an intimate and biographical affair, so thoroughly saturated with the unique humor and the culture which are characteristically Mr. Morley's, could [not] be merely a vehicle for propaganda. Mr. Morley loves England and he loves America, and his affection shines out in these pages; but he is a writer of novels and essays and not a public relations counsel. He would like us to believe that the Atlantic Ocean is the 'hero' of his book and that the title represents a path cleaved across the sea between the two nations and between the two cultures. I believe we will prefer to regard the novel as the beginning of a personal history of a humane, cultivated and original mind." William Soskin

+ Books p6 N 22 '42 1300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '42

"Here is the familiar Morley; brittle, modern Kitty Foyle as though she had never been. He has not written more charming nostalgic pages than those in which he describes the life of the child, Geoffrey, in Thorofare, beginning with the 'family knock' of Uncle Dan at the cottage door, when he returned from America; the languid English countryside undisturbed by the occasional cry of frustrated ambition from Dan's friend Harry who had stayed at home. . . The bulk of the book deals with the life of Geoffrey, now Jeff, aet. 12 to 21, in Maryland. The manner of narration is the familiar Morley episodic one, the style not brilliant enough to carry to scholastic interludes, the incidents light; a falling off from the earlier chapters." E. L. Keyes
+ — Commonweal 37:259 D 25 '42 330w

Reviewed by Lena Ruppert

Library J 67:1013 N 15 '42 70w

"It is apparent that nothing of great moment happens in 'Thorofare.' Yet Mr. Morley succeeds in making an absorbing, even exciting novel out of the simple story of an English family becoming American, and an American family re-learning some of the gracious customs of an English family. Mr. Morley's success must be attributed to his love of his subject and to his skill with words. . . 'Thorofare' is a novel that is not merely humorous but consistently good-humored, which qualities alone should recommend it to readers tired of overemphatic sociological novels." W. A. S. Dollard

+ N Y Times p3 N 22 '42 1000w

"Christopher Morley's new novel, 'Thorofare,' is as surprising as 'Kitty Foyle' was, for it is not in the least like its predecessor. Indeed, it is not much like anything, unless it be 'Stalky & Co.'—and that's a comparison which, if pushed too far, would blow up in my face. I don't suppose I make things any clearer by saying that I like 'Thorofare' much better than I do 'Stalky & Co.' (which I have always thought a most unpleasant book) and somewhat less than I do 'Kitty Foyle.'" Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 18:92 N 21 '42 500w

"How much of the book is autobiographical I don't know. . . Most of the facts must be fanciful for Christopher Morley himself was born at Haverford College, outside of Philadelphia, and his father was a professor in that honorable and ancient and Orthodox institution of the Friends; a professor born an Englishman. But, to the contrary, most of the thought, the descriptions of people, have the autobiography savor of the authentic. At all events, the book is a real evocation, a real reincarnation of a past, and of people and of places; nostalgic and provocative." Struthers Burt

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 N 21 '42 1650w

Reviewed by Jessica Potter

Springfld Republican p7e N 22 '42 470w

MORLEY, IRIS (MRS ALARIC JACOB). We stood for freedom. 342p $2.50 Morrow [8s 6d Davies]

(W) 42-1111

Altho the setting is seventeenth century England, at the time of Monmouth's Rebellion, the novel conveys a feeling of modernity. Diana Hayes, frivolous lady-in-waiting to the scheming Duchess of York, is dismissed because of an indiscreet love affair. Her brother, believing that Diana will be safer in the country, sends her to Somersetshire. There she meets Saul Flecke and his sister Silence, who are both deep in the fight to improve the condition of the poor. In Saul, Diana finds her love, and she is soon engrossed in the cause for freedom which he leads.

Bookmark 3:16 My '42

"With grim and vivid realism and a fine skill in giving her story the urgency of the present, Miss Morley writes of battles lost through poor timing and lack of cavalry, of dissension and cross purposes, of common folk sustained by an ideal of freedom and of nobles playing politics with reform. The return of the scraggling, defeated army to hide starving in the woods or creep home and face the danger of reprisals, imprisonment, hangings, is written with a fine emotion. And the bitter determination of the leaders to stand for freedom again sometime, somewhere." Page Cooper

+ Books p10 F 15 '42 400w

"It is a rousing story and a timely one." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p6 F 15 '42 700w

"The story is much more than merely a romance in an historical setting, for it touches important issues. The idiom of the characters is often surprisingly modern, but they are alive and their hopes and failures are recorded in such a way that one can wholeheartedly share in them."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p457 S 13 '41 360w

MOROSCO, MRS SELMA (PALEY), and LOUNSBURY, ATHEA. Stage technique made easy; assisted by Oscar. 94p $1.50 Mill 792 Acting (W) 42-18826

How to stand, walk, sit, stoop, slap another's face, eat and drink, etc. etc. explained with simply worded instructions, technique exercises, and diagrams.

Bookmark 4:8 N '42

"Amateur actors ought to find 'Stage Technique Made Easy' their answer to many problems."

+ Boston Globe p19 Ag 10 '42 100w

Christian Century 59:935 J1 29 '42 50w

MORRIS, CHARLES WILLIAM. Paths of life; preface to a world religion. 257p $3 Harper 290 Life 42-16636

"The human being who lives where all the impacts of the modern world strike upon him, feels rather desperately the need for some orientation of the total personality which none of the traditional forms of religious living adequately provides, says Professor Morris. In his book he explores these traditional forms and in so doing endeavors likewise to expose the enormous wealth and variety of potentiality that lies in the nature of man. How to release this potentiality is his problem. The outstanding features of the book are: the analysis of human nature, the breadth and generosity with which the many varieties of human personalities and religions are interpreted, the abundance of expressive literature which has been read to find and interpret all this variety, the portrayal of the supreme religious goal, the way this goal is to be achieved, and the psalms of life which are the author's own poetic expressions of this way of living." (Christian Century) Index.

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr
Books p14 J1 26 '42 900w

"This book has been written by one who has read widely, thought profoundly, has an almost uncanny breadth of sympathetic understanding, is deeply devoted to the ultimate concerns of human living, is a poet as well as a philosopher of note, a scientist and a religious man. Rarely do we find such a combination of insight, scholarship, sympathy, devotion and poetic gift in a book that deals with the central problem of all religious living." H. N. Wieman

+ Christian Century 59:837 J1 1 '42 1000w

Reviewed by R. C. Miller

Churchman 156:17 S 1 '42 120w

Reviewed by W. K. Wright

Crozer Q 19:331 O '42 420w

MORRIS, C. W.—Continued

"There is more than erudition, philosophic insight, and brilliant writing in these pages. There is also a deep sincerity, a sustained emotional quality, and scintillating sidelights that send the mind off on adventure." A. E. Haydon
+ Ethics 53:148 Ja '43 900w

Reviewed by Alburey Castell
J Philos 39:668 N 19 '42 500w

Reviewed by J. B. Pratt
J Religion 23:63 Ja '43 2100w

Reviewed by P. B. Rice
Nation 155:487 N 7 '42 550w

MORRIS, DUDLEY HENRY. Truck that flew; pictures and verse by [the author]. [32]p $1.50 Putnam

(W) 42-2897

Rhymes and colored pictures describe for readers six to nine the adventures of a small boy who put himself to sleep by thinking about all the things he would like to do. And when he got around to thinking about driving trucks he was asleep, but the excitement did not end there.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 Ap 5 '42 200w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 27 '42 110w

"Small boys, to whom trucks are important, will have great fun with this bedtime story of imaginary work with all kinds of wonderful trucks. . . The realistic pictures and amusing rhymes were made for a special boy by a father, who is Art Instructor at Lawrenceville School. They have already passed, at home, the first searching test and may be confidently expected to please motor-minded youngsters everywhere." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:171 My '42 80w

"Mr. Morris is an artist, and the illustrations are much better than the rhymes." Gertrude Andrus

Library J 67:226 Mr 1 '42 80w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 67:883 O 15 '42 20w

"This amusing flight of fancy is one to tickle the imagination of a generation which knows automobiles more familiarly than cows and it is likely to end up under many a pillow as a bedtime talisman." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p8 My 10 '42 180w

"Perfect fare for mechanically minded and imaginative small boys."

+ New Yorker 18:72 My 23 '42 40w

MORRIS, WALTER RIPTON. American in search of a way. 441p $2.75 Macmillan

B or 92 42-25334

"Personal journal kept from 1920 to June, 1942, when at thirty-five author was inducted into army. Bulk of material deals with political ups and downs of the thirties, vacillations from one party line to another. Literary criticism and philosophic discussions, interspersed with comments on frustrated love affairs, courses in writing at Ann Arbor, and running a mimeograph shop, tell story of despondent modern intellectual." Library J

"It is a natural as a diary and it is also an exceedingly interesting document of life in our time. . . [It] is an old story with a new turn: the story of a talented boy from a small town, who goes not to the big city or to Paris, France, but back to the small town. . . Here are the old ecstasies and despairs, the same mulling over the universe, the same unrest, the same gropings and searchings. But instead of a humorless, self-conscious prig we have a man, at home with Plato without being utterly estranged from Gloversville, guarding his own soul but not aloof, capable of plunging into experience and assimilating it." Howard Doughty

+ Books p30 N 8 '42 1600w

"Makes absorbing reading, because it so patently pictures the 'lost generation' of depression years, but will appeal only to sophisticated reading public." Rice Estes

+ Library J 67:844 O 1 '42 110w

"'American in search of a way' is the journal kept by Walter Morris from his twelfth until his thirty-fifth year, terminated only by his induction into the army. It is a full record of a life, of an intellectual, emotional and moral history. Touch this book, and, as with Whitman, you touch a man." Isaac Rosenfeld

+ New Repub 108:59 Ja 11 '43 1600w

"A slow start and much—perhaps too much—earnest naïveté but he makes up for it later with some good adult judgments on himself and us."

+ New Yorker 18:83 O 31 '42 60w

"The book ranks high in literary merit. Walter Morris is worth hearing from again." J. P.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 N 27 '42 330w

MORRIS, WRIGHT. My Uncle Dudley. 210p $2.50 Harcourt

42-11450

Uncle Dudley was tired of Los Angeles sunshine and longed for Chicago's spring-green parks, and so by devious means—quite simple if not wholly honest—he was soon in possession of an ancient car, his nephew was installed in the front seat as driver, and enough hopeful derelicts were obtained as paying guests to insure "a comfortable trip East by the southern route."

"The gags are not brought in for their own sakes. They are always integral to the flow of the story. And behind them all—we sense the serious intentions of the author. Most of the book is written in that spare prose we have become accustomed to in the generation of writers that bears the stamp of Hemingway's influence. 'My Uncle Dudley' is worth looking into." Milton Hindus

+ Books p10 Ap 5 '42 650w

"A brashly picaresque novel. . . Fast-paced, delightfully humorous, sometimes Rabelaisian, it zestfully follows the adventures and mishaps of as madly assorted a crew of individuals as you might find in a circus sideshow—down-at-the-heel, underprivileged men who do not even realize that they are underprivileged. The author's acute ear for dialogue helps to enliven a story that has a slightly mad quality to start with."

+ Nation 154:405 Ap 4 '42 120w

"I think Mr. Morris's intentions were of the best and those intentions worthy. He is a brilliant photographer of American life. He sees the pictures—pictures of humorous, sympathetic, picaresque, raucous life on the roads—but he has not caught them in this prose. Maybe it is a case of every man to his last." F. T. Marsh

N Y Times p21 Ap 5 '42 410w

"'My Uncle Dudley' has some tolerable writing, some humor, and the mild (in this case) but almost inevitable suspense of the Odyssey pattern. It is frequently economical but sometimes it is so much so that it is unintelligible. On the other hand, it is prolix in the passages dealing with the essential natures of men and those discussing the nature of sacred and profane love as discussed by an autofol of bums who have had little opportunity to study either." Paul Armstrong

Sat R of Lit 25:16 Ap 11 '42 400w

MORRISON, CHARLES CLAYTON. Christian and the war. 145p $1.50 Willett

261 War and religion. World war, 1939—Religious aspects 42-19449

Ten editorials on the Christian attitude toward the war, written by the editor of the Christian Century between December 31, 1941 and May 6, 1942. "According to the author the war is neither righteous nor unrighteous. It is not willed by God. It is not sin, but the result of the sins which preceded it in violation of the will of God. The war is, therefore, the judgment of God upon man and it is now so thoroughly a necessity that no one—not even the pacifists—can escape it. The war is 'the awful announcement of His righteous judgment for our defiance of His law which brought us into the tragic necessity where we are not free to obey Him.'" (Churchman)

Reviewed by H. P. Douglass
Christian Century 59:1489 D 2 '42 1700w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr
Christian Century 59:1589 D 23 '42 1300w

Discussion by C. C. Morrison
Christian Century 59:1590 D 23 '42 3770w

"Dr. Morrison's logic is unassailable when once his premises are accepted. But as his editorials have proved when published, there are many dissenters. The volume brilliantly sets forth a point of view held by a stalwart advocate of God's presence in history." A. F. G.

Christian Science Monitor p13 O 31 '42 1100w

Reviewed by W. C. Kernan
Churchman 156:18 O 1 '42 500w

Reviewed by J. W. Nixon
J Religion 23:61 Ja '43 1000w

MORSE, MRS HARRIET (KLAMROTH). Garden easily! 208p il $2.50 Scribner
635.9 Gardening (W) 42-9736

This book consists mainly of lists of plants which are not too hard to grow, with descriptive and cultural notes and some general hints on how to take gardening easily. The lists include: trees and shrubs, perennials, annuals, vines, roses, bulbs, herbs, and water garden plants. Index.

Booklist 38:343 My 15 '42

Bookmark 3:9 My '42

"Excellent in the charm of its illustrations and the organization of its material, this is perhaps the first serious, conscientious attempt to win a difficult objective: to guide people in the achievement of pleasant, well kept gardens and grounds without numbing their minds with complicated details or breaking their backs with incessant toil. Mrs. Morse set herself a difficult task and put it over!" R. S. Lemmon
+ Books p15 Ap 19 '42 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:64 Ap '42

MORT, PAUL R., and CORNELL, FRANCIS GRIFFITH. American schools in transition; how our schools adapt their practices to changing needs; a study of Pennsylvania. 546p il maps $4.25 Teachers college 371.2 Public schools—Pennsylvania. School administration and organization 41-9601

"This book is directed toward answering two questions: (1) How far does American education lag behind standards generally accepted as desirable? and (2) How can we speed up the adoption of practices which are generally accepted as desirable in the light of experimentation, research, and prolonged consideration? . . . For the materials in this study we have drawn upon the state of Pennsylvania." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by M. J. Berg
School & Society 54:388 N 1 '41 400w

"While the volume under review is the result of an exploratory and not a final study, no alert administrator should fail to read it. . . The effort throughout the study has been to secure objective evidence that would contribute to an understanding of the way in which a democratic society makes progress educationally. This effort has been successful in spite of the necessity for the senior author to modify the earlier views which he had expressed on the financing of education." G. A. Works
+ School R 50:232 Mr '42 160w

Reviewed by E. W. Knight
Social Educ 6:339 N '42 420w

MORTON, HENRY CANOVA VOLLAM. I, James Blunt. 83p $1 Dodd [6d Methuen]
42-16453

A diary which records the daily life of an elderly Englishman, a retired ironmonger, during six months of the winter of 1944-1945, the first year of the German occupation of Britain.

Books p8 Jl 5 '42 180w

"Mr. Morton writes smoothly and with acceptable craftsmanship, though without his usual distinction. The book is gray in mood, a monotone fatalistic and despairing. All in all, a minor undertaking moderately well done."

+ Cath World 155:636 Ag '42 180w

"It is unnecessary to point out that the message of H. V. Morton's mercilessly powerful little story is as unescapable here as in England. Nor is it necessary to point out that his fable is no invention, but only a shifting of locale. James Blunt's diary is the clear and restrained record of things that have happened, that go on happening every day. 'Poor blind idiots that we were,' James Blunt says, to think that they couldn't happen here!" K. W.

+ N Y Times p15 Je 21 '42 600w

MOSHIER, LOUISE MARION, and LEFEVRE, HELENA SMEDES. Small public library; organization, administration, service. 142p pa $1.50 A.L.A.

020 Library science (W) 42-36218

"Aiming 'to serve as a tangible guide to the essentials in library administration,' this concise and inclusive handbook, the result of practical experience, will be of invaluable assistance to librarians and trustees of small public libraries. Chapter headings include the Library and the community, Organization and government, Library staff, Physical plant, Book collection, Technical and mechanical procedures, Library service. Appendixes list supplies and supply houses, accredited library schools, state and provincial library extension agencies and professional reading for the librarian. Index." Bookmark

Booklist 38:341 My 15 '42

Bookmark 3:3 My '42

"One of the most practical and at the same time, one of the most stimulating manuals ever issued by the A. L. A." Constance Bement

+ Library J 68:87 Ja 15 '43 700w

MOSS, LOUIS QUENTIN. Practical mathematics for shipfitters, and other shipyard workers. 108p $1.50 Pitman

623.81 Shipbuilding. Mathematics 41-52072

"Directly related to the work of shipfitting, this handy manual is intended for self-teaching. A list of abbreviations and a glossary of technical terms preceding the text will be found useful." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 38:173 Ja 15 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:9 Ja '42

MOTHER GOOSE. Tall book of Mother Goose; pictured by Feodor Rojankovsky. 120p $1 Harper
(W) 42-36352

A new and different Mother Goose. It is tall and narrow in shape, contains about a hundred of the familiar rhymes, and is illustrated with over 150 lithographs in color and in black and white.

Booklist 39:109 N 15 '42

"Not only the shape of this edition makes Mother Goose a new book, though that is striking and useful. . . It is the 150 pictures themselves, rich in color and robustly, realistically childlike in treatment, that turn the trick." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 N 8 '42 100w

"Lives up to its name in being long and narrow which is really very handy. The colors are good, the pictures lively and up to date."

+ Cath World 156:371 D '42 70w

MOTHER GOOSE—Continued

Churchman 156:15 N 15 '42 10w

"The novel format, most reasonable price and excellent illustrations make this one of the finds of the season, and its best bargain." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 37:116 N 20 '42 20w

"Rojankovsky's pictures are on every page, gay, colorful, and above all, sincere. The settings are drawn from the artist's childhood memories, the children are real and the animals are true to character. The book is a happy contribution to the Mother Goose library."

+ Horn Bk 19:31 Ja '43 100w

"It is a pity that Rojankovsky's very original and often charming pictorial interpretation of the rhymes should be crowded into the limitations of the narrow page. It is an awkward book to handle and a hard one for children to hold open, but the pictures are unusual and amusing." R. A. Hill

+ — Library J 67:883 O 15 '42 50w

"Shape of book gives opportunity for freedom and variety of design in illustration, and, for most part, illustrations are excellent; but there are two or three whose conception makes them definitely objectionable for use with little children." E. G. Mullan

+ — Library J 67:1016 N 15 '42 70w

"Libraries with limited book funds had best examine before purchasing, in spite of inexpensiveness of this unusual collection of the rhymes. Pictures are gay and, for most part, delightful, although some fall far short of this reviewer's ideal in depicting the beloved characters." A. M. Wetherell

+ — Library J 67:1016 N 15 '42 90w

"A Mother Goose which fairly sparkles with life and color in the freshest of hues; even the black-and-white pictures glow with light. . . The children are chubby, shining-eyed, thoroughly contemporary in appearance, yet possessing the timeless quality of childhood, while their elders vary, according to the verses, from something out of a Russian fairy tale to gay caricature. There are humor and a great zest as well as fine artistry in these pictures, and they are fitted to the narrow pages with only a very occasional effect of constriction. The 12 by 5 inch dimensions of the volume give it an oddly appealing, intimate charm, and it balances more easily in the hand than the usual quarto-sized volume, although where to put it on the library shelf is going to be a problem." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p9 N 15 '42 200w

New Yorker 18:105 D 12 '42 70w

MOULT, THOMAS, ed. Best poems of 1941. 128p il $2 Harcourt [6s Cape, J]

821.08 American poetry—Collections. English poetry—Collections (A27-176)

The twentieth annual compilation of the best poetry appearing in English, American, Irish, and Canadian periodicals. Partial contents: Poem, by C. Day Lewis; The war god, by Stephen Spender; Five sonnets, by Conrad Aiken; Autumn tree, by Witter Bynner; The English war, by D. L. Sayers; The heroes, by Frederic Prokosch; London, by A. A. Milne; The vision, by Walter de la Mare; The fine nature, by Edmund Blunden; They are not yet dead, by Alfred Kreyenborg; From 'world enough,' by Jesse Stuart; Come in, by Robert Frost; Testament, by Anne Morrow Lindbergh; Dunkirk, by Robert Nathan; Better than love, by Ruth Pitter; When it is over, by Edna St Vincent Millay; The paper nautilus, by Marianne Moore; The weeper, by Leonora Speyer; Flight, by Babette Deutsch.

Booklist 39:66 N 1 '42

Books p16 N 1 '42 180w

Christian Century 36:1030 Ag 26 '42 160w

"One is hard put to understand the omission of such poets as Rodgers, Shapiro, Fearing, Ferril and Wallace Stevens: even more of such supreme poems of the time as Reade's 'Girl Dozing' (Horizon), Hughes's 'Early Evening Quarrel' (Compass), Roethke's 'Episodic Seven' (Commonweal), Humphries's 'New Jersey Eclogue' and Frost's 'A Serious Step Lightly Taken.' In the parlance of the trade, the book is not a must for poetry lovers." Tom Boggs

Commonweal 36:428 Ag 21 '42 170w

Manchester Guardian p3 F 17 '42 30w

Reviewed by Frank Jones

Nation 155:725 D 26 '42 420w

Wis Lib Bul 38:134 O '42

MOWRER, EDGAR ANSEL, and RAJCHMAN, MARTHE. Global war; an atlas of world strategy; with an introd. by Frank Knox. 128p pa $1 Morrow

940.5499 World war, 1939—Maps

(W) 42-19401

"Strategic atlas of the world; seventy maps and charts, plus a description of the resources of the principal countries, world communications, invasion routes, and the like." New Yorker

Booklist 39:8 S '42

Bookmark 4:12 N '42

"This atlas cannot tell us all about war. But it does help to clarify current headlines; while Mr. Mowrer's brief concluding sketch of what modern global war has really come to imply, and of the drastic changes in the political organization of this planet which we must accept if we are not to be crushed under its hideous weight, is impressive and, I think, unanswerable." Walter Millis

+ Books p5 Ag 2 '42 1050w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:894 O 15 '42 30w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates

Nation 155:176 Ag 29 '42 300w

"A respectable job, even though Mr. Mowrer's text is given to unqualified statement and Miss Rajchman's maps need a slightly larger scale of reproduction."

+ — New Yorker 18:56 Ag 8 '42 90w

Pratt p23 D '42

"Mowrer's text is sprightly, accurate, and suggestive. It displays full awareness of the revolution in modern warfare. . . Miss Rajchman's maps are clear and to the point, though occasionally overcrowded with names and abbreviations." F. L. Schuman

+ Sat R of Lit 25:15 S 12 '42 400w

Wis Lib Bul 38:161 N '42

MOWRER, LILIAN (THOMSON) (MRS EDGAR ANSEL MOWRER). Rip tide of aggression. 247p $2.50 Morrow

909.82 World politics

(W) 42-25674

History of the disastrous angling for power which has gone on during the last quarter of a century in Germany, Japan, and Italy. The book has a description of the rise of these three dictatorships to power, and of their brutal attacks on other countries. Bibliographical note. Index.

Booklist 39:182 Ja 1 '43

"'Rip Tide of Aggression' is by all odds the best brief book to come to this reviewer's attention explaining the why and the what of the present crisis." Hiram Motherwell

+ Books p9 D 27 '42 500w

"Recommended for wide reading." G. O. Kelley

+ Library J 67:1065 D 1 '42 100w

"Mrs. Mowrer is too modest. All the facts she reports may have been reported already in one place or another, and all the conclusions she draws may have been drawn before, too; but I know of no other single volume in which so many of the significant facts of the story she tells have been brought together so well and in which the inescapable conclusions of the terrible tale are made clear with such telling effect. Nor has Mrs. Mowrer written any mere primer. She has written a highly expert treatise, even a textbook." W. R. Deuel

+ N Y Times p4 D 13 '42 600w

"Well condensed and includes some fresh interpretations, but on the whole fairly elementary."

+ — New Yorker 18:59 D 26 '42 30w

"It was a formidable task to telescope into brief space the long complicated history of Axis aggression. But the author was equal to it. She brings Tacitus's 'bloodthirsty' German up to date, sends him into Spain with his slightly inglorious Italian collaborators for a 'dress rehearsal,' shows him cynically double-crossing his Japanese Axis partner by invading Russia. She has done the whole thing with a sense of proportion. She has given due weight to the power politics, military philosophy, and cultural background of each Axis power." A. F. Wolfe

+ Sat R of Lit 25:11 D 26 '42 490w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 31 '43 440w

MULLENDORE, WILLIAM CLINTON. History of the United States Food administration, 1917-1919; with an introd. by Herbert Hoover and a foreword and bibliography by Ralph Haswell Lutz. (Hoover Lib. on war, revolution and peace. Publication) 399p $4.50 Stanford univ. press

940.3 U.S. Food administration, European war, 1914-1918—Food question 41-22441

"In view of the present emergency and as a contribution to what may be again a problem, certainly when peace comes, the Hoover Library and the Stanford Press have published this volume. It is really the official history of the Food Administration written in 1921. Mr. Hoover's introduction is dated 1920. Dr. Lutz's preface gives a list of the studies on various phases of the food problem in war that have appeared since 1921." (Am Hist R) Index.

Am Hist R 47:688 Ap '42 100w

Reviewed by R. W. McCulloch

Am Pol Sci R 36:165 F '42 380w

"Mr. Mullendore's history is well organized and detailed. It has special timeliness now that many of these problems of allocation and priority confront the country." Bernhard Ostrolenk

+ Ann Am Acad 220:249 Mr '42 400w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:780 J1 '42 20w

Reviewed by C. L. Lokke

Pol Sci Q 57:629 D '42 550w

MUNRO, DANA GARDNER. Latin American republics; a history. 650p maps $5; students' ed $4 Appleton-Century

980 Latin America—History (W) 42-17871

A history of the Latin American countries from prehistoric times to the present. The author, professor of public affairs at Princeton university, has had an extensive experience in Latin America as a graduate student, diplomat, visiting professor, and representative of business interests. Index.

Booklist 39:9 S '42

"Despite necessary compression of material, the leaping from country to country, the book yields a satisfying panoramic view. Furthermore, it brings in more of the chief actors, with quick characterization, than is true of most Latin-American histories. One would like to have more social history, more of the life of city and town, but that task must be left to some one who will do for Latin America what the Beards did for the United States in their 'Rise of American Civilization.'" Hubert Herring

+ Books p15 Ag 23 '42 430w

"Professor Munro is pre-eminently a specialist on the Caribbean countries, but his many years of study and teaching and varied experiences of travel, diplomacy and business have given him unquestioned competence in the general field."

+ Christian Century 59:1060 S 2 '42 200w

New Repub 107:801 D 14 '42 120w

Social Studies 33:336 N '42 10w

MUNRO, IRENE B., and MUNRO, WIN-THROP M. Handbook for clubwomen. 393p $2.50 Jacobs press, Clinton, S.C.

396.062 Women's clubs (W) 43-690

"A handbook on the organization and work of women's clubs, with sections on the duties of officers and committees, methods of conducting business, community service and club programs." (Christian Century) Index.

"Thorough-going, sound in its subjects and methods of procedure, little is left out of this guidebook that could be needed in the organization and conduct of a successful woman's club of today."

+ Books p26 Ja 17 '43 180w

Christian Century 60:82 Ja 20 '43 30w

MUNROE, RUTH LEARNED (MRS JOHN LEVY). Teaching the individual. (Sarah Lawrence college. Publications) 353p $3 Columbia univ. press [15s Oxford]

371.42 Educational psychology. Teaching. Students 42-9643

"A critique of the role of psychology in education. It attempts to aid the college teacher in applying the findings of that science to his understanding of students without his becoming a specialist in psychology or learning how to employ highly technical diagnostic devices." (Survey) Index.

School & Society 55:428 Ap 11 '42 10w

"The book is a penetrating analysis of college teaching. If students could make assignments to instructors, it would be included in the list of required reading. At a time when higher education everywhere is being subjected to critical scrutiny, books which aim to point a new direction become especially significant." Henry Bowman

+ Survey 78:348 D '42 130w

MUNSON, GORHAM BERT, ed. 12 decisive battles of the mind. 280p $3.50 Greystone

301.1523 Propaganda 42-6685

"The story of propaganda during the Christian era with abridged versions of texts that have shaped history." (Subtitle) Contents: What is Propaganda? Paul's Epistle to the Romans; Thomas Paine's Common Sense; Declaration of the Rights of Man; The Communist Manifesto; Uncle Tom's Cabin; Zola's J'Accuse; The Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion; Wilson's Fourteen Points; Lenin's theses of April 4th; Hitler's speeches; Mussolini's "We or they" declaration; The undecided battle for the mind of America (1941).

Reviewed by R. D. Casey

Am Hist R 48:301 Ja '43 420w

Reviewed by John Cournos

Atlantic 170:147 S '42 350w

Reviewed by H. N. Doughty, Jr.

Books p10 Je 21 '42 800w

"Despite its last chapter, 'Twelve Decisive Battles of the Mind' is a useful book."

+ — Commonweal 35:440 F 20 '42 600w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:772 J1 '42 10w

Pratt p21 O '42

"Mr. Munson's story of propaganda from St. Paul to Paul Goebbels is easily the ablest and clearest exposition of a muddled and misunderstood subject that has yet been written. At the very outset he defines the word as 'the art and science of controlling the mind of mankind by overwhelming insistence on a point of view,' a definition that gives propaganda its high and proper place as a world force. Any lesser goal lets in the mere press agent and the public relations counselor. For another thing, Mr. Munson avoids the academic, sociological, and oracular in his study, supporting his own theories by twelve propaganda masterpieces, each with the antecedent history and a brilliant analysis." George Creel

+ Sat R of Lit 25:7 Mr 7 '42 700w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 18 '42 550w

MUNSON, G. B.—Continued

"It is the great value of Mr. Munson's book that it presents dramatic evidence to show how political warfare has been carried on in the past. In the last analysis, it is the creative mind rather than machinery and organization that counts. Happily, there are several Thomas Paines at work among us today." C. J. Friedrich

+ Yale R n s 32:167 autumn '42 1100w

MURPHY, MARGOT (JANE HOLT, pseud).

Wartime meals. 258p $2 Greenberg

641.5 Cookery. Food 42-19084

"How to plan them, how to buy them, how to cook them," by the food editor of the New York Times. Index.

Booklist 39:4 S '42

N Y Times p26 Ag 23 '42 360w

Pratt p14 D '42

MURRAY, CHALMERS SWINTON.

Here come Joe Mungin. 316p $2.50 Putnam

42-3382

Story of the Gullah Negroes of the sea islands off the South Carolina coast. It describes the life of one Joe Mungin; his young manhood, his marriages; career as a farmer; and the voodoo death, to which his wife was the prime contributor. The author was born on one of the islands and is an authority on Gullah folk ways and dialect.

"This book is a story you are likely enough to read, put aside and never look at again but you won't forget it, for it is laced with threads of barbaric color." Robert Wilder

+ Books p8 F 15 '42 550w

"The finest picture of the Sea Island Negroes ever written. Simple, vivid, and taut, no words are wasted. Although the difficult Gullah dialect has been transliterated into simple English, the melodious idiom of the coastal Negroes is perfectly preserved. A first novel which lacks climactic structure but definitely enriches our folk literature. The language used is somewhat raw and outspoken." Rice Estes

+ Library J 67:131 F 1 '42 50w

"Here Come Joe Mungin' is a brutish tale of brutish people. Let it be added quickly that this is, of course, not a criticism from the point of view of ethics: the book must be appraised on fairer grounds. What matters is that the people and their lives are incredible, not because they are such 'bad' people or because their ideas of success are 'immoral,' but because they do not seem to be alive at all. . . The total effect is artificial, a grim recital that has in it no horror, a tale of brutality that does not gain conviction simply because it is screamed at us." W. J. Gold

N Y Times p16 Mr 1 '42 600w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 25 '42 450w

MURRAY, GILBERT. Stoic, Christian and humanist. 189p $1.75 Norton [5s Allen, G; Watts]

204 Religion 40-8307

"This book consists of two addresses and two articles dated from 1914 to 1939, which present expositions and critiques of the Stoic, Christian and humanist ways of life. The first two chapters provide a finished statement of the aims and achievements of the pagan cults and philosophies dominant in the early years of the Christian church. . . The last two chapters embody both a critique of some inveterate religious—particularly Christian—habits of thought and a positive statement of the author's humanistic convictions." Christian Century

"This book represents another memorable statement of the humanism that challenges Christian thought of the present, not to open combat after the fashion of the older apologists, but to inclusive understanding, that it may be transcended by being comprehended in a more adequate, a truer view in which belief in man and belief in God shall go together." Roger Hazelton

+ Christian Century 59:19 Ja 7 '42 700w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 156:16 Ag 1 '42 220w

MUZUMDAR, HARIDAS THAKORDAS. The United nations of the world; a treatise on how to win the peace. 288p $2.50 Universal pub. co.

321.041 International cooperation. Reconstruction (1939-) 42-22248

"Dr. Muzumdar, Hindi scholar and sociologist, friend and biographer of Mahatma Gandhi, and world citizen, discusses international problems embracing the Americas and the promise of the New World, Asia and its message of Soul Force, Australia, and Africa which are destined to be tomorrow's danger zones, and 'Europe, the troublesome little continent of 'eternal war'.'" (School & Society) Index.

"Though somewhat poorly organized, there is much material in the volume which will be of interest and value to all who have a genuine feeling for human liberty. The book is quick with moral earnestness." Sudhindra Bose

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:1192 D '42 300w

Christian Century 59:1089 S 9 '42 50w

Reviewed by Gordon Potat

Crozer Q 20:85 Ja '43 230w

School & Society 56:196 S 5 '42 60w

Reviewed by J. G. McDonald

Survey G 32:56 F '43 60w

MYERS, ALEXANDER JOHN WILLIAM. Religion for today; an essay in the philosophy of religious education. 243p $2 Assn. press

261 Christianity. Religious education

42-12943

"This latest volume from the head of the department of religious education at the Hartford Seminary Foundation bears the subtitle, 'An Essay in the Philosophy of Religious Education.' It represents the mature thinking of one who has long been an exponent of the creative principle in Christian education and it is a timely contribution to the philosophy 'not only [of] ministers, students, and directors of religious education, but also [of] the intelligent layman who, the author is convinced, is repelled by certain medieval religious conceptions and is hungry for something more satisfying and more in keeping with experience today.'" Crozer Q

"This satisfying essay keeps the intelligent layman as well as the minister in mind. The author accepts the scientific method and shows a wide acquaintance with recent discoveries, presenting in quotable form much scientific material. In a three-page foreword he states concisely his plan and purpose. He thinks logically and sets in order his convictions under consecutive headings so that no reader need get lost in the argument." S. A. Hunter

+ Christian Century 59:428 Ap 1 '42 390w

"In Religion for Today, Professor Myers has made a contribution that can be calculated to provide reinforcement to the cause of creative education when its ramparts are being assailed by a neo-orthodoxy influenced by the onward march of authoritarian philosophies across our world." L. C. Kitchen

+ Crozer Q 19:239 Jl '42 600w

Reviewed by H. S. Smith

J Religion 22:429 O '42 550w

MYERS, BESSY. Captured. 312p $2.50 Appleton-Century [8s 6d Harrap]

940.547 World war, 1939—Prisoners and prisons. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English 42-5808

The author, an English ambulance driver in an International Red Cross unit in France, was sent on June 8, 1940 to the front line in the Marne section. She and a friend were taken prisoners by the Germans, and received both good treatment and bad. At one time they were thrown into a terrible prison in Paris, but were later released and returned to England, via Vichy and Lisbon. This account of their experiences is partly diary, and partly straight narrative.

Booklist 38:272 Ap 1 '42

"This book, unlike the accounts of suffering by Continental men and women, has a wry humor and a total absence of self-dramatization which, at least to the Anglo-Saxon reader, strikes the heart more forcibly than the most noble indignation. Through Myers and Darby, England is speaking to us, tenacious, unimagined England, with its backbone of steel." Virgilia Sapieha

+ Books p2 Mr 8 '42 750w

"There is no melancholy, light or otherwise, in Bessy Myers' 'Captured.' Miss Myers is a very spirited girl, and she has written a very spirited book. . . 'Captured' is an excellent book, it reveals a gay and steadfast temper, and it is admirably written." Harold Hobson + Christian Science Monitor p11 O 4 '41 230w

"The story is told with precision and vigour. . . Evident through everything is the good humour and tenacity of these two women under trials that make the ordinary amenities of life take on their correct aspect as luxuries in wartime." M. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 29 '41 230w

"'Captured' loses nothing from the fact that it is not written by a professional writer. Bessy Myers has a sharp eye for character, great good sense and unquenchable spirit. If Britain's Minister of Information is as intelligent as he should be, he may see the wisdom of sending to America such an ambassador of good will. If Miss Myers can talk as directly as she writes, our women's clubs are in for a load of dynamite." Elizabeth Huling

+ New Repu 106:467 Ap 6 '42 700w

"Such a story as this is bound to be engrossingly interesting, both in excitement and information. But there is a quality in 'Captured' which goes beyond the record of all-but-incredible event, or even the re-creation of gallant-hearted ardors and endurances. Observation, wit, sympathy and insight speak here with unaffected candor from a singularly well-balanced mind; and it is a mind which shows an unforced literary talent as well as astuteness and poise." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 8 '42 1300w

"Lots of sharp observation, and very readable."

+ New Yorker 18:60 F 28 '42 40w

Time 39:80 Mr 30 '42 250w

"One of the most revealing narratives of the war, told vividly, yet with characteristic understatement, and with a sense of humour that did not desert her even when she and Miss Darby were cast into the Cherche-Midi, the infamous military prison in Paris."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p391 Ag 16 '41 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 38:86 My '42

MYERS, JOHN MYERS. Out on any limb. 401p $2.50 Dutton

(W) 42-16187

The adventures in love and war of a roving young man of Elizabethan England, Ingram Applegarth, "only a year out of the university," joins forces with a robust company of his countrymen, and finds himself involved in the fortunes of the beautiful Marian Darking, whose father has been murdered and his estates confiscated.

"An exhilarating novel—and if Englishmen of Queen Bess's day did not live like this, they surely should have. A remarkable piece of re-creation, full of gusto and real fun." John Cournors

+ Atlantic 170:146 S '42 140w

Booklist 39:11 S '42

Bookmark 4:17 N '42

"Engrossing and aptly managed adventure story. . . For any one who can enjoy a real bout of 'adventure, of cape-and-sword, this is a fine and filling dish. . . It abounds in colorful characters, a dozen vivid scenes in inns, hovels, prisons, ruined abbeys, the forecourts of castles, and so forth. And in combining in a quite individual way both gravity and humor, this galloping story has an unusual magic, and more than a few of its readers will hope that it may be only a first—if substantial installment—and that in a subsequent volume Ingram Applegarth, and his friends will reappear to ride again." Iris Barry

+ Books p4 J1 5 '42 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 J1 '42

"Interesting and readable, but will probably appeal to a comparatively small proportion of borrowers. Could be used on high school historical-novel reading list." Lena Ruppert

Library J 67:533 Je 1 '42 60w

"For all its historical competence, it is peculiarly unsatisfying, even as romantic escape."

+ Nation 155:67 J1 18 '42 90w

"Here a gifted young American of 1942 has stepped back into Elizabeth's England and found himself very much at ease. He uses his own natural idiom, not a little of which still survives in nooks and corners there today. It is gorgeous fun for him—and hence for us—from first to last." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 J1 5 '42 700w

Time 40:80 Ag 17 '42 130w

Wis Lib Bul 38:163 N '42

MYHRE, ETHELYN. Hawaiian yesterdays; II. by [the author]. [55p] $1.25 Knopf

(W) 42-5137

Simple little story describing the adventures of a seven-year-old Hawaiian boy from Oahu on a visit to Honolulu in the days before Pearl Harbor.

"Hawaii, such as children see it, as a lovely land with the charm of the day before yesterday, appears in this picture-story-book in distinctive form. . . The pictures, a full page for each paragraph, are block prints in warm chocolate brown, strong designs with a sense of humor and an appreciation of the decorative possibilities of a tropic scene." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Je 7 '42 180w

"There is a demand for stories of just this kind to bring to life the places which have seemed remote and unreal. . . The brown pictures, printed from blocks, are well suited to the tropical scene." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:177 My '42 90w

"Recommended for school classes studying Hawaii." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 67:476 My 15 '42 50w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:885 O 15 '42 10w

"A pleasant, spontaneous description of life in Hawaii written out of the author's happy recollection of days in the island of Oahu before the war." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 My 31 '42 250w

MYRDAL, FRU ALVA (REIMER). Nation and family. 441p $4 Harper

312.09485 Sweden—Population. Charities—Sweden. Family 41-24160

A summary of the aims and objectives and the accomplishments of social planning in Sweden as it was directed to the problems of the family and population growth. Selected bibliography. Index.

"This is an admirable volume written by a Swedish population expert who collaborated in other studies with her husband Gunnar Myrdal, distinguished economist. . . The high quality of this book makes it almost impregnable to adverse criticism. It should be read by every person interested in a democratic solution of family problems." Clifford Kirkpatrick

+ Ann Am Acad 220:270 Mr '42 650w

MYRDAL, A. R.—Continued

"The book is a triumph of exposition, demonstrating the fact that solid material need never be dull." R. S. Lynd

+ Nation 154:170 F 7 '42 950w

"The aim of Mrs. Myrdal's present study is to analyze the reports and the legislation, placing them against the background of the Swedish population problem. Since she and her husband were the immediate cause of the change in public opinion and have been directly associated with the promulgation of the new policy, Mrs. Myrdal is specially fitted to write a commentary on what, up to the present, is the only attempt to visualize the population problem as a whole and to provide a democratic solution for it." D. V. Glass

+ New Repub 106:435 Mr 30 '42 1300w

Reviewed by R. B. Vance

Social Forces 21:250 D '42 700w

"The mere outline of the contents of this exceptional book can give no adequate impression of its high quality in style, in factual adequacy, and in the objectivity of its analysis. It should be required reading in every course on the family and will be found a relief from the sentimental handbooks on how to be happy though married, and the unsupported psychoanalytical speculations of the conventional textbooks. Social workers, and sociologists will find it worthy of careful study."

G. A. Lundberg

+ Survey 78:61 F '42 450w

Wis Lib Bul 38:27 F '42

MYTINGER, CAROLINE. Headhunting in the Solomon islands around the Coral sea. 416p il $3 Macmillan 919.3 New Guinea—Description and travel.

Solomon islands—Description and travel.
(W) 42-51775

Some few years before Pearl Harbor, the narrator and artist, Miss Mytinger, and a woman friend, made up an expedition of two to visit the Solomon islands and to draw portraits of the native Melanesians. This sprightly account of their adventures is illustrated with many of Miss Mytinger's black and white drawings.

Booklist 39:199 Ja 15 '43

"Apart from its value as a scientific document and, at the present time, a travel book which depicts the terrain on which American soldiers are now fighting, 'Head Hunting in the Solomon Islands' makes extremely delightful reading." Rose Feld

+ Books p1 D 27 '42 1300w

"The book is good, but it would be better if a smaller proportion of it were devoted to their sufferings from insects, infections, bad climate, bad food, bad water and bad luck in a score of misadventures. Getting suitable native models—and in places that swarmed with natives—was one of the major difficulties. But they got them. The samples of the artist-author's portraiture given in the book whet one's appetite for more."

+ Christian Century 60:82 Ja 20 '43 200w

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt

Commonweal 37:404 F 5 '43 850w

Reviewed by D. F. Lucas

Library J 67:844 O 1 '42 90w

Reviewed by Hiram Bingham

N Y Times p3 Ja 3 '43 1200w

"'Headhunting in the Solomon Islands,' aside from the coincidental interest of its geography, is an intermittently amusing (when not a trifle nauseating) account of the impact made by a semi-primitive civilization on two highly civilized young Americans who were quite free from race snobism. . . . Miss Mytinger writes well, with a combination of bite and charm, but the constant intrusion of a rather specialized professional interest may dull her story's appeal for those who are not necessarily fascinated by the technique of painting portraits under almost impossible conditions." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:56 D 26 '42 600w

"Whether or not Miss Mytinger intended to do so she returned with a great deal more than mere portraiture. She proved to be not only a painter but a witty and intelligent woman, a raconteur, and a finely balanced human being. She saw the native men and women whose physical persons she sketched not as curiosities but as human beings in a human environment and she has so presented them." Raymond Holden

+ Sat R of Lit 25:7 D 19 '42 650w

"A queerer expedition never descended on Pacific islands than the one described by Caroline Mytinger in 'Headhunting in the Solomon Islands'. . . . Their experiences and misadventures in the Solomons were fully as thrilling as those of the most sanquinary safaris captured between the covers of a book. Miss Mytinger's account has the added attraction imparted by her artist's eye for color, whether in scene or incident."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 27 '42 650w

N

NAIDICH, JAMES. Mathematics for the aviation trades. 267p il $1.80 McGraw 629.134 Airplanes—Design and construction.

Mathematics (W) 42-4000

"This book has been written for students in trade and technical schools who intend to become aviation mechanics. . . . Part I is entitled 'A Review of Fundamentals for the Airplane Mechanic'. . . . Parts II, III, and IV deal with specific aspects of the work that an aviation mechanic may encounter. . . . Part V contains 100 review examples taken from airplane shop blueprints, aircraft-engine instruction booklets, airplane supply catalogues, aircraft directories, and other trade literature." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 38:228 Mr 1 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:21 Ap '42

Pratt p17 D '42

NALL, TORNEY OTTO, and DAVIS, BERT HENRY. Jobs for today's youth. 173p $1.75 Assn. press

371.425 Occupations. Profession, Choice of 42-36098

"Brief sketches intended to give young people an idea of some vocational opportunities. The pleasant side of a job is emphasized; drawbacks are not discussed. Apparently written before the United States entered the war." Booklist

Booklist 38:246 Mr 15 '42

Christian Century 59:49 Ja 14 '42 100w

School & Society 55:28 Ja 3 '42 20w

NASH, ETHEL MILLER. With this ring. 122p $1.50 Assn. press

173.1 Marriage. Family 42-20163

Practical book for the married, and about-to-be married. Its simple language leads the reader to the real spirit of married life, to the meaning of the marriage ceremony, the obligations, responsibilities in the relation of man and wife, the problem of children and how to rear them from infancy to adolescence. (Adapted from Publisher's note)

Christian Century 59:808 Je 24 '42 30w

J Home Econ 35:49 Ja '43 90w

"The book over-emphasizes failure in marriage and contains an insufficient expression of helpful comment. It merits but slight commendation because of the weakness of its scientific foundations." I. S. Wile, M.D.

— Survey 78:286 O '42 200w

NASH, JAY BRYAN. Building morale. 154p $1
Barnes, A.S.

301.15 Morale, Democracy. Totalitarianism
42-12059

In order that the democracies shall eventually win the war and the peace, it is necessary, the author finds, to begin with children in building up morale—morale which he defines as "a religious zeal for the right of people to establish 'self-approved laws' and for the obligation and discipline that gives obedience to these laws."

"A very sensible and practical discussion."

+ Christian Century 55:602 My 6 '42 40w
School & Society 55:484 Ap 25 '42 20w

NASH, OGDEN. Good intentions. 180p $2 Little
811 (W) 42-25547

Light, humorous verses on men and women, dogs, golf, Christmas, antiques, and Ubbiebubs.

"Clearly Ogden Nash is God's gift to the United States. While writers of dismally serious intent are a dime a dozen, a genuine comic talent is nearly priceless. Mr. Nash is our best literary comedian since Will Rogers. He has become in a strictly Shakespearean sense, America's number one fool, though in any other sense he is nobody's fool." G. F. Whicher
+ Atlantic 170:161 D '42 240w

Booklist 39:134 D 15 '42

"The latest collection of Ogden Nash's hymns to Neuros shows no advance or mutation in technique, but it reflects a more mellow personality, a less subjective approach to life, and a deadlier, deeper wit. Humorists have a melancholy habit of anticipating old age, and although Nash cannot be much more than forty, he has definitely entered what literary historians of the future will no doubt term his 'middle period.' Two years ago all of Nash's earlier verse appeared in a single volume. Between that book and the present one there are sharp dividing lines. The poet sees them in a mirror when he shaves. The world sees them in his art." Thomas Sugrue
+ Books p2 D 6 '42 900w

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker
N Y Times p16 N 29 '42 600w

New Yorker 18:100 N 21 '42 50w

"The face and the manner are familiar—a shade too familiar. But something is missing. Is it the old spontaneity, the sense of ease in the midst of bewilderment? Can it be that the indefatigable recorder of the cock-eyed is a bit weary, even a little disdainful of his role?"

But if there is a quality of rationed ersatz Ogden, there is a satisfactory allotment of handpicked, sunkissed, topflight, cream-of-the-crop Nash. In the 180 pages of 'Good Intentions' there are many—perhaps fifty by an inexact comptometer—which will tease, titillate (or will they titivate?), pique, and possibly convulse any reader." Louis Untermeyer
+ Sat R of Lit 25:38 D 5 '42 700w

NASSAU-SAARBRUCK, SOPHIA CHRISTINA CHARLOTTE (VON ERPACH) furstin von.
See Sophia Christina Charlotte, princess of Nassau-Saarbruck

NATHAN, ROBERT. Dunkirk; a ballad. 7p pa
50c Knopf
811 42-17935

This brief poem, or ballad, tells the story of two English children who take their little boat, the Sarah P, to aid in the evacuation of Dunkirk.

Reviewed by Coleman Rosenberger
Poetry 60:152 Je '42 420w

"There are excitement, action, and a flowing quality in the lines that tell us of the bravery of the little people in their little boats. . . Will, Bess, and the fourteen men brought safely back to England are living, breathing characters. There is the very real feel of the sea in the ballad. And 'Dunkirk' will live after this war is over; this thin book will still be thumbed and rethumbed long after the thick, sensational books of the day are thrown into dusty corners." J. J. Keith

+ Sat R of Lit 25:19 Ap 25 '42 300w

NATHAN, ROBERT. Sea-gull cry. 214p $2
Knopf

(W) 42-13731

Two refugees, a young girl and her small brother, find a temporary home on an old Cape Cod scow. They are befriended by a kindly Cape Codder and his wife, and later by a middle-aged college professor whose boat is wrecked near the scow. By the end of summer when winter and its problems were near, Louisa and Jeri had found a protector.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (10)
B & T (1) N Y Times (2) PW (1) RB (2)
W (1)

"Mr. Nathan is valuable as a poet, not as a mariner, and there are lovely descriptive passages in this story—the Cape under sun and fog, the blueberry patch, the sail home from Provincetown under full moon. But here is little of the enchantment which we remember in Portrait of Jennie, and none of that stern compassion which ennobled his Road of Ages. This is a grim year in which to expect any creative writer to measure up to his best work." Edward Weeks
Atlantic J1 '42 150w

Booklist 38:427 J1 1 '42

Bookmark 4:17 N '42

"The Sea-Gull Cry" has the authentic Nathan stamp, the fine, calm style, the measured careful prose." Rosemary Benet
+ Books p2 J1 5 '42 650w

"Mr. Nathan has given us another little work of art in this tender, tenuous tale. . . He writes with a fine economy of style, suggesting infinitely more than he says, but for all his intuitiveness he does not succeed in bringing to life his child characters. This is only a slight blemish in an otherwise charming idyll."

+ Cath World 155:636 Ag '42 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 J1 '42

"No successor to 'Portrait of Jennie,' but Nathan admirers will enjoy his endearing children and New Englanders. For readers who want to slip into something light for the summer."

Commonweal 36:235 Je 26 '42 100w

"The story in some ways will recall 'Good-Bye, Mr. Chips.' But there is more than story to this tale. . . In portraying the two children, the foreign lad who bore a bright badge of courage against the antagonism of those who are at home here and the plain little girl who was caught by the romance of the heroic, Nathan touches the shy heart of childhood. . . It is things like these, glittering through the book, which give it its radiance." Rose Feld
+ N Y Times p7 J1 5 '42 900w

New Yorker 18:56 J1 4 '42 70w

Pratt p12 D '42

"It is true that Mr. Nathan writes with skill, charm and tact, and that he avoids like the devil the quaintness which lies in wait for him at every turn. Indeed, his little story lacks only one thing; and that is, a point. Somehow or other, the refugee question refuses to take refuge in an old scow. It is too large and too human, and the atmosphere of an idyll is quite irrelevant to it." George Dangerfield

+ Sat R of Lit 25:12 J1 11 '42 360w

"The thousand of Nathan readers will find The Sea-Gull Cry pleasant summer reading. Others may be reminded of those hairdressers' exhibits where decolleté women with complete sets of sculptured curls smile forever in a windless world."

Time 40:80 Ag 17 '42 120w

NATIONAL COMMISSION ON COOPERATIVE CURRICULUM PLANNING. Subject fields in general education [ed. by John J. DeBoer]. 239p $1.50 Appleton-Century

373 Education—Curricula

"Including 13 chapters, each of which, except the last, considers the aims of instruction in one of the major high-school subject fields, with a view toward discovering the areas of common interest shared by all the subject fields and of determining the resources available in each field that may be utilized in an interdepartmental school program designed to promote the maximum growth of the learner in all areas of experience." School & Society

Booklist 38:226 Mr 1 '42

J Home Econ 34:118 F '42 110w

School & Society 54:536 D 6 '41 80w

Reviewed by J. M. Mart

School & Society 56:304 O 3 '42 400w

"The reviewer recommends this book as a sound body of recommendations on the content and methods for the subject fields in general education." C. C. Peters

+ Social Studies 33:186 Ap '42 550w

NATIONAL CONGRESS OF PARENTS AND TEACHERS. Community life in a democracy. See Bingham, F. C., ed.

NATIONAL EDUCATION ASSOCIATION OF THE UNITED STATES. Department of supervisors and directors of instruction. Americans all; studies in intercultural education; sponsored by the Department, the National council of teachers of English, the Society for curriculum study [fourteenth yearbook]. 385p il $2 Nat. educ.

370 Education

42-36159

"The book is the outgrowth of a smaller manuscript originally prepared for the Society for Curriculum but which later was made the nucleus for the fourteenth yearbook of the department of supervisors and directors of instruction of the National Education Association. The first three chapters are on objectives. Each of the next nine chapters is by a teacher who tells her own personal experience in carrying on inter-cultural education. The third section outlines 'Our Task,' and the last has bibliographies of carefully selected books for teachers, high school youth, elementary school children, librarians, and agencies." J Home Econ

Booklist 38:302 Ap 15 '42

"A worthwhile book for anybody concerned about American unity, but especially for teachers in elementary and high schools, regardless of what subject they teach."

+ J Home Econ 34:320 My '42 200w

NATIONAL RECREATION ASSOCIATION. Picnic book. See Fredrikson, C. L.

NATIONAL RESEARCH COUNCIL. Handbook of scientific and technical societies and institutions of the United States and Canada. 4th ed 389p $4 The council

506 Science—Societies. Learned institutions and societies

"This enlarged edition is a directory with data of 1269 organizations in the United States and 143 in Canada. It is not limited strictly to sciences and technology but includes also some general organizations and some trade associations active in research, as well as the affiliated societies of the three national research councils—the American council of learned societies, the American council on education, and the Social science research council. Personnel index of officers." Booklist

Booklist 38:429 Jl 1 '42

Chem & Met Eng 49:233 S '42 80w

Reviewed by G. H. Burnham

R of Scientific Instruments 13:457

O '42 120w

NATIONAL RESEARCH COUNCIL. Committee on work in industry. Fatigue of workers and its relation to industrial production. 165p $2.50 Reinhold

331.822 Fatigue

"Report of an investigation of the physical and mental reactions of industrial workers to environmental conditions. The title of this study is misleading, since it discusses not only the direct causes of fatigue but touches on the psychological origins of labor disturbances, industrial causes of illnesses, extra-time allowances, principles of organization, etc." Management R

Reviewed by A. M. Baetjer

Am J Pub Health 32:764 Jl '42 320w

Booklist 38:173 Ja 15 '42

"The bulk of the book deals with some of the psychological problems of employment which influence the emotional reaction of employees and which in this way may show various effects on production. The liberal interpretation of the term 'fatigue' might include such factors, but certainly the average executive, personnel manager or industrial physician, looking for practical help in controlling the fatigue of workers, would be disappointed in what he would find in this book." A. G. Cranch

Chem & Met Eng 49:176 Jl '42 130w

Management R 31:109 Mr '42 100w

"As written, the book is unlikely to have very wide circulation, but a way should be found to place its conclusions in the hands of every factory executive, personnel manager, and trade-union leader."

Nation 154:720 Je 20 '42 300w

Reviewed by Alice Hamilton

New Repub 107:291 S 7 '42 1450w

Discussion by Crane Brinton

Sat R of Lit 24:7 D 27 '41 1000w

"This book is a fillip, not so much because of its content per se as for the avenues for research and investigation that it suggests for social scientist and industrial hygienist alike. It is this future challenge that makes the reading of this book profitable." Joseph Hirsh

+ Social Forces 20:508 My '42 240w

"The report, in its detailed discussion, genuinely clarifies some crucial issues of industry. It is the more to be deplored that its conclusions on what, according to its title, is its main theme, are misleading and may be highly damaging. Indeed, the title of this book is a misnomer. This is no study of fatigue. Its generalizations on the subject are not based on representative industrial practice." Josephine Goldmark

+ — Survey G 31:264 My '42 390w

NAYLOR, ESTILL ESS. The federal budget system in operation. 306p il pa $3 Hayworth ptg. co, 629 G st, N.W., Washington, D.C.

351.72 Budget. Finance—U.S.

42-14414

"[Mr Naylor] describes the awakening, at the turn of the century, to the need for budget reform, the pioneer work of President Taft's Committee on Economy and Efficiency, followed by the services of the Institute for Government Research, the passage of the resultant bill which brought the reluctant veto of President Wilson because of a feature which he believed unconstitutional, and the final passage of the measure during the administration of President Harding. The author describes the Bureau of the Budget set-up, showing the complete responsibility of the President in budget-drafting and the manner in which each administrative agency must justify its request for money before the budget message is sent to Congress. He points out the unification of appropriation work in Congress and a bit of the detail work in House and Senate." Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by B. L. French

Am Pol Sci R 36:582 Je '42 260w

Reviewed by Alzada Comstock

Current Hist 2:373 Jl '42 650w

NECHAEV, I. Chemical elements; the fascinating story of their discovery and of the famous scientists who discovered them; tr. by Beatrice Kinkead. 223p il $2.50 Coward-McCann

546 Chemical elements—Juvenile literature. Chemists (W) 42-23717

"Account of discovery of the elements told in informal, dramatic manner that makes search for each almost as exciting as a detective story. Translated from Russian. Beginning with oxygen, one discovery leads to next, down to radium and work of the Curies." (Library J) Glossary.

Booklist 39:75 N 1 '42

"An informal style, accompanied by charts and diagrams, makes lively reading of these records. . . . As told by a young Russian chemist, who understands how to popularize science without being sensational, the story of what man has found out in laboratories and apothecary shops is absorbing." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:343 S '42 70w

"A few thrusts at indifferent, frivolous capitalistic society indicate book's origin but do not mar it. Especially suitable for children eleven to fifteen but could also be used with adults unable to understand chemistry texts. Charts and diagrams. Glossary." Eleanor Kidder

+ Library J 67:688 Ag '42 90w

Scientific Bk Club R 13:4 O '42 420w

Springf'd Republican p8 N 12 '42 290w

NEF, JOHN ULRIC. United States and civilization. 421p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

901 Civilization. U.S.—Civilization 42-1619

This book contains the substance of lectures delivered by the author at the University of Chicago under the Walgreen Foundation for the Study of American Institutions. It is in essence an attempt to answer the questions: what is wrong with our western civilization, why is it wrong, and what can be done about it. It is also in the nature of an epilogue to a work in progress in which the author expects to survey "industrial history in relation to the history of civilization since the Renaissance." Index.

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres

Am Econ R 32:367 D '42 1150w

Reviewed by J. H. Randall, Jr.

Am Hist R 48:346 Ja '43 850w

Reviewed by Gottfried Salomon

Am J Soc 48:427 N '42 1000w

Reviewed by E. A. Helms

Am Pol Sci R 36:352 Ap '42 700w

"Professor Nef has handled his material well. He has presented his facts clearly, adequately, and with a deftness that leaves the reader with a healthful respect for the author's ability. At times, however, his enthusiasm for his subject appears to have caused Professor Nef to become overcritical. Again, it would be difficult to conceive that any Catholic would go along with the author on the idea that the Church could accede to subsidy by the state and still remain free. These criticisms are minor in comparison to the value of the book as a whole. It answers the most complex question at a time when America is meeting the greatest test of her self-chosen way of life." J. J. Flynn

+ Ann Am Acad 221:197 My '42 550w

Bookmark 3:11 My '42

"Nothing would give me more satisfaction than to be able to recommend a book which calls for a Christian cultural reformation, but this book I am unable to praise, because I suspect that it is but another symptom of the crisis of cultural confusion in which we stand." Wilhelm Pauck

Christian Century 59:1088 S 9 '42 1250w

"Dr. Nef displays the moderation of a truly rich mind. His convictions are strong, but he does not weaken his case by exaggeration. He concedes that the scientific approach to social studies and the concern for material welfare has borne fruit, and finds them objectionable only when they displace ethical principles. Christopher Dawson has pointed out the need for an integration of technical progress with sound philosophy, with each given its proper place. This is the aim of Professor Nef." J. N. Moody

+ Commonweal 35:467 F 27 '42 800w

"This volume is stimulating, suggestive, provocative, and vigorous as a philosophizing about the relation of the United States and its development to the role of civilization in the world. . . . In general the only critical comment to be offered concerns a certain repetitiveness and prolixity of style. The reader would have been better served and the author would have been even more cogent if, by a careful re-examination of his manuscript, he had edited it down by at least a fifth. But the patient reader is rewarded, and the total result is a much-needed, over-all view of our American problem and of the ways toward its resolution." Ordney Tead

+ Ethics 53:153 Ja '43 500w

"A provocative, thoughtful analysis. . . . It is also an interesting philosophy of history."

+ Social Studies 33:144 Mr '42 40w

Reviewed by Thomas Woody

Social Studies 33:183 Ap '42 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p407 Ag 15 '42 180w

NEGLEY, GLENN. Organization of knowledge; an introduction to philosophical analysis. 373p $4; to schools $3 Prentice-Hall

121 Knowledge, Theory of. Methodology 42-3545

Attempts to outline a plan for the organization of knowledge. Part one examines the nature of analysis. Part two is devoted to analysis and the sciences, and examines the mutual relations of those categories which are cognate; the third part surveys fallacies in analysis. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Reinhard Bendix

Am J Soc 48:259 S '42 360w

"The style is fluent and attractive; the treatment of illustrative material, and of the incidental issues that arise in the course of the exposition, is always suggestive and often refreshingly iconoclastic. At a time when both education and public policy are in need of the guidance that only science can provide, such a courageous and original attack upon the problem of marshaling our intellectual resources is worthy of high praise." G. R. Morrow

+ Ann Am Acad 223:261 S '42 1100w

Reviewed by E. W. Hall

Ethics 53:151 Ja '43 280w

"Only the first two parts of the book are clearly relevant to its professed aim; and what is remarkable about them is that they consume 207 pages in formulating an obvious scheme of classification. A few of the fallacies cited in the third part of the book are amusing; but the discussion never rises above an elementary level. There is more substance in the appendices than elsewhere in the volume; in any event, it is not evident to this reviewer what the book contributes either to philosophical analysis or to the organization of knowledge." E. N.

+ J Philos 39:248 Ap 23 '42 300w

School & Society 55:224 F 21 '42 20w

Social Studies 33:239 My '42 20w

"In verification of my appreciation of the commanding need for such a book, I turned to students of all classes and was greeted with a universal endorsement of its content and method. We all agreed that the book had the fine distinction of being written in English, not in technical jargon." C. N. Sisson

+ Social Studies 33:283 O '42 420w

NEHRU, JAWAHARLAL. Glimpses of world history; being further letters to his daughter written in prison, and containing a rambling account of history for young people; with 50 maps by J. F. Horrabin. 993p $4 Day [10s 6d Drummond]

909 History, Universal—Juvenile literature. Civilization—History. History, Universal (W) 42-13781

In the late 1920s, while he was in prison as a revolutionary against British government

NEHRU, JAWAHARLAL—Continued
in India, the author began this series of letters to his small daughter in which he traces world history from its beginnings down to the present. First published in 1934 the book has been revised and expanded and now concludes with events of the year 1938. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Mills
Am Pol Sci R 36:1000 O '42 370w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Atlantic 170:106 Ag '42 150w
Booklist 38:439 J1 15 '42

Reviewed by Albert Guerard
Books p3 J1 19 '42 1000w

"There is no doubt whatever about the success of this remarkable Indian leader in bringing off his task. He has succeeded not only in writing a fascinating chronicle of human life and struggle, of human dreams and frustrations, of human courage and culture. He has managed, in the writing to interpret East to West and West to East." J. H. Powers
+ Boston Globe p17 Je 10 '42 500w

Reviewed by F. H. Underhill
Canadian Forum 22:279 D '42 850w

"For more than a decade before the writing of this book began, Nehru was collecting notes. For years he had done considerable writing for Indian newspapers and magazines. These notes, together with a few books available in the primitive prisons of India, constituted his only aids. But the great body of this comprehensive survey of world history came from his own well furnished mind. While the result is one in which the meticulous historical scholar will find occasional flaws in fact and will more often differ on points of emphasis and interpretation, this reviewer believes that for at least four important reasons this book should commend itself to the careful study of every person who realizes that in peace as well as in war ours is at last inevitably a global civilization." H. E. Fey

+ Christian Century 59:1219 O 7 '42 1000w
"It is seldom, perhaps, that I have read a more disappointing book than is this huge volume. . . . The bulk of the book is given over to astonishingly slavish rewriting of Mr. H. G. Wells. . . . The trouble is that the stylistic color of Wells fades out in the Nehru magnum opus, leaving all the clichés and the whoppers exposed to the gray scrutiny of the naked eye." G. N. Shuster

+ Commonweal 36:450 Ag 28 '42 550w

"This book labors under the handicap that it must be compared with Nehru's previous work, Toward Freedom, which is one of the classic autobiographies of all time. Frankly it is not so good; it has neither the brilliance and color of style nor the startlingly penetrating psychological mastery of Toward Freedom. Though published later, Glimpses of World History was written first, before Nehru had attained to his full literary and intellectual stature. Nevertheless, in itself it is an excellent book." Adam Margashes

+ Current Hist 3:255 N '42 1200w

"A history of the world by the second most important leader of India naturally arouses great interest. It is, if nothing more, a testimony to the intellectual versatility of its author, who amid the activities of political life has read so widely and gathered facts so intelligently that he has managed to produce a quite creditable survey of world history, not inferior to Wells's Outline of History, to which incidentally the author acknowledges his indebtedness. . . . It cannot be claimed that the book as history contains anything striking or original, although its emphasis on Oriental events and its treatment of the great heroes of the East wholesomely offset the usual historical survey which makes world history ancillary to the history of Europe." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Nation 155:117 Ag 8 '42 650w

New Repub 107:126 J1 27 '42 60w

"It is not intended as a formal history and does not claim to rival Wells' famous Outline. It rambles, stops in the way, is full of personal touches; it is rather unemphatic about dates and facts, and it is, remember, written for a child. It lacks proportion, it repeats itself, it is unoriginal. Yet

I think it one of the most useful books for grownups I have read in some time." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:69 Je 13 '42 450w

Reviewed by Helen Mears
Survey G 31:430 O '42 500w
Time 40:84 J1 6 '42 550w

NEILSON, MRS FRANCES FULLERTON. Donkey from Dorking; il. by Lidia Vitale and Janet Hopkins. 86p $1.50 Dutton

(W) 42-6282

Tale of two elderly English people, Mr and Mrs Puffeather, their little grey donkey, and the two small boys who taught the donkey to do tricks, especially the trick of riding a bicycle. Eventually Longears, the donkey, was sold to a circus because he could do tricks, but it did not work out well—Longears ran away. Then at a command performance before the king and queen everything was put right.

"There is just enough of the fairy tale quality about the pretty story to give it a sunshiny atmosphere and the certainty of a happy end." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Mr 15 '42 250w

"While theme of story has possibilities of great charm for children, the plot is poorly worked out. No style nor dramatic appeal, and characters are wooden and colorless. . . . Do not recommend." Elizabeth Babcock
— Library J 67:633 J1 '42 50w

"Humorous story that should have wide appeal among eight- and nine-year-old children." R. W. Davis

+ Library J 67:633 J1 '42 50w

"This well-meaning, simple story is easy for 6 and 7 year olds to follow, but it wavers between the real and fanciful until the reader has difficulty in believing in Longears either as an actual or as a make-believe donkey, and the narrative plods along in uninspired fashion. Stories can be simple without being dull, and imagination and genuine spontaneous humor are qualities that can ill be spared in a child's early reading." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 5 '42 330w

Wis Lib Bul 38:98 Je '42

NELSON, WILBUR LUNDINE. Petroleum refinery engineering. 2d ed 715p il $6 McGraw 665.5 Petroleum industry and trade 42-815

"This new edition of a volume (first published in 1936) [Book Review Digest, 1936] contains corrections in the tables of physical constants and material on the development of recent processing methods. New chapters on Rebuilding hydrocarbons, Auxiliaries to processing, Solvent treating or extraction processes have been added. There is also added material on multiple-component fractionation, catalytic processes and solvent dewaxing." (N Y New Tech Bks) Indexes.

"Nelson's is the only book of its kind—a proved complete text and reference book brought up to date in the second edition. It should find as wide use as the first edition which set a new standard for petroleum-refining texts." G. G. Brown

+ Chem & Eng N 20:484 Ap 10 '42 300w

"An excellent compendium of the many valuable relationships derived during the 'Modern' period of the petroleum industry presented as an integrated and usable tool for both the technologist and the student." H. W. Sheldon

+ Chem & Met Eng 49:165 Je '42 130w
N Y New Tech Bks 27:27 Ap '42

NELSON, WILLIAM. Airplane lofting. 147p il $1.80 McGraw

629.1341 Airplanes—Design and construction. Mechanical drawing 41-26018

"The first text on the lay-off of airplanes in the mold loft. It is designed for students entering either loft or sheet metal working fields of airplane construction. Brief descriptions of the design and construction of airplanes are given." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

Booklist 38:185 F 1 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:21 Ap '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:77 My '42

NEUMAN, ABRAHAM AARON. Cyrus Adler; a biographical sketch. 233p il $2.50 Jewish pub.

B or 92 Adler, Cyrus

42-5914

"A life of the late Dr. Adler, for many years president of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America and of Dropsie College for Hebrew and Cognate Learning, and an honored leader in many scholarly and benevolent enterprises. His memoirs have already been published under the title, I Have Considered the Days [Book Review Digest, 1941]." Christian Century

Christian Century 59:433 Ap 1 '42 50w

"This biographical portrait has the inspiring interest of a great religious leader and a many-sided intelligence. It is written with clarity and balance and its comprehensive text is well illustrated with fourteen photographs."

N Y Times p9 Ap 5 '42 550w

NEUMAN, ABRAHAM AARON. Jews in Spain; their social, political and cultural life during the middle ages. 2v 317;410p il maps ea $2.50 Jewish pub.

296.0946 Jews in Spain

42-21783

"The special mine of materials upon which Dr. Neuman has drawn, and which has not previously been used in any comparable way, is the great collections of rabbinic responsa, which are most copious for the twelfth century and for the late thirteenth and early fourteenth. These responsa are opinions given in writing by eminent rabbis, heads of academies or Jewish communal authorities, in reply to questions submitted to them concerning a great variety of matters. They deal with living conditions, property rights, social relations, economics and industry, dress, food, taxes, duties to the state and the defense of rights guaranteed by the state, as well as with ritual, ceremonial and theology." Christian Century

"In a work that is a monument of historical research and a model of historical writing, Dr. Neuman turns what might have been only a scholarly monograph which only other scholars with a similar specialized interest could read with profit into a treatise of vastly wider appeal and of obvious relevance to the contemporary scene—and that without abating by one jot the precision of his historical method and without one tittle of special pleading for his own people. In this record of Jewish life in medieval Spain there is a rich body of varied material—enlightening, moving, shocking and amusing—but there is not a whimper in the book, not even a surreptitious plea for sympathy, not a syllable of resentment, not a prejudicial adjective." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 59:1321 O 28 '42 1000w

Social Studies 33:380 D '42 10w

NEUMANN, ALFRED. Friends of the people; tr. by Countess Nora Wydenbruck and the author. 386p $2.50 Macmillan [10s 6d Hutchinson]

[A 41-3161]

Historical novel built around the French statesman, Gambetta, and the life in Paris during 1870-71—the Siege and the Commune. It follows the author's Another Caesar (1935) and The Gaudy Empire (1937). Among the chief characters are Rigault, the police chief and public prosecutor of the Commune; a sixteen-year-old boy who hero-worships Rigault and becomes his assistant; the poet Verlaine; and Clemenceau, then a young doctor.

"This picture is a brilliant one in many of its details. Neumann time and again seems on the verge of achieving genuine subtlety and power. Yet the promising beginnings ravel out and the forcefulness of certain scenes is lacking in the whole." H. N. Doughty, Jr.

— + Books p8 My 24 '42 1100w

Christian Century 59:932 Ag 12 '42 130w

"Though well translated and readable, I found it interminably long, exceedingly tedious, and uninteresting, except, perhaps, to students of Second Empire. Recommended only to libraries that have bought first two in series." S. E. Sherman

— + Library J 67:368 Ap 15 '42 80w

"The story is quick and easy in pace, and the tone is vivid if a trifle flamboyant. Gambetta, Clemenceau, and Rochefort are the principal historical characters and Verlaine comes in at intervals as a fantastic distiller of poetry out of absinthe." Charles Marriott

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 24 '41 250w

"An incoherent and very dull book."

— Nation 154:720 Je 20 '42 150w

New Repub 107:30 Ji 6 '42 120w

Reviewed by George Orwell

New Statesman & Nation 21:278 Mr 15 '41 700w

"A powerful and dramatically unusual story. . . This latest book not only stands alone and complete as a story; it holds also its distinct challenge to present thought. And yet it is as a story that it is most tensely interesting; a story whose actors are nearly all well known in history, and whose characterizations are as arresting as its events are merciless." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p6 My 17 '42 1300w

New Yorker 18:73 My 16 '42 90w

Reviewed by Garrett Mattingly

Sat R of Lit 25:7 Je 6 '42 480w

"The scene is noisy and sinister, but what it was all about nobody without a considerable previous knowledge of history could possibly guess. . . All that one gathers is that Mr. Neumann pretty heartily hates everybody, except Clemenceau, and perhaps Gambetta; but it is only fair to say that some of his scenes are dramatically good, and that his book is the Evening Standard book of the month." Bonamy Dobrée

— + Spec 166:126 Ja 31 '41 200w

"Mr. Neumann makes a brilliant study of [Rigault] the shrewd, sardonic, cowardly rogue, with his grain of ideologic sincerity, to save him from total corruption; the 'little imitation Marat,' as one of the other characters calls him, is terrifying without being melodramatic; but he is rather a pinchbeck protagonist. . . Through the book strides also Clemenceau, then young, a doctor and Mayor of Montmartre; and here again Mr. Neumann may be congratulated warmly on a vigorous, convincing and subtle piece of imaginative historical portraiture. . . It must unfortunately be added that the translation is unworthy a novel of such distinction."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p29 Ja 18 '41 750w

NEUMANN, FRANZ L. Behemoth; the structure and practice of national socialism. 532p $4 Oxford

943.085 Germany—Nazi movement, Germany—Politics and government 42-10078

"Franz L. Neumann is a former member of the Berlin Bar who left Germany in 1933 and who since has been engaged in research in this country and in England. He has lived in the United States since 1936, is a member of the International Institute of Social Research at Columbia University and a visiting lecturer at Columbia for 1942-43. Drawing on this first-hand knowledge (up to the seizure of power by the Nazis), scholarship and legal training, Dr. Neumann has now written, in 'Behemoth,' a study of the spiritual and economic dynamics of national socialist imperialism." (Books) Index.

"Despite the erudition and the critical method of research which are evident throughout the work, the author is not always convincing. His approach to his subject is one that might be expected of a former member of the Berlin bar who was for a time counsel to the German trade unions... Although he takes great pains to explain his point of view and, indeed, has written a series of valuable essays on political and social theory within his book on National Socialism, his social philosophy often seems too metaphysical and his conclusions too doctrinaire... In other words, this book, packed with information not hitherto available in English and noteworthy for originality and acumen, attempts to prove too much by arguments too dependent upon a preconceived thesis." D. E. Lee

NEUMANN, F. L.—Continued

— + Am Hist R 48:337 Ja '43 550w

Reviewed by Oscar Jászi
Am Pol Sci R 36:771 Ag '42 1300w

Reviewed by M. Y. Sweezy
Ann Am Acad 222:195 Jl '42 600w

"One of the most important books on the Third Reich yet published." W. R. Deuel
+ Books p6 My 10 '42 2850w

Reviewed by R. F. Creegan
Christian Century 59:1356 N 4 '42 1000w

Current Hist 2:463 Ag '42 700w

"It is the minuteness and detail which make the book valuable. To unravel and set out the confusing tangle of public and semi-public institutions is in itself an achievement... Professor Laski hardly puts it too highly when he calls it 'the ablest study of the Nazi system at work.' But the book suffers from some serious drawbacks. The most obvious is an extraordinarily legalistic attitude." H. W. S.

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 O 7 '42 430w

Reviewed by S. F. Bloom
New Repub 106:898 Je 29 '42 2000w

Reviewed by K. S. Pinson
Pol Sci Q 57:441 S '42 1300w

Pratt p14 O '42

"A high degree of literacy is required for the reading of [this book]. Franz Neumann, who is one of the most brilliant of the representatives of liberal German scholarship in the United States, makes few concessions to popular demands for glib journalism. But for the literati, 'Behemoth' is an intellectually exciting experience of the first order. And for the effective waging of total war, even the illiterati must somehow be brought to understand what Neumann has to say." F. L. Schuman

+ Sat R of Lit 25:9 My 2 '42 1050w

"The book is long, erudite in various fields, heavily documented. Somewhat cramped by an approach to the subject that is perhaps to be described as Germanically academic, and prone to stop short at a mechanistic interpretation of German historical development, it is nevertheless a cogent and elaborately instructive piece of work."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p518 O 24 '42 1100w

NEUMANN, SIGMUND. Permanent revolution; the total state in a world at war. 388p $3 Harper

321.6 Totalitarianism. Dictators 42-22249

"Analysis of the institutional framework and social fabric of the European dictatorships, which throws light on the driving forces which make and break modern governments." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"Professor Neumann has analyzed many aspects of the problem of the leader-society synthesis with scholarly objectivity and yet with deep regard for basic human values. His book is by no means what is called a 'brilliant performance,' but it is more realistic and much better informed than is any similar treatise I have seen." G. N. Shuster

+ N Y Times p37 O 25 '42 1550w

"An important book and one which should reach many serious readers tired of 'Last Trains From Berlin,' 'Confessions of Nazi Spies' or 'Agents in Italy' and similar products of sensationalism. By virtue of his sociological and historical training and mastery of a vast material the author is particularly well fitted for analyzing the structure of modern dictatorships." Karl Loewenstein

+ Springfd Republican p7e N 1 '42 950w

NEVINS, ALLAN. America in world affairs. 140p $1 (3s 6d) Oxford

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations (W) 42-2298

"In this volume we have a brief, compressed narrative of the principal events in American foreign relations between the World War and the present day, and an analysis of the traditional, geographical, political, and economic forces involved. The book attempts to deal with basic principles and issues." Publisher's note

Bookmark 3:5 Mr '42

Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 3 '42 360w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:779 Jl '42 10w

"Immensely timely and useful... The former Harmsworth Professor of American History at Oxford has presented us with an admirable parting gift."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 23 '41 100w

"Mr. Nevins sheds added light upon the inconsistency of American foreign politics by showing to what degree the President and the Department of State have always been inclined to accept the more positive and responsible attitude toward world affairs, while the great power of the Senate in treaty-making permitted isolationist impulses, particularly those of the agrarian states, to introduce contradictory notes into American foreign policy. The persistence of this inconsistency in our foreign relations is really quite remarkable, and Mr. Nevins traces it with skill... Mr. Nevins does not give advice in regard to the future. He contents himself with the more modest task of historical analysis. But it is the kind of analysis which illumines the future and points unmistakably to the necessity of the United States assuming responsibilities commensurate with its preponderant power." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Nation 154:230 F 21 '42 420w

"Allan Nevins shows himself in this little volume, as in his previous writings, calm, well-balanced, accurate and fair, with a democratic enthusiasm too deep to express itself in glittering rhetoric. He is a scholar and a humanist in the old and glowing meanings of those words." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 5 '42 800w

"Professor Nevins takes the view that we have a definite share of responsibility for the catastrophe of the present war. He does and he tells why, citing judiciously and without heat some of the mistakes we made which in his opinion helped to bring on and then to spread aggression. Even if you do not agree with Mr. Nevins you will find the reading stimulating." F. T. Birchall

+ Sat R of Lit 25:14 F 21 '42 700w

Spec 168:88 Ja 23 '42 90w

"'America in World Affairs' has come at the right moment and in the right manner. With America's formal entry into the war, it is important that there should be a clearer understanding of the course and cross-currents of American foreign policy... What Professor Nevins has to say on American policy in the Far East is of exceptional interest to-day."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p651 D 27 '41 650w

NEVINS, ALLAN, and COMMAGER, HENRY STEELE. America, the story of a free people. 507p il maps $3 Little

973 U.S.—History (W) 42-24625

History of the development of the United States from the first English settlement to Pearl Harbor. The book is written "for the layman, not for the scholar." Index.

Booklist 39:182 Ja 1 '43

"It takes courage and humility for a historian to prepare, under the double pressure of time and urgent demand, a work attempting so much in pages relatively so few. It is courageous because historians of the first rank, such as these two, are well aware that whatever they write enters into the corpus of historical writing, quotable as long as history is written. To decide, on notice so short, just what shall be thrown out of a history of a free people so that the progress of its story of freedom shall not be impeded, was an act whose cost only historians appreciate. But it was also an act of faith, and by that the book is justified." M. L. Becker
+ Books p42 D 6 '42 1000w

"An amazing piece of comprehension and of compression. But what is even more amazing is the number of things they manage to include, and the variety of things touched upon. The authors insist that, despite Europeans, ours is a romantic and exciting history, possessed by beauty and richness and grace. This they have made it." Francis Downing
+ Commonweal 37:209 D 11 '42 900w
Wis Lib Bul 38:186 D '42

NEVIUS, WARREN NELSON. Religion as experience and truth; an introduction to the philosophy of religion. 438p $3 Presbyterian bd.

201 Religion—Philosophy 41-25066

"The work is divided into three sections: the phenomenological aspect of religious philosophy, i.e., the anthropological, cultural, and psychological data; the Epistemological Problem, with special consideration to the Problems of Religious Knowledge; and the Ontological Problem, in which the author treats 'The Breakdown of Scientific Naturalism', 'God the Creator', 'God and the Order of Nature', 'God and the Necessities of Thought', and 'God and Moral Values', 'Evil', 'Human Freedom', and 'Immortality'." Churchman

"Religion as Experience and Truth reveals the author's unmistakable erudition, logical mind and keen sense of truth and values. Moreover, its lucidity places it within the comprehension of any intelligent reader. . . . For the college class this volume will supply an extraordinarily fine textbook. For the youth in the throes of uncertainty it will open many windows toward the light. For the clergy it will afford a digest of much of the best religious thinking of our day, always fruitfully focused upon those areas in which their chief perils and perplexities lie." H. D. McKeehan

+ Christian Century 58:1509 D 3 '41 700w

"In some ways this is one of the best books of its type published during the past twenty-five years. Dr. Nevius is at his best in scientific and historical aspects of religious philosophy. There are several disappointing aspects of the book nevertheless. One is the treatment of Kant." J. P. McGarvey

+ — Churchman 156:18 Ja 15 '42 230w

NEW YORK (city). City college. Civilian defense council. Handbook of civilian protection; ed. by Louis L. Snyder; under the supervision of Richard B. Morris and Joseph E. Wisan; with a foreword by Augustin M. Prentiss and an introd. by Guy E. Snively. (Whittlesey house publication) 184p il $1.25 McGraw

355.23 Civilian defense (W) 42-10183

Information on problems to be met in case of air raids, incendiary bombs and high explosives, fire fighting, poison gas, etc. Contains a section on first aid, and one each on civilian conservation and salvage, and nutrition in wartime. Tabulation of chemical warfare agents on inside back covers. Index.

Booklist 38:362 Je 1 '42

Reviewed by Emmet Crozier
Books p14 My 24 '42 30w

"It was not for the engineer or the technical man that this handbook was written, but for the man in the street, the American of average education. And for its purpose, the book is admirable; the style is simple and concise, the subject matter fundamental, logically presented and well outlined. Among the praiseworthy features of the book are the 'Ten Commandments' displayed at the end of each chapter." J. R. Callahan

+ Chem & Met Eng 49:166 Je '42 460w

"A valuable feature is the selected critical bibliography of subjects covered in condensed form in the handbook."

+ Eng N 128:95 Je 4 '42 130w

J Home Econ 34:685 N '42 50w

"This little booklet or its equivalent should be in the hands of defense volunteers in such of the larger American cities as are vulnerable to aerial attack." D. W. Mitchell

+ Nation 155:244 S 19 '42 180w

NEW YORK. MUSEUM OF MODERN ART. Americans, 1942; 18 artists from 9 states; ed. by Dorothy C. Miller; with statements by the artists, 128p il $2; pa $1 Museum of modern art

759.1 Paintings, American. Sculpture. Artists, American

Reproductions in black and white of paintings and sculpture by eighteen modern American artists, with brief biographical sketches of the artists and, in many cases, a statement in the artist's own words, of his art ideals and objectives.

Booklist 38:270 Ap 1 '42

"The mark of derivation and understudy is so continuously present among these craftsmen, the submersion of insight by medium and craft is so deliberately patented an appeal among their exhibits that when their talent for diverting and entertaining the spectator is spent, they show few of the solid satisfactions we have a right to expect of a display of national proportions." M. D. Zabel

Nation 154:260 F 28 '42 390w

NEW YORKER (periodical). War album. [108p] il $2 Random house

741 Humor, Pictorial. Caricatures and cartoons 42-36379

A collection of drawings taken from the files of the New Yorker published since Pearl Harbor. Forty artists are represented by one hundred and fifty pictures.

Booklist 39:118 D 1 '42

"'The New Yorker Album' pins down with exceptional firmness and permanence those evanescent flavors, attitudes, wistfulnesses, vexations, composites which are peculiar to this particular moment in this country. It is the contemporary variations on the old human themes which are registered, and the album for that reason will have another interest for us ten years hence. Its contents are intensely human but just as intensely topical. Whitney Darrow's jovial elderly civilian confronting a general is probably the best crack about civilians, officers and the war generally." Iris Barry

+ Books p7 D 13 '42 450w

"There is nothing funny about war itself, but there are plenty of funny aspects to the reactions of various kinds of people to war, both soldiers and civilians. The New Yorker's cartoons are an unfailing fountain of joy. A lot of them are collected in this album. They induce a kind of mirth that is good for a nation that needs all the mirth it can get."

+ Christian Century 59:1359 N 4 '42 70w

New Yorker 18:84 O 31 '42 50w

NEWBERRY, MRS CLARE (TURLAY). Marshmallow: story and pictures by [the author]. [31p] $1.75 Harper

(W) 42-22858

Picture-story book for little children. It describes the adventures of a middle-aged cat living in a New York apartment, and the small white rabbit which came to join the family.

Booklist 39:108 N 15 '42

NEWBERRY, C. T.—Continued

"The rabbit is rapidly sketched; the pictures of Oliver, successively scared, curious, absorbed, enthusiastic and paternal are completely successful examples of animal psychology in color. They will be so popular with babies that the one with the two cuddled together is given in duplicate, detachable for framing. This cat is more robust and less fluffy than Mittens: you are more conscious of his muscles." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 15 '42 280w

"Grown-ups will appreciate Marshmallow and they will probably be continually borrowing from the nursery shelves."

+ Cath World 156:372 D '42 70w

"A true story charmingly told and illustrated."

+ Churchman 156:15 N 15 '42 10w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 37:116 N 20 '42 20w

"An engaging story." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:419 N '42 40w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 67:882 O 15 '42 30w

"Children from four to eight will thoroughly enjoy it." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 67:956 N 1 '42 50w

"It is a pleasure indeed to welcome such a delightful combination of beauty, understanding of children and animals, and droll humor, as Mrs. Newberry's latest book, based we are told on fact, and with all the illustrations done from life... Children and adults can enjoy together the tale of Marshmallow and Oliver, and no one with a love for animals or an eye for drawings will be able to resist Mrs. Newberry's fascinating pictures." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 N 15 '42 280w

New Yorker 18:105 D 12 '42 50w

"Really beautiful drawings of animals... There is a detachable illustration which would make a happy addition to any nursery. Too static a story for very small children, it will be cherished by readers old enough to respect it."

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:28 N 14 '42 50w

NEWCOMB, COVELLE. Vagabond in velvet; the story of Miguel de Cervantes; il. by Addison Burbank. 262p $2.50 Longmans

Cervantes Saavedra, Miguel de—Juvenile literature (W) 42-21762

Life story of Cervantes, the author of Don Quixote, written in fiction form for older children. The hero is portrayed as a lovable person, who made mistakes, but retrieved them by his high courage.

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Atlantic 170:149 D '42 70w

Booklist 39:53 O 15 '42

"The best of Miss Newcomb's excellent biographical series." M. L. Becker

+ Books p18 N 15 '42 280w

Cath World 156:381 D '42 120w

"[Cervantes'] colorful and adventurous life, somewhat expurgated and rendered a little more edifying for young Catholic readers than the original, is here made into a first-class piece of juvenile fiction. It could not be other than a good tale with Cervantes for its hero."

+ Christian Century 59:1030 Ag 26 '42 70w

Churchman 156:16 N 15 '42 20w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 37:116 N 20 '42 20w

"The life of Cervantes is skillfully handled in this chronicle of sharp contrasts and dramatic turns of fortune... Covelle Newcomb's engrossing story is accompanied by vivid pictures by Addison Burbank." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:432 N '42 80w

"Highly dramatic biography. [Cervantes'] shortcomings are glossed over, in fact made almost pathetic; but his courage in spite of odds and many difficulties is set at a very high level. Children will read it as a good story and forget the biographical import. Excellent picture of Spain in sixteenth century. Recommended." M. R. Lucas

+ Library J 67:798 S 15 '42 60w

"Dust off your Don Quixote, for the children will be demanding it after reading this colorful life of its author." P. D. Edie

+ Library J 67:890 O 15 '42 40w

"An ingratiating life of Cervantes." M. C. Scoggin

+ Library J 67:896 O 15 '42 20w

"Cervantes's biography provides rich background material for students of literature and of Spanish subjects, besides rivaling any novel for action and suspense." I. S.

+ N Y Times p30 N 15 '42 220w

NEWELL, MRS. HOPE (HOCKENBERRY). Cinder Ike; il. by Anne Merriman Peck. 121p $1.75 Nelson

42-22617

"A somewhat drab existence takes a surprising turn for Maeve and Dermott, children of a Pennsylvania coal miner, when Maeve invokes an ancient charm, 'all fairies near will now appear.' A happy story, sparkling with Irish friendliness. For those who hold with fairies. Grades 2-4." Booklist

Booklist 39:124 D 1 '42

"Skillfully written, natural and childlike, showing how right attitude and enough imagination will lift people out of dreary reality. Children will love it. Excellent illustrations by Anne Merriman Peck, perfectly suited to text." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 67:1069 D 1 '42 70w

NEWELL, MRS. HOPE (HOCKENBERRY). Steppin and family; pictures by Anne Merriman Peck. 198p $2 Oxford

(W) 42-36134

Steppin was a Harlem Negro boy with a desire to be a tap dancer. The day he sat under the Wishing Tree was the luckiest day of his life, for it was then that he met Bob Williams, the famous Negro dancer, and friend to all Harlem. With Bob's help Steppin was soon on his way to becoming a dancer.

Booklist 38:279 Ap 1 '42

"By the time you have attended the public school entertainment that opens this cheerful story, you are at home in Harlem. The speech is true—not in the least like Uncle Remus but with a cadence and an imagery all its own."

+ Books p10 My 10 '42 460w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 27 '42 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '42

"Such another story of boy life in a big American city, written with so much human understanding, is not easy to find... The charm of the book is enhanced by the spirited and authentic drawings of New York's negro city."

+ Horn Bk M 18:112 Mr '42 430w

"Characters are distinctively drawn, and Steppin's reactions are those of any boy of his age. Much humor. Story is told without dialect. Comparable to Arna Bontemps' Sad Faced Boy, but lacks some of its spark. Well illustrated. Recommended for children ten to thirteen." E. A. Groves

+ Library J 67:269 Mr 15 '42 100w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:891 O 15 '42 10w

"Here, in story and pictures is Harlem—neighborly, varied, and very much alive. Children of 7 to 12, especially those who like to dance, will find Steppin's story full of fun and interest, and it should please Negro children, for it treats one of themselves neither as a comic nor an ignoramus, but as a real and likable boy." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 12 '42 360w

"Steppin is a lifelike and human boy and his story is written with humor and feeling; the background of Harlem, tenement, dancing school, and backstage is especially interesting."

+ New Yorker 18:75 My 23 '42 60w

NEWMAN, JAMES ROY. Tools of war. 398p il
$5 Doubleday

623 Munitions. Military art and science
(W) 42-10184

"This book is an attempt to tell the story of the tools of war, their history and development, their operation and their synchronization. For a fuller comprehension of the subject it seeks to explain the development of armaments in terms of three basic factors—firepower, mobility, and armor (defensive power)." (Pref) Index.

"The description of the end of the Bismarck is perhaps a little imperfect in contents and hasty in conclusion, and military experts may find points of discussion in some of the author's appraisals of modern weapons and their use. But in the main Mr. Newman has produced a thorough and sound manual of modern arms which will help to make other accounts of modern battles and campaigns more coherent and intelligible." W. H. Chamberlin

+ — Atlantic JI '42 180w

Booklist 38:343 My 15 '42

Bookmark 3:7 My '42

"The approach is functional, historical and descriptive, and only a few pages (which can be skipped by the hasty or indolent reader) are sufficiently technical to warrant deep application. No real appreciation of today's weapons can be gained without at least superficial knowledge of their origin and development. It is just such knowledge, but by no means superficial, that the author provides, together with an understanding of modern application. . . . Special praise must be allotted to the hundred and fifty or more illustrations with which the book is adorned—and 'adorned' is exactly the proper word." P. J. Searles

+ Books p25 My 10 '42 1850w

"This is a book that no student of this modern and most terrible of wars should skip, for it is an illuminating study of a many-sided and complicated subject." Carlyle Holt

+ Boston Globe p19 Je 3 '42 330w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '42

Reviewed by H. A. von Urff

Library J 67:40 Ja 1 '42 90w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:894 O 15 '42 30w

"James Newman demonstrates both the good and the bad qualities of the civilian turned military writer. Before he put together the materials for this book he apparently had no connection with military affairs. This lack of background is revealed in numerous misstatements of fact. . . . Despite these shortcomings 'The Tools of War' is a fine piece of work. The author has traced the evolution of the principal implements used in modern war on land, sea, and in the air. His search for information has led in many directions, and he has compiled an adequate though not exhaustive bibliography. . . . Few recent military books have been more readable than 'The Tools of War.' The style is sure to give the greatest enjoyment to the average reader. Technical terms are either avoided or carefully explained, and numerous illustrations, many of them borrowed from recent issues of Fortune, others prepared personally, are of great interest." D. W. Mitchell

+ — Nation 154:552 My 9 '42 550w

New Repub 106:774 Je 1 '42 120w

"Profusely illustrated, well and philosophically written and generally accurate, James R. Newman's 'The Tools of War' will not only be an invaluable aid to those who want to go beyond the headlines, but it will have lasting reference and historical value. There is no other contemporary book just like it." H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p13 My 17 '42 440w

Pratt p17 D '42

"Newman's book is a good book, thoroughly worth reading. In swift, all-embracing scope it covers a tremendous three-dimensional field, and on the whole does it remarkably well and in a consistently interesting, even entertaining way." Paul Schubert

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 My 9 '42 650w

"An authentic book that will interest every layman."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:3 Ap '42 480w

NEWMAN, JOSEPH. Goodbye Japan. 338p
$2.50 L. B. Fischer pub. corp, 381 4th av, N.Y.

952 Japan—Politics and government. Japan
—Foreign relations. Japan—History. Eastern question (Far East) (W) 42-11518

Mr Newman was for several years on the staff of the Japan Advertiser, and later was Tokyo correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune. His book contains an analysis of the steps which brought Japan into war against the United States; his thesis is that Japan can take her rightful place in the world only if the present dictatorship of Emperor, Big Business and Military is absolutely destroyed.

Booklist 38:344 My 15 '42

Bookmark 3:11 My '42

Reviewed by W. H. Mallory

Books p3 My 3 '42 900w

Christian Science Monitor p20 Ap 29 '42 550w

"None of the recent books on Japan have brought out that country's abnormalities more vividly than 'Goodbye Japan.'" M. S. Stewart

+ Nation 154:548 My 9 '42 240w

Reviewed by G. E. Taylor

New Repub 106:738 My 25 '42 240w

"Some of the explanations in the book are perhaps a little too glib and the author is more inclined to ridicule than to understand some of Japan's customs. And in his numerous lèse-majesté quips, any one of which would cause a member of the Thought Section of the Japanese police to collapse in speechless horror, there is just a little of the attitude of the newly graduated college student who can now thumb his nose at the dean. On balance, however, Mr. Newman has written a lively, informative book, which presents the Japanese threat accurately and in perspective." W. H. Chamberlin

+ — N Y Times p6 My 24 '42 1200w

"'Goodbye Japan' is an exciting, thoughtful, and informative account of a foe at war." Mark Gayn

+ Sat R of Lit 25:11 My 30 '42 650w

Springf'd Republican p10 My 14 '42 900w

Time 39:90 My 25 '42 30w

NEWMAN, SAMUEL CLAYTON. Employment problems of college students. 158p $3; pa $2.50 Am. council on public affairs

378.365 Personnel service in education. Occupations 42-11924

"This study brings together the results of the various investigations of student employment that have been made during recent years, interprets their findings and points the way to improving the program of student aid." School & Society

"An excellent survey." R. C. Angell

+ Am J Soc 48:281 S '42 200w

School & Society 55:336 Mr 21 '42 30w

"As an effective summary of the scientific studies of the problem, the report will serve as a convenient reference aid to guidance officers in colleges and universities." N. B. Henry

+ School R 50:392 My '42 450w

Social Studies 33:240 My '42 30w

NEWSMEN'S holiday. (Harvard univ. Nieman essays: first ser) 203p $2 Harvard univ. press 070.82 Journalism A42-4829

"One of the most interesting experiments in the American newspaper field since the turn of the century undoubtedly has been the establishment of the Nieman fellowships at Harvard University. The men who receive these annual grants, entitling them to browse at will for nine months at America's greatest center of learning, attending lectures or not, as they prefer, but enjoying the stimulus which comes from residence in such an atmosphere, have a rare opportunity. . . . In the volume under review the fourth group of Nieman fellows, those who terminated their residence last June, have combined to make a book of eleven essays about the newspaper business, essays which were originally conceived without thought of publication." Nation

NEWSMEN'S—Continued

"All in all, good reading here. Essays by the Nieman Fellows ought to become an annual custom. The unevenness and bias of this volume, in spots, merely reflect the honest talk of newspaper men and this talk is sometimes worth getting together." Stanley Walker
+ Books p20 O 4 '42 800w

"All in all, 'Newsmen's Holiday' is a readable volume. Most of the Nieman fellows represented here are worth listening to. In publishing their views concerning the profession which claims them, they have established a precedent which, it is to be hoped, will be followed by other fellows of the foundation." Virginius Dabney

+ Nation 155:550 N 21 '42 800w

Reviewed by W. A. White

New Repub 107:862 D 28 '42 2150w

"At times these essays seem naive for the work of men who averaged twelve years in journalism and at times they could stand some copy-editing, but on the whole they set a high standard and are a credit both to American journalism and to Harvard University. 'Newsmen's Holiday' contains some good writing and some sage advice." Neil MacNeil

+ — N Y Times p30 O 25 '42 950w

Reviewed by Marshall Bragdon

Springf'd Republican p6 O 17 '42 700w

NEWTON, JOSEPH, and WILSON, CURTIS LEE LAWS. Metallurgy of copper. 518p il $6 Wiley

669.3 Copper—Metallurgy 42-18278

"The aim of this book is to present a discussion of the various methods employed in winning copper from its ores and in refining the metal to commercial grade. Examples of modern practice are included to illustrate the application of these methods, but no attempt has been made to compile a complete and exhaustive treatise on the practice all over the world. . . . In confining the discussion largely to the extraction and refining of copper, it has been possible to touch only lightly on several related subjects because of space limitations. The chapter on ore dressing is merely a summary to indicate the methods used in dressing copper ores and the nature of the resulting concentrates. It was not possible to consider the subject of copper alloys in any great detail." (Pref) Bibliography. Name and subject indexes.

Booklist 39:5 S '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:39 J1 '42

NEWTON, R. N. Practical construction of warships. 318p il $6 (21s) Longmans
623.825 Warships 42-7343

"This book relates to British practice in the construction of ships, being written by a member of the Royal Corps of Naval Constructors to bring together in convenient form information contained in his lectures at the Royal Naval Engineering College. . . . Reasons why particular types of construction have been adopted are given, as well as the methods of construction themselves. The arrangement of chapters concerned with construction is in the order of erection as far as possible." Eng N

Eng N 128:95 Je 4 '42 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:12 Ja '42

Pratt p21 My '42

"The art of naval architecture as applied to the building of warships differs in many respects from the standard practice of commercial shipbuilding. Thus it is that the students of the Royal Corps of Naval Constructors need a special textbook of their own profession, and since no such textbook has been produced for the last twenty-nine years the need for an up-to-date version of it will be manifest. Mr. Newton, who has been instructor of students at H.M. Dockyard, Devonport, and at the Royal Naval Engineering College, Keyham, is eminently competent to fill the need."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p463 S 13 '41 150w

NEWTON, ROGER HALE. Town & Davis, architects; pioneers in Am. revivalist architecture, 1812-1870; incl. a glimpse of their times and their contemporaries. 334p il $4 Columbia univ. press

720 Architecture—U.S. Town, Ithiel, Davis, Alexander Jackson 42-12953

Study of two pioneers in American architecture: Ithiel Town, 1784-1844, and Alexander Jackson Davis, and their influence on early nineteenth century architecture. Contents: Ithiel Town, 1784-1844; Alexander Jackson Davis, 1803-1892; Greek revival, 1829-1844; Gothic revival, 1829-1844; Tuscan revival, 1829-1844; Greco-Tuscan revival, 1845-1870; The role of Town and Davis in the revivalist movement. Index.

"Here is a valuable book for any architect, or any student of architecture. One rejoices in its achievement as a book of credit where credit is overdue." Donald Corley

+ Books p14 My 31 '42 600w

Christian Century 59:1029 Ag 26 '42 330w

"Newton's work is a delightful invitation for us to study our own past." Wayne Andrews
+ Commonweal 36:332 J1 24 '42 490w

"It is indeed refreshing to find a study of nineteenth-century American architecture which is as delightful as Mr. Roger Newton's book. . . . Meticulous though he is in searching out and checking the essential facts, Mr. Newton completely lacks those literary inhibitions which deaden much scholarly writing. The reader proceeds gaily from paragraph to paragraph, never knowing what will turn up next—a florid condemnation of post-colonial building, a purple description of a Gothic villa lifted from a Victorian romance, or the opinions of Queen Sophia of Greece on the present housing shortage in Hellas. The fun of reading such a book is surpassed only by the fun which the author obviously had in writing it." John Coolidge

+ New Eng Q 15:530 S '42 1700w
Pratt p4 D '42

NICHOLS, BEVERLEY. Men do not weep. 307p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d Cape, J] (W) 42-9584

Nine autobiographical or semi-autobiographical sketches, prefixed by a chapter on the author's recantation from his former pacifist views. The sketches, mainly in fiction form, are episodes which aided in the bringing about of Mr Nichols' change of heart.

"I read the book at a sitting with interest and satisfaction, both in the materials and in the dependably humane spirit of the man who used them. What Mr. Nichols writes about might quite well have commended itself to the pen of Somerset Maugham, and the first person method of telling the stories inevitably reminds one of that more adept pen. But the same dramatic details which Mr. Nichols uses would, in Maugham's hands, have seemed inevitable. In Mr. Nichols' they seem too often merely pat." F. H. Bullock

+ — Books p8 Mr 29 '42 800w

"In a way it is a pity that Mr. Nichols did not write the book he wanted to write—'The Death of a Pacifist'—to which he devotes his foreword. And, actually, this foreword as an expression of the author's new attitude is the most significant part of his book. . . . The nine stories in the collection—and very readable they are too—are a mingling of fact and fiction; the discerning reader will not find it difficult to separate the two." John Cournos

+ — N Y Times p3 My 31 '42 400w

"As stories [these] are told with the rare but sterile cunning which has brought Mr. Nichols great popularity, much money and an uncertain reputation. Nobody would look to Mr. Nichols for the refreshment that good literature gives; on the other hand, Mr. Nichols writes for educated as well as for ignorant readers; for the extremely sophisticated as well as for the extremely naive. In this odd ability he stands supreme among contemporary English writers. . . . It is pathetic that Mr. Nichols seems intellectually incapable of understanding that men are capable of good and evil, and that while they are committing evil we may as well admit that they are bad and have done with it. Vague, tearful sentimentality about the fundamental goodness of human nature leads nowhere, and one would not waste time on it if Mr. Nichols did not represent, unfortunately, the majority of our contemporary intelligentsia whose brains are mere bright will-o-the-wisps flickering deceitfully in marshes of sensibility, imagining their amiable intentions to be the same as good actions." W. J. Turner

— + Spec 167:430 O 31 '41 600w

"The sketches or concoctions are light, fluent, commonplace and mostly novelettish."

Times [London] Lit Sup p532 O 25 '41 450w

NICHOLS, MRS JEANNETTE (PADDOCK), and NICHOLS, ROY FRANKLIN. Republic of the United States; a history. 2v 638;715p il maps v 1 $3.50 (20s); v2 $3.50 Appleton-Century

973 U.S.—History. U.S.—Social conditions. U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—Politics and government 42-6870

"This is an expansion of the authors' one-volume college text in American history (The Growth of American Democracy, Book Review Digest, 1939) into a two-volume work designed for use in year courses. In line with current trends, the first volume carries the story through 1865; the second treats the years from the Civil War to the present." (New Eng Q) Index at end of each volume.

Volume one "will readily take its place among the excellent works of its kind. The work represents broad reading and careful scholarship. The outline of the material is logical and full. The treatment seems less formal than some texts. Its departure from the conventional and usual treatments followed is primarily in balance and emphasis through choice of materials. There is considerably greater attention given to Spanish explorers, settlements, and developments, especially in North America, than has usually appeared in texts. The balance within the conventional materials of politics, wars, and diplomacy is shifted somewhat in favor of the last. The clarification of the general international situation is commendable. . . . On some specific items of fact and interpretation questions arise. . . . A number of items relating to the Civil War do not produce a happy accord." J. L. Sellers

+ — Am Hist R 48:127 O '42 500w (Review of v 1)

"The work is characterized by the same clear writing and sound interpretation which has accounted for the wide use of the one-volume text." R. A. Billington

+ New Eng Q 15:389 Je '42 210w

Reviewed by R. E. Riegel

Social Studies 33:284 O '42 600w (Review of v 1)

"An excellent treatment of this era of great importance and change. Good charts and diagrams and well-chosen illustrations."

+ Social Studies 34:48 Ja '43 60w (Review of v2)

NICHOLS, JOHN TREADWELL. Representative North American fresh-water fishes; il. by Andrew R. Janson. 128p $1.25 Macmillan 597 Fishes (W) 42-14845

Sixty illustrations, some in color, of as many American fresh-water fish. Each illustration has an accompanying page of text, giving principal facts in the life history of the subject. Subject index.

"This handy pocket guide to sixty of the commoner fresh-water fishes of this continent is intended for field use, by fishermen or any one else (other than the serious student) who wishes to identify a particular fish in the field. Mr. Janson's clear drawings will be most useful in this; Mr. Nichols's text serves to amplify them. . . . The book, however, is arranged for browsing rather than systematic study, and those seeking a thorough knowledge of any one species or of our fishes in general will not find it sufficiently detailed."

+ — Books p22 Je 14 '42 200w

Wis Lib Bul 28:116 J1 '42

NICOLAIDES, KIMON. Natural way to draw. 221p il $3 Houghton

741 Drawing—Instruction (W) 41-26816

"Subtitled 'a working plan for art study,' and based on methods used by the author in his classes at the Art Students' League in New York. Should be helpful for the student working either alone or in a group, for the author holds that the job of the teacher is 'to teach students, not how to draw, but how to learn to draw. They must acquire some real method of finding out facts for themselves.' Well illustrated, with examples from student's work as well as from the drawings of the masters." Wis Lib Bul

"Whether you are a beginner or a trained artist, The Natural Way to Draw provides a full year of stimulating and profitable study either at home without other instruction or in a class under the supervision of a teacher. . . . Mr. Nicolaides left his manuscript unfinished, and it has been arranged and edited by Miss Mamie Harmon, who had collaborated with him on it for a number of years. She has done her work extraordinarily well."

+ School Arts 42:12a S '42 200w

Wis Lib Bul 38:44 Mr '42

NICOLAY, HELEN. Decatur of the old navy; il. by Norman Price. 226p $2.50 Appleton-Century

B or 92 Decatur, Stephen—Juvenile literature (W) 42-12909

Biography of the American naval hero, who was born in 1779, rose to be a captain in the Tripolitan war, fought against the British during the War of 1812, and later against the Barbary pirates. He was killed in a duel in 1820. For readers of high school age. Index.

Booklist 38:386 Je 15 '42

Books p12 My 10 '42 180w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 25 '42 130w

"Excellent and timely addition to any juvenile biography collection. . . . Well written in clear, animated style that will make it popular with boys and girls of twelve to sixteen. Recommended." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 67:535 Je 1 '42 60w

NICOLAY, HELEN. MacArthur of Bataan. 188p il $1.75 Appleton-Century

B or 92 MacArthur, Douglas—Juvenile literature (W) 42-21289

Short biography of the first outstanding American hero of the second World war. After a brief discussion of MacArthur's fighting ancestors, the book traces his own course up to his arrival in Australia. For junior and senior high schools.

Booklist 39:75 N 1 '42

"Evidently written to order in a hurry, in it Miss Nicolay has succumbed to the rather lush style which often afflicts contemporaneous biography."

Cath World 156:382 D '42 90w

NICOLAY, HELEN—Continued

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 19 '42
50w

Churchman 156:16 N 15 '42 20w

"Not intended as a [definitive] biography, this sketch of the life of General MacArthur gives essential facts in the easy, yet dignified, style we associate with Miss Nicolay's historical work. It will find many readers eager to know more about everybody's hero than the newspapers have told." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:434 N '42 50w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:895 O 15 '42 10w

"We are fortunate to have so soon a first biography for young people of the caliber of this one; one, which, if it is not exactly as colorful in style as its subject, is so well-considered, balanced and readable. . . . One wishes that there were more quotations from his colorful speech, but there are enough to serve as reflections of a fine mind and a great patriotism." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p11 O 4 '42 420w

NICOTRI, GASPARE, and NICOTRI, FRANCO.

Freedom for Italy! with foreword by Carlo Sforza. 198p pa $1.25 Italian Am. press, 304 E. 14th st, N.Y.

945.08 Italy—Politics and government

42-15786

"Gaspere Nicotri, a veteran of many a struggle, writes with his son a series of sketches about the century-old Italian battle for freedom. From the Sicilian Vespers in the thirteenth century up to the 'Saga of the Thousands' in the Risorgimento, and forward to the Garibaldi Battalion which fought for Greek liberty in 1897 (in its ranks was Nicotri, Sr., himself), the main landmarks are portrayed." Nation

Current Hist 3:358 D '42 170w

Nation 156:67 Ja 9 '43 180w

NILES, HENRY EDWARD, and NILES, MRS.

MARY CUSHING (HOWARD). Office supervisor; his relations to persons and to work. 2d ed 269p $2.50 Wiley

651.3 Office management. Employment management

42-17281

"This second edition has been enlarged by the addition of material from conferences conducted by the authors since the first edition was issued in 1935 (Book Review Digest, 1935). The new material is interspersed through the book in the form of new case histories and new text on topics in which there has been widening interest or which have been marked by significant developments. A new chapter, 'The Organization,' treats of the relationship between the supervisor and such specialists as personnel and planning men; relationship with other departments; the nature of authority; and the importance of the informal as well as the formal organization." (Management R) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 39:106 N 15 '42

"Extensive use of the first edition of 'The Office Supervisor' in office organizations throughout the country has proved its worth. The revised edition should be heartily welcomed by office managers." Leona Powell

+ Management R 31:399 N '42 320w

NIN, ANAIS. Winter of artifice; il. by Ian Hugo. 1st ed 155p $3; de luxe autog ed $5 Gotham bk mart

The two stories in this volume, "Winter of Artifice" and "The Voice," are rooted in psychoanalysis. The first story selects a young woman's childhood frustration—the love for a father who rejected her, who abandoned his family—and flings it against the time when the father returns and there must be a readjustment. . . . The second story offers more personality contrasts than the first. This is a story of a psychoanalyst, or more accurately it is the story of his failure to be anything but a psychoanalyst." (Books)

"The book is a little overfull of statements of people saying mystic things about themselves, about others, about life. It presents stories about stories, conclusions that come before the fact. Over all this, there is a rather piquant icing of good language. Miss Nin's previous stories, 'The Woman in the Myth,' and 'Birth,' for example, are finer examples of her special gift in writing. Ian Hugo's illustrations are interesting and mature." E. S. Gottlieb

Books p14 N 8 '42 600w

Reviewed by Paul Rosenfeld

Nation 155:276 S 26 '42 850w

NISITA, ALBERT H. Aircraft riveting. 160p

il $2.50 McGraw

629.1341 Airplanes—Design and construction 42-17063

"The author has attempted to bring together all the riveting skills and practices from aircraft metal construction, treating them in a separate and distinct form, so that the application of any of these phases can be used anywhere or at any time in metal aircraft or sub-assemblies." (Pref) Could be used in a vocational high school. Index.

Booklist 39:117 D 1 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:36 Jl '42

NISSLEY, CHARLES HEBRON. Home vegetable gardening; with an introd. by William H. Martin; il. by Ruth Nissley. 246p $1.50 Rutgers univ. press

635 Vegetable gardening (W) 42-36099

Contains chapters on the fundamentals of vegetable growing—soil preparation, planting, storage, diseases and pests—followed by an alphabetical list of the more important vegetables with descriptions, cultural hints, uses, etc. There is a section on herb crops, and one on seed and seed treatments. The author is Extension horticulturist in vegetable growing at Rutgers university.

Booklist 38:247 Mr 15 '42

Bookmark 3:7 Mr '42

Reviewed by R. S. Lemmon

Books p15 Ap 19 '42 100w

NIXON, HERMAN CLARENCE. Possum Trot, rural community, South. 192p il $2.50 Univ. of Okla. press

309.175 South—Social conditions. Sociology. Rural. South—Economic conditions 41-24349

"'Possum Trot,' as Herman Clarence Nixon, of Vanderbilt University, calls his story of a 'rural community, South,' is more than an inconspicuous place in Alabama; it is a way of life, with nostalgic implications." (Books) "The book tells of folklore, sketches characters, is historical and geographic in an unsystematic fashion, speaks of revivals, of 'likker' drinking, tenancy, country stores, of the exodus from thousands of Possum Trots, of soil erosion, the influx of tractors, the dethronement of King Cotton, transition to diversified farming and manufacturing, the increase in tourist trade, growth in regional philosophy, and actual regional development." (Survey)

Reviewed by R. B. Vance

Am J Soc 48:283 S '42 160w

Reviewed by Morton King, Jr.

Am Soc R 7:572 Ag '42 500w

Reviewed by E. T. Thompson

Ann Am Acad 222:190 Jl '42 900w

Booklist 38:302 Ap 15 '42

"Mr. Nixon's picture of Possum Trot, as it was and is, is a true and significant portrait of rural communities, South, drawn by sure knowledge and sympathetic understanding." B. K. Harris

+ Books p8 D 28 '41 500w

"This is a colorful, forthright treatment of just what the title implies. The author, well known for such other of his works as 'Forty Acres and Steel Mules' and 'Social Security for Southern Farmers' and for his teaching and lecturing, in this new volume paints a picture more than he tells a story. There is motion in the picture, however. It is no still life." M. R. Mitchell

+ Survey 78:31 Ja '42 320w

NOLAN, JEANNETTE (COVERT) (MRS VAL NOLAN). Little giant; the story of Stephen A. Douglas and Abraham Lincoln; with ill. by Monte Crews. 272p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Douglas, Stephen Arnold. Lincoln, Abraham (W) 42-15128

"Although by no means the author's best work, this is a good readable biography of the brilliant and dynamic Stephen A. Douglas. This account of his career as lawyer, politician, and statesman, his rivalry and formidable debates with Abraham Lincoln, leaves a vivid picture of the times and political issues at stake." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 39:17 S '42

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p14 O 22 '42

80w

"Seems well documented, sympathetic and admirably free from bias. . . For both adult and juvenile readers." Maude Adams

+ Library J 67:688 Ag '42 100w

NOLAN, R. R. Machine tools in aircraft production. 158p il $1.50 Pitman

629.1343 Airplane industry and trade. Machine tools 41-52023

"It is the purpose of this book to acquaint the vocational student, the beginner or the young mechanic with the fundamentals of aircraft machine tools and the underlying theory of their application. . . The term 'machine tools' as used hereafter will apply to mechanically operated machines used for the purpose of metal fabrication. Woodworking, assembly or processing equipment will not be described except where it is necessary to illustrate more clearly the use of metal-working machines. The more important machine tools and their operations will be discussed in detail insofar as possible, dealing at all times with the simpler operations." (Intro) Index.

Booklist 38:126 D 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:52 O '41

Wis Lib Bul 38:77 My '42

NOLEN, HERMAN C., and MAYNARD, HAROLD HOWARD. Drug store management [foreword by H. S. Noel]. 570p il $4 McGraw

658.916154 Drug trade. Retail trade 41-20393

"A comprehensive text on the principles and problems of scientific sales management. Covers, among other subjects, organization of the sales department, the hiring and training of salesmen, distribution policies, sales cost accounting." (Management R) Index.

Booklist 38:185 F 1 '42

Management R 30:396 O '41 30w

NORCOM, GEORGE DUSENBURY, and BROWN, KENNETH WILLIAM. Water purification for plant operators. 180p il $2.50 McGraw

628.16 Water—Purification 42-3885

"Elementary instructions in routine duties for filter plant operators, who may not have technical education. Fully describes structure and equipment and has questions for self-examination." (Booklist) Index.

Reviewed by A. P. Miller

Am J Pub Health 32:428 Ap '42 80w

Booklist 38:304 Ap 15 '42

"Training men to operate plants has been one of the special responsibilities of Messrs. Norcom and Brown, who are consulting and sanitary engineers, respectively, for private water companies. They are intimately acquainted with the operator, and they know his capabilities, his limitations and his troubles. With this background they have written an excellent book on the job to be done and the most satisfactory way of doing it."

+ Eng N 128:72 Ja 29 '42 200w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:45 Jl '42

NORCROSS, CARL, and QUINN, JAMES D. How to do aircraft sheetmetal work. 285p il $2.20 McGraw

629.13428 Airplanes—Design and construction. Sheet metal work (W) 42-36069

"Step-by-step directions and explanations of airplane sheetmetal processes, from the simplest to more difficult jobs. Intended as a textbook, it includes questions for each chapter and five projects for shop work. Well illustrated with photographs, drawings, attached blueprints. An appendix lists tool requirements for a beginner." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 38:228 Mr 1 '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:21 Ap '42

NORD, FRIEDRICH FRANZ, ed. See Advances in enzymology and related subjects

NORDENHOLT, GEORGE FRED; KERR, JOSEPH, and SASSO, JOHN. Handbook of mechanical design. 277p il $4 McGraw

620.1 Mechanical engineering. Machinery—Design (W) 42-15463

"A series of articles from Product Engineering Magazine on practical design methods and procedures. A useful supplement to the standard handbooks." Cleveland Open Shelf

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '42

N Y New Tech Bks 27:41 Jl '42

Pratt p8 D '42

NORDHOFF, CHARLES BERNARD, and HALL, JAMES NORMAN. Men without country. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 122p $1.50 Little

(W) 42-15983

Imbued with a desire to fight for France, five convicts escape from the penal colony in French Guiana, in a native canoe. They are picked up at sea, nearly dead, by a French freighter, only a few days before the fall of France. Tho there was a difference of opinion among the various Frenchmen aboard the Ville de Nancy as to their proper course, eventually they arrived in England and the majority were able to join the Free French forces—including the ex-convicts.

Booklist 38:427 Jl 1 '42

"The little tale contains ingredients from all the familiar Nordhoff and Hall tales—men against the sea in an open boat, mutiny as on the Bounty, convicts not unlike some of those in Botany Bay, flyers for freedom not unlike those of the Lafayette Escadrille of the last war—in which Nordhoff and Hall first met—celebrated by them in their first book 'Falcons of France.' It makes several good points of its own kind, and in its own way while making it very clear that the Falcons are flying once again and still." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p5 Je 14 '42 430w

Boston Globe p19 Jl 8 '42 100w

"This is a brave tale of men without country, men who had lost their rights as citizens but had not lost their love of country in the degradation of a prison term at Cayenne. It is written in Conradian fashion, as if told by a man to whom it was told by another man. It has the vigor of all stories by the writing team of Nordhoff and Hall." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Jl 28 '42 400w

Commonweal 36:308 Jl 17 '42 110w

NORDHOFF, C. B.—Continued

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 67:897 O 15 '42 20w

New Repub 107:206 Ag 17 '42 60w

"Here is a spirited, exciting action story of mutiny and other marine disasters, the sharply etched characterizations and contrasts of points of view, ironically expressed, supplying an additional zest." Drake De Kay

+ N Y Times p7 Je 14 '42 550w

"Clumsily told and doesn't make its points as well as it should."

New Yorker 18:67 Je 20 '42 50w

Pratt p12 D '42

"You don't have to be told that Nordhoff and Hall make good reading, but the point here is that they have done so much in so little space." N. L. R.

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 Je 27 '42 270w

NORGREN, PAUL HERBERT. Swedish collective bargaining system. 339p $3.50 Harvard univ. press

331.88 Labor contract. Trade unions—Sweden. Labor laws and legislation—Sweden 41-16097

"The author traces the development of employer and employee organizations from their beginnings to the present... An exhaustive analysis of the manner in which agreements are reached and of the general provisions contained in them is presented, and a comparison made with procedure in this country... In conclusion Mr Norgren seeks to answer the question: Will the Swedish system work in the United States? He feels that it would not under present conditions." Springf'd Republican

"The chapters on the rôle of the government as mediator, on collective bargaining legislation, and on labor courts will be of particularly great interest to the American reader. Altogether, the book under review is scholarly and sound." M. A. Heilperin

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:173 F '42 380w

"The author of a good book deserves praise. The author of an excellent book deserves gratitude. And this is what Professor Paul H. Norgren should receive from all who read his informative volume." E. T. H. Kjellstrom

+ Ann Am Acad 220:261 Mr '42 650w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:782 Jl '42 20w

"Professor Norgren deserves commendation for an excellent analysis of a system very different from our own. An equally thorough study of the more diverse American systems might well be his next contribution to this controversial subject." L. B. Boudin

+ Harvard Law R 55:555 Ja '42 230w

Reviewed by E. W. Bakke

J Pol Econ 50:775 O '42 650w

Reviewed by W. J. Dunn

+ Springf'd Republican p14 N 19 '41 550w

Reviewed by Charles Kramer

Survey 78:254 S '42 650w

NORLIN, ELINOR E., and DONALDSON, BESSIE M. Everyday nursing for the everyday home; il. by Mary Simas. 306p $2.50 Macmillan

610.73 Nurses and nursing (W) 42-36070

This book is in two parts: part one dealing with directions for maintaining the health of family members from infancy to old age; part two with care of the sick in the home with chapters on the room and the bed, making notes for the doctor, feeding, convalescence and communicable diseases and emergencies.

"Everyday Nursing for the Everyday Home is a very attractive title for a very timely and practical presentation of knowledge and skills of especial value to all families and home builders today." M. G. Howell

+ Am J Pub Health 32:660 Je '42 210w

Booklist 38:228 Mr 1 '42

J Home Econ 34:254 Ap '42 50w

Wis Lib Bul 38:43 Mr '42

NORMAN, CHARLES. Savage century. 80p $2 Press of James A. Decker

811

42-18230

"Charles Norman's poems are brief and simple lyrics, limited to two or three verses. The book is dedicated to those who fought in defense of the Spanish Republic. The title poem, 'Savage Century,' is not savage; it is tender and almost benign." N Y Times

"There is grace and charm without dynamic impact; the ingredients of drama but no drama; the pleasing watercolor rather than the sharp acid strokes of an etching. His best effects come with the ironic statement of a false truth." Ruth Lechlitner

+ Books p15 Je 14 '42 500w

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 2 '42 500w

"Mr. Norman in his lyrics and sonnets is almost too poetical—the charm of his writing covers his thinking. But in his dialogue play, which might have been written for the radio, 'Day's End,' there is a new sense of drama, and even though it is not developed independently it might sharpen the sweetness of Mr. Norman's lyricism." P. M. Jack

+ — N Y Times p4 Ap 26 '42 360w

Reviewed by Marion Castleman

Poetry 60:346 S '42 100w

"Some things in Mr. Norman's previous volumes, 'Poems' and 'The Bright World,' I much admired. I do not find that this book adds to his reputation. While the title poem is effective, elsewhere, in attempting the most difficult kind of poetry—that which is crystal-clear, epigrammatic, and terse—I cannot feel that he is often successful." W. R. B.

+ Sat R of Lit 25:24 Ap 25 '42 110w

NORMAN, JAMES, pseud. See Schmidt, J. N.NORRIS, KATHLEEN (THOMPSON) (MRS CHARLES GILMAN NORRIS). Apple for Eve. 340p $2 Doubleday

(W) 42-21971

Romance of modern California. Loveday Gurney, the heroine, is endowed with the fine principles of her Quaker ancestors, and when she is faced with the problem of deciding between two men, she makes a brave choice. The story ends with the return of her husband after Pearl Harbor.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p24 O 4 '42 450w

"A story as appealing as any Mrs. Norris has written." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p35 O 4 '42 480w

NORRIS, KATHLEEN (THOMPSON) (MRS CHARLES GILMAN NORRIS). Dina Cashman. 305p $2 Doubleday

(W) 42-10312

Dina Cashman, at nineteen, was faced with a tremendous problem. Her father was an itinerant worker, and Dina herself worked in a grocery store. Her life had always been drab, but she had the courage to keep off despair. Then she met and loved Vere Holland, a wealthy young man, who took her to some expensive parties and then left her. When she found she was going to have a baby Dina chose a novel way of meeting her problem. The scene of the story is the Santa Clara valley of California.

"No doubt, Mrs. Norris expects it to be taken seriously, travesty not being one of her talents, but we cannot recall any novel of hers quite so lavish in its improbabilities." Lisle Bell

— Books p16 My 3 '42 300w

"In her usual competent style Mrs. Norris keeps Dina's life an interesting turmoil up to the last chapter, which is quietly surprising and eminently satisfying." Charlotte Dean
+ N Y Times p18 My 3 '42 240w

NORRIS, KATHLEEN (THOMPSON) (MRS CHARLES GILMAN NORRIS). One nation indivisible; a poem. 44p $1 Doubleday 811 42-19211

The author was a pacifist after the first World war; after Pearl Harbor her views changed. Peace is still the aim, but first there is a war to be fought. The poem describes the years between the two wars.

"It is no surprise to find Mrs. Norris expressing the general sentiment of our time; but it is a little surprising to find a popular novelist doing so, with ease and charm, in verse." Ruth Lechlitrer
+ Books p16 S 27 '42 100w

"It has little to commend it." Pearl Strachan
— Christian Science Monitor p10 O 3 '42 20w

NORRIS, MRS RUBY (TURNER). Theory of consumer's demand. 206p $3 Yale univ. press 339.4 Consumption (economics) 41-26486

"This present volume examines critically the work of the English economist, Hicks, and then turns to the constructive task of developing a theory of demand in terms of a limited number of close substitutes. The author attempts to indicate how choice is made from a group of substitutes and how a number of substitutes are combined in the consumption pattern. Much of the critical material directed in recent years against the marginal utility theory is reviewed. The attempt is made to develop a theory of demand in terms which are roughly parallel to and on the same level of concreteness as the monopolistic competition school of economic theory." (Publisher's note) Glossary. Index.

"It would have been appropriate if this highly realistic treatment of consumer choice could have been capped by an equally realistic explicit recognition of the fact that in modern markets pure oligopoly and especially differentiated oligopoly, as opposed to monopolistic competition in the sense of product differentiation plus large numbers, are the dominant categories. All cases of markets involving large numbers are peripheral to these dominant categories in the same sense that the author holds unrelated homogeneous goods like wheat and cotton to be peripheral to the dominant clusters of complementary substitutes. The various subdivisions of the oligopoly category should be explicitly the concern of such a work as this in so far as it touches on sellers' demand. This limitation, however, in no way affects the substantial merit and novelty of the bulk of the work, which is concerned primarily with the theory of consumer choice. On this level the author has made a substantial contribution to contemporary theory." J. S. Bain
+ Am Econ R 32:357 Je '42 1300w

"In the last chapter, 'Social Objectives Related to Consumer's Demand,' Dr. Norris discusses what she considers to be the 'major defects in the way our society—America today—meets its consumers' demands.' It is the opinion of the reviewer that all readers will find the author's discussion in this chapter provocative; especially will this be true of the growing group of economists who claim to be interested in the consumer. Part One and the majority of Part Two will interest only those readers who are thoroughly trained in economic theory." H. G. Canoyer
+ Ann Am Acad 221:221 My '42 600w

"This is a book which, because of its intelligent originality, may well become a stepping-stone to further developments in demand theory; and it is a book which, because of some of its faults, may be very much underestimated by those who start with the first two chapters and then impatiently jump to the end." M. J. Bowman
+ J Pol Econ 50:761 O '42 1600w

NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY, EVANSTON, ILLINOIS. Julius Rosenthal foundation for general law. My philosophy of law; credos of sixteen American scholars. 321p il $5 Boston law bk. co, 8 Pemberton sq, Boston

340.1 Law—Philosophy 41-19742

"A symposium of contemporary American legal philosophies is presented here. The letter of invitation sent to the sixteen contributors to the volume defines the scope of the undertaking by stating that the book will deal 'with views of American thinkers on the ultimate ideas of the origin, nature, or ends of the law.'" (Columbia Law R) The contributors are: Joseph Walter Bingham, Morris R. Cohen, Walter Wheeler Cook, John Dewey, John Dickinson, Lon L. Fuller, Leon Green, Walter B. Kennedy, Albert Kocourek, K. N. Llewellyn, Underhill Moore, Edwin W. Patterson, Roscoe Pound, Thomas Reed Powell, Max Radin, John H. Wigmore.

"This is a book for mature readers, which will cause the uninitiated a good deal of embarrassment. Some readers will be disappointed by the lack of unity of thought and purpose, so clearly noticeable throughout the discussions contained in a volume that was published in the fateful year of 1941. There can be no doubt, however, that all to whom legal philosophy means something will benefit by the reading of at least some of the contributions." Gerhart Husserl
+ Columbia Law R 42:894 My '42 2550w

"The essays are short, provocative, and not hard to read. The busy lawyer should be excused from studying heavy academic works on jurisprudence, but these essays are not in that class. The lawyer who reads them will enlarge his understanding of the relation of justice to his everyday practice. He will be better equipped to do his work and to fulfill his obligations to his craft and the public." Clarence Morris

+ Harvard Law R 55:894 Mr '42 550w

Reviewed by J. C. Hutcheson, Jr.
Yale Law J 51:523 Ja '42 1600w

NORWAY, NEVIL SHUTE (NEVIL SHUTE, pseud). Pied Piper. 306p $2.50 Morrow
(W) 41-22072

In a London club during an air raid a weary old man tells a fellow club member the story of his last continental vacation. His name was John Howard, and he had gone on a fishing trip in the Jura mountains, in a vain attempt to forget his grief over the death of his aviator son. On the very day the Germans crossed the Seine, Mr Howard had set out on his homeward journey, taking with him two English children. A long time afterward he arrived at Brest, his party of children increased to seven. There the crowning difficulty of his journey was met and surmounted. A few days later Mr Howard and his indescribably unkempt little band landed in Plymouth. The Pied Piper had achieved the impossible.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (13)
PW (2)

"Since this is a war novel, the love story must leave a broken heart and the villain must be German. I myself should have been better pleased had the Gestapo never appeared. But aside from that I have nothing but praise for [the author]." Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic F '42 250w

Booklist 38:159 Ja 1 '42

Bookmark 3:17 Mr '42

"It is not sentimental; it is as matter of fact as a bomb. That is [the writer's] power and virtue. Perhaps another skillful writer might have done the first part of the story; all of it holds one's interest closely; but the end is like watching a string of little lights flash into a celestial star." Isabel Paterson
+ Books p3 Ja 4 '42 900w

"Nevil Shute, a Lieutenant Commander attached to the Admiralty in London, proves himself again a story teller of marked ability."
+ Cath World 154:635 F '42 200w

NORWAY, N. S.—Continued

"Here again is a well-executed narrative with mounting suspense; a forthright style which never hides but rather makes doubly appealing the undertones of gentleness and compassion; a familiarity with the chosen background which gives the stamp of authenticity to every incident and scene. In addition, Mr. Shute has surpassed himself this time in the delineation of character, and it may well be that, as a result, 'Pied Piper' is his best work to date." M. W. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 17 '42 550w

"Setting, characters, and incidents are exceptionally well drawn; also the elderly Pied Piper's outstanding fineness, of which he is himself unaware." Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 67:41 Ja 1 '42 80w

Reviewed by Wilfrid Gibson

Manchester Guardian p3 F 13 '42 110w

"A novel which piles up dramatic force with quiet realism, glows as quietly with valiant tenderness, and points a significant theme without over-emphasis. . . . In its deft simplicity of realism 'Pied Piper' becomes a novel for more than one reading, as scenes, characters, incidents, encounters take their place in a crescendo progress, and vignettes are sharp against the fog of historic tragedy. For this is the detail of history; 1940; journey across France; and the world's task and hope of salvage." K. W.

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 4 '42 750w

"The total effect of the book, despite its grim background, is one of entertainment. It may even take your mind off the war." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:57 Ja 10 '42 320w

Pratt p16 My '42

"When compared with other literature upon the collapse of France, 'Pied Piper' is merely a tenuous idyll. It is not, however, attenuated. It never stagnates, it has plenty of suspense, it is not implausible. It is, to be sure, the sort of book which you can take or leave alone. But, if taken, it will certainly please." George Dangerfield

+ Sat R of Lit 25:9 Ja 10 '42 410w

Reviewed by John Hampson

Spec 168:214 F 27 '42 110w

"So many 'war' books have come from the publishers that a reviewer shrinks a bit when another book on the world conflict comes into his hands. But 'Pied Piper' is something quite different. The horrors of the conflict are there, but they are subordinated to a most lovable character, old John Howard." M. D.

+ Springfield Republican p7e Ja 4 '42 600w

Time 39:76 Ja 12 '42 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p69 F 7 '42 480w

Wis Lib Bul 38:48 Mr '42

"One could wish that the children themselves were a little clearer—it is hard to remember them as individuals, even if one feels keenly for them as symbols. Mr. Shute is a good yarn-spinner, and there are in his story many hair-raising moments, told with understatement." Robert Littell

+ Yale R n s 31:x spring '42 200w

NOTT, STANLEY CHARLES. Young Churchill: with a foreword by Lord Halifax. 305p il $2.50 Coward-McCann

B or 92 Churchill, Winston Leonard Spencer (W) 41-25939

Biography of Winston Churchill written for junior and senior high school students. It covers only the first twenty-six years of his life, closing with the Boer war. Among the topics covered are his school days at Harrow, military training at Sandhurst, and his service in India, Egypt and South Africa. Includes a short chronicle of the chief events of his life from 1900 to the present day.

Booklist 38:212 F 15 '42

"Plainly told, letting the truth speak for itself, the character of young Churchill is as clear in these pages as his face in these photographs." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 F 1 '42 420w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 18:34 Ja '42 100w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Babcock

Library J 67:183 F 15 '42 50w

"In the years to come there will probably be as many biographies of Winston Churchill as there are now of George Washington, so it is especially gratifying that the first long life for young people is of a serious and dignified nature. . . . This is a worth-while introduction to the aristocrat who defended democracy, the Englishman who has earned the affection and admiration of America." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 18 '42 360w

New Yorker 18:79 My 23 '42 80w

NOWELL, CHARLES JAMES. Smoke from their fires; the life of a Kwakiutl chief, by Clellan S. Ford. 248p il $3 Yale univ. press 970.3 Kwakiutl Indians 41-27147

The life story, told in the first person, of a chief of the Indian tribe of Kwakiutl who live on the northeast coast of Vancouver Island. The book is the result of a field study made by C. S. Ford during the summer of 1940 sponsored jointly by the Department of Anthropology and the Institute of Human Relations of Yale University.

"Accounts such as this are valuable, and in the opinion of the reviewer we cannot have too many of them. In no other way can we achieve insight into the actual functioning of a culture than by patiently recording and analyzing individual life histories. This one, for example, deserves to be read for the light it throws upon the operation of the pot latch and the Kwakiutl concept of bilateral blood kinship. Well entrenched theories on both of these subjects need to be reviewed, and circumstantial accounts of specific events such as the several births, marriages, and deaths recorded in the book provide us with the only valid evidence for checking them." H. G. Barnett

+ Am Anthropol 44:299 Ap '42 1000w

"The present book is one of several recent publications which are both anthropological and autobiographical in nature. Personally, I believe it one of the best in this class. This is partly due to the skill with which Professor Ford has handled his informant, the Kwakiutl chief Charles Nowell, and partly due to the fact that the informant himself, now an old man of seventy, has spent thirty years of his life investigating the customs and material culture of his people for a white ethnologist. Therefore this book not only gives the life history of a highly intelligent Kwakiutl individual from the cradle almost to the grave, but it also presents a complete sketch of indigenous culture as seen through the eyes of the informant." E. M. Loeb

+ Ann Am Acad 220:273 Mr '42 450w

Christian Century 58:1514 D 3 '41 60w
"In 'Smoke from Their Fires,' Mr. Ford provides a forty-page introduction summarizing Kwakiutl culture—the 'totem-pole' people of our Northwest Coast. With that, I think, he should have gracefully retired. But the author's urge has driven him to lavish footnotes upon the book, explaining the obvious, usually superfluous, sometimes so puerile as to insult the reader. . . . This autobiography is pleasant and informative, and one grows fond of the subject of it. From a literary point of view it is not 'important.' But if in fact there is a valuable potential in Indian self-expression, then the manner of presenting it is important." Oliver La Farge

+ Sat R of Lit 25:15 Ja 17 '42 450w

Reviewed by G. B. Johnson

Social Forces 21:108 O '42 400w

NOYES, ALFRED. Edge of the abyss. 172p $2 Dutton

824 Civilization, Christian

42-24153

Much of the content of this book was originally part of lectures delivered at Mount Allison University, in Sackville, New Brunswick. Herein the English poet and man of letters has attempted to analyze the causes of the present disaster, finding them rooted in the economic, political, literary and ethical degradation of Western civilization which has followed the denial of the sterner Christian virtues.

"If this book were read aloud on a succession of Sundays in every pulpit of the land, and reprinted in every newspaper, it would in all probability be a source of mental enlightenment to millions of hearers and it might even be an effective safeguard against that plunge into the abyss which seems at times to be so imminent a possibility. 'No thoughtful and sincere mind looking over Europe today can fail to realize that we are separated from complete chaos by a far thinner barrier than we believe.'" Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 156:499 Ja '43 480w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 157:17 Ja 1 '43 390w

"In Mr. Noyes's thesis there is much with which all Christians must agree; but some will feel that popular infatuations and aberrations are not to be accounted for so simply in terms of leadership. . . . He is less convincing in some of his demonstrations than in his exposition; and there are times when bitterness and a taste for rhetoric get the better of his judgment; but his finely written book has considerable depth and breadth and power—power deriving from the passionate conviction of a worthy champion of the highest standard of values that man can have." H. C. F. Bell

+ Commonweal 37:183 D 4 '42 490w

"Stimulating and provocative." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 67:950 N 1 '42 100w

Springf'd Republican p6 N 18 '42 600w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 31:599 D '42 200w

NUHN, FERNER. Wind blew from the East; a study in the orientation of American culture. 300p $3 Harper

917.3 U.S.—Civilization. U.S.—Intellectual life (W) 42-15053

"In this first volume, which we are told is the opening part of a trilogy whose object is to fathom anew the American socio-cultural tradition [the author] is mainly concerned, after establishing a few basic definitions, with the fate of the New World spirit when it returns to the Old World inheritance. . . . To illustrate this side of what he calls the 'two-way pull in American culture,' or the East-versus-West argument, he chooses three men who, as against Emerson and Whitman, might well be named the orphans of the Western star: Henry James, Henry Adams, and T. S. Eliot." (Nation) Index.

"Mr. Nuhn's is a book of insights, a book of American self-understanding rather in the tradition of Whitman's 'Democratic Vistas,' and one must get used to a certain orphic looseness, at least in the introductory chapters, that is the very secret of his distinction. There is a sage, homegrown flavor about the book; no glitter, no pretense, an almost studiously informal style. It is the kind of style, to reverse some wit's remark about Macaulay's, in which one can tell the truth. Mr. Nuhn ranges up and down, burrows in and out of corners; and at first—the sensation soon passes—one has to grapple for his themes as for nuggets in a mining pan. But from that almost designed carelessness great things persistently emerge; and the chapters on James, Adams and Eliot as figures in the American expatriation are really extraordinarily good." Alfred Kazin

+ Books p2 Je 7 '42 1700w

"One wishes this book would attract a much wider audience than it will, for author has interpreted American historic traditions and literary values with clarity and distinction rarely found in criticism." Rice Estes

+ Library J 67:413 My 1 '42 90w

"Mr. Nuhn's chief aptitude seems to be psychological analysis of the historical and national meanings of literary art. His method receives its fullest elaboration in the chapter on James, which is easily the best in the book. Though by no means the most complete study of this novelist, it is in some respects the most far-reaching and brilliant, it seems to me, that has so far appeared. . . . The analysis of Adams is almost equally good, though not nearly so definitive. . . . It is in the chapter on Eliot, however, that crucial weaknesses of argument and attitude come to light. . . . To my mind this book stands or falls by what specifically contributes to our understanding of its three central 'characters.' For in so far as it attempts to work out a new synthesis, I cannot see where it succeeds." Philip Rahy

+ Nation 154:689 Je 13 '42 1150w

"Mr. Nuhn has not given thoroughly rounded accounts of his three writers; he has not done justice to some of the earlier or some of the very latest chapters in the history of our counter-migration; and sometimes, in details, he seems to me to be barking up the wrong tree. But the root of the matter is in his book, and one looks forward expectantly to what he will do with the subjects of the two volumes that are to follow it. Meanwhile, I believe he is right in implying, as he does, that the east wind will blow more and more gently, and all the more beneficently for doing so, in the decades that approach." Newton Arvin

+ New Repub 107:181 Ag 10 '42 750w

Reviewed by P. M. Jack

N Y Times p8 Jl 26 '42 1400w

"The studies of Henry James, Henry Adams, and T. S. Eliot are sharp and fresh, though not quite first rate, and, except perhaps for the James one, too special and literary to bear out the theme. However, the real core of the book, a series of general observations on our democratic ideas in action, is probably as original and striking as anything we've had in a long time. Done in good, homely, Middle Western prose."

+ New Yorker 18:67 My 30 '42 160w

Pratt p16 D '42

"A dictum which omits Tom Paine and Benjamin Franklin of Pennsylvania . . . or Charles Carroll of Carrollton or the Quaker democracy of Woolman is, to put it gently, not very good history. Add that Mr. Nuhn has a distressing habit of buttonholing the reader as if the latter were an impatient schoolboy waiting for recess, and one sees that this is not good writing. It is a book which being written should have been re-written, and I fear that the publishers must share a little of the blame." H. M. Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 25:9 Jl 18 '42 600w

Social Studies 33:287 O '42 30w

"Teachers of the social studies will be increasingly called on to interpret America's essential meaning. A great body of materials already exists—and more will be forthcoming—to that end. Yet there is nothing entirely satisfactory, and probably never can be, at least within the pages of a single volume. Mr. Nuhn's book has a definite thesis and many keen and sensitive insights. Yet by reason of its over-simplification and its over-literary language it will be disappointing to many students of American culture." Merle Curti

+ Social Studies 33:331 N '42 480w

Wis Lib Bul 38:118 Jl '42

NURNBERG, MAXWELL W. What's the good word? a new way to better English. 308p $2 Simon & Schuster

420 English language—Idioms. English language—Errors—Use of words. English language—Composition and exercises (W) 42-20007

"Mr Nurnberg's discussion of English hinges on the reticence of your best friend to reveal to you speech slips, grammatical errors and slipshod enunciation, all of which, the author implies, tend to encourage awkwardness and discourage poise. In order that everyone may acquire the assurance and poise that come with knowing 'what is right, and why it is right,' the author has provided a 308-page book packed with information on English—words, usage, pronunciation, enunciation, derivation and spelling." (Springf'd Republican) Indexes.

Booklist 39:44 O 15 '42

NURNBERG, M. W.—Continued

Books p20 Ja 31 '43 270w

"It could be a boresome book, but Mr Nurnberg has presented his subject pithily and vividly."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 D 22 '42 360w

NUTTALL, LEONARD JOHN. Teacher. 163p $1.75 Macmillan

371.1 Teaching 42-1256

"Somewhat in story form, this book deals with the life of a typical American woman teaching in the public schools. Titles of some of the chapters are: 'Success as a Teacher,' 'Jobs and Positions,' 'The Work Load,' 'Schools and Their Leaders,' 'Home Life,' 'Freedom to Live,' 'Rewards for Teaching,' 'Work and Security.' An interesting and important human document." School & Society

"The motive of the book is obviously that of aiding bewildered teachers to find clues to the behavior appropriate to a teacher's position in many problem situations and to the most judicious, long-time planning with respect to a satisfactory teaching career. The volume will serve this purpose effectively for many beginning teachers, assuming that they have a serious interest in finding out what behavior will probably result in improvement in teaching service rather than an interest in finding out how to keep the job from interfering too much with other things they like to do. Superintendents, principals, and supervisors will find this story of a successful and acceptable teacher pleasingly reminiscent of the professional progress of teachers who have worked under their direction." N. B. Henry

+ El School J 42:633 Ap '42 800w

School & Society 55:28 Ja 3 '42 60w

Reviewed by J. M. Mart

School & Society 56:192 S 5 '42 500w

NYE, DOROTHY. Lady be fit! 91p il $1.75 Harper

613.71 Woman—Health and hygiene. Exercise (W) 42-20239

Informally written directions for exercises "for energy, efficiency and lasting health."

Booklist 39:64 N 1 '42

"The author offers a logical and easily understood program covering posture, foot faults and other flaws."

+ Books p18 Ag 9 '42 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '42

Wis Lib Bul 38:133 O '42

NYE, NELSON CORAL. Gunfighter breed. 197p $2 Macmillan

42-7962

Western story.

Booklist 38:385 Je 15 '42

"A fast, hearty and picturesque ruckus." Will Cuppy

+ Books p22 Ap 5 '42 150w

Christian Century 59:433 Ap 1 '42 40w

NYE, NELSON CORAL. Salt River ranny. 254p $2 Macmillan

Western story.

Booklist 39:103 N 15 '42

Christian Century 59:1006 Ag 19 '42 40w

NYGAARD, NORMAN EUGENE, ed. Strength for service to God and country; daily devotional messages for men in the services. 75c Abingdon-Cokesbury

248 Devotional exercises

"A page for each day in the year, and for each day a brief and inspiring message and a short prayer, designed for the use of men in the armed services. Well known ministers of all denominations and some competent laymen have contributed." Christian Century

"The little book is beautifully made, weighs practically nothing at all, and can be easily carried even when packing space is rigidly limited. It is a package of condensed spiritual rations for a year."

+ Christian Century 59:960 Ag 5 '42 70w

"The volume is attractive in form, convenient in size, and reasonable in price. It is an ideal gift for the boys who have left their homes at the call of their country." Rittenhouse Neisser

+ Crozer Q 13:333 O '42 90w

Reviewed by John Knox

J Religion 23:76 Ja '43 40w

NYSWANDER, MRS DOROTHY BIRD. Solving school health problems; the Astoria demonstration study. 377p $2 Commonwealth fund

371.712 School hygiene 42-16652

"This intensive study was sponsored by the Department of Health and the Board of Education, New York City. It is the fourth work to emerge as the practical application of past and current studies and experiences to the New York City school system. Recognition of modern practices for the better health of school children makes the study applicable to any progressive community." (School & Society) Index.

"This report is unsurpassed in the literature dealing with school health services. The study's scope and thoroughness, its objectivity, and its record of failures as well as successful procedures constitute a positive contribution to workers interested in the promotion of the health of school children. The report will be especially valuable for large urban schools as a pattern which they may follow in evaluating their health services. All school health workers, however, could study the report with profit." A. R. Turner, M.D.

+ El School J 43:55 S '42 950w

"This report as a whole is a significant contribution to the field of school health and should be read by everyone responsible for the administration of a school health program." D. V. Whipple

+ J Home Econ 34:684 N '42 410w

School & Society 55:652 Je 6 '42 60w

"There will be differences of opinion on the author's view of differential diagnoses as a school responsibility, and on her conclusion that a report of personnel activities has more significance to school administrators than a report of the health status of pupils and of their unmet health needs. Because of the impossibility of providing a reliable health inventory within the limitations of the service, the author's omission of one is not a fault. Her program is ideal for the situation, containing as it does an explanation of the compromises required by circumstances. . . The book presents evidences that the study on which it is based attained its end—effective utilization of organized effort for the better health of school children." Marie Swanson

+ Survey 78:349 D '42 450w

O

O. HENRY MEMORIAL AWARD. Prize stories of 1942; sel. and ed. by Herschel Brickell [and] Muriel Fuller. 356p $2.50 Doubleday

(21-9372)

Contents: Introduction, by Herschel Brickell; The wide net, by Eudora Welty; Two rivers, by Wallace Stegner; Windwagon Smith, by W. L. Schramm; A long way to go, by J. E. Wylie; Their name is macaroni, by Kay Boyle; The portable phonograph, by W. V. Clark; An interval like this, by R. G. Davis; Snow-on-the-mountain, by D. C. DeJong;

Two soldiers, by William Faulkner; The dear little doves, by Eleanor Green; Sunday—1913, by Nancy Hale; The coming of age, by Clare Jaynes; Alexander to the park, by Josephine Johnson; The workmanship has to be wasted, by Alexander Laing; The jockey, by Carson McCullers; Yankee odyssey, by J. R. Schuman; How Edith McGillcuddy met R. L. Stevenson, by John Steinbeck; The yodeler, by Alison Stuart; Feathers, by Richard Sullivan; Basket carry, by Jerome Weidman; Hunger, by Marjorie Worthington.

Booklist 39:121 D 1 '42

"If judgment on these stories must be made as Mr. Brickell suggests, on 'contemporary rather than eternal standards,' there is no need for him to be apologetic about this collection." Milton Hindus

Books p14 N 22 '42 600w

"Rather better than the O'Brien volume of short stories, the O. Henry collection, taken more than one or two stories at a time, still makes unsatisfying reading. The stories are technically competent but essentially bare of the flesh of fiction; in the contemporary manner, they are too naked a statement of the single perception or observation that inspired their writing—as if a composer were to offer as the whole of a musical composition the undeveloped statement of his themes."

— + Nation 156:67 Ja 9 '43 120w

Reviewed by Lionel Trilling
New Repub 107:749 D 7 '42 1700w

"The collection as a whole is distinguished for its good writing, its sensitivity and perception. The stories are evocative rather than dramatic, brief candles lighting their little moment or two. It is a moving and very much worth-while book, although no one of the stories by itself is outstanding. Eudora Welty's 'The Wide Net,' winner of the first prize, is, however, a remarkable tale and possibly an exception." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p48 N 29 '42 750w

"A better-than-average collection, to which a number of newcomers have contributed."

+ New Yorker 18:96 N 21 '42 120w

"The technical competence of the twenty odd stories in this collection is unusually high, and the patterns richly varied. I am disappointed that William Faulkner's 'Two Soldiers' doesn't get into the money, for it seems to me at least as good as three of the prize winners. But the awards are intelligently made, and the practice of printing in the introduction the reasons that lead individual judges to their decisions should be encouraged." H. M. Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 D 19 '42 380w

Reviewed by Lee Varley
Springf'd Republican p7e D 13 '42 550w

OAKLEY, AMY (EWING) (MRS THORNTON OAKLEY). Behold the West Indies; il. by Thornton Oakley. 540p $4 Appleton-Century 917.23 West Indies—Description and travel
(W) 41-23616

Travel impressions of the islands of the West Indies, composed of a mixture of history, anecdote, and tourist information. The journey covered many of the islands of the Greater and Lesser Antilles, but the author's favorites were Trinidad, Haiti, and Martinique. Illustrations in black and white by the author's husband. Maps on end papers. Index.

Booklist 38:157 Ja 1 '42

"Mrs. Oakley is at her best in describing the scenes that enchanted her on her hurried course. When she tries, as she does now and then, to pierce beneath the surface, the results are rather sad. And when it comes to the politico-social problem in West Indian countries, she simply does not know what it is all about. The many illustrations in black and white by her husband, Thornton Oakley, are excellent... The chapter on Guadeloupe has merit, because it introduces the reader to ground not covered in so many other travel books. The warm springs at Dolé in the shadow of the Soufrière volcano are worth knowing." W. A. Roberts

+ — Books p13 Ja 25 '42 400w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:583 Ap '42 10w

"What distinguishes Amy Oakley's book on the West Indies is not any special novelty of material or skill in writing but the combination of conscientiousness and good taste with a background of cosmopolitan knowledge."

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 1 '42 750w

OBOLER, ARCH. Plays for Americans. 271p $2.50 Farrar

812 Radio plays (W) 42-24194

Thirteen new non-royalty radio plays. Most of the plays have already been given over the radio. Glossary of radio terms.

Booklist 39:134 D 15 '42

"Like all good radio plays, they lose a lot in print, without the music, the sound effects and the quality of the voices—radio's greatest appeal. But even in print they carry their message and show that the radio drama can be worthy of consideration." W. P. Eaton

+ — Books p25 Ja 24 '43 160w

"This anthology of plays intended for radio and already successfully broadcast can be highly recommended."

+ Library J 67:1013 N 15 '42 30w

"Not all Mr. Oboler's thirteen 'Plays for Americans,' to be sure, are imaginatively satisfying. When they are not, though, the defect lies not in the technique, but in the imaginative conception itself. . . . These are the relative failures. For the successes, one could indicate 'Blood Story,' with its effective background of beating heart and blood coursing through the veins; the pathos of 'Paul Reverski,' a little boy trying in vain to help his warring country, but accomplishing more than he knows; and finally 'The Welburns—a Confidential Report,' a deeply moving statement of American faith." Edgar Johnson

+ — New Repub 108:61 Ja 11 '43 600w

OBOLER, ARCH. This freedom; thirteen new radio plays; with a foreword by Robert J. Landry and notes on acting and production. 239p $2 Random house

812 Radio plays (W) 42-36116

In addition to scripts of thirteen radio plays this volume contains an informally written introduction on the technique of radio acting and brief introductions to the plays giving something of the circumstances of the writing. Contents: Suffer little children; Special to Hollywood; Sole survivors; And Adam begot; Dark world; Genghis Khan; The word; The women stayed at home; An American is born; The immortal gentleman; These are your brothers; Point of a gun; This precious freedom.

Booklist 38:270 Ap 1 '42

"Arch Oboler, generally conceded to be among the most effective of radio dramatists, did his best to get his ideas of preparedness past the radio censors, long before Pearl Harbor. . . . But since now even the radio magnates concede the correctness of his views, it is perhaps more interesting to consider his method of writing, the technique by which he appeals to such a large audience. It is the technique of good story-telling—a situation clearly defined, recognizable human speech, clear-cut characters, and suspense and climax. He does not resort to the announcer to do the work for him, he does not lean heavily on sound effects, and he does not resort to that inflated rhetoric which passes for poetry on the air. He simply tells a good, emotionally exciting story through the mouths of the characters." W. P. Eaton

+ Books p17 Mr 22 '42 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '42

Library J 67:320 Ap 1 '42 20w

OBOLER, ARCH—Continued

"Unless you happen to tune in responsively to Mr. Oboler's humor and philosophy, you may not feel, in reading the plays, that he is writing for you, but you are sure to recognize that he is writing for an audience that understands and appreciates him."

Theatre Arts 26:416 Je '42 200w

O'BRIEN, HOWARD VINCENT. Memoirs of a guinea pig; or, Eight years in a doctor's waiting room; il. by Robert Mills. 238p $2 Putnam

610.88 Medicine—Anecdotes, facetiae, satire, etc. (W) 42-24688

Eight years ago, the author, a Chicago newspaper columnist, discovered that he had something wrong, presumably with his eyes, because of the specks floating before his eyes. That was the beginning of a seemingly endless series of visits to specialists, during which time he was tested for everything from sinus to fallen arches. This is a humorous account of his eight years' pilgrimage in search of health.

Booklist 39:133 D 15 '42

"A book that is human, sensible and frequently gay. The author sees himself with detachment and no aura of self-pity. He has been willing to try anything, and doctors haven't been backward with suggestions."

+ Books p26 D 13 '42 250w

"Written in light vein, it does have some instructive features." J. A. Sohon

+ Library J 67:950 N 1 '42 60w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue

Sat R of Lit 26:17 Ja 9 '43 320w

O'CASEY, SEAN. Pictures in the hallway. 356p $2.75 (15s) Macmillan

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 42-6432

Continues the author's autobiography, begun in I Knock at the Door (Book Review Digest, 1939). The present volume covers the years between the death of Parnell and the Boer war. These were the years of his adolescence and youth, when he was acquiring and losing jobs in Dublin, eagerly filling his head with history and poetry, and learning to know about love.

Booklist 38:308 Ap 15 '42

Reviewed by Jenny Ballou

Books p4 Mr 22 '42 850w

"Pictures in the Hallway will find its place in literary history, because it is honest and original, and because it explains exactly how O'Casey's plays have been written." N. E. Monroe

+ Cath World 155:244 My '42 600w

"There are parts that may offend the devout and others that will upset the fastidious, but the book as a whole throbs with life and brings to bear on cant and cruelty, whatever their source, something of the irony of a Swift and the eloquence of a Synge." A. S. W.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 13 '42 220w

"It is hard to believe that large sections of this second volume of Sean O'Casey's autobiography have been written by the creator of such characters as 'Captain' Jack Boyle and Donal Davoren; that the hand which has sent audiences in all English-speaking countries into paroxysms of mirth over little more than the repetition of a phrase, and caused the same people to return home weeping at the end of a theatrical tragedy, is the same which has written this amateurish, clumsy, broth-of-a-bhovish and for the most part wearisome story of Johnny Casside's adolescence in Dublin at the turn of the century... There is grand writing in [some] pages, but the road leading to them is monotonous and mighty long." James Stern

+ New Repub 106:434 Mr 30 '42 600w

"There are sides to O'Casey's prose which I can't pretend to care for. After the Bible, Synge and Joyce have been his masters; the rhetoric of the former, the latter's word-jingles and parody, inspire excesses; and some pages joining the homespun and the experimental seem to me unfortunate. But what a prose it is!" G. W. Stonier

+ New Statesman & Nation 23:147 F 28 '42 800w

"This life of O'Casey will take its proper place beside the several distinguished autobiographies which have come out of Ireland. Unlike Moore, Yeats and Joyce, who had no beliefs, O'Casey believes and stands passionately for the improvement of the many. For the hierarchic Yeats's contempt for the mob O'Casey substitutes a love for his fellow-man, be he ever so humble. That belief and love give dignity and purpose to the life of which O'Casey is writing." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 22 '42 1100w

"You may not care for the author's plays on words, but in the main this is powerful, fervent, and distinguished writing that may well be literature."

+ New Yorker 18:87 Ap 11 '42 60w

Pratt p5 D '42

"A superb piece of evocation, [which] arouses an emphatic demand for more." Ernest Boyd

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 Mr 21 '42 1150w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bowen

Spec 168:423 My 1 '42 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p118 Mr 7 '42 700w

O'CONNOR, JOHN JOSEPH. Catholic revival in England. 102p $1 Macmillan

282.42 Roman Catholic church in England 42-6481

"The historical period covered in this book (1770-1892) witnessed a remarkable growth and development of Catholic life in England. In 1780 the total Catholic population of England and Wales was sixty thousand. In Manning's time it was just short of two million. . . . The present volume is devoted exclusively to the heroic age of the Catholic Revival in England as it proceeded from, was carried on by, and affected members of the Catholic Church. The attempt has been made to present the Revival in a Catholic setting, to see it, so to speak, from the inside, rather than to chronicle the effect of the Revival upon the English attitude toward the Church." Pref.

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 155:763 S '42 230w

Reviewed by L. L. Riley

Churchman 156:17 Mr 15 '42 180w

Reviewed by R. E. E. Harkness

Crozer Q 19:253 Jl '42 350w

O'CONNOR, SISTER MARY CATHARINE. Art of dying well; the development of the Ars moriendi. 258p il $2.50 Columbia univ. press

241 Ars moriendi

Detailed discussion of the different versions of the Ars Moriendi, a medieval document designed to give instruction in the art of dying well. Questions of authorship, literary fore-runners, and later works in which its influence are seen, are discussed. Bibliography. Index.

Books p12 Ja 3 '43 350w

"This is a scholarly study of the Ars Moriendi, a book of tremendous importance in the late Middle Ages and of great interest as a collector's item to those who seek rare and beautiful books today." M. G. Hennion

+ Cath World 156:630 F '43 550w

Christian Century 59:1458 N 25 '42 260w

"The author has done a commendable and thorough piece of work in tracing sources and authorship, comparing versions, listing manuscripts, discussing the various editions, and describing later books in the Ars Moriendi tradition. There are interesting illustrations, and an excellent bibliography and index which could serve as a fine example for all pieces of graduate study. This volume should be included in any study of historical devotional works, general mediaeval culture, religious art, or literature of the early Renaissance." C. E. Batten

+ Crozer Q 20:85 Ja '43 300w

"Sister Mary Catherine O'Connor's book will be of interest chiefly to students of the culture of the later Middle Ages, and to collectors of devotional works who will find it a careful and valuable piece of work. Besides the lists of manuscripts and editions in the text itself, there is an extensive bibliography, and the index is excellent."

+ Springfield Republican p6 D 10 '42 600w

ODELL, GEORGE CLINTON DENSMORE. Annals of the New York stage, v 13. pl $8.75 Columbia univ. press

792 Theater—New York (city)—History.
New York (city)—Social life and customs (27-5965)

"[This volume], which includes some six hundred large pages of text and more than a hundred double-column pages of index, is devoted to the seasons 1885-88. As usual the author concerns himself not only with the legitimate stage but also with burlesque, variety, concerts, and so on, and includes within his survey not only Manhattan but also Brooklyn, Williamsburg, Queens, and Staten Island. Here, in other words, are not only Ada Rehan, Modjeska, Lily Langtry, and John Drew, but also Lotta, Frank Daniels, and Primrose and West. The period covered includes the declining days of Wallack's Theater and the rise of Daly's." (Nation) For volume twelve see Book Review Digest, 1940.

"Here we are, writing of what is primarily a reference book almost as if it were a critical history. That is Mr. Odell's fault for making his reference book so personal and provocative and to all real lovers of the stage so warm and delightful. With each new volume the wonder grows." W. P. Eaton

+ Books p18 Jl 26 '42 550w

"Anyone with a feeling for the dignity of record can hardly fail to get a queer sense of security from the mere contemplation of the shelf which the thirteen volumes so far issued so majestically fill. . . In reviewing one of the previous volumes I expressed the wish that Professor Odell might find time for a volume of frankly personal recollections, and I can only repeat the wish here. Those who are familiar with only the recent stage will be pleased and perhaps surprised to discover how many performers described and pictured in this volume survived on our stage until at least the very recent past." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 155:304 O 3 '42 650w

Theatre Arts 26:796 D '42 350w

ODETS, CLIFFORD. Clash by night, 242p $2 Random house

812 42-7560

A triangle play in which a trusting, blundering husband brings a friend home to his house to board, and loses his wife. The end is tragedy.

Booklist 38:271 Ap 1 '42

"The social philosophy which gave Odets his original driving force and the key to a meaning in the life he wrote about is at length almost completely separated from his subject matter, which accordingly stands out as pretty disagreeable and sordid." W. P. Eaton

+ Books p17 Mr 22 '42 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '42

"One of America's leading dramatists; contains some of his best writing. Recommended."

+ Library J 67:320 Ap 1 '42 10w

ODLUM, JEROME. Night and no moon, 342p $2 Howell, Soskin

42-15978

A former newspaper man turned private detective is framed in a murder case. The D.A. is on the side of the murderer, and it is evident that the guilty person is one of the detective's friends. New evidence turned up at the last minute is all that saves the condemned man.

"Odium has one of the best ideas for a detective story the reviewer has ever seen. So far as he knows, it is unique, although possibly sleuth Will Cuppy could point out parallels in the annals of crime. . . The story is overlong, although well contrived. It is the people in it who weary us. The yarn falls between two stools. In avoiding the pleasantly familiar stencils of the pure murder mystery, Mr. Odium has scarcely even attempted to create living human beings. But the work has its points and its moments. It is recommended to mystery addicts as a change from their steady diet." David Tilden

+ Books p22 My 10 '42 500w

New Yorker 13:78 Ap 25 '42 60w

"Jerome Odium's story, if not of virgin plot, has the pleasing characteristics of swift tempo and good dramatic sense—and even the final race with death can almost be forgiven."

+ Springfield Republican p7e Ap 19 '42 220w

OECHSNER, FREDERICK CABLE, and others. This is the enemy, 364p $3 Little

943.086 Germany—Nazi movement. World war, 1939—Germany (W) 42-36356

Represents the combined efforts of five American correspondents, Mr. Oechsner, and four of his assistants in the Berlin office of the United Press. The book was written while they were interned at Bad Nauheim in Germany, after Pearl Harbor. Each one covers the subject which he knows best, and it adds up to a survey of Germany at war. The book is divided into four sections: War, the men who made it; The technique of war; The war in Germany; The war abroad. A few of the sections have appeared in daily newspapers.

Booklist 39:100 N 15 '42

"This is the best book yet published in this country about the Third Reich at war. It is full of new information. It is carefully and objectively written, yet it is simple, clear, colorful and fast-moving. There is just enough personal touch to add to the interest, without any mention of the distant relatives, household pets or other domestic concerns of the authors. There is just enough humor of just the right kind." W. R. Deuel

+ Books p3 N 15 '42 1150w

"It is by no means an easy volume to read, despite the vigorous, authoritative prose. . . Some of the material, however, is of such astounding and startling quality that were it not for the unimpeachable reputation of Mr. Oechsner as a responsible foreign correspondent it would provoke quizzical eyebrow-lifting. This is particularly true of those passages putting direct quotations into the mouth of Hitler and his high-placed advisers at secret conferences. Mr. Oechsner, however, takes some pains to explain that he had unusually reliable sources of information." L. L. Marchand

Boston Globe p21 N 18 '42 400w

"As a former colleague in Berlin of the men who wrote this book I can say that what they report is the product of meticulous and scrupulously honest work and that what they conclude can be accepted as representing the very best and soundest opinion available about the nature and the strength and the weakness of the enemy with whom our nation is locked in decisive war today." J. C. Harsch

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 N 23 '42 1150w

Reviewed by Max Fischer

Commonweal 37:237 D 18 '42 120w

"Able, comprehensive picture of Nazi Germany. . . Libraries having essentially same material will probably not need this." Margaret Owen

Library J 67:950 N 1 '42 110w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates

Nation 155:588 N 28 '42 180w

OECHSNER, F. C.—Continued

"It might have been a better book, not so comprehensive but more unified and lively and personal, if Oechsner had written the whole of it himself, instead of collaborating with the four other Americans on the Berlin staff of the United Press. They don't write badly, but none of them has space enough to make his contribution more than a bare summary of facts that in most cases we know already." Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 107:684 N 23 '42 270w

Reviewed by Emil Lengyel

N Y Times p6 N 15 '42 800w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 18:76 N 14 '42 650w

"With such a background, such an author team, 'This is the Enemy' should have been a fine and valuable book, one to place on the shelves beside William L. Shirer's 'Berlin Diary' and Wallace R. Deuel's 'People Under Hitler.' That it did not turn out thus appears due to no lack of conscientious effort on the part of the UP's Berlin staff. . . But for all that, there is something lacking in this book which makes it disappointing to this reviewer. . . This is not to say that there is nothing new or interesting in the book. Mr. Oechsner has dug deep into his memory and into the wealth of facts, stories, and rumors about Hitler which only Germans know to fill out the picture of the man. . . There are some fine touches of color in little anecdotes about trips to the front, chance experiences in the occupied nations. Perhaps the best section of all is the one describing the 'conditioning' of Willi Schultz, the 'little man' in Germany." P. R. Knauth

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:8 N 14 '42 1000w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 10 '43 110w

O'FAOLAIN, EILEEN (MRS SEAN O'FAOLAIN). King of the cats; with pictures by Vera Bock. 159p $2 Morrow [4s Talbot]

42-16615

Tale of magic in Ireland; of two boys and the grandmother of one of them, whose nickname Kitty the Cats, shows the trend of the story. In the great battle between the two armies of cats, the true king is victorious. For grades four and five.

Booklist 39:17 S '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p5 Ag 30 '42 350w

Cath World 156:374 D '42 60w

"This greatly expanded version of an old Irish folk tale has as genuine a Celtic ring as the original. . . Vera Bock's lively drawings add to the fun of this magic story of the Battle of the Cats in fairy tale Ireland." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 18:333 S '42 120w

"Magic, exciting adventures, and suspense aplenty. Very usable for series of story hours or to read aloud." Gertrude Mills

+ Library J 67:687 Ag '42 80w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie

Library J 67:893 O 15 '42 30w

"There is undoubted charm and atmosphere in Mrs. O'Faolain's book, but it is so crowded with incidents that many children will find the story hard to follow. In fact, when we remember the conciseness and fine dramatic effectiveness of the original little tale, we are inclined to feel that it has lost rather than gained by Mrs. O'Faolain's elaborate additions." A. T. Eaton

+ — N Y Times p20 N 8 '42 400w

O'FAOLAIN, SEAN. Great O'Neill. 374p $3.75 Duell

B or 92 Tyrone, Hugh O'Neill, 2d earl of 42-22782

"A biography of Hugh O'Neill, earl of Tyrone, 1550-1616." The Great O'Neill was the sixteenth century Irish chieftain who was a thorn in the side of Queen Elizabeth during many years of her reign, and against whom she sent armies led by such men as Essex and Mountjoy. The opening chapters of the book contain some discussion of Irish life and customs. Explanatory list of characters, bibliography, and index.

Booklist 39:137 D 15 '42

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue

+ Books p8 D 27 '42 1300w

"Sean O'Faolain has put together a deftly constructed and sufficiently scholarly biography of this extraordinary man, basing it upon well chosen sources, avoiding pedantry, apportioning praise and blame on the whole impartially." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 156:243 N '42 500w

"Not light reading, a long book packed with well-documented information gracefully presented." Emily Garnett

+ Library J 67:794 S 15 '42 110w

"It is difficult to give the Gaelic clansman's side of history (subsequent history having been what it is) without sentiment, bigotry or rancor. But there is now a Gaelic scholarship, which makes Gaelic sources available, and O'Faolain is a Gaelic scholar. He has given us something quite different from the pious and patriotic accounts, written by Irishmen about the Irish, of the nineteenth century. Whether or not the absolute kernel of fact has been uncovered, as it could only be uncovered in our day, is still debatable." Louise Bogan

+ New Repub 107:645 N 16 '42 1200w

"Mr. O'Faolain makes no pretense of writing his book for the eye of the professional historian; his interests are those of the novelist and short-story writer. . . The task requires, I admit, almost the art of another Shakespeare—if he were Irish—yet Mr. O'Faolain succeeds admirably, and his sober, highly-sensitized portrait of Tyrone is one for which any reader of biography, whether he is English, Irish or American, might well be grateful." Horace Gregory

+ N Y Times p2 O 4 '42 1500w

"On the whole, I do not know a better book about Ireland in the sixteenth century, certainly none in which the clash of the two alien and altogether antipathetic cultures is so dramatically and understandingly presented. Even if the story were now ended, even if the problem of a place for Ireland in the modern world were not still unsolved, there should be time among all our current preoccupations for history as good as this." Garrett Mattingly

+ Sat R of Lit 25:32 O 24 '42 900w

Spring'd Republican p6 O 26 '42 1100w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

Yale R n s 32:398 winter '43 1050w

O'FARRELL, WILLIAM. Repeat performance. 299p $2.50 Houghton

42-25230

As the book opens Barney Page, Broadway actor, is about to be arrested for murder. A friend arrives to help him out of the jam. Then time turns back and it is a year earlier. The story of what might have happened if Barney had taken a different turning is then related.

"An interesting experiment in fiction, 'Repeat Performance' is something less than enjoyable to read—save as an exercise in memory and observation." Iris Barry

Books p20 N 22 '42 380w

"Basically, of course, the plot is as bizarre as any drunken journey into the subconscious; in the telling, it comes through with a hard and terrifying clarity. . . If Mr. O'Farrell's bohemianism is unforced, his knowledge of Barney's world of the theatre is no less accurate. His backstage scenes ring true as a bell. One scene in particular (the opening night of Jack's play) is a small masterpiece of its kind. No one who has been through the torture of a Broadway opening, even by proxy, can read this vignette without skipping a heartbeat." William Du Bois

+ N Y Times p7 N 8 '42 800w

"Mr. O'Farrell's idea is interesting, but not sufficiently probed to endow it with importance. It is more like a movie scenario than a seriously expressed thesis dressed as a novel."

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 10 '43 240w

OFFORD, MRS LENORE (GLEN). Clues to burn. 293p $2 Duell

42-16613

Detective story.

"This is recommended to armchair sleuths who wish to follow clues right to the bitter end, also to readers who like their shudders only half in earnest. It's a step up for the author of 'The Nine Dark Hours' and 'Murder on Russian Hill.'" Will Cuppy

+ Books p18 Je 14 '42 170w

"Writers of mystery-horror tales seldom season their narratives with comedy, but Mrs. Offord has proved that it can be done successfully." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 Je 14 '42 240w

"Clever mixture of murder-yarn common-places into attractive dish of thrills, humor, agreeable dialogue, and adequate detecting. Gets by."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:16 Je 27 '42 40w

OGDEN, CHARLES KAY, ed. General Basic English dictionary. 441p $2.50 Norton [2s Evans]

428.25 Basic English. English language—Dictionaries (W) 42-36402

"Giving more than 40,000 senses of over 20,000 words, in Basic English." (Subtitle) "Designed not only for those who are taking up English as a new language, and those who are interested in putting Basic English itself to work in different special fields, but for all who are still making discoveries about words and their meanings. Uses only the 850 words of Basic (which are naturally the key words for Dictionary purposes) and the 50 international words which go with them." (Note)

Booklist 39:132 D 15 '42

Reviewed by Albert Guerard

Books p26 N 29 '42 430w

OGDEN, SAMUEL R. How to grow food for your family; drawings by W. W. Faulks. 139p $2 Barnes, A.S.

635 Vegetable gardening 42-11533

Instructions for the making of a vegetable garden, what to plant in it, and how to fertilize it. Includes planting timetables, instructions on soil analysis, pest control measures, and a useful chapter on cooking, canning and pickling vegetables. Index.

Booklist 38:364 Je 1 '42

Bookmark 3:7 My '42

"This reviewer is old-fashioned enough to prefer good gardening books made up of straightforward text with occasional explanatory illustrations, rather than scads of illustrations with a little explanatory text. Probably this is one reason why he is especially keen about Samuel R. Ogden's 'How to Grow Food for Your Family.' It's readable, definite, factual and down to earth." R. S. Lemmon

+ Books p15 Ap 19 '42 160w

Boston Globe p17 Ap 22 '42 100w

Christian Century 59:498 Ap 15 '42 60w

"'How to Grow Food for Your Family' is based on a decade of experience on the unpromising soil of Vermont and is planned and adjusted for other climes as well. The author makes it all sound very reasonable. . . One of the nicest features of his apparently sound compendium is the suggestion of palatable dishes that put home-grown vegetables to good use: parsnip stew, baked salsify, brown lettuce, French fried onions, cabbage cups and fried green tomatoes." Edward Skillen, Jr.

+ Commonweal 35:555 Mr 27 '42 420w

J Home Econ 34:387 Je '42 40w

"Well-written book of helpful facts . . . that will be appreciated by those who, though not born farmers, desire to grow food for their families." H. R. Burdett

+ Library J 67:317 Ap 1 '42 90w

OGILVIE, MARDEL. Terminology and definitions of speech defects. 300p $3.50 Teachers college

616.2 Speech—Terminology 42-50206

"The purpose of this Ph.D. dissertation is to lay the groundwork for a clarification and systematization of the terminology of speech defects so summarized that their similarities and dissimilarities are readily apparent." (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

"The book is well constructed and easy to follow. The amount of effort expendable in the compilations must have been extensive. Yet it is questionable whether the book serves a worth-while purpose. The author has made no attempt to qualify any of the terms listed or to recommend or rank any definitions. The reader is left with the task of selecting the definition that pleases him after reading the many listed terms. . . The bibliography has value, covering, as it does, such a vast amount of the literature. The book is of limited value to the profession of speech corrections or to its allied fields." H. M. Robinson

+ — El School J 43:250 D '42 450w

School & Society 56:196 S 5 '42 30w

OHNSTAD, KARSTEN. World at my finger tips. 348p il $3 Bobbs

B or 92 Blind

(W) 42-14501

The author was afflicted with blindness during his last year in high school. His book tells the story of the months of waiting for cure or the end of sight, and of the dozen years which followed when he had to struggle to re-adjust his life, and finish his education in spite of his handicap. One section is devoted to an account of his experiences with a Seeing Eye dog.

Booklist 38:440 Jl 15 '42

Books p17 Je 14 '42 350w

Library J 67:476 My 15 '42 30w

"The whole autobiography is an illuminating and detailed record of the triumph over affliction in the conquest of a sturdy normality, not only of mind but of habit and circumstance."

+ N Y Times p5 My 31 '42 500w

"A pleasant book, in which the author makes light—not to say light comedy—of his predicament."

+ New Yorker 18:67 My 30 '42 50w

OLD SARGE, pseud. How to get along in the army. 168p il $1.50 Appleton-Century

355.12 U.S.—Army—Military life (W) 42-36160

A veteran of the European war advises new soldiers on matters not found in the usual army manuals. Partial contents: How to avoid those army aches and pains; What equipment to take—what to leave behind; Around the clock in the army; Your uniform and equipment; How to be a healthy soldier; After it's all over; Allotments, deductions, travel pay, burial expenses, wills; Free legal aid; Pay and allowances; Soldiers' and sailors' civil relief act of 1940.

Booklist 38:324 My 1 '42

"Here is a book of practical, commonsense advice that admirably fills the prescription of its title. It is written without fuss and feathers, and it offers intelligent answers to almost every question that confronts the boy who is joining the armed forces."

+ Books p23 S 13 '42 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '42

OLD SARGE—Continued

"The author's advice is homely, realistic, sound; this book has no frills and furbelows, but tries to paint a true picture of how the average young man can best prepare for his Army career. The author is on particularly sound ground when he stresses the need for physical conditioning." H. W. Baldwin
+ N Y Times p13 My 17 '42 100w

OLDS, MRS HELEN (DIEHL). Victoria clicks!
il. by Dorothy Wagstaff. 275p $2 Messner

(W) 42-7375

Victoria Merrill wanted to earn money for a college course and to continue her work in photography. In her management of a small photographic shop during summer vacation she found she could combine the two. For older girls.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 Mr 22 '42 300w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 27 '42 120w

"Unforced, convincing novel of friendship and ambition, with general appeal as light fiction. Contains many practical tips about the profession." Maude Adams

+ Library J 67:477 My 15 '42 50w

"Subject is timely, and there are good hints for amateur, but whole thing is too glorified. Large libraries may feel they need it, but small libraries could spend money to better advantage. I do not believe it would inspire would-be photographer, and person already interested in taking pictures would want more helpful and factual book. In class of 'just another book.'" M. R. Lucas

+ Library J 67:477 My 15 '42 50w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p8 Je 21 '42 60w
Wis Lib Bul 38:71 Ap '42

OLMSTEAD, ALBERT TEN EYCK. Jesus in the light of history. 317p $2.75 Scribner

232.9 Jesus Christ—Biography 42-15926

Reconstructs the life of Jesus, placing Him in terms of Jewish life and history. "The chronology of the Fourth Gospel is preferred to the usual reconstruction from the Synoptics. Some exceedingly careful work has been done on the subject of dates, and a brief appendix shows how only the year 30 meets the test for the first Good Friday and Easter. Another factor of the book is the use of archeological findings, and the subsequent descriptions of the geography and architecture of the times." (Churchman) The author is professor of oriental history at the oriental institute of the University of Chicago. Indexes.

Booklist 39:95 N 15 '42

Bookmark 3:4 My '42

"This is a very readable book. Dr. Olmstead writes with a zeal that is contagious." S. J. Case

+ Books p13 Ag 2 '42 800w

"The work is no hasty potboiler, but the result of careful, critical scrutiny of the sources." C. C. McCown

+ Christian Century 59:1217 O 7 '42 800w

"An original, scholarly, and amazing book. . . Only time and the biblical scholars can tell whether this book is epoch making, but it is on the side of a new movement among the scholars which is fast gaining headway. It is fascinating reading, and gives many new insights into the historical Jesus' person and teaching. The bibliography and indices are of great help." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 156:17 Jl 1 '42 350w

"Unless I am greatly mistaken this is a book which will be widely read and discussed. Many will hail it as definitive, the most important book on the life of Jesus produced in years. Others will castigate it as arrogant, presumptuous, and utterly misleading. Writing in a style fresher and more vivid than that of his justly famous Histories, Professor Olmstead brings to his subject a vast knowledge of oriental antiquities and an intimate acquaintance with the life of ancient Palestine."

C. H. Kraeeling

+ J Religion 22:423 O '42 1700w

OLSEN, DOLORES BIRK. Alarm of the black cat. 269p $2 Doubleday

42-538

Detective story.

Booklist 38:252 Mr 15 '42

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p13 Ja 18 '42 150w

"Love, hatred, suspicion and greed all play their parts in this somewhat overcomplicated story." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p18 Ja 18 '42 230w

"Average."

Sat R of Lit 25:19 Ja 24 '42 30w

OLSON, TED. Hawk's way [poems]. 53p $1.50 League to support poetry, 350 W. 18th st, N.Y.

811

42-1336

"Ted Olson is a native of Wyoming. . . In his second book of lyrics (his first having appeared in 1928 in the Yale Series of Younger Poets) Olson's pictures of natural objects are done from a number of angles, but invariably carry the gray, elegiac tones of one who knows that the exhilaration man derives from nature is a short-lived thing." Books

Reviewed by Kerker Quinn

Books p8 Mr 15 '42 600w

"The volume, 'Hawk's Way,' by Ted Olson, is a feather in the cap for the league, for it is a far better book of verse than most of those the commercial houses feel it pays to put their imprint on. . . Still, in many of his pieces this poet's language shows a lack of verbal discipline. He falls into unindividualized words and expressions like 'giddy sense,' 'flimsy planet,' 'cosmic shores.' He has yet to go through a period of molding English to his own purpose, a period of rejections of words before he comes on the vocabulary and the sounds that give us his own dream." M. M. Colum

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 11 '42 360w

O'MALLEY, MRS MARY DOLLING (SANDERS) (ANN BRIDGE) pseud. Frontier passage. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 324p $2.50 Little

(W) 42-36305

A story of the Spanish-French frontier during the final months of the Spanish Civil war. The characters include English tourists, war correspondents, French officials, Spanish refugees from both sides, and spies.

Booklist 39:33 O 1 '42

"Because all of the most colorful and important of the characters represent the Falangist side, because it is they alone who are conspicuously seen performing gallant or admirable acts, the picture as a whole comes out considerably unbalanced. . . Nevertheless, the story is rarely readable, elegantly managed and apt to touch one deeply." Iris Barry

+ Books p3 S 27 '42 700w

Boston Globe p19 S 23 '42 130w

Reviewed by E. L. Conway

Cath World 156:506 Ja '43 270w

Christian Science Monitor p11 O 3 '42

650w

Reviewed by Sara Sherman

Library J 67:738 S 1 '42 70w

Reviewed by Wilfrid Gibson

Manchester Guardian p3 O 23 '42 130w

Nation 155:457 O 31 '42 180w

"It is obvious Miss Bridge knows the parts of Spain and France in which her action takes place. So vivid does she make the places, one wishes she had included a map of the territory in her book so that the movements of her characters could be followed. Her scenes of refugee camps, of the suffering needlessly inflicted by the French Government upon those who were fleeing the wrath of Franco's army are written with brilliant indignation. This is but one of the many fine things that make 'Frontier Passage' a book of superlative quality. It has the excitement of a spy story and the pity and depth of a profoundly searching human document." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p8 S 27 '42 900w

"A slight and unconvincing story. . . . The vividly recorded sufferings of the refugees along the border, the brutality of a Spanish execution, and the cynicism of French officials make an important background that the very casual story does not rate."

— + New Yorker 18:79 S 26 '42 90w

Pratt p11 D '42

"This is an extravagant confection about the civil war in Spain, or about as much of it as could be observed from St.-Jean-de-Luz. Miss Bridge is well within her rights in disowning responsibility for the opinions or sentiments of her characters, but there is always a certain imaginative emphasis in these cases and it must be said that Miss Bridge's emphasis is at once opulent and chilling."

Times [London] Lit Sup p509 O 17 '42 360w

O'MALLEY, PATRICIA. Wider wings [Il. by Steele Savage]. 273p $2 Greystone

(W) 42-15036

Further adventures of Carol Rogers, heroine of the author's earlier novel Wings for Carol (Book Review Digest, 1941). In this story Carol takes a job as chief of the stewardesses for a new commercial airline.

Booklist 38:430 J1 1 '42

"The story is entertaining and has the added merit of first-hand knowledge on the author's part." Lisle Bell

+ Books p13 Je 21 '42 80w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 13 '42 130w

Reviewed by Maude Adams

Library J 67:583 Je 15 '42 40w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p8 Je 21 '42 40w

OMAN, CAROLA. See Lenanton, C. M. A. O.

O'NEIL, KERRY, pseud. Death at Dakar. 272p $2 Doubleday

42-50440

Story of espionage and murder, in which a young American war correspondent shuttles back and forth between Rio and Dakar, survives many dangers, and lays certain Nazis by the heels.

"Simple and wide-eyed at times, this pipe-dream of a damsel's adventures is always readable because of Patricia's charm and courage. You ought to hear her talk back to certain hyenas. You can be pretty sure that she'll outsmart the villains in spite of their numbers and experience, and you needn't worry too much about the dire perils she undergoes—girls like that always come through. Spies, cross-purposes and heroism in a heady blend with world problems for ballast and love in moderation." Will Cuppy

Books p10 D 20 '42 250w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p4 D 20 '42 140w

"A bit too machine made for comfort."

— Sat R of Lit 26:18 Ja 2 '43 40w

OPLER, MORRIS EDWARD. Apache life-way; the economic, social, and religious institutions of the Chiricahua Indians. 500p il $5 Univ. of Chicago press

970.3 Apache Indians, Indians of North America—Culture 41-24474

An account of the life cycle of a Chiricahua Apache Indian from infancy thru childhood and youth to old age. Much of the book is made up of quotations from Indians themselves. Mr Opler was formerly assistant anthropologist in the United States Bureau of Indian Affairs and has taught at Reed college and the University of Wisconsin. He is assistant professor of anthropology, Claremont colleges. Selected bibliography. Index.

"Though An Apache Life-Way does not fulfill all its author's prefatory promises, it is, in spite of its life-cycle arrangement, a first-class American Indian monograph in the best ethnographic tradition. It fills a great gap in our anthropological knowledge and it will certainly be, as it deserves to be, one of the most used of American tribal records." Ruth Benedict

+ — Am Anthropol 44:692 O '42 800w

Reviewed by Florian Znaniecki

Am Soc R 7:724 O '42 1350w

Reviewed by L. H. Fisher

Ann Am Acad 220:274 Mr '42 430w

"This is a description of the past and most of the informants' statements are reminiscences but for some reason the author has chosen to put everything in the present tense. The effect is stilted and sometimes confusing. . . . Nonetheless this is a completely reliable and fairly readable account, and in no small degree an explanation of one of the great fighting tribes of all time." Oliver La Farge

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:28 My 16 '42 270w

"The author has sought to present his material in the order in which it would be experienced by a growing Apache child, so that the reader escapes some of the strangeness of being precipitated directly into a foreign world. . . . The attempt, in the reviewer's opinion, has been preeminently successful. It might well serve as a model for other monographs and release them from a more rigid and often boring pattern. Genuinely readable, the work gains in animation and reality by the author's skilful use, throughout, of direct quotations from informants. It could readily be used for student reading not alone in anthropology, but in other branches of the social sciences." L. C. Eiseley

+ Social Forces 20:519 My '42 500w

OPPENHEIM, EDWARD PHILLIPS. Man who changed his plea. 291p $2 Little [8s 6d Hodder]

(W) 42-10940

Detective story.

Booklist 38:369 Je 1 '42

"Not up to the author's standard." Will Cuppy

Books p18 Ap 19 '42 200w

"All of the characters in this mystery romance are either incredibly noble or incredibly ignoble. Leburns belongs in the second category, for whether or not he is guilty of murder he is a scoundrel of the deepest dye. It all turns out nicely in the end in a manner to vindicate Mr. Oppenheim's profound respect for the 'upper classes.'" Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p17 Ap 26 '42 240w

"Begins excellently, with old-time Opp. vigor, but gets pretty sugary before obliging confessions that clear up odd case. Readable."

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:39 My 16 '42 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p225 My 2 '42 120w

OPPENHEIM, EDWARD PHILLIPS. The pool of memory. 341p il $3 Little [12s 6d Hodder]

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 42-7368

The English author of many adventure stories here writes his autobiography. He describes his early struggles with the family leather business, his first ventures as an author, his years on the Riviera, and on the island of Guernsey, trips to the West Indies and the United States, and finally the long weary time after the fall of France, when he and his wife fled from their French estate, across Spain, and thence home to England.

Booklist 38:274 Ap 1 '42

OPPENHEIM, E. P.—Continued

"The recollections of a happy man, from which it is easy to see why, in spite of his success everybody who knows him likes Opp." M. L. Becker

+ Books p2 F 22 '42 800w

Commonweal 35:492 Mr 6 '42 60w

"A friendly volume, though it does not, perhaps could not, reveal what interests us most—the secret of its author's amazing fertility in plots for 'thrillers.'" A. S. W.

Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 13 '42 150w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf

New Statesman & Nation 22:528 D 27 '41 750w

"Those who have read Mr. Oppenheim's books will find here an authentic self-portrait, in harmony with their expectations, and infectious." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p5 F 22 '42 1200w

Spec 168:70 Ja 16 '42 300w

Time 39:91 F 23 '42 550w

"It is a modest admission by one of the most popular writers of the day that memoirs are not within the scope of his own literary endowment. To that extent it confirms the views that . . . in these memoirs of his there is something lacking. But there is much more in it than that: as an analysis of the problems of autobiography it is a good value to the public as the murder of ever so many Riviera people."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p33 Ja 17 '42 550w

Wis Lib Bul 38:68 Ap '42

ORMSBEE, DAVID, pseud. See Longstreet, S.

O'ROURKE, FRANK JOSEPH. Sheet-metal pattern drafting; ed. by James A. Moyer. 189p $2 McGraw

671 Sheet metal work—Pattern making 42-17433

"Throughout this book, special attention is given to the fundamental principles that underlie the current methods of sheet-metal pattern drafting. Practical shop problems in sheet-metal drafting of the kind that occur in everyday practice are discussed." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 39:97 N 15 '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '42

Library J 67:1063 D 1 '42 10w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:44 Jl '42

ORR, FAY. Freighter holiday; il. by William Sanderson. 197p $2.50 Hastings house

917.29 Caribbean sea. West Indies—Description and travel 41-27493

Account of a vacation trip by tramp freighter around the Caribbean sea with stops at Tampa, Jamaica, Guadeloupe, Martinique, Barbados, etc.

"A book with a flavor all its own."

+ Books p14 Je 28 '42 220w

"While Miss Orr makes the reader aware of all the drawbacks to freighter travel, like the true tramp ship addict she makes light of them and emphasizes the many compensations. . . 'Freighter Holiday' is not a guidebook, but an enthusiastic account of a happy holiday, much like a long letter home. It should appeal to all other 'floaters' and should win many converts."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 14 '41 280w

ORTON, MRS HELEN (FULLER). Little lost pigs in town; drawings by Enos Comstock. 96p $1.35 Stokes

42-21436

An easy reader for beginners, describing the realistic adventures of two small pigs lost in a city.

Reviewed by S. J. Johnson

Library J 67:956 N 1 '42 40w

"Simply written and printed in large, clear type, this book like its predecessors, 'The Little Lost Pigs,' 'Prancing Pat,' 'Queenie, the Story of a Cow,' is very useful as an easy reading book. Mrs. Orton's stories appeal to the matter-of-fact child who prefers that the fanciful element in a tale should keep close to reality. The illustrations are full of satisfying details, and little children will find the new adventures of the Little Lost Pigs, as they are told in text and pictures, very amusing." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p21 N 8 '42 300w

"Excellent for a child who is learning to read and wants to work alone at a real story."

+ School & Society 56:224 S 12 '42 20w

ORTON, ROBERT MERRITT, comp. Catalog of reprints in series, supplement, June 1942. 98p pa with 1941 volume subs $3.50 Wilson, H.W.

015 Bibliography—Books in series

"The inclusion of juvenile series adds nearly 1000 titles to the original list and the 1941 supplement. Three hundred and thirty-three titles have been added to the series already included; out-of-print titles and price changes are indicated." (Booklist) The 1941 supplement, not entered in the Book Review Digest, listed sixty-three series, and replaced the original publication and the 1940 supplement (Book Review Digest, 1940)

Booklist 39:1 S '42

Library Q 12:880 O '42 80w

OSBORN, ANDREW RULE. Christianity in peril; the new world order and the churches. 188p $2 Oxford

261 Christianity 42-14477

"Mr. Osborn's discussion divides itself into three sections: first, a diagnosis of the present ailments of the church and the peril in which it consequently finds itself; second, an outline of what the author conceives to be the fundamentals of the faith which the churches have partly lost, partly concealed under a confused and confusing mass of outmoded formulations, and partly forgotten how to preach to the world or teach to their own youth; third, programs for the reorganization of religious education, social action and the administrative structure of the church." Christianity Century

"Dr. Osborn makes his material fresh by an unflinching facing of facts. If his program of reform seems not wholly adequate to a crisis so honestly and fearlessly described, it is perhaps because he has not chosen to set the Church in the larger framework of a world swept by revolutionary change. The Church's problem is today a part of the whole problem of civilization, and thus inextricably involved in the economic, political and social cataclysms of this hour. Dr. Osborn sees this as the scenic background rather than as the very drama itself of religion's destiny." J. H. Holmes

+ Books p20 S 13 '42 600w

"For a small book of only 188 pages, this takes in a great deal of territory. Though provocative at some points and impractical at others, Mr. Osborn's drastic proposals are well worthy of consideration." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 59:956 Ag 5 '42 900w
Christian Science Monitor p11 S 5 '42 1200w

"The center section (and here Dr. Osborn is in his own field) on God, History, Jesus and the Future Life, is extremely worthwhile and alone justifies the book." J. H. Titus

+ Churchman 156:16 S 1 '42 240w

OSBORN, MARY ELIZABETH. Days beyond recall. 108p $1.50 Coward-McCann

42-24439

A brief novel which tells the story of dwellers in a small valley in the Catskills. The once fertile farm lands of the valley are worn out, and its inhabitants struggle for bare existence.

Ma Hewitt sends young Gwennie into town to work for Dan Martin but Gwennie's innocence and her love for the boy Russell, save her from the fate Dan Martin planned for her.

"The excellence of Miss Osborn's example of a form through which literature has been in our time permanently enriched, is one more reminder how inadequate for this form is the usual English word for it, 'novelette.' There is condescension in suffix and connotation belonging no more to this idyll of the Catskills than to short novels as widely different as 'Nocturne,' 'Ethan Frome' or 'Good-bye Mr. Chips.' It is in the modern manner, however sensitive to the past, and though little, nobody need look down on it." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 N 1 '42 410w

"The story of Gwennie's love affair is simply and tenderly told in a gently restrained and understanding style. It is a slight tale that takes on borrowed dignity from its connection with the brooding background of gloomy Haynes Hollow, destined for doom even in the pioneer days of the great, axe-swinging Haynes brothers." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p16 O 18 '42 320w

OSGOOD, CHARLES GROSVENOR. Poetry as a means of grace. 131p $2 Princeton univ. press

808.1 Poetry 42-1452

"Since no one has time for thorough knowledge of all great poets, Mr. Osgood advises adopting one of the greatest for constant companionship. While choice of such a companionship must be individual, he selects, for illustration, four poets whose many qualities make close friendship profitable. They are Dante, Spenser, Milton, and Johnson." Christian Science Monitor

Booklist 38:271 Ap 1 '42

Bookmark 3:10 Mr '42

"The book savors of the intimacy of a tutorial group. It is inspirational rather than academic in tone, and it makes very pleasant reading. . . . As examples Dante, Milton and Spenser seem well chosen. The chapter on Johnson is pleasant reading and overflowing with enthusiasm for his grandeur and moral power. But I am given the impression that he was hopefully brought in to round out four lectures like a double bass player completing a string quartet." J. J. Knights

+ Canadian Forum 22:29 Ap '42 270w

"On the whole Dr. Osgood is so remarkably Catholic in his ethical and esthetic judgments that one can imagine his book proving both helpful and interesting to students in our own seminaries." Katherine Brégy

+ Cath World 155:121 Ap '42 410w

Christian Century 59:115 Ja 28 '42 130w

"The book contains much that is important and useful to anyone who is eager to get the most out of literature." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 17 '42 700w

"It is necessary to agree with this book as a whole and to quarrel with its parts. It would appear that Dr. Osgood, aware of the tendency of modern man to fly from a metaphysical synthesis of experience, is here offering his auditors a ready-made metaphysics in the form of the greatest works of Dante or Spenser or Milton. At the risk of appearing sectarian, it must be said that Dr. Osgood's view of specific authors treated in his book is necessarily Protestant. Hence in the crucial examples of Spenser and Milton, the Catholic will find these authors sadly lacking in some of the measures of greatness suggested by Dr. Osgood." J. G. E. Hopkins

+ Commonweal 35:490 Mr 6 '42 600w

Reviewed by Christopher Morley

Sat R of Lit 25:12 F 7 '42 250w

OSGOOD, CLAUDE JACK. Eagle of the Gredos. 277p $2 Reynal

42-21437

Romantic tale of thirteenth century Spain. The hero is a young-Spanish noble, who fights and plunders the Moslem invaders. Two women capture the attentions of Ramon del Aguila, called "The Eagle." They are the proud daughter of a Spanish grandee, and a Moorish princess.

"Eagle of the Gredos' is filled with color and combat and presents a lively picture of the period." Lisle Bell

Books p24 S 27 '42 100w

"Except for the fact that the sex episodes described in this book are in some measure in consonance with the fiction of our time, the historical tale unfolded by Mr. Osgood is very old-fashioned indeed, bearing definitely the stamp of the Nineties. This novelist does not mar the character of his hero, conventionally perfect, by such hindering trifles as modern psychology, or by any complex background which would mitigate his heroic stature. In short, it is 'a plain, simple tale,' as the saying goes; and plain, simple minds will revel in it." John Cournos

N Y Times p34 O 4 '42 600w

OSTENSO, MARTHA. Love passed this way. 217p $2 Dodd

42-6010

When Minella Hanks fled from her South Dakota home she went under a cloud. In New York she changed her name to Mary Hallard, determined to forget her miserable childhood. Success came to her as a writer, but always in the background was the memory of one man in South Dakota, and eventually she returned to him.

Booklist 38:347 My 15 '42

"The story is told with sympathy and ends as you rather suspect—for quite some time—that it will." Lisle Bell

Books p16 Mr 22 '42 200w

"Mary's reason for running away seems pretty plotty, as does the solution of her problem and York's. Such things happen in real life, but they are not convincing in this sort of light fiction. But the story is so well written that many women will enjoy it." Charlotte Dean

+ — N Y Times p25 Mr 1 '42 250w

OSTROLENK, BERNHARD. Economic geography. 804p il maps $4 Irwin

330.9 Geography, Commercial

"Professor Ostrolenk begins his book with an apology: 'Economic geography, like history, needs to be constantly reinterpreted, re-evaluated and rewritten in the light of new technological developments.' . . . He starts from the proposition that the appraisal of resources, the significance of their geographic distribution, and their contribution to human welfare are constantly in flux, are currently affected by changes in technology, demand patterns, institutions and public policy. Hence, economic geography should be discussed in terms of just these changes, instead of merely describing how much of what is where." Am Econ R

"Among the texts in economic geography dealing primarily with the United States which have come to my attention Professor Ostrolenk's book is by far the most thought-provoking and deserves a prominent place in its field." Rainer Schickele

+ — Am Econ R 32:402 Je '42 1100w

"This book demonstrates the dangers confronting the economist when he tries to write an economic geography without having acquainted himself thoroughly with the geographic viewpoint. . . . The organization of the book reveals the writer's biased viewpoint." J. O. M. Broek

Ann Am Acad 221:225 My '42 400w

Current Hist 2:377 Jl '42 300w

OTT, LESTER. Aircraft spotter. 64p il pa $1 Harcourt

629.13 Airplanes (W) 42-36011

"This is a guide to aircraft identification for army, navy and civilians. It contains photographs, silhouettes, identifying insignia and

OTT, LESTER—Continued
descriptions of American, British, German, Italian, Russian and Japanese planes of all types." Christian Century

Booklist 38:185 F 1 '42

Bookmark 3:7 Mr '42

Christian Century 59:49 Ja 14 '42 30w

Cleveland Open Shelf p1 Ja '42

"It should be indispensable to professional and amateur spotters."

+ New Repub 106:278 F 23 '42 50w

Wis Lib Bul 38:43 Mr '42

OURSLEER, WILLIAM CHARLES. Folio on Florence White. 302p $2 Simon & Schuster 42-17637

Detective story.

"We found ourself caring deeply about Flo's problems and delving into a fine puzzle with growing amazement. More death, a disinternment, cyanide and horrid details. Different in get-up and easy to read." Will Cuppy

+ Books p16 J1 12 '42 200w

"A well-balanced and many-sided tale." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p18 J1 12 '42 240w

"Refreshingly different in manner of telling, capably plotted, but over-emotionalized, and with some specially gruesome bits. Better grade."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:21 J1 18 '42 40w

Time 40:80 Ag 3 '42 50w

OVERSTREET, CAROLYN. Coffee cream, 315p $2.50 Dutton 42-21900

Coffee cream is second class cream, not the rich top variety. In this novel of life in Mississippi some thirty years ago it designates the Crawfords, among others. Jack Crawford was coffee cream, but his wife, Virginia, was top. Their little daughter Sook, youngest of four children, and her tutor, the beautiful, mysterious Northern widow, are important in the development of the plot, in which Northerners and Southerners, Negroes, and near-whites all have a part.

Booklist 39:49 O 15 '42

"The story includes a number of episodes which you are not likely soon to forget, among them the flogging of a child, a death in a Negro cabin, and a man-hunt. Apart from these inherently dramatic scenes, which are handled with vigor and restraint, there are many smaller episodes which linger in one's memory because they seem honest and effective pictures of the way people acted in a given time and place. As a novel, 'Coffee Cream' is loosely strung together, and its ending is disconcertingly abrupt. As a human document it is interesting and almost always convincing." Mary Ross

+ — Books p12 O 11 '42 850w

"'Coffee Cream' makes no pretense of deep treatment of the problems it presents. The story obviously is based on some pretty hackneyed situations. But the author finds them absorbing and moving, and the not-too-critical reader will share her feeling. . . The rather old-hat plot is of the theatrical sort, but there is a quiet dignity about its telling, and an honest conviction, which makes the book good reading." Beatrice Sherman

+ — N Y Times p23 O 11 '42 700w

Reviewed by J. T. Graves

Sat R of Lit 26:36 Ja 23 '43 300w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 20 '42 220w

OVERTON, RICHARD CLEGHORN. Burlington west; a colonization history of the Burlington railroad. 583p il maps $4.50 Harvard univ. press [21s Oxford]

35s Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad. Railroad land grants A41-4558

"Mr. Overton's study, following the pioneer researches of James B. Hedges for the Northern Pacific and the Canadian Pacific and of Paul W. Gates for the Illinois Central, deals with the organization, methods, and results of the colonizing activities of the Burlington and Missouri River Railroad. The sources are so abundant that they have provided almost an embarrassment of riches. The records of the land department in the Baker Library at Harvard are supplemented by the official records and archives of the road, various collections of correspondence, public documents, newspapers, and local histories. The only potentially important sources not utilized are German and Scandinavian newspapers published in the United States." Am Econ R

"Mr. Overton's historical contribution would have been increased by greater unity of treatment. In the possession of such ample stores of interesting and often highly picturesque material, he is led to turn aside from his monographic labor to consider collateral topics and colorful episodes not pertinent to his theme. Background details, legislative and administrative policies, and descriptions of changing types of rolling stock—however significant and interesting in themselves—could well have been compressed or omitted for the purposes of this study." E. D. Ross

+ — Am Econ R 32:364 Je '42 800w

"This work represents a very extensive study. The factual information in Burlington West places in clear perspective the relation of that road to the communities that it helped to develop, but it must not be assumed that all railroads pursued similar policies." J. L. Sellers

+ Am Hist R 47:894 J1 '42 650w

"What Dr. Overton has done is impressive indeed; and, certainly for some time to come, his work must be considered as telling essentially the whole story." L. M. Hacker

+ Books p28 Mr 1 '42 750w

"The volume under review is significant not merely because of its own intrinsic merits, but also because it provides us with a vast fund of information which, added to the results of recent research on other roads, will enable us to generalize with greater assurance regarding the land policies of the railways. Approximately one fifth of Mr. Overton's volume consists of a clear-cut account of the origins of the Burlington system and the development of its lines. This portion of the book is in itself a substantial contribution, since it presents in interesting and condensed form the mass of material hitherto available only in the corporate history of the company." J. B. Hedges

+ Pol Sci Q 57:459 S '42 600w

OWEN, MRS JEANNE (LE PROVOST). Book of sauces. 156p $1.75 Barrows

641.5 Sauces

41-27662

Recipes, with variations and occasional appropriate anecdotes, for a large variety of sauces, alphabetically listed. Indexes.

Reviewed by Sheila Hibben

Books p11 D 28 '41 80w

J Home Econ 34:120 F '42 20w

Pratt p16 O '42

OXFORD dictionary of quotations; with an introd. by Carl Van Doren. 879p $5 (25s) 1941 Oxford

808.8 Quotations

(W) 42-13847

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

Pratt p17 O '42

"The Oxford Dictionary of Quotations is substantially bound, the paper of good quality, and the print readable. It is recommended only for large libraries, as an additional source."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 13:18 Ap '42 1300w

OXNAM, GARFIELD BROMLEY, bp. By this sign conquer; a study in contemporary crucifixion and crusade. 214p $1.75 Abingdon-Cokesbury

301 Social problems, Social ethics 42-13500

This volume contains the Merrick lectures delivered at Ohio Wesleyan University in 1941 by a bishop of the Methodist church. The author's theme is that in order to attain better world conditions after the war, men must look to Christian ideals of sacrifice and brotherhood.

Christian Century 59:530 Ap 22 '42 130w

Reviewed by T. F. Opie

Churchman 156:17 Je 15 '42 270w

"Stimulating volume to clergymen or social lenders, and helpful to thoughtful Christian laymen." J. S. Cleavinger

+ Library J 67:367 Ap 15 '42 100w

P

PACE, CHARLES ROBERT. They went to college; a study of 951 former university students. (Studies of general educ) 148p il $2.50 Univ. of Minn. [11s 6d Oxford]

378 Education, Higher 41-46111

"This study is more important because of the questions it raises than because of those it answers. Answers are sought from nearly 1,000 college men and women between 25 and 34 years of age to such questions as 'What good did college do them?' 'Did it help them to live happily and effectively?' 'Did it help them to get good jobs and earn a comfortable living?' 'Did it help them to use and enjoy their leisure time—not only to their own satisfaction but to the benefit of their fellow men?' These questions and many others serve as a probe of the effectiveness of a modern college education." School & Society

School & Society 54:480 N 22 '41 100w

Reviewed by M. C. Gould

Survey 78:319 N '42 500w

PACE, MRS MILDRED MASTIN. Friend of animals; the story of Henry Bergh; il. by Paul Brown. 125p $1.60 Scribner

B or 92 Bergh, Henry—Juvenile literature (W) 42-10009

Short biography of Henry Bergh, the New York shipbuilder's son who founded the American society for the prevention of cruelty to animals, and in 1866 was responsible for the first effective American law against cruelty. For young readers.

Booklist 38:348 My 15 '42

"Paul Brown's sympathetic drawings follow closely a story showing how much the spirit of our country depends on those who would rather be right than popular." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ag 23 '42 300w

"To more than children, the substance of this biography . . . will be fresh and invigorating. . . The story is a fascinating one. . . Paul Brown's masterly drawings add to the wide appeal of this gallant story." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:176 My '42 110w

Reviewed by Miriam Snow

Library J 67:416 My 1 '42 90w

New Yorker 18:78 My 23 '42 60w

Wis Lib Bul 38:191 D '42

PACKARD, REYNOLDS, and PACKARD, MRS ELEANOR. Balcony empire; Fascist Italy at war. 380p $3 Oxford

940.5345 Italy—Politics and government. World war, 1939—Italy. Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 42-25891

"For three and a half years, until they came home on the Drottningholm in June, 1942, the authors were stationed in Italy—in concentration and internment camps for their last six months—where Reynolds Packard was chief of the United Press Bureau and Eleanor Packard the star reporter of the Rome staff. As man-and-wife correspondents they have covered many stories together and, more importantly, the same story from different places, thus gaining an over-all picture of events which would have been impossible for a correspondent working alone." Publisher's note

Booklist 39:136 D 15 '42

"It is a creditable performance, all the more valuable for its sober, though reliable, style. I only wish they had been just a little less objective. They have given us a very workmanlike story of Italy at war and how it got that way. I wish they had put in a little more about the fabulous Packards." J. T. Whitaker

+ Books p4 N 15 '42 1550w

Cath World 156:635 F '43 250w

Christian Science Monitor p10 D 8 '42 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '42

Reviewed by Gaetano Salvemini

Nation 156:134 Ja 23 '43 900w

"'Balcony Empire' is more carefully planned than most of the books by foreign correspondents, but it doesn't make much effort to get beneath the surface of things. Outside of its comments on the Italian character in wartime, it is valuable chiefly for items of assorted information—as, for example, how ten of the submarines got past Gibraltar by hiding under neutral vessels. But I also liked its stories about the genial Italian censors who cut into telephone conversations to make a joke or scrawled their comments on the margins of personal letters." Malcolm Cowley

+ New Repub 107:684 N 23 '42 550w

Reviewed by Harold Denny

N Y Times p1 N 22 '42 1000w

"Plenty of fresh material, sensibly written."

+ New Yorker 18:82 N 7 '42 90w

Reviewed by Carlo Sforza

Sat R of Lit 25:24 D 5 '42 700w

Spring'd Republican p7e N 8 '42 950w

Time 40:112 D 7 '42 1200w

PADELFORD, NORMAN JUDSON. Panama canal in peace and war [pub. under the auspices of the Bur. of int. research of Harvard univ. and Radcliffe college]. 327p maps $3 Macmillan

386.444 Panama canal (W) 42-6222

Account of the Panama canal, its workings and importance, from the beginning of its history to the present place in the national defense. Among subjects considered are legal rights, building of the canal, administration, statistics on its importance in peace and war, emergency regulations due to war, and its situation as a military establishment. The author is professor of international law at the Fletcher School of law and diplomacy. Index.

"The author has done a thoroughgoing piece of work. If there are any who have entertained any doubts as to the importance of this strategic waterway either from the point of view of commerce or of national defense, even a casual perusal of Professor Padelford's book will speedily dispel any such reservations." J. E. Winston

+ Am Hist R 48:150 O '42 440w

Reviewed by Wallace McClure

Am Pol Sci R 36:570 Je '42 700w

Reviewed by E. R. Johnson

Ann Am Acad 222:207 Jl '42 470w

Booklist 38:302 Ap 15 '42

Bookmark 3:5 Mr '42

"The long chapter on administration and operation, dull as an annual report, is valuable because it lists more fully than I have ever seen the divisions and subdivisions of the human machine that runs the canal Zone with its multitudinous activities. . . Laymen will hardly find the present work thrilling. But it was not written for them." W. A. Roberts

+ Books p21 Mr 1 '42 650w

PADELFORD, N. J.—Continued

"Professor Padelford's politico-economic approach—encompassing, too, a real evaluation of the canal's engineering magnitude—is certain to make this work generally useful. Especially impressive is the completeness with which the book appraises the administration and operation of the Canal. Readers will naturally derive much satisfaction from the detailed account of the efficient way the Canal is run." H. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 2 '42 380w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:786 J1 '42 20w
Harvard Law R 55:1422 Je '42 160w

"Very timely and important." J. B. Fogg
+ Library J 67:40 Ja 1 '42 50w

"This book is almost totally without military interest. Persons who hope to learn of the strategic significance of the Canal in the present war and of its defenses or possible vulnerability to attack must search elsewhere. By no stretch of the imagination could this be called a war or military book. On the other hand, it is a volume worth adding to any large library. . . . It is likely to remain for some time the standard reference work on this subject."

+ — Nation 154:320 Mr 14 '42 270w

"Solid and substantial. 'The Panama Canal in Peace and War' is hardly a book for popular consumption, and could hardly have been so intended. It is a contribution for those who want to know more about the workings of the canal. It brings together within convenient compass a store of facts and figures that might be obtained otherwise only by mining dreary government reports. The war, however, has put this book in a different light from that presumably intended." Francis Brown

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 5 '42 800w

"The author presents a most careful, fully documented study of the administration and the operation of the canal from the viewpoint of internal and international law, which is based on official source material as well as on inside information from the canal authorities and the various government departments concerned with the canal. Although the book is mainly addressed to those seeking legal information, it makes profitable reading also for the general reader for whom this successful specimen of American enterprise is not only a great practical achievement, but also an object of national pride." Karl Loewenstein

+ Springfield Republican p10 My 1 '42 600w
Wis Lib Bul 38:64 Ap '42

PADOVER, SAUL KUSSEL. Jefferson. 459p il $4 Harcourt

B or 92 Jefferson, Thomas (W) 42-12336

Biography of the third president of the United States which stresses the continual battle between Jefferson's desire for a quiet life filled with scholarly pursuits, and his services to his country as governor, ambassador to France, vice-president and president. Bibliography. Index.

"This volume, containing little, if anything, new to the student of Jefferson, is one of the most attractive and readable studies in compact form of its highly versatile and interesting subject. In content the work is equally to be praised. Mr. Padover is clearly an ardent admirer of Jefferson, but he does not gush about him. . . . There are a number of errors that should have been avoided. . . . But these things, after all, are but minor flaws in an attractive and sound popular biography." J. G. de R. Hamilton

+ — Am Hist R 48:356 Ja '43 490w

Reviewed by H. C. Nixon
Am Pol Sci R 36:783 Ag '42 300w

Reviewed by J. B. Sanders
Ann Am Acad 223:234 S '42 400w
Booklist 38:348 My 15 '42

"Mr. Padover's book presents no new material and argues no original interpretation. Yet it is one of the best of the numerous short biographies of Jefferson. For Mr. Padover has approached his subject with such affection and such understanding that he has been able to recreate Jefferson as an individual, to give us a sense of the way the man lived and talked and acted and thought. He has relied—and it is a decided merit—largely on Jefferson's own words." H. S. Com-mager

+ Books p3 Ap 26 '42 1300w

"Mr. Padover's biography, appearing on the 199th anniversary of Jefferson's birth, makes no claim to incorporate material not already familiar. But it does form a compact, fairly balanced and well written study—as provocative as that written by Albert Jay Nock. . . . Put it on your list of recommended books."

+ — Christian Century 59:562 Ap 29 '42 160w

Christian Science Monitor p16 J1 20 '42 360w

"It is but fair to credit Mr. Padover with having written in the present volume the best life of Jefferson yet presented by an American author. Somewhat more impartial (if contemporary events be taken into consideration) while equally readable and more thorough, is the 'Life and Letters of Thomas Jefferson,' by Francis W. Hirst, an Englishman, which appeared in the middle twenties. Both books furnish a portrait of the man as well as an exposition of his ideas, and both are agreed in according him a high place in the school of eighteenth century liberalism." J. K. Paulding

+ — Commonweal 36:65 My 8 '42 1150w

"The best parts of Padover are the generous quotations from Jefferson which, with real success, are woven into the narrative. But Jefferson, strangely enough, is sparing of quotations against himself. The skilful use of quotations gives a magnificent Monticellian flavor to this volume, but the hero himself does not stand full-bodiedly forth in inexorable reality—ambivalent, equivocal, inconsistent, vacillating, irresponsible, and uncourageous but, for all that and all that, democratic, sagacious, versatile, magnanimous, statesmanlike, and chock-full of the seeds of fate for a mighty national harvesting." T. V. Smith

— + Ethics 53:69 O '42 2000w

"Though slightly partisan, an important and timely book that should be widely read." F. L. D. Goodrich

+ Library J 67:317 Ap 1 '42 100w

Reviewed by James Orrick
+ Nation 154:692 Je 13 '42 400w

"There is nothing 'definitive' about this biography. It is simply a rather unusual combination of sound scholarship, annotated and documented, with a style which will appeal to the general reader. Professor Padover helps us to know Jefferson. We can make up our own minds about him." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 19 '42 1350w

"Incongruously slangy or over-simplified here and there; but on the whole sensibly written, with many moving passages and fresh insights."

+ — New Yorker 18:76 Ap 18 '42 50w

Wis Lib Bul 38:85 My '42

"Dr. Padover is interested in the man not as a doer but as a thinker and an inspiring and innovating force. The incidents and the many quotations from Jefferson's writings which illustrate this aspect of the leader are effectively chosen. . . . This is one Jefferson, and he is well presented. He is not quite the Jefferson of Mr. Gilbert Chinard, and still less the Jefferson of Mr. Francis W. Hirst. There are still other Jeffersons. Perhaps in time some masterly hand will give us an all-embracing view of the man and his place in American history and world thought." Allan Nevins

+ Yale R n s 31:814 summer '42 850w

PADOWICZ, MRS BARBARA. Flight to freedom. 257p $2.75 Duell

940.548 World war, 1939—Poland. World war, 1939—Refugees. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, Polish (W) 42-36252

Account of the flight of an upper-class Polish woman and her six-year-old son from her home and their safe arrival in Brazil, after a torturous trip thru Hungary, Yugoslavia, Italy, Spain, and Portugal.

Booklist 38:424 J1 1 '42

Bookmark 3:11 My '42

"'Flight to Freedom' is written with a certain literary overtone which lies oddly in the voice of a foreigner and seems almost too elaborate as adornment for so bleak a tale. But, like each record of personal experience in this war, this, too, keeps a firm grip upon the reader from first to last. It is another testimonial to what people can endure when they have the will to survive." Virgil Sapienza

Books p2 Ag 2 '42 800w

N Y Times p16 My 31 '42 450w

New Yorker 18:68 My 30 '42 100w

PAGE, CELIA. Resort hotel. 267p $2 Double-day

42-21646

Story of a Florida resort hotel and a pretty young hostess who had to decide between two suitors, one of whom was a lawyer, the other a mystery man.

"Celia Page paints [the resort hotel] background crisply, draws the characters with feline accuracy, and dishes up a story that has a dash of mystery and a filip of romance." Lisle Bell

+ Books p24 O 4 '42 100w

"There is a good deal to recommend this bit of nonsense. It has a pretty little mystery, for one thing, and a diverting assortment of characters assembled at a second-rate hotel in Florida." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p35 O 4 '42 260w

PAGE, EDWARD LUPTON. Technidata hand book. 64p $1.50; spir pa $1 Henley

620.83 Science—Tables, etc. Engineering—Tables. calculations, etc. 42-14438

"Essential data on mathematics, physics, chemistry, engineering, mechanics; for engineers, designers, chemists, mechanics and technical students. Definitions, laws, theory, formulas and tables condensed for ready reference." School & Society

Reviewed by James Stokley

Books p11 D 20 '42 240w

School & Society 55:456 Ap 18 '42 30w

Social Studies 33:287 O '42 10w

Special Libraries 33:263 S '42 40w

PAGE, VICTOR WILFRED. ABC of aviation; a simplified guide to modern aircraft. 2d rev and enl ed 598p il $2.50 Henley

629.13 Aeronautics. Airplanes

(W) 41-10532

"A complete exposition of all types of aircraft with authoritative instructions on their basic principles of construction and operation, describing important recent airplanes, diesel and gasoline engines, airliners, plastic planes, inspection and trouble shooting prior to flight, instruments used for blind flight, ordinary and acrobatic flying maneuvers, radio aids and beacons. This treatise is an elementary introduction to the study of aviation for students, mechanics and non-technical people wishing a groundwork in basic aviation fundamentals." (Subtitle) Index.

Booklist 38:16 S '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:51 O '41

Wis Lib Bul 38:78 My '42

PAKINGTON, HUMPHREY. Our Aunt Auda [Eng title: Aunt Auda's choir]. 338p $2.50 Norton [9s Chatto]

42-7202

"A humorous and colorful reconstruction of a well-to-do community in England, from the sedate nineties to today. The novel centres in a formidable Victorian aunt, whose Thursday choir practice makes up a minute world in which one can choose a wife or a husband or find companionship, and it tells how gradually, what with war and the machine, this world has disappeared, until today it is merely a pleasant memory." New Yorker

Booklist 38:347 My 15 '42

"A witty and affectionate satire in the tradition of 'Family Album,' the sort of deft fun-making that tempts you to quote from every other paragraph." Page Cooper

+ Books p8 Mr 15 '42 600w

"Very nearly plotless, the novel has flavor, insight, shrewdness and a quiet, slyly mischievous humor." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 15 '42 700w

New Yorker 18:79 Mr 14 '42 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p245 My 16 '42 270w

PALMER, ROBERT ROSWELL. Twelve who ruled; the Committee of public safety during the Terror. 417p il $3.75 Princeton univ. press 944.044 France—History—Revolution. France. Comité de salut public 41-19539

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"Twelve Who Ruled is a book of indubitable value and it must be classed at once among the important contributions of American scholarship to the study of the French Revolution." Donald Greer

+ Am Hist R 47:589 Ap '42 1000w

"An excellent book on the administration of France by the great Committee of Public Safety. Upon finding out the subject, one wonders at first what can be said about it that will be new. A reading of the book, however, reveals that the author has made the members of the Committee living characters and the events of the period real occurrences. He shows his mastery of the material by a wealth of detail and by his evident knowledge of the interrelation and the significance of facts. . . The Republican calendar for the year 1793, the illustrations, the excellent bibliography, and a good index add to the value of the book." C. P. Higby

+ Am Pol Sci R 36:181 F '42 160w

Reviewed by L. P. Edwards

+ — Am Soc R 7:129 F '42 270w

"This is wholly an admirable book: it is based upon all the most recent researches and itself makes some original contributions to scholarship; it is written in a bright popular style and deserves as warm a welcome from the general reader as from the historian." A. J. P. T.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 25 '42 210w

New Repub 106:902 Je 29 '42 60w

PALMER, WILLIAM GEORGE. Experimental physical chemistry. 322p $2.75 Macmillan [12s 6d Cambridge]

541 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 42-10734

"This book takes a place between a textbook and a laboratory manual. An understanding of physical chemistry is approached from the practical side, teaching the subject matter through experiment. The material is divided into eight chapters dealing with measurements of gas and vapor density, properties of crystals, solutions, thermochemistry, ionization, reaction rates, and surface chemistry." Chem & Met Eng

Reviewed by F. C. Nachod

Chem & Met Eng 49:170 Ap '42 100w

"The first and third chapters are especially commendable. Here, and indeed throughout the book, the author has successfully presented many details of apparatus assembly and of technique which should be of value to the student who must make his own preparation for an experiment. The author is also to be commended for his attempt to bring unusual material into the elementary laboratory work of physical chemistry." T. E. Phipps

+ J Phys Chem 46:606 My '42 400w

PANCOAST, OMAR. Occupational mobility; democratic efficiency through the use of human resources. 155p $1.75 Columbia univ. press [8s 6d Oxford]

330.1 Division of labor. Occupations. Vocational guidance. Wages 41-20941

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"The hypothesis is intriguing and worthy of careful study. Only empirical investigation of specific labor markets can provide a factual basis for appraising its practical value." Dale Yoder

Am Econ R 32:185 Mr '42 750w

"This book is a piece of intricate and difficult theoretical analysis, with a limited use of statistical data. . . . The author comes out with a hopeful faith that training workers for mobility may start a spiral of increased production. It seems doubtful whether the facts support this view to any great extent." F. H. Knight

Am J Soc 47:788 Mr '42 260w

"Economic and labor conditions being such as they are, this would seem to be a very timely book. . . . The outstanding contribution of the volume lies in the fact that it offers a stimulating analysis of the problem of employment in relation to production in a democratic society. The work well deserves reading. Many of the conclusions seem too plausible, but they at least furnish a new and original approach." T. R. Fisher

+ Ann Am Acad 223:245 S '42 550w

Management R 31:110 Mr '42 70w

"The author does not claim that occupational mobility is a panacea. Which is wise; for one must always be suspicious of efforts to explain complex phenomena like unemployment in terms of any one aspect. But he has made a significant contribution to the vast literature of this subject." J. E. Downes

+ Social Studies 33:137 Mr '42 500w

PARDUE, AUSTIN. Your morale and how to build it. 132p $1.50 Scribner

301.15 Morale 42-17445

"Twenty brief chapters which might be radio talks or addresses to a youth conference. Some are about right attitudes in and toward the war and the place of religion in forming these attitudes. Others deal with various aspects of the problem of developing sound and strong personalities under any conditions." Christian Century

Books p14 Ag 2 '42 80w

Christian Century 59:386 Jl 15 '42 50w

"Austin Pardue has downright worthwhile suggestions to offer, for they are based on experience and illustrated by remarkably helpful incidents that are absorbingly interesting and inspiring." A. L. M.

+ Churchman 156:20 S 15 '42 120w

"These are days when nerves are worn more threadbare than usual, and the strain on faith and courage is severe. For that reason the sane advice and practical common sense of this book will make it welcome among those who are not satisfied with superficial solutions or with sentimental optimism. It is a book to commend to the discouraged, to the fearful, and also to the occasional self-centered and self-satisfied individual who needs a bit of a jolt." H. C. Newell

+ Crozer Q 19:335 O '42 320w

PARGETER, EDITH. People of my own [Eng title: Ordinary people]. 340p $2.50 Reynal [9s 6d Heinemann]

(W) 42-2245

Story of an ordinary English family between two great wars—1914 and 1939. Ruth Caswall and her husband, Big George, had four children—Little George, so like his father except for the sense of responsibility which Big George lacked; Hazel, who was quiet and dependable; Bonny, who was a beauty and made a success in London; and Jason, the scholar. Big George was a soldier in the first World war, and left Ruth alone with the children in Shropshire for four years; Jason was the soldier in the second World war. Between those years the characters of the six are portrayed in this quiet story.

Booklist 38:210 F 15 '42

"This is a fine theme, movingly treated. Six well-rounded characters are presented, each spotlighted at the most interesting moment in his career. . . . The descriptions are fresh, lyric, trembling with prismatic brightness." Joan Dangelzer

+ Books p8 F 1 '42 410w

Reviewed by Wilfrid Gibson

Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 16 '42 150w

"Probably not even the warmest admirer of Edith Pargeter—a title for which the present reviewer wishes to be considered a candidate—would think of describing 'People of My Own' as a major novel. Yet if it is not so, one has the odd conviction that this can be only because Miss Pargeter had no such lofty intention when she set out to write it. We rarely come across a book, particularly from the pen of a novelist still in her twenties, which gives us so completely an assurance that the material has been mastered, the precise effect aimed for achieved, the exactly desired shade of emotional response elicited from the reader." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 F 1 '42 800w

Reviewed by Lee Varley

Springf'd Republican p7e F 1 '42 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p33 Ja 17 '42 480w

Wis Lib Bul 38:47 Mr '42

PARKER, BERTHA MORRIS. Beyond the solar system. 36p il $1 Harper

520 Astronomy—Juvenile literature

(W) 41-51711

Designed to teach nine-to-twelve year olds some facts about the stars, their location, names, and some legends about them.

Booklist 38:312 Ap 15 '42

"Scientifically accurate. Simple language. Generously and attractively illustrated with colored drawing and photographs. . . . Recommended as slight, but good introduction to astronomy." Marguerite Nahigian

+ Library J 67:369 Ap 15 '42 80w

New Yorker 18:77 My 23 '42 20w

Wis Lib Bul 38:167 N '42

PARKER, BERTHA MORRIS. Insects and their ways; checked for scientific accuracy by Alfred E. Emerson. 36p il $1 Harper

595.7 Insects—Juvenile literature

(W) 41-51715

"Describes such insects as Cecropia moth, monarch butterfly, grasshopper and dragonfly, mosquito and firefly in simple, entertaining fashion. At end of book are brief sections describing insects in general: where they live, what they eat, and how they protect themselves." Library J

Booklist 38:312 Ap 15 '42

"Useful book that will introduce young people to some of nature's wonders. As good value as other titles in same series that have already appeared. Fishes and Seed Travels. Excellent illustrations in color, by Elizabeth Newhall, add to usefulness. Recommended." J. E. Stromdahl

+ Library J 67:321 Ap 1 '42 110w

New Yorker 18:77 My 23 '42 20w

Wis Lib Bul 38:167 N '42

PARKER, JAMES STRONG. Social security reserves. 340p $3.50; pa $3 Am. council on public affairs

331.25443 Old age pensions. Insurance. Social 42-16047

"The book is in three parts. Part I lays the background for understanding the original Social Security Act of 1935 and the important 1939 amendments. In Part II is summarized a really considerable quantity of experience, particularly American, and nowhere else available in compact form, in financing public and private retirement plans. Part III combines the author's conclusions on the applicability of this experience to the special case of the federal compulsory old age benefit scheme and a critique of the arguments on the economic and financial nature of the reserve." Social Studies

"Throughout the book there is no partisanship, but rather a cold, unimpassioned treatment of the views of all the critics, in the light of sound insurance financing. When, after 1955, the Congress shall be called upon to appropriate billions to meet the growing deficit in our contingent reserve, it will be possible for any citizen, including any member of Congress, to find in this work an exact statement of past errors in financing the program, and a clear prophesy of the punishment which the taxpayers in succeeding generations must take." R. W. Kelso

+ Ann Am Acad 224:222 N '42 450w

"This book is stimulating. The author has a tendency to absolute statement and unqualified conclusion. He falls occasionally into a partisan and even a personal tone. But he makes many a penetrating observation, none the less stimulating for being sometimes less than completely informed or completely fair. For this reason the book's contribution lies at least as much in its challenge to accepted thinking as in the materials that underlie the author's conclusions." C. A. Kulp

+ — Social Studies 33:281 O '42 750w

PARKES, HENRY BAMFORD. The pragmatic test; essays on the history of ideas. 240p $3 Colt

104 Philosophy 42-8242

"The author of 'Marxism: An Autopsy' has brought together in this volume a dozen brilliantly executed studies of representative modern thinkers, published at various times during the '30s. Placed significantly at the beginning, middle and end of the book are essays on the Puritan 'heresy,' on Marxism and on Jeffersonian democracy. These indicate the general drift of Mr. Parkes's own beliefs, and form points of orientation for his studies of individual thinkers—Emerson, Paul Elmer More, William James, John Dewey, Nietzsche, Bergson, T. S. Eliot, Christopher Dawson and Kenneth Burke." Books

"Mr. Parkes's thought is interestingly in the process of development. To note gaps and contradictions among his ideas is simply to offer suggestions for the series of essays with which one hopes he will help clarify and illuminate main currents of thought in the next decade as the collection helps clarify the speculation of the last decade. For whatever inconsistencies Mr. Parkes's progress has involved, his thinking has been marked at every stage by a power of lucid analysis, a keenness of discrimination, a flair for what is relevant and central and significant that are very much out of the ordinary." H. N. Doughty, Jr.

+ Books p14 Ap 26 '42 1550w

Reviewed by Jacques Barzun

Nation 155:35 Jl 11 '42 1250w

PARKS, EDD WINFIELD. Long hunter [the story of Big-foot Spencer] il. by Edward Shenton. 270p $2 Farrar

42-21759

"Soon after his death, Thomas Sharp Spencer became a legendary character. The incidents in his life grew blurred and unimportant. He was remembered as a courageous hunter who lived through a Tennessee winter in a hollow sycamore tree, and as the first settler in a wild frontier region that the Indians had long fought over. This vigorous, surviving legend has a historical truthfulness which may be based only in part on historical fact. In a sense, this story is an expansion of the legend." (Foreword) For older boys.

Booklist 39:186 Ja 1 '43

"Older boys and men will enjoy narrow escapes from Indians, encounters with bear and buffalo, and the struggle for food and clothing. Chapter heads and double-page illustrations in rugged style by Edward Shenton." Maude Adams

+ Library J 67:958 N 1 '42 80w

PARMENTER, CHRISTINE (WHITING) (MRS K. R. PARMENTER). Golden age. 343p $2.50 Crowell

(W) 42-23558

A chronicle of home and family life in a small Massachusetts town in the eighteen eighties.

Booklist 39:121 D 1 '42

"Perhaps the recital is a little too serene to be true. The author has omitted the occasional outbursts of temper and inevitable frictions inseparable from the normal family's existence, no matter how wise the parents or how sweetly dispositioned the children. But since that was her purpose, it is likewise her privilege. However, one wishes that she had told the story without the frequent interpolation of 'in those days' and other phrases which belong to the antiquarian, but disturb the illusion of creative fiction." George Conrad

+ — Books p12 S 27 '42 300w

Christian Century 59:1186 S 30 '42 20w

"It is the sense of virtue rewarded that fairly drenches Mrs. Parmenter's charming fairy tale with a hue as golden as rare flower honey. It can't be quite as true as that, we say to ourselves, but it should be. . . What Mrs. Parmenter has done is to write a story of a time that is as far away as the enchanted forest of Hansel and Gretel and is, from a literary point of view, as light as thistledown. Yes, it is escapist in subject-matter but, curiously enough, it is so escapist that it flings us back with a brutal impact upon the hard present. One need not speak of characterization for the entire book is characterization of something that might have been and now is not." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p9 S 27 '42 850w

Wis Lib Bul 38:163 N '42

PARMER, CHARLES B. Murder at the Kentucky Derby. 278p $2 Doubleday

42-21559

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p32 N 22 '42 150w

"This story is interesting as long as it sticks to its own highly original and entertaining setting. When the plot begins to wander it weakens. But anyhow, it is the Derby's characters and atmosphere which promises your liveliest enjoyment in this book." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p16 S 27 '42 200w

"Fast-moving story about gambling rings and gentlemen-sportsmen, written with authority."

+ New Yorker 18:72 S 19 '42 60w

"Authentic background and lots of atmosphere. Characters and plot agreeably melodramatic. Average."

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:20 S 26 '42 30w

PARRAN, THOMAS, and VONDERLEHR, RAYMOND ALOYSIUS. Plain words about venereal disease. 226p map $2 Reynal

614.547 Venereal diseases 41-52024

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"This book has aroused all branches of government and the people as a whole. It now remains for everyone concerned to forget that toes have been stepped upon, rightly or wrongly, and pitch in to keep our fighting men in fighting form." Joseph Hirsch

+ Social Forces 20:507 My '42 600w

PARRAN, THOMAS—Continued

"It is frank, pungent, and accurate. It should go far to create the informed public opinion without which successful control is not to be expected." Hugh Cabot, M. D.

+ Survey G 31:218 Ap '42 550w

Wis Lib Bul 38:11 Ja '42

PARRISH, LYDIA (AUSTIN) (MRS MAX-FIELD PARRISH). Slave songs of the Georgia Sea Islands; music transcribed by Creighton Churchill and Robert MacGimsey; introd. by Olin Downes. 256p il $3.50 Creative age

784.756 Negro songs 42-10485

This book is the result of twenty-five years of research into the music of the Negroes of the islands off the coast of Georgia. Contains chapters on slave songs and their preservation and the African influence on them, and fifty-nine songs, with music, divided into groups—shout songs; ring-play, dance, and fiddle songs; religious songs; work songs. Selected bibliography. Illustrated with photographs.

"Altogether the book is so good that it makes one hope it can be followed up by the more sensitive recording media of celluloid and wax, while there is still a generation on the islands that knows the songs." George Stevens

+ Books p10 S 6 '42 600w

"A book of considerable merit, comprehensive, attractively printed, bound and illustrated and seemingly done with as much affection as musical and intellectual interest." Cyrus Durgin

+ Boston Globe p15 My 20 '42 180w

"A valuable contribution to our knowledge of American Negro folklore and folksong. . . The book is exceptionally stimulating in what it suggests to the student of folksong and folkways. Naturally it has been impossible for Mrs. Parrish to run down all the leads these songs have given her and if there is a fault in her book it is in the intimation I believe I find there that the songs in it are unique and hard to find. Some of them doubtless are. Others rouse speculation." Carl Carmer

+ N Y Times p8 Jl 5 '42 900w

"If you don't take what Mrs. Parrish says too literally you will enjoy seeing the songs some, no doubt, for the first time." Harold Courlander

Sat R of Lit 25:24 S 19 '42 650w

PARRISH, MRS MARY FRANCES (KENNEDY) (M. F. K. FISHER, pseud). How to cook a wolf. 261p $2.50 Duell

641.5 Cookery (W) 42-16548

"It is a book about the taste of simple food and about people, some of whom have eaten well on very little money and some of whom have eaten incredibly badly, and it is about nostalgically remembered meals where the company and the brandy were of the best. But it is a book, too, about cooking, about how not to boil an egg, and what arrangement the cook must make for powdering her nose in the kitchen, and at what almost breaking point in dreary economy it is wisdom to take the whole week's allowance for bread and margarine and dine recklessly on a roast pigeon with red wine. And it is a book with here and there some casual recipes scattered lightly in like raisins in a bun." (Books) Index.

Reviewed by Sheila Hibben

Books p4 Je 7 '42 1400w

"Her book is lively and amusing and intelligent; and a real cook book, too."

+ N Y Times p3 Je 28 '42 380w

"Mrs. Fisher can be witty on the subject of boiling an egg, but she never allows the play of her mind to obscure her practical good sense. I commend her little book to all who are still intent on living most agreeably in a world full of an increasing number of disagreeable surprises. . . Any dull home-economics expert can tell you how to economize on food. Mrs. Fisher tells you how to economize and enjoy the result, which is quite another matter. When you finish this book you can hardly wait to get your teeth into a wolf." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 18:65 My 30 '42 270w

Pratt p15 D '42

PARROTT, MRS KATHERINE URSULA (TOWLE). Heaven's not far away. 203p $2 Dodd

42-22451

Valery Bennett at twenty-one had a few advantages, she was the only daughter of a wealthy father, she was widely traveled, strong and healthy, but she was thoughtless, arrogant, badly dressed and much overweight, and when she fell in love with an instructor in an aviation school, the disadvantages outweighed the advantages. In her efforts to win her man Valery learned to fly, made herself over in looks, and, tho she failed to attain her prime object, she won a better life for herself in the end.

"'Heaven's Not Far Away' reflects the knowledge of aviation which the author has acquired in becoming a licensed pilot and is entertaining from that angle—if not as a history of Valery's calories." Lisle Bell

Books p14 O 11 '42 180w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p35 O 4 '42 200w

PARROTT, MRS KATHERINE URSULA (TOWLE). Nothing ever ends. 190p $2 Dodd

42-16184

The background is Porter's View, the beautiful old Massachusetts house which had been the home of the Porter family for generations. The story spans seventy-five years of family history, beginning before the Civil war and ending in the present. Two lovely women, both named Cynthia, hold the center of the stage in this chronicle narrated by Jason Porter, who, as he nears the century mark, decides that "nothing ever ends," it just keeps changing.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

+ Books p13 Je 21 '42 200w

"Essentially a light and superficial love story, it nevertheless gives a pleasant illusion of depth by its perspective of the past." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p23 Je 28 '42 240w

PARROTT, MRS KATHERINE URSULA (TOWLE). One more such victory. 229p $2 Smith & Durrell

42-15549

"Susan Barr is in her mid-twenties, unmarried and independent, a successful copywriter for an insurance company. She is in love with Oliver Pryor, who earns more than she does but saves less. . . On her free evenings Susan worked on a novel. The boy-friend was politely interested but not impressed. That the manuscript should be accepted at its first reading, and that Susan Barr should prove a whirlwind success . . . was an eventuality for which neither was prepared. . . On the rebound, Susan accepted a brilliant, erratic, life-loving writer. . . Susan accepted his scale of living, and wrote frantically to keep up her end. They were immensely successful in the eyes of the world. . . [But] when Larry died of a heart attack the wolves closed in." Books

"That nothing succeeds like success is truer and grimmer in Ursula Parrott's novel than you might suspect from acquaintance with the smoothly executed romantic patterns she usually follows. This story has a sting to it. Brightly surfaced and sleekly sophisticated, it manages at the same time to unmask its characters, letting you see the lines of unhappiness and the pallor of loneliness they so carefully hide from the public and from one another." Lisle Bell

+ Books p11 Je 14 '42 600w

"It is an extremely personal-sounding story, giving the impression of being about a real woman." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p17 My 31 '42 340w

PATCH, HOWARD ROLLIN. Cupid on the stairs; a romance in rococo. 287p $2.50 Sheed 42-51182

"The scene of 'The Cupid on the Stairs' is an American suburban community. The chief characters are the four members of the Mayhappy family. Mrs. Mayhappy becomes involved in an affair with a doctor whose character seems to have been hacked out of James T. Farrell and Edgar Rice Burroughs. Mr. Mayhappy engages in dalliance with a visiting celebrity. The fifteen-year-old son of the family is the victim of a red-haired siren, while his sister pursues the acquaintance of Lonely Hearts correspondents." Books

"It is impossible to know whether Mr. Patch, using any other medium, could have presented a strong case for his belief. As it is, his choice of the novel form has been unfortunate. The book is an attempt at the savage portraiture of a group of futile people. Mr. Patch lacks the gift of caricature, which he attempts to use as a tool, and, since there is no life in any of his subjects and still less in the extraordinary language they speak, the book fails both as document and tract." Clare Godfrey
Books p14 N 22 '42 280w

"The author writes fairly well, with the faint irony and detachment appropriate of his theme, but the whole thing is only mildly entertaining. The characters are not only ridiculous, which is intentional, but a little dull, which presumably is not."
+ Springfield Republican p7e Ja 3 '43 250w

PATCHEN, KENNETH. Dark kingdom; a collection of poems. 117p $2.25 Harriss & Givens, 49 E. 82d st, N.Y.
811 42-16273

"This poet of great talent has progressed farther and farther from the actual into the realm of his imagination, until he seems to have created a country of his own which reminds at times, though faintly, both of the prophetic books of Blake, of 'The Worm Ouroboros,' and of the decadent and demoniac strains of the nineties. It is a very queer world indeed. . . . Probably the best review of such a book as this would be written by a psychoanalyst, except that very few psychoanalysts have any experience of poetry or its inward compulsions, and might go far afield in their guesses." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by Kerker Quinn
Books p14 S 13 '42 500w

Reviewed by R. P. Warren
Nation 155:17 J1 4 '42 360w

"Mr. Patchen is one of the poets whom historians will turn to for intelligence about the year 1942. It is true that he is often obscure with private symbols and special meanings and that eroticism, religion and socialism are curiously mixed. But he is a serious poet, a poet of significance who means every word he says, whose lines have to be considered with the utmost attention." P. M. Jack
+ N Y Times p4 Mr 29 '42 550w

"Patchen did not write this book. Or he wrote it but did not experience it. He plagiarized it—from himself. . . . When a thing is plagiarized, what happens is negative. The thing taken is left intact, except for one negative process: whatever was warm in it is now cold, whatever animation it had is now lamed. That is the evil in plagiarism and not its private property aspects; consequently, a man can steal from himself—with all of its evil consequences." Harvey Breit
+ Poetry 60:160 Je '42 900w

Reviewed by W. R. Benét
Sat R of Lit 25:14 My 9 '42 750w

PATER, ALAN FREDERICK, ed. See Anthology of magazine verse

PATMORE, DEREK. Balkan correspondent. 319p $3 Harper

940.53496 World war, 1939—Balkan states. Eastern question (Balkan). World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English 41-25333
For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"Mr. Patmore does not seem to realize that . . . the task of writing a book which undertakes to explain 'the crumbling of a nation' and to outline a 'plan for a new order in the Balkans' also requires a more serious interest in political and social problems than he seems to be able to summon up. Nevertheless, in the portions of his book which deal with Rumania, he succeeds in presenting a comprehensive, if slightly uncomprehending, panorama of the upheavals and convulsions which seized that unhappy land following the Iron Guard's assassination of Prime Minister Armand Calinescu." Leigh White

+ Books p18 F 1 '42 550w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:777 J1 '42 40w

"Unlike some of his colleagues Mr. Patmore does not pretend to impart the 'scientific' explanation of all Balkan mysteries and enigmas. His is rather a personal story—hence the title—interwoven with gruesome and thrilling adventures and distinguished by frankness and candid modesty. Being himself an author and a successful playwright, his keen observation and subtle sense of psychology throw a clear light on the dramatic sequence of events in the Rumanian tragedy. Occasionally, led astray by fairness, he attempts to exculpate the villains in the play." Rustem Vambery
+ Nation 154:198 F 14 '42 600w

Wis Lib Bul 38:14 Ja '42

"'Balkan Correspondent' is a competently handled and unpretentious account—with many well-chosen observations—of the disintegration of British diplomacy in the Balkans molded with that wistfully tender touch which an Englishman is best equipped to give this theme." W. L. White

+ Yale R n s 31:616 spring '42 130w

PATON, WILLIAM. Church and the new order. 188p $1.50 Macmillan [6s Student]

940.531 World war, 1939—Peace. World war, 1939—Religious aspects 41-23666

For descriptive note see Annual for 1941.

"Mr. Paton's thesis is clearly presented and ably argued." J. H. Holmes
+ Books p14 F 1 '42 230w

"This is a wise, temperate, informing, stimulating book. . . . With its general statements few of us could quarrel. . . . Dr. Paton insists that it is inconceivable that Germany shall be readmitted to the society of nations until after long probation. Though his last chapter is on 'forgiveness and power,' he does not seem to believe that wholehearted forgiveness could have any regenerative influence on Germany. To one man this fifth chapter with all its rugged realism seems quite unrealistic about some central principles of our faith." A. E. Day

+ Christian Century 59:152 F 4 '42 1050w

"It is a good summary of the situation and is a good book for those who think of these matters from the Christian viewpoint. It is useful because of its quotations from all important pronouncements of churches and governments. His statement concerning India is not altogether satisfying to an American." H. J. S.

+ Churchman 156:31 Mr 15 '42 90w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:775 J1 '42 10w

"Dr Paton's book on the place and function of the Church in the New Order, is as timely as it is welcome. It is written by one who has special qualifications for the task and whose breadth of view and sobriety of judgement will always command confidence." W. B. Selbie
+ Hibbert J 40:104 O '41 1350w

PATON, WILLIAM ANDREW. Advanced accounting. 837p $5 Macmillan
657 Accounting (W) 41-10174

"In preparing this book the author's main purpose has been to furnish adequate material for intermediate and advanced courses in the principles of accounting offered to college and university students. At the same time the needs of practicing accountants for a thorough and up-to-date discussion of the crucial problems of valuation, analysis, and reporting have been kept in mind. The emphasis is on corporation accounts and statements, although much of the material is applicable to other forms of business organization." (Pref) Index.

"This book is characteristic of Professor Paton. It is at once a monument to his indefatigable energy and the testament of his accounting and his moral philosophy. His is not the nature to be neutral. For him accounting practices are right or wrong, logical or illogical, consistent or inconsistent. There can be no doubt that he has been a powerful influence for truth and candor in accounting, for clear exposition, and for rationalizing practices for which tradition appeared to be becoming the principal support." T. H. Sanders
+ Am Econ R 31:875 D '41 1850w

"For those schools of commerce in which large grists of accounting students are ground twice, this second-year text has much merit. Its range and succession of topics, its wealth of well-chosen exhibits, and its problem sets are not only convenient but impress upon the reader a sense of the broad scope and endless intricacy of the subject. For small classes or classes restricted to those who have the ability, training and interest to do serious work, only a small proportion of the book is superior to older texts." J. B. Canning
+ J Pol Econ 50:312 Ap '42 450w

PATTEE, ALIDA FRANCES. Vitamins and minerals for everyone; Hazel E. Munsell, tech. advisor. 242p il $2 Putnam

612.39 Vitamins. Minerals in the body (W) 42-36012

"Gives the daily dietary allowances of each vitamin and mineral for both adults and children, food tables from which diet adequacy can be charted, and tables showing foods in descending order of their potency. Information on each vitamin and mineral is introduced by a dialogue illustrating the dire results of extreme deficiency in this particular body need." J Home Econ

Booklist 38:185 F 1 '42

Bookmark 3:7 Mr '42

"Not the ideal book for the layman with no science background nor for the specialist in nutrition, but useful for the great mass of home economists who come in between."

+ J Home Econ 34:193 Mr '42 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 27:30 Ap '42

Pratt p16 O '42

"This book should not be considered as a technical book for professionals but as a guide for persons who are teaching or advising lay groups in nutrition either by the spoken or written word. Because so many facts and figures are included it will save hours of digging." Norman Jolliffe, M.D.

+ Survey 78:318 N '42 300w

PATTERSON, SAMUEL HOWARD; LITTLE, ALBERT WILLIAM SELWYN, and BURCH, HENRY REED. American economic problems. 632p il maps $1.96 Macmillan

330 Economics. U.S.—Economic conditions 41-15271

"Publication of a book dealing with the economic aspects of modern American society rounds out a series of three basic textbooks, all written by the same authors, for use in social-studies 'problems' courses in the senior high school. American Economic Problems is based in part on the more general Problems in American Democracy (published in 1938 and revised in 1940) and is a companion volume to American Social Problems (published in 1939), with which it is correlated. It may be used by itself, however, as the basis for either a full year's study or a one-term course." School R

Reviewed by J. R. Davey

School R 50:154 F '42 1000w

Social Studies 32:379 D '41 10w

PAUL, ELLIOT HAROLD (BRETT RUTLEDGE, pseud). Last time I saw Paris [Eng title: Narrow street]. 421p $2.75 Random house [10s 6d Cresset]

914.436 Paris—Social life and customs.

France—Politics and government

(W) 42-11885

For eighteen years, off and on, the writer lived on a little side street in Paris, the rue de la Huchette. This book gives an account of life on the little street, and sketches the characters of those who lived there.

Appeared on Best Seller list in: Books (32) N Y Times (15) PW (13) RB (5) W (1)

"Humor of a different sort and with a nostalgic undertone invites you to a book which, despite its lugubrious title, is must reading for anyone who has ever lived in France—or wanted to." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic My '42 250w

Booklist 38:383 Je 15 '42

"Elliot Paul's 'The Last Time I Saw Paris' is not only one book readers must read—and don't worry, once you start it you must read it to the last acrid, smoking page, 'The Last Time I Saw Paris' is also several books which readers must read. It is partly Elliot Paul's autobiography; it is partly the biography of seventy-five French personages, including some dogs; it is a geography of the Rue de la Huchette in Paris where Mr. Paul and the seventy-five lived; it is a French history of a time, from 1923, when the Americans came, to June, 1940, when the Germans came, and it is an obituary and an epitaph, carved with clear writing and sculptured with many humble figures of France's tragic Third Republic, now dead." Janet Flanner

+ Books p1 Ap 26 '42 1600w

"It's a superb title for Elliot Paul's book which is the most generous, witty, loving, compassionate picture of the Paris everyone has been in love with. . . Elliot Paul saved a Spanish town for his readers. Now he has saved Paris, for this cross section is what one wants to remember on Spring mornings when the light is nostalgic and the headlines tormented—a brilliant and tender record of a people who will surely live again." Dorothy Hillier

+ Boston Globe p17 Ap 22 '42 750w

"It seems to me that, in spite of its great friendliness and charm, and entertaining qualities, it misses something pretty important in France: it's as if a statement were being made to the effect that in order to understand a country you must deal only with the most vulgar aspect of it. What I'm getting at is this: I have a hunch that Gide, or Malraux, or Maritain, would have some doubt about whether the picture of the rue de la Huchette is a picture of France. The whole quarrel in short, is with a statement that pops out somewhere along the way; in the statement Paul says that if only the rue de la Huchette had been allowed to survive he would have faith that France would soon be restored. That's really sentimental. But for anybody who ever lived in Paris, the book makes lovely reading." Morley Callaghan

+ Canadian Forum 22:123 Jl '42 550w

"It is a book written by a specialist for specialists, or at least it would have been that without the padding. I strongly urge that no one read it who has not specialized knowledge of French life and letters. The general reader will have no criterion on which to judge either the artistic or the factual truth of the book; it may also be said that such a reader will find many passages revolting. That will be his personal affair; he has been warned. But this book which should have been simply a novel and to which so many accidents have happened bears in it a greater and wider possibility for harm. The general reader might see in it a picture of France. That indeed, would burden Mr. Paul with a serious responsibility for which he is—only too obviously—unprepared." C. G. Paulding

— + Commonweal 36:281 J1 10 '42 700w

"Intimate description of life in the cafés and the bordel may be objectionable to some library readers, but for interpretation of the French people and its unforgettable characters the book is recommended." Emily Garnett

+ Library J 67:130 F 1 '42 80w

"It is a discursive but intimate account, detached yet affectionate, touched up a little here and there, perhaps, for picturesque effect, but in all essentials honest and convincingly alive." D. S.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 13 '42 250w

"That Elliot Paul has failed to write either an interesting or an authentic book is not due to lack of affection on his part for the French of the rue de la Huchette or to lack of feeling for the French people's cause. It is due rather to his own tragic inability to write about people—and by this I mean any people—with the same unequivocal artlessness with which he apparently lives in their midst. The word tragic is not out of place here, for Paul's obviously great capacity for responding with warmth to the needs of mankind, his ability to arouse love and loyalty in others, and his instinct for the unfortunate, the exploited, and the suppressed are worthy of a less careless and touristic rendering." Kay Boyle

— + Nation 154:490 Ap 25 '42 1000w

"The book is easy to read, full of entertaining anecdotes, but curiously uneven in tone. Sometimes it is tender, sometimes it winks and leers like a Broadway song, sometimes it talks politics, sometimes it bursts into sudden rages. Always, however, it gets along with the job at hand. That job is to record the natural history of a Paris street, to tell how its people lived, and to describe the great events of our time as they were mirrored in the lives of a bankrupt hotel proprietor, a government clerk, a merchant of tropical fish, a grocer's family and half a dozen prostitutes. They were fine people, if not by episcopal standards, and Mr. Paul makes them hard to forget. But I suspect that in writing about them he was also trying to express something about the fall of Paris, some idea or emotion too big to be caught in the net of words." Malcolm Cowley

+ New Repub 106:578 Ap 27 '42 400w

"The Last Time I Saw Paris' will definitely disappoint those readers who expected a French companion piece to 'The Life and Death of a Spanish Town.' Elliot Paul's new book is no fellow to his one unforgotten masterpiece. It will also disappoint readers who might have looked to find here a comprehensive, integrated or balanced picture of France and the French people in the fateful years of calamity's gestation. This work has neither the stature of literature nor the substance of serious study. It nevertheless offers riches to the reader." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 19 '42 1100w

"You may find his occasional dissertations on politics and the arts a little too simple, but you will hardly fail to be touched and delighted by the knowledgeable humanness of his people."

+ New Yorker 18:79 Ap 25 '42 70w

Pratt p14 O '42

